Preface

Study of the biblical Kingdom of God has been an abiding passion of mine for the past thirty-eight years. This fruit of my study, The Glory of the Kingdom, is the result of my determined effort to rigorously yet carefully and correctly assemble, in logical and chronological order, all the major biblical doctrines of the Kingdom of God into one coherent and multifaceted model. Now, as I've found my personal pursuit of the Kingdom to be stimulating, absorbing and faith-strengthening, I am hopeful that this study will also be found by my readers to be helpful and encouraging in their own resolves to seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness (Matt. 6:33).

Before we launch into our technical study, I'd like to first mention a few personal details by way of introduction, including my personal story, an explanation of how this project developed over time, my personal goals for this study, and a few suggestions as to how I believe this study might be useful and/or helpful to others.

First, my personal story:

I'm a fifty-something-year-old mechanical engineer, a Bible-believing Christian, a former Jehovah's Witness and a married father of three.

I was raised in a nurturing and stable but non-religious middle-class home in upstate New York. By the time I had started college in the fall of 1976 at Clarkson University in Potsdam, New York, I had begun to explore some of the deeper issues of life. Having had little spiritual training as a child, I found myself developing a hunger for spiritual things, and I began my personal spiritual journey by studying eastern mysticism and practicing Transcendental Meditation. Also during my freshman year at college my grandmother sent me my very first copy of the Bible, and I began reading it.

After practicing TM for a year, my older brother by two years, Steve, approached me with the teachings of Jehovah's Witnesses. He had been contacted in their door-to-door work, had been studying the Bible with them for six months, and was now suggesting that I do the same. Shortly thereafter, upon my return to college my sophomore year, I contacted the Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses in Potsdam, and requested a "free home Bible Study." I began studying with the presiding overseer of the Potsdam congregation, and continued studying with him until I graduated from Clarkson with a bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering two and a half years later, in the spring of 1980.

Upon graduation from college, because family life had by then become difficult due to my cessation of celebration of birthdays and all holidays, and because I had made known to my parents that I would no longer accept blood transfusions, even in life-threatening situations, I decided to move far from my home state of New York. I moved to Manitou Springs, Colorado, where I continued to study, now with an “ex-Bethelite” (one who had served at Brooklyn “Bethel,” the world headquarters of Jehovah’s Witnesses) until I was baptized at the 1981 “Kingdom Loyalty” district convention in Denver.

I studied with the Witnesses for a total of three and a half years, was baptized, then served as a full-fledged, door-knocking Jehovah’s Witness for another three and a half years, for a grand total of seven years of involvement with them.

After six and a half years of involvement, and after having read the entire Bible through four times, I began having some unsettling doubts regarding some of Jehovah’s Witnesses’ key doctrines, including the year 1914 (the year Jehovah’s Witnesses believe the times of the Gentiles ended, and Jesus began ruling the earth invisibly from heaven), the identities of the 144,000 (“spiritual Israelites” who have a “heavenly hope”) and the “great crowd” (of “other sheep” who have an “earthly hope”) and the Christian’s personal relationship with Jesus. Since I had been such a diligent student, having studied Watchtower publications several hours every day for the preceding six years, the elders of my congregation (now in Hyde Park, New York; in 1983 I had moved back to New York to work for my father, vice president and sales manager of a machinery manufacturing company, as western regional sales manager) said that they couldn’t help me because “quite frankly, you understand our doctrine as well as we do.” So, I set out to settle these questions on my own. For the next six months, then, I studied the Scriptures intensively, averaging probably six hours of study per day. By the end of the six months I had collected and organized eight hundred passages of Scripture, divided into fifty foundational biblical topics/doctrines (see my free online book, Reasoning with Jehovah’s Witnesses). To my great surprise, my painstakingly-wrought conclusions on all these doctrines served to confirm, not my Jehovah’s Witness theology, but rather historic evangelical Christian theology. Through this sixth-month study I discovered, among many other things, that the biblical Jesus possesses full deity and that the work that He performed on the cross is sufficient for us. I subsequently repented of my sins, renounced the Watchtower Society in my heart as a man-made and man-exalting counterfeit of true Christianity, and believed upon Jesus Christ as my all-sufficient Savior and Lord. Thereupon, I was spiritually regenerated or “born again.” (For a complete account of my personal story, see my free online book Pilgrimage Through the Watchtower.)

While I was attending college in Potsdam and studying with the Jehovah's Witnesses, a Christian on my hall in my dorm learned of it and kindly invited me to his church. So, one Sunday I went with him to his (presumably evangelical, but I really can't recall) church, and unfortunately during that visit many of the unflattering things that the Witnesses had been telling me about "Christendom" were confirmed. Making little if any reference to Scripture, it seemed to me that the pastor did nothing more than tell some rather inane personal stories and tickle the ears of his flock. I heard nothing at all in his sermon about Jehovah God and/or His Kingdom. Phooey to that!

During those seven years that I was involved with the Jehovah's Witnesses, I can recall a dozen instances where I was personally witnessed to by Christians (I chronicle these in Pilgrimage Through the Watchtower). But in none of these instances was the Kingdom, obviously a major theme of the Bible and the subject of greatest interest to me, ever mentioned. For instance, I vividly recall one experience in Colorado when a Christian man and his wife invited me to their home for dinner and a discussion of the Bible. During our after-dinner discussion, the man was nearly brought to tears trying to show me Jesus in the Scriptures (bless his heart), while I kept asking him to please explain the Kingdom to me, to no avail. He was apparently sorely lacking in knowledge and understanding concerning the Kingdom. Recollections of experiences like that one have helped spur me on to write this book.

As a Jehovah's Witness I learned an eschatology (an understanding of the "last days") in great detail, but, unfortunately, it was a grossly defective one. However, since I was without any theological frame of reference, I had no way of knowing that it was defective. Hence, again, my motivation for writing this book. In this latter day and in this information age, no Christian should be in the dark concerning eschatology, the last days or the biblical Kingdom!

Through my six-month independent Bible study, I serendipitously discovered the beauty of the grammatical-historical method of Bible interpretation. Although I knew nothing at all at that time about biblical hermeneutics (the science of biblical interpretation), as Jehovah's Witnesses are taught nothing about it, I discovered on my own that when taken simply, at face value, the vast majority of Scripture makes perfectly good sense as written. I learned through personal Bible reading and study that all the foundational doctrines of the historic Christian faith, including the deity of Christ, the personality of the Holy Spirit, the necessity of being born again, the bodily resurrection of Christ (and of all people eventually) and eternal punishment are all based on a “literal” interpretation of Scripture. The reason why all conservative Christians are in agreement on these foundational doctrines is that they all take the Scriptures concerning them literally. Now, in my painstakingly thorough reevaluation of my biblical world view, in my naïveté, I even went so far as to take the eschatological passages literally, where possible, and lo and behold, even they made good sense when taken at face value! Specifically, taking Israel to consistently mean literal Israel, even in prophetic passages, resulted in a unique, yet consistent and plausible eschatology. As would be confirmed to me in all my future studies, in the Bible Israel always means Israel; it doesn’t ever mean Jehovah’s Witnesses, nor does it ever mean the church. Israel is the centerpiece of the entire biblical Kingdom of God program, and Israel will be the nucleus of the Millennial Kingdom.

Through my six-month study, which led me out of Jehovah’s Witnesses and into saving faith in Jesus, a plain-sense hermeneutic guided me out of heretical Jehovah’s Witness doctrine and into self-supporting, genuinely biblical, correct doctrine, including basic foundational doctrine (theology proper, christology, pneumatology, angelology, anthropology, hamartiology, soteriology and ecclesiology) as well as end-times Kingdom doctrine (eschatology). No “spiritualizing” of Scripture was necessary, nor was any replacement theology necessary. Rather, as I discovered, the Bible makes perfectly good sense exactly as written! Today I understand even more fully, and with even greater conviction, that it is only when we stray from the plain, literal sense of Scripture that our doctrine becomes corrupted, whether it be basic foundational doctrine or our doctrine of the eschatological Kingdom.

When I did my six-month independent study in 1984, the Bible presented to me, on its own, the very same understanding of the Kingdom that I hold to this day. To me, this is a powerful testimony both to the perspicuity of the written word of God and to the correctness of the future, literal, earthly, Jewish, Davidic Kingdom. My subsequent thirty-one years of further study have greatly deepened my conviction concerning the correctness of a literal, Israel-centric Kingdom to come, and have also confirmed and/or filled in for me thousands of logistical details concerning the overall Kingdom program.

Ever since leaving the Jehovah’s Witnesses, wherever I’ve lived I’ve been active in Bible-believing fellowships: an Evangelical Free church, a conservative community church, another Evangelical Free church, an independent Bible fellowship, and presently a Calvary Chapel church. For my doctrine, however, I've not been beholden to any particular denomination, church or theology, but have been by conviction and by choice a conservative, Bible-believing and dispensational Christian. I've been active for the past thirty-one years in counter-cult ministry and apologetics, particularly in relation to Jehovah's Witnesses.

For work I am a mechanical engineer, a machine designer, and currently a machinery importer (you'll find my small, entrepreneurial machinery importing business, Quick Machinery Company, on the Web). I love good, well-designed machinery, machinery optimally designed and manufactured to accomplish its given task(s). And, no doubt, my love for well-designed mechanical systems and my natural drive to figure out how things work have contributed to my interest in the Kingdom of God, which is by far the most complex and ambitious yet efficient, harmonious and capable system that I've ever studied in detail. The more I learn about the Kingdom: the more clearly I perceive both its broad outlines and its intricate details, the more awestruck I find myself, and the more easily and naturally I find myself bending my mind, heart and knees to the Designer of this amazing system. To God be the glory of the Kingdom!

Little did I know thirty years ago that Jehovah's Witnesses are not the only people on the planet with a passion for the biblical and eschatological Kingdom of God. Instead, in fact, due to their extreme social and theological isolation, Jehovah's Witnesses have largely missed out on the massive amount of qualified and peer-reviewed scholarship concerning the Kingdom that's been done over the past one hundred-plus years.

After leaving the Jehovah's Witnesses, it didn't take long for me to discover the mother lode of things Kingdom: the leading dispensational scholars and their works. However, in an effort to make sure that I hadn't overlooked anything of importance, I was careful, especially in the beginning, to investigate a broad range of views on the Kingdom. I studied several systematic theologies and eschatological works by Covenant theologians (John Calvin, Charles Hodge and Lorraine Boettner), but found them lacking, resorting to replacement theologies and far-fetched allegorizations of passages that quite frankly reminded me of the self-serving interpretive tactics of Jehovah's Witnesses' Watchtower Society. On the other hand, I also discovered works by dispensational scholars that corresponded exactly with what I had already discovered on my own by simply reading the Bible and allowing it to mean what it plainly says, particularly regarding Israel's foundational and irreplaceable role in the Kingdom.

Over the past thirty-one years, along with my daily Bible reading and study, I've read and studied the major works of the past one hundred years' top dozen or so scholars in dispensational theology. It is from these dozen well-known and well-respected scholars that I quote primarily in this book. Through my copious (thousands of) quotations from these scholars' seminal works, I hope my reader will come to know, respect and hopefully even greatly admire these Godly men as I have, and I hope he or she will consider acquiring and reading some of their books directly. These dozen (plus one) scholars are, in chronological order:

George N. H. Peters

“George N. H. Peters (November 30, 1825 – October 7, 1909) was an American Lutheran minister and author of The Theocratic Kingdom. His premillennial views were in conflict with the majority of Lutherans who held postmillennial beliefs” (Wikipedia). In 1884 George Peters published The Theocratic Kingdom, his magnum opus, in which he laid out his premillennial understanding of the theocratic Kingdom program. Over the more than one hundred years since The Theocratic Kingdom's first publication, his work has consistently received accolades from the world's top eschatologists. From Lewis Sperry Chafer (cited on the www.theocratickingdom.info web page): “The greatest work on prophetic interpretation ever written.” From J. Dwight Pentecost (also cited on the www.theocratickingdom.info web page): “...the most exhaustive, scholarly, reverent treatment of the questions of the kingdom of our Lord available today.” From Alva J. McClain (in The Greatness of the Kingdom, p. 5): “...the massive treatise by George N. H. Peters under the title of The Theocratic Kingdom (1884).” Wilbur M. Smith, in the preface of the 1952 edition of The Theocratic Kingdom, calls it “...the most exhaustive, thoroughly annotated and logically arranged study of Biblical prophecy that appeared in our country during the nineteenth century.” From John F. Walvoord (in The Millennial Kingdom, p. 195): “premillennial doctrine... The classic work on this theme is George N. H. Peters' The Theocratic Kingdom, published by Kregel Publications in three volumes of over 2,000 pages.” George Peters is one of my personal heroes of the faith. The Theocratic Kingdom is presented in three volumes, each volume consisting of seven hundred pages of small type. In it Peters quotes over four thousand different sources! His work is not particularly easy to read, but I've personally found it to be tremendously edifying. I identify with Peters' passion for the Kingdom and with his very evident distress that so few of his fellow Lutheran brethren had yet caught such a profoundly life-changing glimpse of the biblical Theocratic Kingdom as he had. It is a shame that Charles Taze Russell, a contemporary of Peters and the founder of Jehovah's Witnesses, didn't pay more attention to Peters' work. (You'll notice in our quotations throughout The Glory of the Kingdom that Peters was well aware of Russell (and Nelson Barbour) and that he ably and thoroughly refuted his heretical teachings.) Despite Peters' rare (and in my opinion unmatched) combination of exhaustive scholarship, elegant writing style and passion for his subject, it is difficult to find recent works that quote very extensively from George Peters, so I believe this is one area in which my study will be found to be unique, and hopefully appreciated, by the reader.

Sir Robert Anderson

"Sir Robert Anderson KCB (29 May 1841 – 15 November 1918) was the second Assistant Commissioner (Crime) of the London Metropolitan Police, from 1888 to 1901. He was also an intelligence officer, theologian and writer" (Wikipedia). Sir Robert Anderson developed an historical chronology of the first sixty-nine of Daniel's seventy weeks (Dan. 9:24-27) that is still used by dispensational scholars today (see our discussion of Daniel's seventy weeks in the section The Times of the Gentiles of our chapter The Decline and Fall of the Theocratic Kingdom). His book The Silence of God, published in 1907, has helped many, including this writer, make sense of the very evident silence of God in this (Church Age) dispensation (see our discussion of the silence of God in our chapter The Mystery Kingdom (The Church)).

Clarence Larkin

"Rev. Clarence Larkin (1850–1924) was an American Baptist pastor, Bible teacher and author whose writings on Dispensationalism had a great impact on conservative Protestant visual culture in the 20th century. His intricate and influential charts provided readers with a visual strategy for mapping God's action in history and for interpreting complex biblical prophecies" (Wikipedia). Clarence Larkin was a mechanical engineer, which probably explains why I personally have found his writing (and drawings) to be especially clear and easy to understand. He published his major work, Dispensational Truth, in 1920. In addition to several hundred pages of two-column text, Dispensational Truth contains many original charts and drawings that graphically lay out the dispensations and the sequence of prophetic events. Some of Larkin's ideas can be a bit speculative, so I've limited his quotations mainly to those that are not in disagreement with the views of the other scholars cited herein.

Charles L. Feinberg

“Charles Lee Feinberg (June 12, 1909 - August 22, 1995) was an American Biblical scholar and professor of Semitics and Old Testament. He was an authority on the Jewish history, languages and customs of the Old Testament and Biblical prophecies” (Wikipedia). Feinberg was a Hebrew Christian, and his writings offer valuable insights from a Jewish perspective. His major contribution to premillennial eschatology is his book Millennialism: The Two Major Views, first published in 1936 and revised in 1954, 1961 and 1980. The original title of this work was Premillennialism or Amillennialism?

Lewis S. Chafer

“Lewis Sperry Chafer (February 27, 1871 – August 22, 1952) was an American theologian. He founded and served as the first president of Dallas Theological Seminary, and was an influential founding member of modern Christian Dispensationalism” (Wikipedia). Chafer’s works quoted in this study include Satan, 1909, The Kingdom in History and Prophecy, 1915, Grace, 1922, Major Bible Themes, 1926, Dispensationalism, 1936, and Systematic Theology, 1947. Chafer’s Systematic Theology in eight volumes was one of my first major study projects after leaving the Jehovah’s Witnesses in 1984, and it served to greatly solidify my theology, including my eschatology, which again, I’d already acquired via mostly unaided independent Bible study.

Charles C. Ryrie

“Charles Caldwell Ryrie (born March 2, 1925) is a Christian writer and theologian who served as professor of systematic theology and dean of doctoral studies at Dallas Theological Seminary and as president and professor at what is now Philadelphia Biblical University. He is also noted for his advocacy of premillennial dispensationalism and as the editor of the popular Ryrie Study Bible” (Wikipedia). His works quoted (indirectly, mostly via Dr. Arnold Fruchtenbaum) in this study include Dispensationalism Today, 1965, and Basic Theology, 1986.

J. Dwight Pentecost

“J. Dwight Pentecost (born April 24, 1915) is a Christian theologian best known for his book Things to Come. He currently is Distinguished Professor of Bible Exposition, Emeritus, at Dallas Theological Seminary, one of only two so honored. He holds a B.A. from Hampden-Sydney College and Th.M. and Th.D. degrees from Dallas Theological Seminary. During his academic career he has taught biblical subjects for nearly half a century (Philadelphia College of Bible, 1948-55; Dallas Theological Seminary, 1955-present). His nearly twenty books are written mostly for the general Christian reader” (Wikipedia). Pentecost’s major eschatological works include Things to Come, 1958 and Thy Kingdom Come, 1995, both of which are quoted from copiously in this study.

Alva J. McClain

Alva J. McClain (1888-1968) was founder and first president of Grace Theological Seminary. His eschatological works include Daniel’s Prophecy of the 70 Weeks, 1940 (revised 1964), The Greatness of the Kingdom, 1959, and Romans: The Gospel of God’s Grace, 1979. Dr. Arnold Fruchtenbaum, commenting on The Greatness of the Kingdom, says “McClain has produced the most extensive work on the dispensational view of the Kingdom of God” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 398). With this I concur, and easily place The Greatness of the Kingdom, which is quoted frequently in this study, on the list of my top five all-time favorite books.

John F. Walvoord

“John F. Walvoord (May 1, 1910 – December 20, 2002) was a Christian theologian, pastor, and president of Dallas Theological Seminary from 1952 to 1986. He was the author of over 30 books, focusing primarily on eschatology and theology including The Rapture Question, and was co-editor of The Bible Knowledge Commentary with Roy B. Zuck. He earned AB and DD degrees from Wheaton College, an AM degree from Texas Christian University in philosophy, a ThB, ThM, and ThD in Systematic theology from Dallas Theological Seminary, and a LittD from Liberty Baptist Seminary” (Wikipedia). Walvoord’s works quoted in this study include The Rapture Question, 1957 (revised 1979), The Millennial Kingdom, 1959, Bible Knowledge Commentary, New Testament, 1983 (with Roy B. Zuck), and Bible Knowledge Commentary, Old Testament, 1985 (with Roy B. Zuck). I greatly admire Dr. Walvoord as probably the most thorough and precise scholar that I’ve ever read.

Renald Showers

“Dr. Renald E. Showers is widely recognized as one of the most distinguished theologians in America today. His work is known around the world, and he is in great demand as a visiting professor in colleges and seminaries. He is a graduate of Philadelphia College of Bible, holds a B.A. in history from Wheaton College, a Th.M. in church history from Dallas Theological Seminary, and a Th.D. in theology from Grace Theological Seminary. He is a professor and international conference speaker for The Friends of Israel Gospel Ministry, Inc., and a contributing editor for Israel My Glory magazine” (From Maranatha Our Lord, Come! back cover). In this study, I quote from Dr. Showers' Maranatha Our Lord, Come!, 1995 (revised 2007). Showers' work reminds me of that of Dr. Walvoord in its technical precision and thoroughness.

Arnold G. Fruchtenbaum

"Arnold Genekowitsch Fruchtenbaum (born September 26, 1943) is the founder and director of Ariel Ministries, an organization which prioritizes evangelization of Jews in the effort to bring them to the view that Jesus is the Jewish Messiah" (Wikipedia). Dr. Fruchtenbaum has lately become one of my all-time favorite Bible teachers. A Hebrew Christian, he brings a much-needed Jewish perspective to his students' understanding of both the Old and New Testaments. As well as his books listed below, I've also found his on-line Come and See discipleship audio files to be of great value. Fruchtenbaum's works quoted in this book include The Footsteps of the Messiah, 1982 (revised 1984), Israelology, 1989 (revised 2001), and The Eight Covenants of the Bible, 2005.

Norman L. Geisler

"Norman L. Geisler (born 1932) is a Christian apologist and the co-founder of Southern Evangelical Seminary outside Charlotte, North Carolina, where he formerly taught. He holds a Ph.D. in philosophy from Jesuit Loyola University. Geisler is well known for his scholarly contributions to the subjects of Christian apologetics, philosophy, and moderate Calvinism and is the author, coauthor, or editor of over 60 books and hundreds of articles" (Wikipedia). I've read several of Dr. Geisler's books, including his four-volume Systematic Theology, 2005, which is quoted frequently in this study. Dr. Geisler is considered by many to be the world's most competent living Christian apologist. He has taught this writer much about the origins and reliability of our current Bible, the foundations (prolegomena) of logical thought and argumentation (including how to identify bad argumentation such as self-defeating statements), and the logical necessities of some of the Bible's more difficult teachings (such as eternal punishment; see our chapter The Lake of Fire), all from a solidly conservative biblical Christian standpoint.

Barry E. Horner

"Barry E. Horner (D. Min., Westminster Theological Seminary, California; M. Div., Western conservative Baptist Theological Seminary) is pastor of Christ's New Covenant Church in Sahuarita, Arizona" (From Future Israel back cover).

As I read these scholars' books over a period of twenty-six years, I highlighted passages in them that I found to be particularly helpful or personally enlightening. All the quotations in this book have originated in these previously-highlighted phrases or sentences. Therefore, each quotation in this book represents a moment of personal insight and/or inspiration in my ongoing understanding of the biblical Kingdom. I hope my reader will find these quotations to be as enlightening and inspiring to him or her as they have been to me.

In January of 2009 I began transcribing these (thousands of) quotations into an outlining program on my computer. (By the way, how did Peters, Chafer, et al., ever manage without computers?). As I did so, and as I arranged the quotations into logical, topical and chronological order, the outline for this book gradually emerged.

In addition to transcribing and collating the scholars' quotations, I also read through the Bible several times, collecting all the verses that I could find pertaining to the Kingdom. I added these verses to my (now outline-formatted) database of Kingdom information, placing them in order alongside the quotations from the scholars. Once all the data had been entered and organized, the result was a surprisingly complete picture of the Kingdom! Then, I read through the Bible again, keeping my resulting outline in mind and marveling at how my evolving Kingdom outline was now greatly aiding me in framing and clarifying the details of what I was reading.

I've believed for over three decades now that personal Bible reading is the most important facet of Bible study that we can do. Through it the Holy Spirit speaks to us through the Scriptures, enlightening our minds and our hearts. There's no substitute for it! I greatly encourage my reader to read the Scriptures directly every day. It has been my experience that over time, as we read, the biblical Kingdom will increase for us in clarity, coherence, detail, power and glory. It is important for us, too, to be continually making sure that our view of the Kingdom has its origin in God's mind, as expressed in the Scriptures, rather than in the fallible minds of theologians, regardless of how Godly and/or brilliant those minds might be. All Scripture is inspired by God and is profitable (2 Ti. 3:16). Our Teacher, the Holy Spirit (John 14:26) searches all things and knows the things of God (1 Cor. 2:10-12). It behooves each one of us, therefore, to have a consistent program of daily Bible reading.

In this exposition of the Kingdom nothing has been forced or strained, at least intentionally; this study exhibits how all the pieces of the puzzle fell together for me, simply and naturally. None of the puzzle pieces (the plain words of Scripture) needed altering, and no connections between adjacent pieces needed trimming or forcing. I have found this model, this vision of the Kingdom to become more clear and more accommodating of all Scripture with time; not more confusing or more problematic (as was my experience with the Jehovah's Witness kingdom model, which self-destructed for me after seven years of careful study and independent Bible reading).

My initial purpose for this study was to make sense of life and the world around me. With the passage of time I eventually developed as my lofty goal the apprehension and articulation of the over-arching Kingdom of God program, the systematization of the Kingdom in such a way that it would unify and explain all of the Bible's major themes. "...that natural bent of the human mind, best exemplified in the systematic philosophers, which impels men to search for a single principle or idea that will explain everything else" (McClain, GK, p. 3). I sought to build a model of the Kingdom that would stand on its own merits: a model that needed no forcing or twisting of Scripture in its formation, a model that would stand on its own without needing any man-made philosophy or esoteric knowledge to hold it together. And in this, by the grace of God, I believe I have succeeded.

Again, this study was originally assembled for my own personal use, and it has served me well in that capacity over the past several years, both for personal instruction and as a quick-reference database for on-line apologetics. However, I believe it could now also be of help to several different groups of people: to people in general, to Jehovah's Witnesses, to people who are studying with Jehovah's Witnesses, to former Jehovah's Witnesses, to the church and to the Tribulation saints.

People in general are confused regarding the major issues of life. They are asking, "Where did we come from? Why are we here? Can we make sense of human history? Is there a purpose for life? If God is good, then why is the world in such a mess? Does God care? When and how are the world's problems ever going to be solved?" This study answers all of these questions from a solidly biblical standpoint. It suggests that yes, we can make sense of human history, past, present and future (see our discussion of how our doctrine of the Kingdom explains human history in our chapter Presuppositions and Premises), and it points out that not only does God have a Plan for us, but that He has already told us all about it, if we will only hear Him!

Unfortunately, Jehovah's Witnesses will be forbidden by their leaders from reading this book. However, many Jehovah's Witnesses have become disenchanted with the Witness world view and lifestyle, especially in recent years. Therefore, a few brave Jehovah's Witness souls may just choose to take a look at what we're suggesting, despite the prohibitive instructions from their hierarchy. This will be especially true if this work happens to find its way into the rumor circuit amongst the Witnesses, as a few other key apologetic works have done over the past couple of decades. If read by Jehovah's Witnesses, this study will encourage them to trust the biblical Jesus for salvation, which if done, will result in their genuine regeneration (being "born again"). If this occurs with just one Jehovah's Witness, I will consider this work to have been a complete success, having resulted in something of infinite value. This study will also help encourage Jehovah's Witnesses to leave the man-made Watchtower system in favor of the real, biblical Kingdom of God. It will serve to strengthen their convictions such that they'll have the backbone necessary to withstand the slander, the shattering of families and the shunning that will certainly come their way once they make a public declaration of their decision to trust and follow Jesus rather than the Watchtower Society. However, I don't expect this book to incite a mass defection from the Watchtower organization, at least not immediately, due to the deep-seated personal issues and cultic dynamics involved that, in the real world, generally take precedence over doctrinal issues. However, I would certainly be pleased to be proved wrong on this! Instead, my hopes are currently set more on a possible mass enlightenment and repentance amongst Jehovah's Witnesses during the Tribulation period, when prophetic Scripture (i.e., Matt. chapter 24 and Rev. chapters 6-18) will be having literal fulfillment before their very eyes. But then again, the supernatural blindness that Jehovah's Witnesses already exhibit regarding the glory of the gospel of Christ (2 Cor. 4:4) might possibly just become that much more acute during the Tribulation period when the "strong delusion" (2 Thess. 2:11, NKJV) is in full swing. We will see.

People who are not yet Jehovah's Witnesses but who have only been studying with them for a short time (short enough that all outside help has not yet been perceived by them to be satanic opposition to "the truth" and therefore rejected) will be better-equipped to objectively compare our doctrine with the Bible, with the goal of determining which of the two systems adheres more closely to what the Scriptures actually teach. In comparing our system with that of the Watchtower Society, in some areas (such as in the chronology and events of the Tribulation period and in the governmental structure of the Millennial Kingdom) they will find more detail in ours than theirs, and in all areas we believe they will find in ours a much closer adherence to the plain (and intended) sense of Scripture. They will be encouraged to take Scripture at face value, and in so doing, they will be rendering superfluous (and indeed counterproductive) the dictates of Jehovah's Witnesses' "faithful and discreet slave." And, we believe they will find herein a better, more biblical Kingdom, with a better hope for themselves and for those they love who were and/or are willing to trust Jesus as Savior.

Sadly, because of the intensive and extensive intellectual and emotional conditioning that they had received at the hands of their leaders, including, for instance, the conviction that no spiritual truth exists outside the Watchtower organization, the majority of former Jehovah's Witnesses have become either agnostic or atheist in their world views. They've been so badly burned by their former (false) religion that they often exhibit vicious, knee-jerk rejection of anything that smacks of the Bible or of Christian religion. For many, if not most former Jehovah's Witnesses, the Bible has been shattered into ten thousand pieces, and because of the personal trauma that they've experienced, which they still associate with the Bible, they just don't have the stomach for trying to make sense of it any more. For many of these people, perhaps there's nothing that we can do, but for others who still retain some interest and/or respect for the Bible itself, this book will show them, if they have the patience to hear us out, how the Bible fits together in a way that they've never seen before, and likely have never even imagined.

For the church, I hope this study will help clarify our purpose for the present and our vision of the future. Most believers know that when we die we'll go to heaven. But then what? Surely there's more to the program than that! Indeed there is, and this study elucidates the biblical answers to the question "and then what?" I hope this study will also help shake Christians from their general apathy concerning Christ's return. This study concerns the "solid food" (1 Cor. 3:2, Heb. 5:14) of Scripture. May it therefore serve to help each of us grow to maturity in our faith: to increase our knowledge of and confidence in the Scriptures, to increase our understanding of and appreciation for the Person and Work of Jesus Christ our Lord, and generally broaden and deepen our biblical world view. May it give us confidence and ability in our witness to those around us, and may it better equip us to give the cultists knocking on our doors reasons for the hope that is in us (1 Pet. 3:15).

Finally, after the Rapture of the church, I expect that there will be some, possibly many, who, already somewhat familiar with our doctrine, will then pay closer attention to what we are saying. We know that during the Tribulation period a "great multitude" will be saved (Rev. 7:9, 14). Perhaps as these people recognize the fulfillment of Bible prophecy during the Tribulation, this book will help some searching souls fit the pieces of the Kingdom puzzle together, and will encourage them to stand strong in their allegiance to their coming King despite their likely impending martyrdom (Rev. 6:9-11).

We're living in unprecedented and exciting times. Computer and Internet technologies have made knowledge abundant and easily accessible (cf.

Dan. 12:4). We each have the ability now to learn in great detail about anything and everything that interests us. At the time of this writing, the world is suffering from ever-increasing geopolitical, socioeconomic and religious upheaval. Israel is in her land, and is surrounded by enemies who have publicly sworn to wipe her off the map. There is a growing sense among many that something of biblical proportions is about to happen in our world. Some are wondering about the possibility of divine intervention should things get too badly out of control. To that question we would unhesitatingly answer “Yes!” We would also point out that God has already told us about that intervention in great detail. Indeed, God has a master Plan, and that master Plan is the subject of this book. That Plan is the one unifying and sense-making principle of life and of human history: it is the biblical Kingdom of God. In our age of fiercely competing world views, I hope the reader will give our contentions some careful consideration, before these issues become settled once and for all by almighty God Himself, to His eternal glory. May our God be pleased to use this book, should He see fit, to help each of us better navigate this life and the unprecedented challenges and opportunities that lie ahead.

Introduction

This work is divided into four major sections: 1. Introductory Considerations, in which we will lay down the historical, philosophical and biblical foundations and presuppositions of our study, 2. The Biblical Kingdom, which is the major part of this work: an inductive biblical study of the Kingdom of God, 3. Summary, Conclusion and Applications, in which we will summarize the findings of our study and will suggest appropriate responses to what we've learned, and 4. Reference, which includes a bibliography, a glossary, a history of revisions to this work, and distribution and contact information. Subject and scripture indexes have been omitted, as this book has been prepared specifically for electronic distribution; electronic versions of this book can be searched via e-readers' search functions.

Section 1, Introductory Considerations, contains five chapters: 1. Five Views of the Kingdom, 2. The Kingdom in Church History, 3. Presuppositions and Premises, 4. Biblical Hermeneutics and 5. Five Facets of the Kingdom.

In chapter one, Five Views of the Kingdom, we will discuss five major views of the Kingdom of God, which views collectively represent those of the vast majority of professing Christians, and will make suggestions as to why so much confusion exists among Christian and pseudo-Christian communities concerning the nature of the Kingdom. Three of the views that we will discuss are views within Covenant theology: Covenant postmillennialism, Covenant amillennialism and Covenant premillennialism. The fourth view is the dispensational view, and the fifth view is that of Jehovah's Witnesses. We'll review each view's definition, history, adherents, hermeneutics and teachings. As we do, we'll point out why it is the position of this writer and of this work that the dispensational view is the most correct one.

In chapter two, The Kingdom in Church History, we will discuss premillennialism in Old Testament times, the chiliasm or premillennialism of the early church, historical opposition to chiliasm, chiliasm in the dark ages, the eschatology of the Reformers, the history of premillennialism following the Reformation, and premillennialism today. We'll demonstrate that the idea of a future earthly Kingdom with a Jewish Messiah sitting on David's throne in Jerusalem did not originate in modern times, or even in recent centuries, but rather was revealed, taught and believed in Old Testament times. We'll trace the history of the chiliasm of the early church from the foundational Jewish church, on through the biblical period, through the Apostolic Fathers, and through the first three centuries of the church's history. We'll discuss the opposition to chiliasm that began in the early centuries of the church and which flowered and thereafter dominated in medieval and later centuries. We'll discuss the instruments of this opposition, the history of the opposition and the sad consequences of the opposition. We'll examine the perseverance of chiliasm through the dark ages, the eschatologies of the Protestant Reformers, premillennialism following the Reformation, and the prevalence of premillennialism today.

In chapter three, Presuppositions and Premises, we'll list and discuss the presuppositions regarding reality, truth and the Bible that undergird our conservative, biblical worldview and will state our premises concerning the Bible and the biblical Kingdom: premises that we will endeavor to prove beyond reasonable doubt throughout the remainder of the study. Our presuppositions concern the reality of the world and of God, the objective and exclusive nature of truth, and the inspiration and inerrancy of Scripture. Our premises concern the reality of the possibility of our correctly understanding Scripture, and the spiritual and intellectual tools that we suggest must be possessed and utilized by the student when developing a correct understanding of the Bible, including a correct conception of the Kingdom. Our premises will also concern the Kingdom itself: its purpose, people, structure and nature, and its relations to the Bible, theology, God, man and history.

Hermeneutics is the science of interpretation, especially of biblical interpretation, and it is the subject of chapter four, Biblical Hermeneutics. In this chapter we will examine some foundational hermeneutical principles and will suggest some basic rules for the correct interpretation of Scripture. In particular, we will define and recommend the grammatical-historical method of biblical interpretation. We'll suggest several reasons why a discussion of hermeneutics is necessary, and we'll review some basic biblical facts that should influence our Scripture interpretation, including the existence of both literal and non-literal Scripture, the symbiotic relationship between the Old and New Testaments, unique dispensational facts concerning the gospels, and some facts regarding prophetic Scripture that have particular relevance to our exposition of the Kingdom. We'll suggest some basic rules for correctly interpreting Scripture, such as using the normal rules of language, allowing Scripture to interpret Scripture, solving simple problems before more complex ones, using clear passages to interpret more obscure ones (and not vice versa), and not going beyond what is written. We will recommend the grammatical-historical method of Scripture interpretation, which encourages a "plain sense" interpretation of the Bible. We will offer approximately one hundred reasons why we believe the grammatical-historical method of Scripture interpretation is the correct method, or to put it another way, one hundred reasons why we believe the Bible means what it plainly says, including what it says about Israel and the Kingdom.

Sometimes, passages of the Bible concerning the Kingdom may not readily fit together, and in some cases they might even appear to be contradictory. We have found that the most effective way to reconcile all Scripture passages related to the Kingdom is to recognize that while there is only one biblical Kingdom of God, there are at least five facets of this Kingdom. We'll explore these five facets in chapter five, Five Facets of the Kingdom. These five facets of the Kingdom are 1. The Universal or Eternal Kingdom, 2. The Spiritual Kingdom, 3. The Theocratic or Mediatorial/Monarchical Kingdom, 4. The Messianic or Millennial Kingdom, and 5. The Mystery Kingdom.

Having presented our foundational introductory material in Section 1, we'll then proceed to construct our vision or model of the Kingdom in Section 2, The Biblical Kingdom. This section, which comprises the bulk of our work, is an inductive Bible study contained in twenty-three chapters: 6. God and Creation, 7. The Fall, 8. A Kingdom Needed, 9. Conscience, Government and Promise, 10. The Theocratic Kingdom, 11. The Decline and Fall of the Theocratic Kingdom, 12. Covenants of the Kingdom, 13. The Kingdom in Hebrew Prophecy, 14. First-Century Expectation of the Kingdom, 15. Announcement and Offer of the Kingdom, 16. Rejection of the King, 17. Postponement of the Kingdom, 18. Reaffirmation of the Kingdom, 19. The King of the Kingdom, 20. The Mystery Kingdom (the Church), 21. The Rapture of the Church, 22. The Great Tribulation, 23. The Second Coming of the King, 24. Inauguration of the Kingdom, 25. The Millennial Kingdom, 26. A Final Rebellion, 27. The Lake of Fire and 28. The Eternal Order.

Our study of the biblical Kingdom will begin with chapter 6, God and Creation. In this chapter we'll discuss God, creation and the first age or dispensation of human history, the age of Innocence. We'll begin with a brief discussion of God's nature and attributes. From there, we'll suggest some biblical reasons why God chose to create anything at all, what His vision for His creation was, and why He created this world, with all its attendant troubles. Then, we'll examine mankind's original idyllic Kingdom and God's first covenant with mankind, the Edenic Covenant.

In chapter seven, The Fall, we'll first consider some philosophical concepts related to evil, and will then examine the fall of Satan, angels and man from their original states of sinlessness. After defining evil, we'll explore the origin of evil and will suggest answers to the question of why evil was and is allowed by God. We'll consider Satan's fall, and will discuss his nature, attitude, purpose and works. We'll consider the fall of the angels. Then, we'll discuss the fall of man, both the fact of his fall and the deep and wide-ranging effects of his fall.

Because of the fall of man into sin and death, a Plan authored by God has now become necessary to rectify the situation, as we delineate in our chapter eight, A Kingdom Needed. As the eradication of sin and its effects (including death) is demonstrably beyond the capabilities of fallen man, a Kingdom is needed to do what only God can do. This Kingdom, if it is to reverse the effects of sin in all affected spheres, must be effectual in various ways in each of these spheres: in relation to sin itself, Satan, individuals, mankind, all of creation, all created beings, and God. We will demonstrate that God's far-reaching Kingdom Plan, as revealed in Scripture, is ideally and most capably suited to meet all the needs in all these spheres.

In chapter nine, Conscience, Government and Promise, we'll examine the second, third and fourth ages or dispensations in human history, namely, those of Conscience, Human Government, and Promise (or Patriarchs). In our discussion of the age of Conscience, we'll examine God's second covenant with mankind, the Adamic Covenant, and mankind's history from Eden to the Flood. In our discussion of the age of Human Government, we'll examine God's third covenant with mankind, the Noahic Covenant, and mankind's history from the Flood to the tower of Babel. In our discussion of the age of Promise (or Patriarchs), we'll examine God's fourth covenant with mankind, which was His first covenant with Israel, the Abrahamic Covenant, a foundational covenant in God's Kingdom program. We'll also trace the patriarchs' history from Abraham to Israel's exodus from Egypt, especially as it relates to the outworking of the Kingdom program.

In chapter ten, The Theocratic Kingdom, we'll examine the bases and the development of the Theocratic Kingdom of Israel. We'll identify the bases of the Theocratic Kingdom as God's second and third covenants with Israel, namely the Mosaic and the Palestinian Covenants. We'll then examine the divine purposes, theocratic structure, miraculous establishment and historical development of the theocracy from Moses' administration on through Israel's occupation of Palestine, through the period of the judges, and on into the Davidic monarchy.

We'll discuss the decline and fall of the Jewish theocracy in our chapter eleven, The Decline and Fall of the Theocratic Kingdom. We'll see how Israel's decline began with Solomon's failures and continued with the rupture of the Kingdom under the leadership of his son Rehoboam. We'll see how the decline fulfilled the prophet Samuel's predictions, and how and what the Hebrew prophets prophesied during the decline. We'll see how, after the theocracy had declined to the point of no return, the Kingdom fell, in fulfillment of the Hebrew prophecies. We'll study the resulting "times of the Gentiles," including their purpose, signature events and duration. Our study of the times of the Gentiles will include discussions of the prophesied succession of world powers, Daniel's seventy weeks, and the Hebrew prophets' prediction of eventual restoration of the theocracy.

We'll discuss the biblical covenants in chapter twelve, Covenants of the Kingdom. We'll begin with a review of some basic principles regarding the biblical covenants, including their importance, their purposes and their characteristics, such as the difference between conditional and unconditional covenants. We'll then examine in some detail God's eight covenants with mankind: the three covenants that God made with mankind in general, the Edenic, Adamic and Noahic Covenants, and the five covenants that He made specifically with Israel, the Abrahamic, Mosaic, Palestinian, Davidic and New Covenants. We'll pay particular attention to the four unconditional covenants God made with Israel, the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic and New Covenants, as they collectively form the covenantal basis for Israel's future restored Theocratic Kingdom.

In chapter thirteen, The Kingdom in Hebrew Prophecy, we'll survey the Hebrew prophets in relation to the eschatological (future) Kingdom of God. In this chapter we'll demonstrate that when taken plainly or at face value, the Hebrew prophets clearly foretell a future literal, earthly, theocratic, Jewish Kingdom. Hundreds of passages will be cited from the historical books, the Psalms and the Hebrew prophets, with minimal commentary, to prove this point. One of our purposes for this chapter will be to demonstrate to the reader how simple and self-evident the correct interpretation of Old Testament prophecy concerning the Kingdom usually is.

What sort of Kingdom were the first-century Jews, the Jews of Jesus' day, expecting? This will be the subject of chapter fourteen, First-Century Expectation of the Kingdom. We'll first consider the first-century Jewish understanding of the (Davidic) Kingdom, which was, of course, based on the Jewish covenants and prophecies of the Old Testament, and we'll show how this understanding differs greatly from today's popular "spiritual" kingdom idea. We'll show that the first-century Jews simply had no basis for belief in any kind of future Kingdom other than a literal, earthly one. We will then demonstrate that this literal, earthly, Davidic Kingdom was indeed the Kingdom expected by the first-century Jews. We will suggest that the opening chapters of the New Testament assume a Jewish understanding of this covenanted and prophesied Kingdom, and that these chapters cannot be well understood without recognizing this.

“Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand!” Such was the introductory Kingdom message of John the Baptist, Jesus, the twelve and the seventy. To what “Kingdom” were they referring in their preaching? This will be the subject of our chapter fifteen, Announcement and Offer of the Kingdom. We’ll prepare to answer this question by first considering some introductory biblical information, including the relationship between the Old and New Testaments and the purposes of the four gospels. Then, we’ll take a close look at exactly how the Kingdom was announced and offered by John the Baptist, Jesus, the twelve and the seventy. Then, we’ll make our case that the Kingdom offered to the Jewish nation was indeed the previously covenanted and prophesied theocratic, Davidic Kingdom.

With Messiah on the scene, personally announcing and offering the Kingdom to the nation Israel, a national decision was required of Israel. Morally unprepared for the Kingdom, tragically, the nation, through its leaders, chose to reject Jesus as Messiah, as we will see in chapter sixteen, Rejection of the King. We’ll explore some of the reasons why the Jews rejected Jesus as King, and will see how, after His rejection, Jesus’ ministry changed in several ways, such as Jesus’ self-identification, the purpose of His miracles, His message, and His style and method of preaching.

Now, since Jesus the Messiah has come, does that mean that the Kingdom has therefore come? And/or, perhaps, has the covenanted and prophesied Jewish Kingdom been transformed into something else? Or, has the Jewish Kingdom been merely postponed? We’ll explore these various possibilities in chapter seventeen, Postponement of the Kingdom. Now, if the Kingdom has come, when did it come? Had it come prior to Jesus’ First Advent? Or, did it come during Jesus’ First Advent? Had it come prior to Jesus’ ascension, or possibly just after His ascension? Had it come by the time the New Testament epistles were written? Has it come yet? And/or, has the Kingdom been transformed? If it has been transformed, what new form has it taken? Is the Kingdom now the gospel of the Kingdom? Or, is it perhaps repentance, faith, obedience to God or union with Christ? Is it a spiritual kingdom, a personal, present salvation, a spiritual reign of God in the heart? Is it Jesus’ present authority? Is Jesus reigning as King now, on David’s throne? Is the Kingdom now the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society? Or, is the Kingdom now the church? Or, has the Kingdom not been transformed at all? Could the Kingdom possibly still be what it’s always been, namely a future, earthly, Jewish Kingdom? Could it be that the Kingdom has neither come yet, nor been transformed, but rather merely postponed? We will answer yes, the Kingdom has only been postponed. We will, therefore, discuss at some length the Scriptural statement, cause, consequences, such as Israel's present blindness and an extension of the times of the Gentiles, and objectives, such as Israel's punishment and the gathering of the members of the church, of the Kingdom's postponement.

We'll present further evidence that the Theocratic Kingdom had not yet come in the first century, and had not been transformed but had merely been delayed, in our chapter eighteen, Reaffirmation of the Kingdom. This evidence will be provided from the four gospels, the Acts of the Apostles, the New Testament epistles and the Revelation. Evidences from the gospels will be provided by Jesus and by others including the soldiers at the time of Jesus' arrest, the Jews at the time of Jesus' trial, Pontius Pilate, the chief priests, scribes and elders, the penitent thief on the cross, Joseph of Arimathea and the men on the road to Emmaus. Evidences from the Acts of the Apostles will include Jesus' commands to the apostles, a number of the events in Acts, and the testimony of the apostles in Acts. Evidences from the New Testament epistles will be provided by Paul, James, Peter, John and Jude. We will also provide numerous evidences for the future, earthly, Jewish Kingdom from the highly Kingdom-focused book of Revelation.

We'll take a close and detailed look at the King of the Kingdom, Jesus the Christ, in our chapter nineteen, The King of the Kingdom. We'll examine Jesus' qualifications for the Kingship, His career, His offices, His titles and His glory. In examining His qualifications for Kingship, we'll consider His deity and humanity, submissiveness, incarnation, innocence, obedience, character, perfection, miracles and suffering. We'll review His career, including His incarnation, life, death, burial, resurrection, ascension, glorification, receipt of all power and authority, present session, return, and the exercising of power in the Kingdom. We'll consider His three offices: those of Prophet, Priest and King. We'll examine the significance of many of His titles as they relate to the Kingdom, including Immanuel, the Son of God, the Son of Man, the Son of David, the Lamb of God, the Lion of Judah, the Messiah or Christ, the King of the Jews, the King of Kings and the Morning Star. We'll consider the glory that Jesus exhibits at every stage of His career: before His incarnation, at His incarnation, in heaven now, at His Second Coming, and in the Millennial Kingdom. We'll demonstrate how, in so many ways, Jesus Himself is the glory of the Kingdom! We will also offer some evidences that Jesus was in no way a deception: that He was neither deceived nor a deceiver, that He was not an invention of His disciples, and that the four gospel accounts were not concocted by later writers.

In chapter twenty, The Mystery Kingdom (the Church), we'll take a look at the current "mystery" form of the Kingdom. We'll consider the Mystery Kingdom's identity, purposes, career and characteristics. Concerning the identity of the Mystery Kingdom, we'll carefully define the Mystery Kingdom and will identify the church's place within it. We will identify what the church is not, such as Israel and the Kingdom, and what she is, such as the spiritual seed of Abraham and the bride of Christ. We'll demonstrate from Scripture that she is an organism, not an organization, and that she is identifiable. We'll discuss the "mystery" nature of the church, and will identify the four elements that comprise her mystery. We'll discuss the current purposes of the Church Age, including the calling out from among the Gentiles a people for God's name, the espousing of a bride to Christ, the incitement of the Jews to jealousy, and the selection and preparation of kings and priests for the Millennial Kingdom. We'll suggest that the current purpose of the church is not to entertain church members or others, nor is it to Christianize the world. We'll also discuss the ultimate, future purposes of the church, including her being Christ's wife, exalting redeemed men and displaying the infinity of God's grace. Regarding the career of the church, we'll discuss the church's chronology and her developmental details as described in the "mystery" parables of Matthew chapter thirteen and in the letters to the seven churches of Revelation chapters two and three. We'll emphasize that God is gathering the church now, and that the door to membership in Christ's body is presently open and will remain open until the Rapture of the church. We'll then discuss the characteristics of the Church Age, including its disconnectedness from prior and subsequent dispensations, its centering in Jesus' death, the unity exhibited by the spiritually regenerated members of Christ's body, the absence of any centralized, authoritative church government, its mixture of good and evil and truth and error, its absence of angelic manifestations and spectacular miracles, and its conspicuous and pervasive silence on God's part.

In chapter twenty-one, The Rapture of the Church, we'll discuss the Rapture of the church, including its definition, Scriptural fact, identity, participants, types, purposes, characteristics and chronology. We'll define the Rapture via three primary passages of Scripture: John 14:1-3, 1 Cor. 15:51-53 and 1 Thess. 4:13-18. We'll then corroborate these three passages with many others that confirm the rapture concept, and will demonstrate that the Rapture is in many ways differentiated from Christ's Second Coming. We'll identify who will be taken up in the Rapture. We'll consider several types, or patterns of the Rapture, such as Enoch, Elijah, and the Jewish wedding tradition. We'll discuss the purposes of the Rapture, both for those taken up and for those left behind. We'll consider several characteristics of the Rapture, such as its mystery, its instantaneous occurrence and its unexpectedness. We'll take a close look at the chronology of the Rapture, including its timing and its duration. We'll take a particularly detailed look at its timing, which we expect to be pretribulation (occurring before the Tribulation period) and believe to be imminent (it could happen at any moment). We'll consider the various attitudes that people have toward the Rapture, particularly professing Christians, and will draw attention to the many Scripture passages that encourage believers to eagerly anticipate it.

We'll discuss the future Tribulation period in chapter twenty-two, The Great Tribulation. We'll discuss the biblical fact of the Tribulation, as well as its purposes, characteristics, chronology, sociological systems, characters and events. We'll take a look at the many biblical passages that describe the Tribulation period, including the remarkably parallel accounts in Matthew chapter twenty-four and Revelation chapter six. We'll consider the purposes of the Tribulation in relation to Israel, such as Israel's purging and her national salvation, and in relation to the Gentile nations, such as the allowing of evil to have its greatest-ever manifestation and the purging of the nations' evil rulers and people in preparation for the Millennial Kingdom. We'll discuss the characteristics of the Tribulation including its deception, sin, trials and tribulation, anti-Semitism, persecution of believers, and progressively severe wrath of both God and Satan, and destruction. We'll discuss the chronology of the Tribulation, including its timing and duration. We'll demonstrate that it must occur after the Church Age and before the Millennial Kingdom. We'll show from the Bible that its duration will be exactly seven years, that it is Scripturally divided into two halves of three and one half years each, and that it will conclude with Christ's return to earth. We'll examine the sociological systems of the Tribulation, including its global government, global economy and global religion. We'll identify the characters of the Tribulation, both evil and good. We'll describe the evil characters, such as Satan, demons, the Antichrist, the false prophet, the apostate church and lost mankind, and the good characters, such as the two witnesses, the 144,000 and the Tribulation saints, including the great multitude of Revelation chapter seven and the sheep of Matthew chapter twenty-five. We'll describe the ideologies and the events in preparation for the Tribulation, and the events of the Tribulation itself. We'll discuss in chronological order the events of the first half of the Tribulation: Antichrist's confirmation of a covenant with Israel, the Lamb's taking the title deed of the earth and the preparation for the eviction of earth's usurpers from His realm, Elijah's preparation of Israel, the prophesying of the two witnesses and their death, resurrection and translation, the sealing of the 144,000, the seven seal judgments, the first six of the seven trumpet judgments, the fall of ecclesiastical Babylon the Great, and the salvation of the great multitude. Then we'll discuss the events of the middle of the Tribulation: Satan's casting out of heaven to the earth, Antichrist's blasphemy, his defiling of the temple in Jerusalem, his breaking of the covenant with Israel and his absolute rule, Israel's persecution, exile from the land and gathering at Bozrah, the mark of the beast, and the seventh of the seven trumpet judgments. Finally we'll discuss the events of the last half of the Tribulation: the trampling of the holy city (Jerusalem) for forty-two months, "this good news of the Kingdom" preached, angelic proclamations made, the marriage of the Lamb (in heaven), the seven bowl judgments, the breaking of Israel's will, the removal of Israel's blindness, Israel's recognition of Jesus as Messiah, Israel's repentance, reception of the Holy Spirit, forgiveness and regeneration (salvation), Israel's pleading for Christ's return, the gathering of all nations against Israel, the commencement of the campaign of Armageddon, and the fall of the city (political and economic) Babylon.

The Tribulation period will close with Christ's Second Coming. In chapter twenty-three, The Second Coming of the King, we'll study this event in detail including its factuality, necessity, importance, Person, purposes, characteristics, timing, location, destination and events. We'll also take a look at peoples' differing attitudes toward the Second Coming. We'll examine Scriptural evidence that suggests that the Second Coming is a necessary event in God's overall Kingdom program, and that it will in fact be one of the two most important events in humankind's history. We'll see that the Jesus who comes the second time will be the same One who came the first time, and we'll take a look at some of the titles of the King that apply to Him at His Second Coming. We'll consider some of the many purposes of the Second Coming, all of which are related to the Kingdom in some way, such as the public revealing of Christ with His bride and with the angels, the saving of Israel, the conquering of the Antichrist, the dashing of the nations to pieces, the binding of Satan, the purging of all unrepentant sinners from the world, the ending of the times of the Gentiles, the restoration of the Theocratic Kingdom, the inauguration of the Millennial Kingdom, and the fulfillment of Israel's covenants and prophecies. We'll discuss how the Second Coming will be possible, certain, literal, bodily, visible and glorious. As to its timing, we'll demonstrate that the Second Coming is yet future, and that it will occur at the end of the age, just prior to the Millennial Kingdom. We'll pinpoint the location of the Second Coming and its subsequent destination. We'll discuss the events of the Second Coming, including cataclysmic natural phenomena, the sign of the Son of Man, Christ's appearance in the sky, His defeat of Antichrist and his army, and His setting foot on the Mount of Olives.

In chapter twenty-four, Inauguration of the Kingdom, we'll discuss several events that will occur in preparation for the Millennial Kingdom. We'll consider Antichrist's resurrection and casting into the lake of fire, the binding of Satan, the judgment of both Israelite and Gentile Tribulation survivors, and Israel's possession of the promised land. In preparation for our studies of the resurrections, we'll take a look at the intermediate state of the dead, both of believers and unbelievers. We'll then discuss the multi-stage first resurrection, which will include the resurrections of the church, the Tribulation saints, the Old Testament saints and (possibly) godly Gentiles. Then, we'll discuss the official inauguration of the Millennial Kingdom with the celebratory marriage feast of the Lamb.

In chapter twenty-five, The Millennial Kingdom, we'll take a close and careful look at the capstone of God's theocratic Kingdom program, the Millennial Kingdom. We'll discuss the bases for our belief in it, its purposes, its timing and its duration, and we'll have a detailed discussion of the earth, the human race, government, nations, culture and life in the Millennial Kingdom. We'll consider several bases for belief in the Millennial Kingdom, including Israel's covenants, Old Testament prophecy, Jewish tradition and Jesus' teachings. We'll take a look at the purposes of the Millennial Kingdom, with the understanding that the Millennial Kingdom is not the desired end in itself (the desired end being the Eternal Order), but rather an effective means to that end. Regarding the timing of the Millennial Kingdom we'll see that it occurs after Jesus' Second Coming, and regarding its duration we'll see by definition and from Scripture that it will be one thousand years. We'll give an extended description of the Millennial Kingdom. We'll discuss the renovation of the earth and the salvation, rejuvenation and repopulation of the human race. We'll take a look at the perfect government that will rule the Millennial Kingdom, including Jehovah's visible reign as King from Jerusalem in the Person of Messiah, accompanied by the believers who will reign with Him. We'll consider the structures of the two branches of government, Jewish and Gentile, including their chains of command. We'll see how these structures result in government that is supernatural, lawful, righteous, just and balanced. We'll discuss the nations of the Millennial Kingdom, both Jewish and Gentile. We'll note Israel's restored and blessed condition, including her rebuilt and exalted city Jerusalem, a millennial temple, a memorial, ceremonial and temporal sacrificial system, a millennial river, Jewish feasts observed, borders enlarged and covenants fulfilled. We'll see that Israel's life and culture will be spiritual: regenerated, reconciled to God, restored, united, forgiven, healed, exalted, righteous, holy, joyful and peaceful. We'll see that as a nation Israel will be populous, productive, prosperous and glorious—a beacon of light and goodness to the world. We'll see that the Gentile nations, too, will be blessed, with no more war between them, as they clearly and gladly recognize Israel's preeminence in the Kingdom. We'll note that some Gentiles will help build and serve in the millennial temple, and that all Gentiles will worship the King, with their representatives annually observing the feast of tabernacles in Jerusalem. We'll see that culture in the Millennial Kingdom will be diverse, and life will be peaceful, spiritual, joyful and good. We'll see that life will be supernatural, with miraculous events and angelic visitations being commonplace. However, as this will not yet be the Eternal Order, we'll note that even with all this spirituality and goodness, there will still exist some sin and death.

We'll see in chapter twenty-six, A Final Rebellion, that at the conclusion of the Millennial Kingdom Satan will be released from the abyss for a short period of time, and will instigate a final rebellion against Christ and His Kingdom. From this episode we'll see that even within a perfect environment the fallen human heart will still have a propensity to rebel against God, and that fallen man will still act according to this propensity if given the opportunity. From this vantage point in our study we'll retrospectively review all of the previous ages or dispensations of human history, and will clearly see that this propensity of fallen man toward evil is one of the major themes of the Bible, and that this propensity always results in tragedy, from which only the grace and supernatural power of God can rescue man.

In chapter twenty-seven, The Lake of Fire, we'll see that before the Eternal Order can commence, sin and death must be finally and entirely defeated. In this chapter we'll discuss several events that must precede the Eternal Order, including the translation of the millennial saints, the resurrection of lost mankind, the passing away of the present heaven and earth, and the Great White Throne judgment. We'll take a close and sobering look at the lake of fire, including its reality, nature, occupants, purposes and necessity. We'll also discuss reasons why we often have difficulty accepting the doctrine of the lake of fire.

Finally, in chapter twenty-eight, The Eternal Order, we'll discuss several final events that will take place in preparation for the Eternal Order, such as Christ's handing the Kingdom over to His Father, God's creation of a new heaven and a new earth, and the descending of the New Jerusalem out of heaven to earth. Then we'll discuss the final, ultimate consummation of the Kingdom of God program: the glorious Eternal Order.

We hope this brief summary has whetted our reader's appetite for the detailed study of the Kingdom of God that follows. Welcome aboard!

Section 1: Introductory Considerations

Chapter 1: Five Views of the Kingdom

What are the most commonly-held views concerning the Kingdom of God, and how did they originate? The answers to these questions will give us some perspective on the wide range of views that currently exists within Christendom, and will also help us to understand just how our view fits in (or conflicts with) with the major competing views.

Five Major Views

In the broadest sense, the most common views of the Kingdom can be divided into two camps, based on the two underlying theologies that support them. These two underlying theologies, both of which are orthodox¹, are covenant theology and dispensational theology. While dispensational theology is always premillennial² in its eschatology³, covenant eschatology is divided into three standard eschatological camps: *postmillennial*⁴, *amillennial*⁵ and premillennial. Therefore, we have a total of four standard eschatologies to compare: covenant postmillennial, covenant amillennial, covenant premillennial and dispensational. Then, there is also a fifth, heretical⁶ theology and eschatology that has its own, unique view of the Kingdom, namely, that of Jehovah's Witnesses. We'll spend some time on this fifth view, too, because Christians are being challenged by it on a daily basis via door-knocking Jehovah's Witnesses, and because this writer, due to his past involvement with Jehovah's Witnesses, has had considerable experience with it.

But again, the main theological conflict within Christendom today in relation to the Kingdom is between covenant theology and dispensational theology. We'll therefore be spending most of our time comparing these two systems: covenant theology which includes its three different eschatological divisions, and dispensational theology. After that, we'll also take a brief look at the Kingdom according to Jehovah's Witnesses.

1 "Orthodox" means conforming to the basic foundational doctrines of historic Christianity.

2 In premillennial eschatology, Christ returns before the millennium.

3 Eschatology is the branch of theology concerning "last things" such as the Rapture of the church, the Tribulation, the Second Coming of Christ, the resurrections and judgments, and the Millennial Kingdom.

4 In postmillennial eschatology, Christ returns after the millennium.

5 In amillennial eschatology, there is no Millennial Kingdom.

6 "Heretical" means not conforming to the basic foundational doctrines of historic Christianity.

The Two Primary Areas of Disagreement

While there are numerous secondary differences between covenant and dispensational theology, the two primary areas of disagreement between them relate to understandings of God's covenants (agreements) with mankind, and particularly God's future purpose for the nation Israel. In a nutshell, covenant theologians believe that God has made one over-arching "covenant of grace" with mankind that spans all generations, that the church is now the "new Israel," and that the nation Israel has no future purpose in God's Kingdom program, whereas dispensationalists recognize eight separate and distinct covenants that God has made with different groups of people at different times, which correspondingly divide human history up into a number of different dispensations, that Israel and the church are always separate in Scripture, and that the nation Israel has a major role yet to play in the outworking of God's Kingdom program. Throughout this chapter we'll be exploring these ideas in some detail.

The First Three Views: Covenant

Covenant theology is based on the idea that God has made one eternal, over-arching covenant, or contract, or agreement, with mankind. This covenant is in the form of a decree of God, made beyond or outside of time, for the salvation of fallen men. We'll explore this idea of an eternal "covenant of grace" further when we examine the specific teachings of covenant theology below.

Covenant theology was not formalized as a system of theology until relatively recently. According to Dr. John Walvoord, "Covenant theology is of comparatively recent origin... covenant theology as such is not in the historic creeds of the church, was not taught explicitly by Calvin or the other Reformers" (MK, p. 88). Dr. Norman Geisler specifies, "Classical covenantalism was formulated by Johannes Cocceius (1603-1669), was embraced by Charles Hodge (1797-1878) and most Reformed theologians, and was articulated by Oswald Allis (1880-1973). According to this position, the Old Testament covenants made with Israel are fulfilled in the New Testament church, God's 'spiritual Israel,' rather than a literal fulfillment in national Israel" (ST, 4:500).

In order to make Old Testament prophecy concerning Israel have fulfillment in the church, covenant theology uses a spiritualizing hermeneutic⁷. "Covenant theology is built upon a spiritualizing method of interpreting the Scriptures. In order to make the various covenants of the Old Testament conform to the pattern of the covenant of grace, it is necessary to interpret them in other than their literal sense” (Walvoord, MK, p. 90).

As we mentioned briefly above, covenant theology is based upon the idea of one over-arching “covenant of grace,” an eternal decree of God’s that spans all generations of mankind. “The point of distinction in covenant theology, then, is not simply an assertion of a covenant of grace in the broad sense of the offer of grace to man, but the doctrine that the covenant of grace is an important and determinative aspect of the eternal decree and is in fact the central purpose of God” (Walvoord, MK, p. 89). “In his effort to show that all Old Testament covenants are ‘in reality one and the same covenant’... Dr. Allis... his determination to establish an absolute covenantal unity throughout the Bible” (Dr. Alva McClain, GK, p. 158). “As is generally true with Covenant Theology, Boettner reduces everything in the plan of God to the plan of salvation” (Dr. Arnold Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 49). However, “A form of Covenant Theology which would thread all of Jehovah’s purposes and undertakings upon His one attribute of grace could hardly avoid confusion of mind in matters related to His varied objectives” (Dr. Lewis Sperry Chafer, ST, 4:311). As Dr. Fruchtenbaum points out, “It is not true that there is only one covenant of grace. The ‘covenant of grace,’ as defined by Covenant Theologians, is never even seen to exist in the Scriptures. A straight reading of Scripture shows that God made several covenants. These were not always made with the same people (e.g., the Noahic Covenant with Gentiles, the Abrahamic and Mosaic Covenants with Jews), nor did they have the same provisions. In fact, sometimes the provisions were contradictory (e.g., all foods were permissible under the Noahic, but not under the Mosaic)” (I, p. 262). It is therefore not surprising that “Like other Covenant theologians, Boettner nowhere in his work even tries to prove that such a covenant [the covenant of grace] exists” (ibid., p. 47).

Covenant theology teaches that the nation Israel has been replaced (or “fulfilled”) by the church, and has little if any future purpose in God’s Kingdom program. It teaches that if national Israel is to be saved and/or restored at all, it is only as it will be incorporated into the church. “Covenant Premillennialism believes in both a national salvation and a national restoration of Israel. Postmillennialism believes in a national salvation, but not a national restoration of Israel. Amillennialism rejects both” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 314).

In covenant theology, the church is the “new Israel.” “The concept of the Church being the new Israel is so ingrained in Covenant Theology that it is very often used as a base to interpret the meaning of Scripture”

(Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 248). The church is then supposedly comprised of the elect of all periods of human history. “From the covenant theology usually embraced by amillenarians comes the concept of the essential unity of the elect of all dispensations” (Walvoord, MK, p. 80).

Covenant theology teaches that the Law of Moses is still in effect, at least partially. “All Covenant Theologians feel that the Law of Moses is still in effect” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 282). “All schools of Covenant Theology insist that the Law of Moses is still in effect, but they are always forced to make major adjustments and even rewrites of the law, which Dispensationism does not need to do” (ibid., p. 510). “The failure by Covenant Theologians of all stripes to recognize the unity of the Law of Moses leads to very subjective determinations as to which commandments are to be followed and which are not. This confusion is, in turn, reflected in Covenant Theologians’ confusion between Israel and the Church” (ibid., p. 63). “What all Covenant Theologians conveniently ignore is that the law was given to Israel and not the Church” (ibid., p. 641).

Rather than expecting a future, literal, earthly Kingdom, covenant theology recognizes only a “spiritual” kingdom. “[According to Covenant theology,] the kingdom that Jesus offered was not a literal earthly kingdom, but a spiritual kingdom, the kingdom of salvation” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 312).

We’ll now consider in some detail the three covenant eschatologies: postmillennialism, amillennialism and premillennialism.

By definition, postmillennialism teaches that Christ will return after the millennium; after the church has herself established the kingdom of God in the world. “...postmillennialism is the doctrinal belief that Christ will return after (post) the millennium and usher in the eternal state with the final judgment of men and angels” (Walvoord, MK, p. 18). “In general, therefore, the postmillennial concept of the millennium is a rule of the Spirit of God in the heart, beginning in the past and continuing in the future in ever increasing power. Christ is now on the throne in heaven and will never have an earthly throne” (ibid., p. 28). “Postmillennialism is distinguished from amillennialism by its optimism, assurance of the ultimate triumph of the kingdom of God in the world, and its relative fulfillment of the millennial idea on the earth” (ibid., p. 33).

Postmillennialism was systematized approximately three centuries ago by the heretical theologian Daniel Whitby. “Daniel Whitby (1638-1725) is commonly given the credit for the rise of postmillennialism” (Walvoord, MK, p. 19). “Whitby himself was a Unitarian. His writings bearing on the Godhead were publicly burned and he was denounced as a heretic. He was a liberal and a freethinker” (ibid., p. 22). “Postmillennialism. Originating in the writings of Daniel Whitby (1638-1726), a Unitarian controversialist of England” (ibid., p. 7). “While some of Whitby’s writings were publicly burned as heresy, particularly his views on the Trinity, many conservative theologians rapidly embraced and propagated his viewpoint on the millennium. Postmillennialism today is not commonly held, and the controversy that continues is principally between amillennialism and premillennialism” (ibid., p. 8). “...postmillennialism is the most recent of millennial theories” (ibid., p. 18). “All seem to agree that postmillennialism is quite foreign to the apostolic church. There is no trace of anything in the church which could be classified as postmillennialism in the first two or three centuries. The millenarianism of the early church was premillennial, that is, it expected the return of Christ before a millennium on earth” (ibid., p. 19).

Among postmillennialism’s most influential advocates were Charles Hodge and Loraine Boettner. “Charles Hodge... postmillennial” (Walvoord, MK, p. 209). “Charles Hodge’s Systematic Theology, first published in the nineteenth century, has become the classic for both Covenant Theology and for Postmillennialism” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 29). “Boettner stands almost alone among modern scholars still defending conservative Biblical postmillennialism” (Walvoord, MK, p. 35).

Postmillennialism makes liberal use of a spiritualizing hermeneutic. “In order to find fulfillment of millennial promises in the present age, it is necessary for them to follow an allegorical or figurative system of interpretation in great areas of Biblical prophecy. This method has historically subverted not only prophecy but every important doctrine. Without question the real issue in the millennial controversy is right here. Practically all scholars agree that a strictly literal interpretation of prophecy leads to the premillennial concept of the millennium, while if the figurative method be employed Scripture may be interpreted in favor of other views. Postmillennialists quite frankly accept the figurative method as necessary to their interpretation” (Walvoord, MK, p. 24). As a side note, not long after leaving the Jehovah’s Witnesses, as I was filling in and firming up my eschatological understandings, I read Lorraine Boettner’s classic defense of postmillennialism, The Millennium. As I read Boettner’s interpretations of Old Testament prophecies given to Israel, I was often surprised by his fanciful allegorical interpretations, not a few of which rivaled those of the Watchtower Society in their ingenuity.

Postmillennialism’s signature teaching is the idea that the world is getting better and better. “Postmillennialism is distinguished from amillennialism by its optimism, assurance of the ultimate triumph of the kingdom of God in the world, and its relative fulfillment of the millennial idea on the earth” [quoting John F. Walvoord, The Millennial Issue in Modern Theology, Bibliotheca Sacra, 106:165] (Dr. J. Dwight Pentecost, TTC, p. 386). “...the concept was pleasing to the liberal and skeptic. If they did not believe the prophets, at least they believed that man was now able to improve himself and his environment” (Walvoord, MK, p. 23). “As postmillennialism had risen in an atmosphere of scientific and educational progress, so it declined in an atmosphere of war and world chaos” (ibid., p. 35). “Some basic tenets of Postmillennialism... the world is growing better...” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 18)

Postmillennialism teaches that the church is the “new Israel,” and that ethnic Israel will be saved only by being incorporated into the church. “The essentially postmillennial idea that Israel will be incorporated in the church and her promises fulfilled to her in a spiritualized sense seems to be gaining popularity” (Walvoord, MK, p. 102). Postmillennialists see future salvation for Israel, but not future restoration. “Postmillennialists deny that there is to be a final restoration of Israel into the land” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 98). “While denying a national restoration of Israel, Postmillennialists have generally believed in a national salvation of Israel” (ibid., p.106). “Proponents of Postmillennialism believe in the national salvation of the Jews before the second coming of Christ” (ibid.). “Hodge’s outline of the future is simple. First, Israel’s blindness will continue until there is a mass turning of Gentiles to Christ. Second, after this mass turning of Gentiles, Israel’s blindness will be removed and she will be saved as a nation” (ibid., p. 108). “Shedd repeats his view of the chronology of future events: first, there must be the conversion of the Gentile world as a whole; and, second, then will come the conversion of the Jews as a whole. He also emphasizes that there is no specific timing for these events. Obviously, if the first event must precede the second, and the second event must precede the second coming, then the Millennium is a long, long way off” (ibid., p. 113). “The Covenant Postmillennialists’ acceptance of a national salvation of ethnic Israel allows for a greater development of Israelology than Covenant Amillennialism, but its denial of a literal restoration to the land results in a lesser development than Covenant Premillennialism or Dispensationalism” (ibid., p. 119).

Regarding the Mosaic Law, postmillennialists believe that at least some of the Laws are binding on the church. “As a Covenant Theologian, Hodge confuses Israel and the Church and, therefore, also confuses which commandments apply to Israel and which apply to the Church” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 66).

Regarding the conversion of the world, postmillennialists believe that this will occur prior to Christ's return. "The Whitbyan theory of the conversion of the world previous to the Second Advent" (George N. H. Peters, TTK, 3:171)

Postmillennialists believe that the millennium precedes Christ's Second Coming. "Postmillennialists set forth a spiritual Kingdom in the hearts of men" (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 18). "Postmillenarians hold that the Kingdom of God has been in existence from the beginning of the world. Christ came to reveal it more clearly and to extend it throughout the world" (ibid., p. 26). "Postmillennialists, then, believe that the 'Millennium' began with the first coming and will terminate with the second coming. It is not limited to a literal one thousand years, but is the entire 'period of the gospel dispensation'" (ibid., p. 15).

By definition amillennialism denies that there will ever be a literal, earthly Millennial Kingdom. "...amillennialism, which is a negation without an orderly theological system" (Dr. Charles L. Feinberg, M, p. 102). "Amillennialism. This, the most popular modern view of the millennium... Its most general character is that of denial of a literal reign of Christ upon the earth... It may be summed up in the idea that there will be no more millennium than there is now, and that the eternal state immediately follows the second coming of Christ" (Walvoord, MK, p. 6). "Among amillennialists who are classified as conservative, there are, then, two principal viewpoints: one which finds fulfillment in the present age on earth in the church; another finding fulfillment in heaven in the saints" (ibid.). "The principal unifying factor which dominates amillennial interpretation is its negative note, its denial of an earthly reign of Christ" (ibid., p. 67). "William E. Cox, an Amillenarian, accepts the following definition of Amillennialism, though it was penned by a Dispensationalist: 'A good definition of amillennialism comes from the pen of one of its severest critics. "Its most general character is that of denial of a literal reign of Christ upon the earth. Satan is conceived as bound at the first coming of Christ. The present age between the first and second comings is the fulfillment of the millennium. Its adherents are divided on whether the millennium is being fulfilled now on earth (Augustine) or whether it is being fulfilled by the saints in heaven (Kliefoth). It may be summed up in the idea that there will be no more millennium than there is now, and that the eternal state immediately follows the second coming of Christ. As they freely recognize that their concept of the millennium is quite foreign to the premillennial view they have been given the title amillennial by most writers'" (John F. Walvoord, The Millennial Kingdom, p. 6)" (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 123). "Amillennialism is 'a-' or 'no millennium.’ By this they mean there will be no literal kingdom on this earth. As Cox points out, ‘amillenarians do not deny the existence of a millennium.’ The problem is that ‘a more suitable term has not been found to describe amillennialism so as to distinguish it from premillennialism and postmillennialism.’ What they believe is that the Millennium exists now in this present age” (ibid.). “Negatively, there will be no Millennium on earth as described by either Premillennialists or Postmillennialists. Positively, whatever Millennium there will be must be placed before the second coming” (ibid., p. 125).

As to the recent history of amillennialism, “Amillennialism has had a great rise in popularity in the last several decades, largely because of the collapse of the postmillennial position, of which the majority of theologians were followers. Since amillennialism depends on the same spiritualizing principle of interpretation as postmillennialism and viewed the millennium as an interadvent era preceding the second advent, as did postmillennialism, it was a relatively simple matter for the postmillennialist to shift to the amillennial view” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 387).

Amillennialism has more adherents than any other eschatological view. “...amillennialism without question the majority view of the church” (Walvoord, MK, p. 10). “Amillennialism... They would be in the comfortable fellowship of most of the Reformers, the Roman Church, and modern liberal theologians. They could at least unite on a negative—they did not believe in a literal millennium or kingdom on the earth” (ibid., p. 36). “The major segment of Covenant Theology today is amillennial” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 5). Recent proponents of amillennialism include Berkhof and Allis. “To dismiss the Old Testament evidence as Allis does is to ignore a massive amount of Scripture” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 210).

Amillennialism depends on the combining of disparate terms (such as Israel and the church) and on a spiritualizing hermeneutic for its defense. “It is well to notice how often amillenarians equate one term with another and use them interchangeably. That is forced upon them by their uniformitarian approach and their constant oversimplification of things that differ” (Feinberg, M, p. 207). “Failure to let the Bible mean what it says seems to point out the fact that the Covenant Amillennialist fails to see God’s purposes in relationship to the very people that these prophecies were spoken to or of” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 219). “Covenant Amillennialists are... enslaved to allegorization” (ibid., p. 216).

It is telling that there have not been produced any signature eschatological works in defense of amillennialism. “At this hour no monumental work exists which sets forth a system known as amillennialism” (Feinberg,

M, p. 101). “The literature on the subject of the amillennial approach to the Scriptures, compared with the numerous works on the premillennial position, is rather scanty” (ibid., p. 193).

As does covenant postmillennialism (and covenant premillennialism), covenant amillennialism assumes the existence of an over-arching “covenant of grace.” “In this school of thought, the covenant of grace becomes the all-pervasive covenant. All other ‘covenants’ are merely facets or outworkings of this one covenant” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 140). However, “Covenant Amillennialists in the works cited in this study never try to prove the existence of such a covenant. They merely assume its existence and go from there” (ibid., p. 142). “Berkhof is typical of those who build a large superstructure on a covenant he never proves exists” (ibid.).

Amillennialism sees no future restoration of national Israel. “As amillenarians deny any future dispensation after the present age, they also deny any future to Israel as a nation” (Walvoord, MK, p. 81). “Cox, Amillennialism Today, p.34: ‘Israel’s national promises all have been either fulfilled or invalidated because of unbelief.’ This is standard Covenant Amillennialism” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 177). “Covenant Amillennialism has an even less developed Israelology than Covenant Postmillennialism because it uses the allegorical method of interpretation, especially in the area of Israel and prophecy, to a greater extent than Covenant Postmillennialism does” (ibid., p. 229). “Covenant Amillennialism allows for the least development of Israelology when compared with the other two schools of Covenant Theology” (ibid., p. 231).

However, because amillennialism does not require the church to convert the world before Christ returns, as postmillennialism does, it is able to accommodate the doctrine of the imminent return of Christ. “Amillennialism, like Premillennialism, allows for a belief in the imminency of Christ’s return, which Postmillennialism does not” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 133).

Amillennialism often uses two passages in support of its idea that the Kingdom is only spiritual; not physical or political. The first of these is John 18:36: “Jesus answered, ‘My kingdom is not of this world. If My kingdom were of this world, then My servants would be fighting, that I might not be delivered up to the Jews; but as it is, My kingdom is not of this realm’” However, as Dr. Fruchtenbaum explains, “Amillennialists interpret the statement not of this world to mean that Christ’s kingdom will not be in this world. A denial of the kingdom being of this world is for them a denial of the kingdom being in this world. That this cannot be so is clear by a comparison with the previous chapter. In John 17:11 Jesus said that His disciples are in the world. Yet in John 17:14 and 16, the disciples are not of the world. Speaking of Himself, Jesus said, I am not of the world (17:14, 16); but several times He did say that He was in the world (17:11, 12, 13). Obviously, from the context of the Gospel of John alone it is possible to be in the world without being of the world. Not to be of the world means the believer is no longer of this world's nature, though he may very well be in the world still. By the same token, Christ's Messianic Kingdom may be in the world, but will not be of this world's nature" (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 192). The other passage is Luke 17:20-21: "Now having been questioned by the Pharisees as to when the kingdom of God was coming, He answered them and said, 'The kingdom of God is not coming with signs to be observed; nor will they say, "Look, here it is!" or, "There it is!" For behold, the kingdom of God is in your midst [within you, KJV]'" However, Jesus was here saying that "the kingdom of God is in your midst," not because the Kingdom was in his listeners in some mystical or spiritual way, but rather because He, the King of the Kingdom, was at that moment in their midst. We know this because "When Jesus said the kingdom is within you, He was speaking to unbelieving Pharisees (v.20)" (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 193). The Kingdom would therefore not have been "in" them.

In contrast with postmillennialists, amillennialists do not expect the conversion of the world prior to Christ's return. "The allegorical interpretation by the Amillennialist also places the Millennium between the first and second comings; but he does not see the period ending with a golden age prior to the return of Christ. In fact, the exact opposite will be true" (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 126). "Amillennarians would be like the postmillennarian in that both believe the millennium precedes the second coming of Christ. They would be like the premillennarian in that both believe good and evil will exist side by side until the end of the world" (ibid., p. 129). However, following Augustine, they still do not expect a future, literal, earthly Millennial Kingdom. "The Augustinian view: He taught that the millennium is to be interpreted spiritually as fulfilled in the Christian Church" (ibid., p. 133).

The third eschatological view among covenant theologians is premillennialism. Covenant premillennialists believe that Christ will return prior to a millennial Kingdom on earth. "George Eldon Ladd of Fuller Theological Seminary is one of the most prolific writers among Covenant Premillennialists today... He, like many Covenant Premillennialists, prefers to call his view 'Historic Premillennialism.' He defines this position as follows: 'Premillennialism is the doctrine stating that after the Second Coming of Christ, he will reign for a thousand years over the earth before the final consummation of God's redemptive purpose in the new heavens and the new earth of the Age to Come. This is the natural reading of Revelation 20:1-6.” [quoting George Eldon Ladd, ‘Historic Premillennialism,’ in The Meaning of the Millennium: Four Views, ed. by Robert G. Clouse, p. 17] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 234).

Indeed the most well-known proponent of covenant premillennialism in recent years has been George E. Ladd (1911-1982). “The most prolific spokesman for the view of Covenant Premillennialism is George Eldon Ladd” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 235).

Regarding covenant premillennialism’s hermeneutics and views on the timing of the Rapture of the church, Dr. Fruchtenbaum says, “Because Covenant Premillennialism is less consistent in its method of interpretation of prophecy (spiritualizing the Old Testament, yet literalizing many parts of the Book of Revelation), there are three separate schools within Covenant Premillennialism. A minority are pre-tribulation⁸, and they are represented by Faith Theological Seminary. Another minority are mid-tribulation⁹, and they are represented by Covenant Theological Seminary. The majority are post-tribulation¹⁰, and they are represented by Fuller Theological Seminary” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 244).

Covenant premillennialists believe that national Israel will be restored, maybe. “LaSor insists that: ‘There are countless prophecies in the Old Testament concerning Israel and the land of promise which have not been fulfilled in the christian church, and, in (his) opinion, can never be fulfilled in the church. They can be fulfilled only in Israel...’ Herein lies the crucial difference between Covenant Amillennialism and Covenant Premillennialism” [quoting William Sanford LaSor, Israel: A Biblical View, pp. 56-57] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 247). “[According to Covenant premillennialism] The re-establishment of Israel as a nation is evidence that God has not cast away His people; however, this is as far as Covenant Premillennialists are willing to go to give any theological significance to the Jewish State. It is possible that the rebirth of Israel is part of God’s purpose, but on this they are not sure” (ibid., p. 313).

Covenant premillennialists believe, as do all covenant theologians, that the church is the “new Israel.” However, they at least recognize that there are difficulties with this view. “For him [Ladd], as for all Covenant Theologians, Old Testament prophecy does not speak of Israel but of the Church”

8 Pretribulationists believe the Rapture of the church will happen before the Tribulation begins.

9 Midtribulationists believe the Rapture of the church will happen mid-way through the Tribulation.

10 Posttribulationists believe the Rapture of the church will happen at the end of or after the Tribulation.

(Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 235). “Ladd admits that between the Old and New Testaments there are ‘two different stories: the story of the nation Israel and the story of the church,’ (Ladd, Last Things, pp. 7-9) and for Ladd this is a ‘dilemma.’ The dispensationalist does not view it as such but accepts the two entities of Israel and the Church to be just that: two separate entities for which God has a separate plan” (ibid., p. 254).

Again, while all covenant premillennialists recognize that Christ will return prior to the Millennial Kingdom, there is some disagreement among them as to the timing of His return in relation to the Tribulation period, with the majority position being posttribulational. “There are a minority of Covenant Theologians who are pretribulational and a minority of others, like Buswell, who are midtribulational; but the majority are posttribulational. To some degree, it is a Covenant Theologian’s Israelology that determines whether he is postmillennial, amillennial, or premillennial. In a similar way, among Covenant Premillennialists, one’s Israelology also determines whether he is Pretribulationist, Midtribulationist (as Buswell), or Posttribulationist (which is Ladd’s position)” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 295). “The Covenant Premillennialist who is also a Posttribulationist believes that the Church will go through the Tribulation. The evidence is based on the fact that the Scriptures clearly teach that Israel will go through the Tribulation; and since they identify Israel with the Church, they conclude that the Church will go through the Tribulation” (ibid., p. 314).

As we demonstrated above, covenant premillennialists believe that national Israel will be restored, maybe. However, because they combine Israel and the church, they do not foresee a future literal, earthly, Jewish Kingdom. “Ladd, as a Covenant Theologian, cannot accept a millennium for Israel based on Old Testament prophecy because he does not, like the dispensationalist, keep Israel and the Church distinct. He writes: ‘Ryrie correctly identified myself as a nondispensationalist because I do not keep Israel and the church distinct throughout God’s program.’” [quoting George Eldon Ladd, ‘Historic Premillennialism,’ in The Meaning of the Millennium: Four Views, ed. by Robert G. Clouse, p. 20] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 234).

The Fourth View: Dispensational

The fourth view of the Kingdom is that of dispensationalism. The fore-runners of modern-day dispensationalism were chiliasm and millenarianism.

Chiliasm dates from the first century. As explained by George Peters, “Chiliasm or Millenarianism (the former word derived from the Greek, and the latter from the Latin, expressive of a thousand years) is most generally used to denote the doctrine of the Pre-Mill. Advent of the Messiah, and His personal reign on earth, at least during the thousand years” (TTK, 1:459). And Dr. Walvoord, “Practically all students of the early church agree that premillennialism, or, as it is also called, chiliasm, was the view held by many in the apostolic age. It is the oldest of the various millennial views. Chiliasm, from the Greek word chilias meaning one thousand, is the teaching that Christ will reign on earth for one thousand years following His second advent” (MK, p. 5).

Regarding millenarianism, Peters notes “...the distinctive teaching of Millenarianism, viz.: that of the personal Advent followed by the Kingdom of the Theocratic King here on earth introducing the promised Mill. glory” (TTK, 1:487). “The fundamental position which distinguishes Millenarians from all others, is this: No Millennium without the personal coming and intervention of the same identical Jesus who ascended to heaven” (ibid., p. 552).

The modern, fully-developed theology of chiliasm, or millenarianism, is known as dispensationalism. The term dispensation is taken from Ephesians 1:10 in the King James Version: “That in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him” The term dispensation is also found at 1 Cor. 9:17, Eph. 3:2 and Col. 1:25 in the KJV (and also in the NKJV). For a definition of dispensationalism, we turn to Dr. Fruchtenbaum: “To understand what Dispensationalism is, one must define the term ‘dispensation’ as used by Dispensationalists. Clarence E. Mason, Jr., Dean of the Philadelphia College of the Bible, defines it as follows: ‘The word dispensation means literally a stewardship or administration or economy. Therefore, in its biblical usage, a dispensation is a divinely established stewardship of a particular revelation of God’s mind and will which is instituted in the first instance with a new age, and which brings added responsibility to the whole race of men or that portion of the race to whom the revelation is particularly given by God. Associated with the revelation, on the one hand, are promises of reward or blessing for those responding in the obedience of faith while on the other hand there are warnings of judgment upon those who do not respond in the obedience of faith to that particular revelation. However, though the time period (age) ends, certain principles of the revelation (dispensation or stewardship) are often carried over into succeeding ages, because God’s truth does not cease to be truth, and these principles become part of the cumulative body of truth for which man is responsible in the progressive unfolding revelation of God’s redemptive purpose. Some of these principles are carried over intact (as,

e.g. conscience, human government, Abrahamic covenant) and some are passed on adjusted (law, church) to the age(s) which follow(s)” [quoting Clarence E. Mason, Jr., Dispensationalism Made Simple, p. 19] (I, p. 318). “A concise definition of a dispensation is this: A dispensation is a distinguishable economy in the outworking of God’s purpose” [quoting Charles C. Ryrie, Dispensationalism Today, p. 29] (ibid., p. 321). “Dispensationalism views the world as a household run by God. In this household-world God is dispensing or administering its affairs according to His own will and in various stages of revelation in the process of time” [quoting Charles C. Ryrie, Dispensationalism Today, p. 31] (ibid., p. 323). Dr. Geisler also defines “dispensation” and mentions that dispensationalists have traditionally recognized seven dispensations in Scripture: “Dispensation is a biblical term. Speaking of Christ’s coming kingdom, Paul affirmed ‘that in the dispensation of the fullness of the times He might gather together... all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth’ (Eph. 1:10 NKJV). A dispensation is a ‘divine order of affairs’ or a ‘period of administration.’ It is a specific time in the unfolding drama of redemption wherein God ordains a specific arrangement of events and commands for a specific purpose” (ST, 3:160). “Relying upon the traditional seven dispensations, God’s purpose to defeat evil seems to go something like this: In each age or period from Adam through Christ’s return, God orchestrates a different condition, with a different test, to see whether human beings will obey Him. Each time they fail—under almost every conceivable condition. The sum total of the dispensational examinations demonstrates that it is always wrong to disobey God and that complete obedience to Him is the only true path to eternal satisfaction” (ibid., p. 161). George Peters speaks of the dispensations: “We leave God to tell us the nature of the dispensations, and find that this one is to be succeeded by one more glorious that includes this very restoration” (Peters, TTK, 2:52). Dr. Feinberg recognizes seven dispensations and gives a brief summary of their common structure and purpose: “In each of the seven dispensations in time God is working out His purpose to reveal experimentally and practically that man can never become right before God in his own strength or through his own deeds. Each age reveals God’s plan worked out in four particulars: first, a special test; second, a grievous failure; third, a righteous judgment; and fourth, a gracious intervention” (M, p. 151).

Three men commonly credited with having major roles in the development and systematization of modern dispensationalism are John Darby, C. I. Scofield and Lewis Sperry Chafer, as pointed out by Dr. Geisler: “Traditional (classical¹¹) dispensationalism is found in the writings of John Nelson Darby (1800-1882), C. I. Scofield (1843-1921), and Lewis Sperry Chafer (1871-1952)” (ST, 4:499). Over the past century, leading proponents of dispensationalism have included L. S. Chafer, “The major spokesman for Dispensationalism in the first half of this century [the 1900’s] was Lewis Sperry Chafer, founder of the Dallas Theological Seminary” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 319), Charles Ryrie, “Perhaps the leading spokesman for Dispensationalism since Chafer is Charles Caldwell Ryrie, a student of Chafer’s and a graduate and former professor of Systematic Theology at Dallas Theological Seminary” (ibid., p. 320), and John Walvoord. “Revised¹² dispensationalism is represented by John Walvoord (1910-2002) and Charles Ryrie (b. 1925)” (Geisler, ST, 4:499). Other leading proponents of dispensational theology over the past century have included Clarence Larkin, Charles Feinberg, J. Dwight Pentecost, Alva McClain, Arnold Fruchtenbaum and Norman Geisler. Today, almost all evangelical Christians are dispensational to some extent. As Dr. Geisler explains, “Virtually all evangelical scholars are ‘dispensationalist,’ even those who disavow the label” (ST, 3:161). “All evangelicals are in some sense dispensationalists, as no one believes, for instance, that our present relationship with God is identical to Adam and Eve’s pre-Fall relationship with Him in the Garden” (ibid., 4:414).

We’ll present more detailed histories of chiliasm, millenarianism and dispensationalism in our next chapter, The Kingdom in Church History.

The primary hermeneutical principle of dispensationalism is that Scripture should always be taken at face value, and understood literally or plainly, unless there is good reason within the text itself for doing otherwise. As Chafer explains, “The outstanding characteristic of the dispensationalist is the fact that he believes every statement of the Bible and gives to it the plain, natural meaning its words imply. This simple plan has changed the Bible from being a mass of more or less conflicting writings into a classified and easily assimilated revelation of both the earthly and heavenly purposes of God, which purposes reach on into eternity to come” (D, 97%). Geisler summarizes, “Charles Ryrie [in Dispensationalism Today, p. 85]... ‘Classical dispensationalism is a result of consistent application of the basic hermeneutical principle of literal, normal, or plain interpretation. No other 11 Classical dispensationalism teaches that there are two new covenants: one for Israel and one for the church.

12 Revised dispensationalism teaches that there is only one new covenant, given to Israel for future fulfillment by Israel, but whose spiritual blessings are presently enjoyed by the church. “Revised dispensationalism... it holds that there is only one new covenant, which, while having a later fulfillment in national Israel, has a present application to the church” (Geisler, ST, 4:499).

system of theology can claim this” (ST, 4:456). Fruchtenbaum agrees: “Dispensationalism is a natural conclusion derived from a literal hermeneutic consistently applied” (I, p. 916). Fruchtenbaum adds, “Regardless of how Christians may have understood the verse throughout history, Dispensationalists feel no obligation to continue in a tradition if that tradition is in error” (ibid., p. 211). And, “The obligation of theology is to determine what the Scriptures do teach, regardless of where this may lead or what sacred cows may need to be sacrificed” (ibid.). We’ll explore these principles in more detail in our chapter Biblical Hermeneutics.

The three basic teachings of dispensationalism are that the plain, obvious meaning of Scripture is the intended and correct meaning, that Israel and the church are two separate entities with two separate but complementary programs, and that the ultimate purpose of all things, including the history of mankind, is not man’s salvation but rather God’s glory. Feinberg summarizes these three points: “To sum up, the three basics of dispensationalism are: (1) differentiation between Israel and the church; (2) the normal, literal hermeneutical principle; and (3) the underlying purpose of God in history as His glory, not primarily the salvation of man (Rom. 11:36 [‘For from Him and through Him and to Him are all things. To Him be the glory forever. Amen.’])” (M, p. 79). Fruchtenbaum concurs and elaborates, “What, then is the sine qua non of dispensationalism? The answer is threefold: (1) a dispensationalist keeps Israel and the Church distinct... This is probably the most basic theological test of whether or not a man is a dispensationalist, and it is undoubtedly the most practical and conclusive. A man who fails to distinguish Israel and the Church will inevitably not hold to dispensational distinctions; and one who does, will. (2) This distinction between Israel and the Church is born out of a system of hermeneutics which is usually called literal interpretation. Therefore, the second aspect of the sine qua non of dispensationalism is the matter of plain hermeneutics. The word literal is perhaps not so good as either the word normal or plain, but in any case it is interpretation that does not spiritualize or allegorize as nondispensational interpretation does. The spiritualizing may be practiced to a lesser or greater degree, but its presence in a system of interpretation is indicative of a nondispensational approach. Consistently literal or plain interpretation is indicative of a dispensational approach to the interpretation of the Scriptures. And it is this very consistency—the strength of dispensational interpretation—that irks the nondispensationalist and becomes the object of his ridicule. (3) A third aspect of the sine qua non of dispensationalism... concerns the underlying purpose of God in the world. The covenant theologian in practice makes this purpose salvation, and the dispensation-alist says the purpose is broader than that, namely, the glory of God. To the dispensationalist the soteriological or saving program of God is not the only program but one of the means God is using in the total program of glorifying Himself. Scripture is not man-centered as though salvation were the main theme, but it is God-centered because His glory is the center. The Bible itself clearly teaches that salvation, important and wonderful as it is, is not an end in itself but is rather a means to the end of glorifying God” [quoting Charles C. Ryrie, Dispensationalism Today, pp. 43-46] (I, p. 324).

Consistently applying these three principles, dispensationalists recognize that in Scripture, human history is divided up into seven unique dispensations. Chafer points out that “The dispensationalist does not create these differences as he is sometimes accused of doing. The conflicting principles, in the text of Scripture, are observable to all who penetrate deep enough to recognize the essential features of divine administration. Instead of creating the problems, the dispensationalist is the one who has a solution for them” (D, 45%). Walvoord points out three obviously differing dispensations: “dispensationalism... particularly as revealed in three important dispensations of law, grace, and kingdom” (MK, p. 223). And Fruchtenbaum points out that all Christians recognize more than one dispensation: “All four systems recognize that there is more than one facet of God’s kingdom program. Minimally, all see at least two facets: a present form of the kingdom and a future form of the kingdom” (I, p. 605).

Dispensationalists usually identify seven dispensations in human history. They are the dispensations of 1. Innocence (from creation to the Fall; see our chapter God and Creation), 2. Conscience (from the Fall to the Flood; see the Conscience section of our chapter Conscience, Government and Promise), 3. Government (from the Flood to Abraham; see the Government section of our chapter Conscience, Government and Promise), 4. Promise (from Abraham to Moses; see the Promise section of our chapter Conscience, Government and Promise), 5. Law (from Moses to Pentecost; see our chapter The Theocratic Kingdom), 6. Grace (from Pentecost to the Second Coming; see our chapter The Mystery Kingdom (the Church)), and 7. Kingdom (from the Second Coming to the Final Rebellion; see our chapter The Millennial Kingdom). We’ll have a summary and review of the seven dispensations at the end of our chapter A Final Rebellion.

Dispensationalism is distinguished from all other theologies by its understanding of Israel. “Again, it is Israelology that is the main distinguishing characteristic between Dispensationalism and Covenant Theology” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 7). “There are three marks of a Dispensationalist. The first is a consistent distinction between Israel and the Church. This is the key. It is this, more than anything else, that distinguishes Dispensationalism from all three schools of Covenant Theology... It is this point that allows Dispensationalism to develop a full-blown Israelology while the others cannot" (ibid., p. 325). Dispensationalists are adamant that Israel is not the church. Chafer points out, "The Word of God distinguishes between earth and heaven, even after they are created new. Similarly and as clearly it distinguishes between God's consistent and eternal earthly purpose, which is the substance of Judaism; and His consistent and eternal heavenly purpose which is the substance of Christianity, and it is as illogical and fanciful to contend that Judaism and Christianity ever merge as it would be to contend that heaven and earth cease to exist as separate spheres. Dispensationalism has its foundation in and is understood in the distinction between Judaism and Christianity" (D, 35%). And, dispensationalists understand that Israel is to be restored in the future. Chafer continues, "At the beginning of this thesis it was stated that the doctrinal differences herein discussed are due to the fact that the two schools of interpretation involved stand on widely divergent premises. The dispensationalist believes that throughout the ages God is pursuing two distinct purposes: one related to the earth with earthly people and earthly objectives involved, which is Judaism; while the other is related to heaven with heavenly people and heavenly objectives involved, which is Christianity. Why should this belief be deemed so incredible in the light of the facts that there is a present distinction between earth and heaven which is preserved even after both are made new; when the Scriptures so designate an earthly people who go on as such into eternity; and a heavenly people who also abide in their heavenly calling forever? Over against this, the partial dispensationalist, though dimly observing a few obvious distinctions, bases his interpretation on the supposition that God is doing but one thing, namely, the general separation of the good from the bad, and, in spite of all the confusion this limited theory creates, contends that the earthly people merge into the heavenly people; that the earthly program must be given a spiritual interpretation or disregarded altogether. The advocates of this interpretation oppose every earthly feature of the divine program. They disregard or ignore the earthly covenants and promises; they spiritualize or vaporize the vast body of Scripture bearing on the Davidic throne and kingdom; they present no specific reason why Christ was born as the Son of David; and they recognize no earthly glory or purpose in His second advent. According to their system, Christ comes again to end the world, but, unfortunately for these conceptions, the world does not end then or ever" (ibid., 98%).

Regarding the church, again, dispensationalists keep Israel and the church separate. “Ryrie, a Dispensationalist, writes: ‘What, then, is the sine qua non of dispensationalism? ...A dispensationalist keeps Israel and the Church distinct’” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 6). We’ll have more to say on this in our chapter The Mystery Kingdom (The Church).

Regarding salvation, dispensationalists believe that in every generation men are saved by grace through faith, but they also recognize that the content of their faith differs from dispensation to dispensation. “Ryrie [in Dispensationalism Today, pp. 123-124] explains salvation in Dispensationalism as follows: ‘The basis of salvation in every age is the death of Christ; the requirement for salvation in every age is faith; the object of faith in every age is God; the content of faith changes in the various dispensations. It is this last point, of course, which distinguishes dispensationalism from covenant theology’” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 326).

Regarding the Mosaic Law, dispensationalists make a clean break from the Law for Christians. “Dispensationalists would claim that with the death of Christ the entire law was rendered inoperative” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 167). And, “To call a period of time the Dispensation of Law does not deny that there was grace, anymore than calling a period of time the Dispensation of Grace denies that there is law during that period. The difference is that Dispensationalists base this point on the fact that two separate and distinct covenants are involved, the Mosaic and the New Covenants, and not merely two administrations of the same covenant of grace. The Dispensationalist at least does not have to either ignore or explain the obvious differences between the two” (ibid., p. 155). We’ll examine the purpose of the Mosaic Law in our chapter The Theocratic Kingdom, and will consider its relation to the church in our chapter The Mystery Kingdom (the Church).

Dispensationalists do not believe that it is God’s purpose for the church to convert and Christianize the entire world, but rather only to “...take out of them [the Gentiles] a people for His name” (Acts 15:14). We’ll have more to say on this in our chapter The Mystery Kingdom (the Church).

Regarding the millennium, “dispensationalists are consistently premillennial” (Feinberg, M, p. 78). “If Biblical prophecy in general teaches anything clearly, it is that Messiah will come in great glory at the end of the present age to establish His Kingdom over all the earth; and this is the firm core of Premillennialism” (McClain, GK, p. 476).

It is this writer’s conviction that dispensationalism is more correct, and therefore more God-honoring, than all three systems of covenant theology. Dispensationalism honors God by allowing Him to say in Scripture what He actually means, and by accepting His word just as He has inspired it, without spiritualizing its plain meaning away. Dispensationalism honors the covenants that God has made with mankind by accepting them precisely as written, and by trusting that as history progresses God will continue to faithfully execute them to the letter. It honors Bible prophecy by interpreting all prophecies plainly, and by confidently expecting fulfillment of each prophecy by the same people group to whom they were originally given. And, dispensationalism glorifies God in His salvation of men and in every detail of His graciously-revealed Kingdom program as it unfolds throughout history.

The Fifth View: Jehovah's Witnesses

Jehovah's Witnesses' view of the Kingdom is an amalgamation of dispensational and covenant premillennial ideas, with a few unique inventions of their own added, all erected upon a foundation of thoroughly heretical doctrine. Jehovah's Witnesses foresee a literal, earthly Millennial Kingdom to come, but one that's devoid of national Israel. Their Israelology is a unique variant of replacement theology¹³, wherein Israel is replaced not by the historic Christian church, as is normally held by replacement theologians, but rather by their own Jehovah's Witness organization.

Dispensational features of Jehovah's Witness' eschatology include a (sometimes) literal hermeneutic, the understanding that the Mosaic Law belongs only to a past dispensation, earthly survivors of the future Great Tribulation, and a literal, earthly Millennial Kingdom. We say they employ a sometimes literal hermeneutic because while they do, to their credit, understand biblical history literally, and they interpret some facets of yet-to-be-fulfilled prophecy literally (for instance that there will be a future Millennial Kingdom), they deny the literal fulfillment of biblical prophecy regarding Israel's future. Because they replace Israel in yet-to-be-fulfilled prophecy with their own people, the remnant of Israel becomes the "anointed remnant" of Jehovah's Witnesses, persecution of Israel during the Tribulation becomes persecution of Jehovah's Witnesses, Israel in the Millennial Kingdom becomes Jehovah's Witnesses in the Millennial Kingdom, etc.

Covenant theology's influence on Jehovah's Witnesses' eschatology is apparent in the Witnesses' employment of a spiritualizing hermeneutic when interpreting yet-to-be-fulfilled prophecy originally given to Israel, the idea that God is forever finished with national Israel, and the teaching that ¹³ Replacement theology is the teaching that Israel has been permanently replaced by another group, a "new Israel." Most replacement theologians believe Israel has been replaced by the Christian church.

Israel has been replaced by the ekklesia, or church, or in Jehovah's Witness terminology, the "Christian congregation," in Jehovah's Kingdom program. As an example of their spiritualizing hermeneutic, they understand the 144,000 persons "sealed from every tribe of the sons of Israel" of Rev. 7:4 to be, not literal Israelites, but "spiritual Israelites," which supposedly refer to 144,000 Jehovah's Witnesses, the only Christians who will ever go to heaven, whose destiny is to rule the earth (invisibly) with Christ during the millennium. (The other 99.7% of Jehovah's Witnesses expect to survive the Great Tribulation and live forever on earth.) Then, the issue becomes further complicated in that in their interpretation of Bible prophecy "Israel" doesn't always refer to the ekklesia, (the spirit-anointed "Christian congregation"), but sometimes refers to Jehovah's Witnesses as a whole, and sometimes refers to the earthly class of Jehovah's Witnesses during the millennium. The Watchtower Society's allegorized interpretations of prophecy are often so fanciful that it's no wonder that Jehovah's Witnesses believe that the Bible cannot be understood without their help!

A major reason why Jehovah's Witness' eschatology is so faulty is that it has been constructed upon a foundation of man-made, grievously heretical doctrine. Jehovah's Witnesses' "accurate knowledge," as they call it, denies nearly every major orthodox Christian doctrine, including the deity of Christ, the personality of the Holy Spirit, the trinity, the bodily resurrection of Christ, the conscious intermediate state of the dead, the possibility of conscious existence and torment in Hades, the necessity of being born again, the bodily Rapture of the church, the visible return of Christ, resurrection of both the righteous and the unrighteous (they deny the resurrection of many of the unrighteous), death followed by judgment, and eternal punishment.

Jehovah's Witness doctrine, including their view of the Kingdom, does not glorify God, but rather defames Him. It presents Jehovah as a covenant-breaking God, who has no intention of keeping either the Abrahamic, Davidic or New Covenants that He has made with Israel. Instead of glorifying God, and humbling itself before His word, Jehovah's Witnesses' Watchtower organization glorifies itself, claiming that the Bible is not sufficient: that the Bible cannot be understood without its tutelage, that no one can please God outside of it, and that no one can be saved who refuses to submit to it. The Watchtower organization is attempting to usurp the Kingdom from the two groups to whom it has been covenanted and promised, namely, Israel and the church. Personally, this writer believes there are many severe lessons that Jehovah's Witnesses as a group have yet to learn, lessons that they likely will not learn this side of the Tribulation. My prayer, though, is that individual Jehovah's Witnesses who are willing (Rev. 22:17) would repent of their trusting in a man-made religious system (Ps. 118:8) and their own good works and "integrity" (Rom. 3:9-12), come to the biblical Jesus (John 1:1, 5:39-40), believe on Him (John 6:29, Acts 16:31), and find salvation (John 3:16, 6:47, 8:24, Eph. 2:8-9), entrance into the Kingdom (John 3:3, Col. 1:13), and rest for their souls (Matt. 11:28).

Why the Confusion?

So, here we have five major views of the Kingdom. Why the differences? Why the confusion? Why doesn't everyone just read the Bible and agree on what it means? We suggest three basic reasons: counterfeit systems, ignorance of Scripture and inconsistent hermeneutics.

Counterfeit Systems

As we've seen by example in this chapter, this world has no shortage of counterfeit systems of theology and erroneous views of the Kingdom. This fact often makes the search for truth difficult for those seeking the genuine Kingdom of God. Needless to say, acquiring the correct view of the Kingdom is especially difficult for those who commence their search while themselves trapped in these counterfeit systems, especially if questioning the system's status quo threatens severe punishment by those who run the system¹⁴. But it is this writer's testimony that recognizing counterfeit systems of theology and counterfeit Kingdoms in favor of the genuine is possible for those willing and able to go the distance. Arnold Fruchtenbaum says regarding counterfeit systems, "The nature of a counterfeit is to look like the genuine. Counterfeit money is not obviously phony money because it looks very much like the genuine. Many may have handled counterfeit money and not known it because few are trained to detect the difference between the counterfeit and the real thing. It takes those who have been so trained to be able to tell the difference. However, counterfeits do tend to have a flaw about them. Perhaps the wrong type of paper was used, the wrong type of ink or the wrong design in some obscure corner of the bill; but it is never an obvious phony. The flaw can only be determined if one has a good knowledge of the genuine. The same thing holds true in the spiritual realm. The first order of business is to know the genuine, and the genuine is contained in the written Word of God. It is the believer's obligation to study the Word and know God's program and God's way of doing things today. Then one will be able to recognize the counterfeit because of one's knowledge of the genuine. In the same way, Satan's counterfeit program looks very much like the real program of God contained in the pages of Scripture. Satan's program will not have obvious flaws in it. Therefore, believers must be trained in the Scriptures to be able to discern the difference between the real and the counterfeit" (FM, p. 558).

Ignorance of Scripture

The problem of counterfeit systems of theology and therefore counterfeit kingdoms is exacerbated by ignorance. First and foremost, the problem for most people is ignorance of Scripture, especially ignorance of the biblical covenants and prophecies: "The history of the Church conclusively shows, that just as Chiliasm in its purity prevailed, in that proportion were the covenants upheld and exalted as signal landmarks; and just as the Origenistic, Popish, and Mystical interpretation extended so were these covenants ignored as non-essential, or else spiritualized so as to make them scarcely recognizable" (Peters, TTK, 1:326). "Men, whose special business it is to proclaim the Word of God, are found in large numbers, who have never made the prophecies a careful and serious study" (ibid., 3:200). This is generally due to lack of education. Clear teaching regarding the covenants, prophecy and the Kingdom is often entirely missing from theological training. "Systematic Theology, as set forth generally in textbook, is without recognition of the divine program of the ages" (Chafer, ST, 1:xiii). But thankfully, especially in this age of "increased knowledge" (Dan. 12:4), in-depth biblical research, electronic data storage and instant data transfer and communication, correct doctrine concerning the Kingdom is both readily available and easily accessible.

Inconsistent Hermeneutics

Probably the most fundamental reason for this confusion on the nature of the Kingdom is a simple failure to hold to a consistent hermeneutic. This, in turn, results in a failure to distinguish between Israel and the church. "Our reasons, as the reader must have observed, lie deeper than mere inferences from isolated passages, or mere deductions from a portion of Scripture stripped of its grammatical meaning; they are founded in the solemnly, oath-attested Covenant, in the plain, grammatical meaning of the Word, in the general analogy of the Scriptures, and in the accredited faith of the apostolic churches" (Peters, TTK, 2:346). For a thousand different reasons, people just don't want to believe what the Bible says, so they spiritualize it and interpret it to mean something other than what it plainly says. We'll have much more to say on this in our chapter Biblical Hermeneutics.

Chapter 2: The Kingdom in Church History

In this chapter, we'll take a brief look at the history of theology as it relates to chiliasm, or premillennialism. We'll start with a very brief overview of the eschatological Kingdom of the Old Testament, which was the foundation upon which the eschatology of the first-century church was built. We'll explore the chiliasm of the early church, first tracing its history through the church's first three centuries. We'll hear what the Apostolic Fathers had to say regarding the Kingdom to come. Then, we'll examine the history of opposition to chiliasm, including the instruments and consequences of this opposition. Then, we'll trace chiliasm as it struggled for survival through the dark ages, was ignored for the most part during the Protestant Reformation, began to germinate soon after the Reformation, then came to full bloom again in the 19th and 20th centuries.

Carefully tracing the doctrine of the chiliastic or premillennial Kingdom throughout the twists and turns of church history brings to light many persuasive evidences for the validity of the doctrine. George Peters summarizes, "In conclusion, a brief résumé of our historical argument, to show its connection, is in place. The evidence in support of each step is ample and conclusive. Indeed, no other doctrine has a more clear and decisive proof in its behalf drawn from historical ground than this one. 1. We have shown that the Jews, before and at the First Advent, held to it, professing to derive it from covenant and prophecy. 2. Then we prove that John the Baptist and the disciples both entertained and preached the doctrine. 3. Next, that the doctrine was still held after the death of Jesus. 4. Extended evidence is given that the apostles, after the ascension and after the day of Pentecost, still adhered to it. 5. It is proven that our doctrine was generally, if not universally, received by the early churches, East and West, North and South. 6. This doctrine was perpetuated by the followers and successors of the first teachers. 7. That it was only changed and opposed under the Gnostic and Alexandrian influences. 8. That the Papacy materially aided in crushing the doctrine, because obnoxious to her teaching, claims, etc. 9. That, thus almost exterminated under Papal influence, there was a revival after the Reformation, since which time it has again been taught by able and devout sons of the church" (TTK, 1:555). Walvoord adds, "Such is the historical context of modern premillennialism. Rooted in the Old and New Testaments, a product of literal interpretation, nurtured by the apostles and the early church, eclipsed for centuries by the dark shadows of pagan philosophies and allegorizing methods of interpretation, emerging once more as a dominant strain in Biblical theology in these eschatological times, premil-lennialism is more than a theory, more than a doctrine. It is a system of Biblical interpretation which alone honors the Word of God as infallibly inspired, literally interpreted, and sure of literal fulfillment. It has stirred the coals of evangelicalism, created interest in Biblical study, and constituted a preparation of God's people for the coming of the Lord for His saints. Premillennial truth has been an inestimable blessing to those who have received it. To them the Bible has become a living book to be interpreted in its ordinary sense. It is significant that the Bible study movements have usually been premillennial, and institutions which emphasize the study of the text of Scripture, as illustrated in the Bible institute movement, have often been an integral part of the premillennial movement" (MK, p. 126).

Premillennialism in Old Testament Times

The chiliastic idea of a future earthly Kingdom with Messiah sitting on David's throne in Jerusalem did not originate in recent centuries, or even within church history. It was first revealed, taught and believed in Old Testament times. As Clarence Larkin points out, "In short, 'Post-Millennialism,' as advocated in our day [1920], is barely 200 years old, while 'Pre-Millennialism' dates back to the days of Isaiah and Daniel" (DT, p. 5). (We'll have much to say on the Old Testament prophets' view of the Kingdom in our chapter, The Kingdom in Hebrew Prophecy.) Then, as we'll demonstrate in our chapter Announcement and Offer of the Kingdom, it was this very same theocratic, Davidic Kingdom that John the Baptist, Jesus, the twelve and the seventy announced as "at hand" during the early part of Jesus' ministry.

Chiliasm of the Early Church

For the first three centuries of her history, the Christian church was almost exclusively chiliastic, or premillennial. This will become apparent as we take a historical look at the eschatological teachings of the church, beginning with her first decade of existence, through the remainder of the biblical period to the end of the first century, on through the second century where we'll take a look at the eschatological writings of the apostolic fathers, then on through the third century.

The First Decade

The first ten years of church history were exclusively Jewish. Dr. Fruchtenbaum points out, "During the first decade of Church history, the Church was Jewish, and Christianity was Hebrew only. What few Gentiles there were in the early Church were originally proselytes to Judaism before they became believers in Christ. Gentiles, as Gentiles, were not to be found in the Church until Acts ten with Cornelius” (I, p. 637). The exclusive Jewishness of the earliest church is evident from the biblical record. First, forty days after His resurrection and just prior to the birth of the church at Pentecost, Jesus told His disciples that they would be His witnesses first “in Jerusalem,” then in “all Judea and Samaria,” and only after that, “to the remotest part of the earth.” “And so when they had come together, they were asking Him, saying, ‘Lord, is it at this time You are restoring the kingdom to Israel?’ He said to them, ‘It is not for you to know times or epochs which the Father has fixed by His own authority; but you shall receive power when the Holy Spirit has come upon you; and you shall be My witnesses both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and even to the remotest part of the earth” (Acts 1:6–8). This is not surprising because, as Paul points out later, “For I say that Christ has become a servant to the circumcision on behalf of the truth of God to confirm the promises given to the fathers” (Rom. 15:8). Second, those in Jerusalem at the birth of the church were “Jews and proselytes.” “Phrygia and Pamphylia, Egypt and the districts of Libya around Cyrene, and visitors from Rome, both Jews and proselytes” (Acts 2:10). Third, on Pentecost, the men to whom Peter preached His first sermon were Jews: “It is you [Men of Israel] who are the sons of the prophets, and of the covenant which God made with your fathers, saying to Abraham, ‘And in your seed all the families of the earth shall be blessed.’ For you first, God raised up His Servant, and sent Him to bless you by turning every one of you from your wicked ways” (Acts 3:25–26). Fourth, God’s stated purpose at that time was to “grant repentance to Israel.” “He is the one whom God exalted to His right hand as a Prince and a Savior, to grant repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins” (Acts 5:31). As Sir Robert Anderson confirms, “How fallacious is the popular belief that the Jerusalem Church was Christian. In fact, it was thoroughly and altogether Jewish” (Anderson, SOG, p. 84). Regarding the (inherited) eschatology of these earliest Jewish believers, Peters summarizes, “It is corroborated by the church history of the earliest period, informing us, without any dissent, that, so far as known, all the Jewish believers held precisely the views that we are defending” (TTK, 1:445). Interestingly, Peters sees this “Jewishness” of the earliest church as strong evidence for the early origin of the New Testament: “The student is directed to a proof that this subject affords in behalf of the early origin of the Gospels. In looking at the opening of the New Test., the subject-matter of the Kingdom, how it was introduced and retained its ‘Jewish forms’... The Alexandrian school could not possibly, with their ideas of the Kingdom, have originated the Gospels, and this is true of all the later periods assigned. Thus e.g. the later origin of the Gospels is sufficiently disproven by the exclusive preaching of the Gospel of the Kingdom to the Jewish nation” (ibid., p. 197).

The Biblical Period

During Paul’s missionary journeys, as he traveled from city to city, he always spoke “to the Jew first.” For example, “Now when they had traveled through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, where there was a synagogue of the Jews. And according to Paul’s custom, he went to them, and for three Sabbaths reasoned with them from the Scriptures” (Acts 17:1–2). He later wrote: “For I am not ashamed of the gospel, for it is the power of God for salvation to everyone who believes, to the Jew first and also to the Greek” (Rom. 1:16) and “but glory and honor and peace to every man who does good, to the Jew first and also to the Greek” (Rom. 2:10). Now, is there any evidence in Scripture (or anywhere else, for that matter) that in Paul’s discussions with the Jews, that any controversy ever arose regarding the nature of the Kingdom, something that certainly would have occurred had Paul taught that the Jewish Kingdom hope had been nullified, or that their covenanted and prophesied Jewish Kingdom had now been transformed into a “spiritual” Kingdom? We know of the church’s controversies during the biblical period, because they’re recorded in the Bible. We know, for instance, about the controversies concerning Gentiles first being allowed into the church at the time of Cornelius (Acts 10) and concerning whether or not Gentile believers were required to be circumcised and observe the Mosaic Law (Acts 15). It is quite telling, therefore, that there is actually not a single hint in the entire New Testament of any controversies concerning the eschatological Jewish Kingdom. The only logical explanation for this is that the Jewish eschatological ideas that were current at that time (see our chapter Expectation of the Kingdom) were transferred without controversy from the Jewish expectations of the day, via Jesus and the (Jewish) apostles, into the newborn Christian church (a transfer that will be confirmed in our chapter Reaffirmation of the Kingdom). As Walvoord asserts, “The New Testament bears no record whatever of a millennial dispute” (MK, p. 38). And, “One of the most eloquent testimonies to premillennial truth is found in the absolute silence of the New Testament, and for that matter the early centuries of the church, on any controversy over premillennial teaching. It is admitted that it was universally held by the Jews. It is often admitted that the early church was predominantly premillennial. Yet there is no record of any kind dealing with controversy. It is incredible that if the Jews and the early church were in such a serious error in their interpretation of the Old Testament and in their expectation of a righteous kingdom on earth following the second advent, that there should be no corrective, and that all the evidence should confirm rather than deny such an interpretation. The general context of the New Testament is entirely in favor of the premillennial viewpoint. The amillennial interpretation has not one verse of positive testimony in the New Testament and can be sustained only by spiritualizing the prophecies of the Old Testament as well as the teaching of the New” (ibid., p. 118). Peters agrees, “The doctrine of the Kingdom, as preached by the apostles, was received by the early churches. This is not only reasonable, but shown to be a fact, from the apostles having no occasion during their entire ministry to censure any orthodox believers or churches for misapprehending, or holding to a false view of, the Kingdom. The decided and convincing impression is made by the apostolic writings that these first Christian churches were not ignorant of—but correctly understood—the important and cardinal subject of the Kingdom” (Peters, TTK, 1:449). “Dr. Auberlen (Dir. Rev.) has boldly and truthfully declared that Jesus, the Prophets, and the apostles were express Chiliasts” (ibid., p. 267).

The First Century

The majority of theologians and Bible students today would likely agree that of all the eras of the Christian church, the earliest church had the purest doctrine. This is our position, as well. “In virtue of their nearness to the Christ and apostles... The tradition, therefore, which really possesses most weight in deciding questions pertaining to the Kingdom, is that of the first and second centuries” (Peters, TTK, 1:131). “Surely if Church authority has any special weight in establishing the true faith, it certainly ought to be found in the Church which had the advantage of the teaching of the apostles, elders, and their immediate successors” (ibid., 3:249). Now, it is indisputable that the first-century church was chiliastic. “...the intensely Chiliastic position of the Primitive Church. How can the reader account for this, unless our view of the Kingdom is the correct one” (Peters, TTK, 1:443). The Mosaic Law had been abrogated, but not the expectation of the Millennial Kingdom. “The extreme Jewish idea of the continued obligatory observance of the Mosaic ceremonial law was combated by the early Chiliasts, as e.g. evinced in their opposition to the Ebionists, but this was done without discarding doctrines founded on covenant and prophecy, and remaining untouched by the abrogation of the Judaic ritual” (ibid., p. 487). The first-century church looked forward to the millennial age. “...the inaccuracy of ‘the end of the world’ believed in (for the early Christians had no idea of the modern view of such an end, but looked for the end of the age or dispensation, to be followed by another more glorious under Christ)” (ibid., p. 460). It is a curious fact that the Romans confounded the Jews and the Christians. “...how strangely the Jews and Christians of Rome were confounded with each other.’ This is explained by the simple fact that so long as the Early Church clung to the literal belief of the Abrahamic and Davidic covenants, there was much that was common to both (however they disagreed respecting the Mosaic ritual being still binding), but as the Gentile believers drifted from this belief, an antagonism sprung up and continued” (ibid., p. 407). The first-century church was confirmed in its literal eschatological expectations by the destruction of Jerusalem. “The destruction of Jerusalem greatly confirmed the church in its Millenarian faith, for such a literal fulfillment of Christ’s predictions led to an increased belief in His near coming and Kingdom” (ibid., p. 471). The apostles must have taught chiliasm. “It is simply impossible to account for the [chiliastic] belief without lowering the credibility and authority of the first teachers of the church, unless we accept of it as legitimate and the natural outgrowth of a correct teaching” (ibid., p. 451). The first-century church only knew a literal hermeneutic. “The primitive believers, the nearest to the apostles, had no idea that this language was to be taken figuratively” (ibid., 2:218). “Rushdoony admits there was Premillennialism taught in the early Church but dismisses it as ‘a result of Judaizing influences,’ though it may have just as easily and perhaps more likely resulted from seeking to read the Scriptures normally and to interpret them literally” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 105). Extrabiblical sources indicate that the primitive church was chiliastic. “George N. H. Peters lists fifteen advocates of premillennialism for the first century indicated as such outside the Scriptures themselves” (Walvoord, MK, p. 39). “...the first century is barren of any real support to the amillennial viewpoint” (ibid., p. 43). “The notable testimony of Papias, who was associated with the Apostle John, is of special weight. Papias who lived in the first century and the beginning of the second lists as adherents of premillennialism Aristio, John the Presbyter and the Apostles Andrew, Peter, Philip, Thomas, James, John, and Matthew. He certainly was in a position to know their views, and his testimony is an important link in sustaining the fact that the disciples continued in the Jewish expectation of a kingdom on earth... In contrast to these clear evidences, not one adherent, not one line of evidence is produced sustaining the idea that any first-century Christians held Augustinian amillennialism—that the interadvent period was the millennium. Further, there is no evidence whatever that premillennialism was even disputed. It was the overwhelming-majority view of the early church”

(ibid., p. 119). Premillennialists are honored to hold this same view today. “The Gospel of the Kingdom that we hold is precisely the one held by the Primitive Church” (Peters, TTK, 3:229). “Any theory, no matter by whom advocated, that introduces so fatal an antagonism between primitive and present faith, is to be discarded as irreconcilable with the truth” (ibid., p. 231).

The Second Century

All the evidence from the second century confirms a continuing premillennialism in the church. “Peters lists Pothinus, Justin Martyr, Melito, Hegesippus, Tatian, Irenaeus, Tertullian, Hippolytus, and Apollinaris as second-century premillennialists” (Walvoord, MK, p. 43). “The second century, like the first, is devoid of any testimony whatever for amillennialism except at its close” (ibid.). “For 150 years after the crucifixion of Christ, the amillenarians have only one disputed exponent—Barnabas—who is commonly conceded by many amillennialists and most neutral scholars to be premillennial. Such is the void that faces those seeking evidence for amillennialism” (ibid., p. 44). “The second century like the first bears a sustained testimony to the premillennial character of the early church. Even the amillenarians claim no adherents whatever by name to their position in the second century except in the allegorizing school of interpretation which arose at the very close of the second century” (ibid., p. 120).

The Apostolic Fathers

As a group, the eschatology of the Apostolic Fathers was decidedly chiliastic. “It is admitted by all scholars, that the Apostolic Fathers and many of their successors endorsed it” (Peters, TTK, 1:25). “...the works of the early fathers, even going back to the Didache, which evidence establishes the fact that Chiliasm, with those dispensational divisions which belong to it, was the orthodox faith of the early church and was far from the heresy that some writers represent it to have been” (Chafer, D, 8%). “Along with justification by faith and almost every other vital doctrine, chiliastic expectation was lost in the Dark Ages. That it was held by the early church Fathers is evident beyond doubt” (Geisler, ST, 4:270). In fact, Chiliasm was the eschatology of all the Apostolic Fathers. “...lists of Millenarian Fathers given in Brooks’s El. Proph. Interp., Seiss’s Last Times, etc. They include—with the reasons given—Barnabas, Clement, Hermas, Ignatius, Polycarp, Papias, Justin Martyr, Tatian, Melito, Irenaeus, Clemens Alexandrinus, Tertullian, ranging from A.D. 70 to about A.D. 192” (Peters, TTK, 1:451). “Chillingworth (Works, p. 347)... says: ‘It appears manifest out of this book of Irenaeus that the doctrine of the Chiliasts was in his judgment apostolic tradition, as also it was esteemed (for aught appears to the contrary) by all the doctors, and saints, and martyrs of, or about, his time; for all that speak of it, or whose judgments in the point are any way recorded, are for it; and Justin Martyr professeth, that all good and orthodox Christians of his time believed it, and those that did not, he reckons among heretics” (ibid., p. 483). “Some authors, with all their candid concessions, attempt (as e.g. Bush, On Mill., p. 12, etc.) to make the impression that the very early Fathers were divided into two parties, one holding to a literal, the other to a spiritual, interpretation of the Kingdom. But, unfortunately for themselves, in the enumeration they are not able to present on the side of the latter a single one of the earliest Fathers. To illustrate: we give the Fathers cited by Bush himself as follows: on the literal side Barnabas, Justin, Irenaeus, Cyprian, Tertullian, Lactantius, with Bh. Bull, and Lardner as apologists for them;—on the spiritual side, Origen, Epiphanius, Genadius, Augustine, Jerome, and Dionysius. The ordinary reader not conversant with dates is apt to be deceived, regarding these as contemporary, when the truth is, that the Spiritualists only arose in the third and following centuries” (ibid., p. 490). “Now let the student reflect: here are two centuries (unless we make the exception stated at the close of the 2nd), in which positively no direct opposition whatever arises against our doctrine, but it is held by the very men, leading and most eminent, through whom we trace the Church” (ibid., p. 496). “Amillennarians and postmillennarians have not only no positive evidence in favor of their position but no evidence that there was even a reasonable minority in the church contending against premillennialism. Apparently none of the orthodox fathers thought of challenging this important doctrine in the first two centuries” (Walvoord, MK, p. 121).

Individually, regarding Justin Martyr, “Chiliasm... Justin Martyr positively asserts that all the orthodox adopted and upheld it” (Peters, TTK, 1:480). “Justin Martyr (Dial. with Trypho, ch. 80) gives the general view held when he says: ‘But I and others, who are right-minded Christians on all points, are assured that there will be a resurrection of the dead (or as Newton, of the flesh), and a thousand years in Jerusalem, which will then be built, adorned, and enlarged, as the prophets Ezekiel and Isaiah and others declare,’ quoting Isa. 65:17-25; Ps. 90:4; 2 Pet. 3:8 and the Apoc. in confirmation” (ibid., 2:235). “Justin Martyr (c. 100-c. 165)... ‘there will be a resurrection of the dead, and a thousand years in Jerusalem, which will then be built, adorned, and enlarged, [as] the prophets Ezekiel and Isaiah and others declare’” [quoting Justin Martyr, Dialogue of Justin, 80] (Geisler, ST, 4:568) and Irenaeus, “Irenaeus (Adv. Hoer., 8 v. c. 35)... declares that when ‘Antichrist’ has reigned his allotted period ‘then the Lord shall come from heaven, in the clouds with the glory of His Father, casting him and that obey him into a lake of fire, but bringing to the just the times of the Kingdom, that is, the Rest or Sabbath, the seventh day sanctified, and fulfilling to Abraham the promise of the inheritance” (Peters, TTK, 2:214). “Irenaeus (c. 125-c. 202)... ‘the promise of God, which He gave to Abraham, remains steadfast... The predicted blessing, therefore, belongs unquestionably to the times of the kingdom, when the righteous shall bear rule upon their rising from the dead; when also the creation, having been renovated and set free, shall fructify with an abundance of all kinds of food, from the dew of heaven, and from the fertility of the earth... and that all animals feeding [only] on the productions of the earth, should [in those days] become peaceful and harmonious among each other, and be in perfect subjection to man” [quoting Irenaeus, Against Heresies, 5.32] (Geisler, ST, 4:568) and Lactantius, “Lactantius (Div. Insti., B. 7, Chs. 24 and 26, and Epit. of same, Ch. 71), who has two renewals of the earth, one at the commencement of the one thousand years, and another at its close” (Peters, TTK, 2:503). “Lactantius so briefly and tersely expresses the general opinion of the early age that we quote it: ‘Those that shall be raised from the dead shall rule over them that are alive, in the manner of judges.’ So Irenaeus, Justin, Barnabas, and a host of others” (ibid., p. 574). “Lactantius (c. 240-c. 320)... ‘they who shall be alive in their bodies shall not die, but during those thousand years shall produce an infinite multitude, and their offspring shall be holy, and beloved by God; but they who shall be raised from the dead shall preside over the living as judges... the prince of the devils... shall be bound with chains, and shall be imprisoned during the thousand years... Throughout this time beasts shall not be nourished by blood, nor birds by prey; but all things shall be peaceful and tranquil... When the thousand years shall be completed, the world shall be completed, the world shall be renewed by God, and the heavens shall be folded together, and the earth shall be changed, and God shall transform men into the similitude of angels, and they shall be white as snow; and they shall always be employed in the sight of the Almighty, and shall make offerings to their Lord, and serve Him for ever. At the same time shall take place that second and public resurrection of all, in which the unrighteous shall be raised to everlasting punishments” [quoting Lactantius, Divine Institutes, 7.26] (Geisler, ST, 4:569). and Barnabas, “Barnabas... his argument respecting the covenant being fulfilled in the seventh chiliad” (Peters, TTK, 2:525) and Tertullian, “the early Fathers all believed that those who had part in the first resurrection would enjoy the New Jerusalem in Messiah’s Kingdom, as e.g. Tertullian has it, 'in a city of divine workmanship, viz., Jerusalem brought down from heaven,' which he tells us 'John saw,' etc." (ibid., 3:39)

The First Three Centuries

Summarizing, then, the first three centuries of church history, "Cut off the believers of this very kingdom as they existed and testified in the first, second, and third centuries, and where would be the Church" (Peters, TTK, 1:25)? "How it comes, if the prevalent modern notion of the [Davidic—ed.] covenant is correct, that the early Christians (who had the advantages of apostolic, inspired teaching, or were close to it) held to the grammatical sense of the covenant and fully believed with the Jews that the Messiah would come (again, as to Jesus) to restore the Davidic throne and Kingdom? Upon what supposition can it be satisfactorily explained, excepting the one that they were correct" (ibid., p. 318)? "Chiliasm was the ruling belief in the first three centuries of the church... belief in Christ's Coming to establish His Kingdom on earth in glory formed the essential object and anchor of their hope. They recognized the World-Power as one in the service of Satan, and they looked for no deliverance from it save by His Coming... Before the end of the first century, Chiliasm was the common belief in the Church that had been gathered from the heathen... all the writers on the subject down to Jerome were express Chiliasts, excepting Origen and his school" (ibid., p. 449). "The early Church in its entire range was Chiliastic, and eagerly looked, longed, and prayed for the expected Kingdom still future. Enemies and friends, historians and theologians, frankly acknowledge this distinguishing characteristic of that period" (ibid.). "...unbelievers, opposers, critics, historians, commentators, and believers, uniting in the same testimony. We here assert that no writer has yet been able to present the prevailing modern views as entertained by any writer of the Primitive church... during the three first centuries it prevailed universally, its only opponents being the Gnostics" (ibid., p. 450). "Dr. Smith (N. Test. His., p. 723, On Rev.) remarks: 'The interval between the Apostolic age and that of Constantine has been called the Chiliastic period of Apocalyptic interpretation'" (ibid., p. 484). "The Gentile Christian churches down to the third century (until Caius, Origen, and Dionysius), received it [Millennialism] just as freely and entertained it just as heartily as the Jewish Christian" (ibid., p. 486). "It appears from the testimony of history that Chiliasts—under the pressure of persecution from which they earnestly sought deliverance, and under the misapprehension that Antichrist was already exhibited in the Roman power, hoped for the speedy Advent of Christ and the coming of the Kingdom. Now, this view of the Roman Empire, and this hope of a speedy anticipated deliverance caused them to feel unwilling to engage in wars of conquest, or even to enter into the civil service of the Empire. This feeling and resultant conduct, based, rightly or wrongly, upon their view of the Empire and its expected destruction under the coming Messiah and Kingdom, was naturally most offensive to the Roman Emperors and their adherents, and also to that portion of the clergy who were for conciliating the existing temporal power. This became the more so, when the church began to realize the protection of the State preparatory to a union of the two, and the reaction without due discrimination, made Chiliasm itself offensive” (ibid., p. 502). McClain sums up, “The Millennial Kingdom Idea... Here the Kingdom of God appears as a government of God to be established on earth at the Second Coming of Christ, who will reign with His risen and glorified saints over the nations in a literal kingdom for ‘a thousand years.’ That such was the almost universal belief of the early Church is now generally conceded by scholars who are able to read history with a minimum of theological prejudice. Archibald Robertson [Brampton Lectures, p. 119] says this view ‘prevailed in the Church generally for two centuries and a half, and in the Western Church for four centuries... until the time of Augustine.’ As a matter of fact, Augustine himself shared this belief at first, but later changed his mind, with momentous consequences to the Christian Church” (GK, p. 8).

Opposition to Chiliasm

Opposition to chiliasm, while almost entirely absent the first two centuries of the church’s history, began to arise toward the middle of the third century. The principle source of this opposition was the “spiritualizing” Alexandrian school of theology centered in Alexandria, Egypt. A “spiritualized” kingdom was soon thereafter promoted by Augustine (who, curiously, was consistently literal in his interpretation of Scripture pertaining to all other doctrinal subjects) and was used to great self-advantage by the medieval church.

Apostasy Was Predicted

Future apostasy in the church had been predicted by the apostles. “Be on guard for yourselves and for all the flock, among which the Holy Spirit has made you overseers, to shepherd the church of God which He purchased with His own blood. I know that after my departure savage wolves will come in among you, not sparing the flock; and from among your own selves men will arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away the disciples after them” (Acts 20:28-30). “Let no one in any way deceive you, for it will not come unless the apostasy comes first, and the man of lawlessness is revealed, the son of destruction” (2 Thes. 2:3) “But the Spirit explicitly says that in later times some will fall away from the faith, paying attention to deceitful spirits and doctrines of demons, by means of the hypocrisy of liars seared in their own conscience as with a branding iron, men who forbid marriage and advocate abstaining from foods, which God has created to be gratefully shared in by those who believe and know the truth” (1 Tim. 4:1-3). “But realize this, that in the last days difficult times will come. For men will be lovers of self, lovers of money, boastful, arrogant, revilers, disobedient to parents, ungrateful, unholy, unloving, irreconcilable, malicious gossips, without self-control, brutal, haters of good, treacherous, reckless, conceited, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God; holding to a form of godliness, although they have denied its power; and avoid such men as these. For among them are those who enter into households and captivate weak women weighed down with sins, led on by various impulses, always learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth. And just as Jannes and Jambres opposed Moses, so these men also oppose the truth, men of depraved mind, rejected as regards the faith... But evil men and impostors will proceed from bad to worse, deceiving and being deceived” (2 Tim. 3:1-13). “For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but wanting to have their ears tickled, they will accumulate for themselves teachers in accordance to their own desires; and will turn away their ears from the truth, and will turn aside to myths” (2 Tim. 4:3-4). “But false prophets also arose among the people, just as there will also be false teachers among you, who will secretly introduce destructive heresies, even denying the Master who bought them, bringing swift destruction upon themselves. And many will follow their sensuality, and because of them the way of the truth will be maligned; and in their greed they will exploit you with false words; their judgment from long ago is not idle, and their destruction is not asleep” (2 Pet. 2:1-3). George Peters concurs, “the apostle tells us that ‘the mystery of iniquity’ began to work in his day, and that it would ultimately burst forth with increased and growing power. The leaven then working would extend and manifest itself in perverted doctrine—doctrine antagonistic to that once proclaimed and believed. That form of doctrine of a later growth which supersedes and takes precedence of the earlier form, should undoubtedly be more subject to the suspicion of being a perversion than the primitive view” (TTK, 1:463). “...the predicted defection from the truth (as e.g. 2 Thess. 2, 2 Tim. 4:3, 4, etc.), and the warnings given to us to return to the truth as previously imparted” (ibid., p. 492) “It is a sad commentary on human frailty that no important doctrine existed which did not suffer, more or less, from this spirit of Rationalism and Apostatizing... The same still holds true to-day, for the most determined opponents that we have are those who endeavor to bend religious doctrine to some favorite system of philosophy” (ibid., p. 502). “The historical fact that Millenarianism was thus crushed is far from being dishonorable to us. Indeed, we rather glory in the occurrence, as indirect proof of the truthfulness of our position, seeing that as a defection from the truth was predicted by the apostles to take place, that very form of doctrine departed from—provided once generally held, and contained (even in the literal sense) in the Word—it must be regarded as approaching the nearest to sound doctrine” (ibid., p. 520).

Instruments of Opposition

The instruments of opposition to chiliasm, or premillennialism, are myriad. These instruments are, however, unanimous in their rejection of the Kingdom as presented in the plain text of Scripture. “It requires an immense amount of assurance and pride (without questioning the honesty and motives of the parties) to think that we know far more than Peter, John, Paul, etc., when all our knowledge of divine things is based on that given by them” (Peters, TTK, 1:204). “There have always been those, as Justin Martyr testifies with regard to his day, who oppose the plain teaching of the Bible on the millennial question. Modern denials move in one of three directions. They belittle the Scriptures bearing on the theme; they belittle the subject itself; or they belittle the scholarship of those who defend chiliasm” (Chafer, ST, 4:271).

These instruments of opposition to chiliasm/premillennialism include: Men’s hearts, “The root of infidelity is in the heart and not in the head” (Peters, TTK, 1:654) “The Sec. Advent of Jesus, which, if received, at once establishes that Jesus is also divine, is rejected by these men because, if accepted, it imposes the condition of accountability to Him, and enforces the authority of scriptural demands upon the heart and life, and this a worldly, fleshly heart cannot entertain” (ibid., 3:529). “...turning in upon its own actings, instead of out upon God’s; making man’s interior self the great region of research, not God’s manifested self; dealing with spiritual truths as with abstractions or ideas, not as connected with Divine personality and life... Dwelling in the region of their own thoughts, they have lost the power to grasp, and the taste to appreciate the thoughts of God” [quoting H. Bonar, Prophetical Landmarks, pp. 191-193] (Barry Horner, FI, p. 170).

Men's minds, "Where is the wise man? Where is the scribe? Where is the debater of this age? Has not God made foolish the wisdom of the world? For since in the wisdom of God the world through its wisdom did not come to know God, God was well-pleased through the foolishness of the message preached to save those who believe" (1 Cor. 1:20–21). "For the wisdom of this world is foolishness before God. For it is written, 'He is THE ONE WHO CATCHES THE WISE IN THEIR CRAFTINESS'" (1 Cor. 3:19) "Alas! What absurdities are engrafted on God's Word by the assumed superior reason of man" (Peters, TTK, 1:687). "Sometimes even long refutations appear which contain no appeal whatever to the Scriptures, the more remarkable seeing that our constant reference is to the Word" (ibid., 3:255). Eloquence, "...a human opinion, without the least Scriptural basis, eloquently and even forcibly expressed, and thus the more likely to mislead" (ibid., p. 346). Scholarship, "...the profound (?) learning of modern theologians" (ibid., 2:515) Inadequate views of the Kingdom, "Dr. Shedd... the 'spiritualizing' method... He only resorted to it under the spell of his very narrow and inadequate notions about the Kingdom" (McClain, GK, p. 143). Philosophy, "philosophies, hostile to the Bible... the only bond that really unites them is the same spirit of hostility to the Bible evinced by each of them" (Peters, TTK, 3:280). "Christian theologians of every age have been influenced to one degree or another by the prevailing philosophy of their day" (Geisler, ST, 2:87). Platonism, "...the Neo-Platonic school of Alexandria (Comp Kingsley's Schools of Alexandria, Neander's Ch. History, etc.), which diverges from the biblical statements in exalting the divine and ignoring the human: for as Augustine long ago stated, there is a wide difference between the two representations, in that the Platonist utterances simply affirm the divine nature of the Logos (Philo's 'Divinity articulate'), while the Scriptures insist, as forming 'the Christ' an incarnation, humiliation, suffering, death, resurrection, exaltation, return of the Son of Man, etc., relating to this earth. The objection, then, to such works is this: they swallow up the distinctive Christ and covenanted work in the divine" (Peters, TTK, 3:448). "To embrace the Augustinian dichotomy between materiality and spirituality and impose it on the OT canon is to fly in the face of the Hebrew hope of spiritual materiality" (Horner, FI, p. 212).

Science, "...no conflict need exist between science and the Bible" (Peters, TTK, 3:498). "Such scientific unbelief is only preparatory to the predicted Naturalism and Humanitarianism which will culminate in the last Antichrist" (ibid., p. 509). "Spencer (First Principles) holds to the possibility of an ultimate reconciliation between science and religion, but only when religion is willing to abandon fundamental biblical ideas" (ibid., p. 510).

Naturalism/Materialism, “We are confident of one thing, viz., that the Supernatural Saviour of the Bible is the only one adapted to save us from the conclusions of Shopenhauer, Von Hartman, and others—that there is and ever will be an uninterrupted continuance of evil under natural law, and that misery grows with consciousness, intelligence, and knowledge” (ibid., p. 475). “We would rather take the biblical account of man and the destiny offered to him than the gross materialism of Voght which makes thought merely ‘a secretion of the brain,’ and of Moleschott, which destines him for ‘manure for the ground’” (ibid., p. 497). “...the prediction of Herbert Spencer (The Study of Sociology)... that ‘the humanity of the remote future will have but one religion, i.e. a natural one’” (ibid., p. 509). Evolution, “The doctrine of evolution, with its support of natural selection, may find and has its supporters among Christian Theistic writers, but the conclusion engrafted upon it is of a nature so hostile to the direct teaching of the creative and Supernatural in the Bible that all believers in Holy Writ must recoil from it” (ibid., p. 507). “[theistic evolution]... a diluted... recognition of the Creator” (ibid., p. 508) Humanism, “The threats already uttered against Christianity by representatives of large classes of men; the hatred with which the Bible and its doctrines are received; the fanatical following of reason when its deductions are palpably founded upon unproven premises; the laudation and glorification of humanely concocted schemes for the amelioration and exaltation of the race; the widening denial that the world needs Divine interposition and a Divine Redeemer; the elevation of Materialism, Naturalism, Spiritualism, Humanitarianism into the commanding posture of promising Redemption; the sure and steady breaking down of the religious barriers by the interposition and substitution of natural law and the consequent increase of laxity of morals—these are just the indications that we ought to see, if Antichrist’s approach draws nigh” (ibid., 2:722). “God knows human nature better than we do” (ibid., p. 731) “...human nature... is capable of any act when under the influence of passion and selfishness” (ibid., p. 732). “Honest and sincere men, earnestly desirous for the good of others, are doomed to a bitter disappointment, owing to the depravity of man” (ibid., p. 771). “Antichrist... ‘The Kingdom of Man is at hand’—such will be the good tidings of great joy which he will proclaim, which his servants and forerunners are proclaiming already” (ibid., 3:156). “...a religion or worship of humanity and nature, being... Rationalistic, Humanitarian, or Naturalistic... All, however, are forced to admit that emancipation thus promised is immeasurably below the high standard promised in the Holy Scriptures, since it cannot as God’s Word, hold out a perfect deliverance to the individual (as e.g. victory over death), to nature (as e.g. from its convulsions), or to the race (as e.g. its restoration to an Edenic condition)" (ibid., p. 207). "There is nothing so sad under the sun as intelligence fettered by unbelief, as reason bound by pride, as the intellectual nature held irresponsive to the moral, as man attempting to stand alone without the counsel and aid of his Maker" (ibid., p. 289). Liberalism, "'Liberal' theologians, caring very little about preserving the integrity of the Bible (having themselves no faith in its special inspiration), cordially strike hands with unbelief and fritter away the Supernatural" (ibid., p. 508) "Liberals were outdoing each other in the race to see who could disbelieve the most" (Walvoord, MK, p. 8). "Tolerance," "The Bishop of Oxford at a missionary meeting in England made some remarks (reprinted in the Guardian, Aug. 23d, 1865) so apt (as 'the footfalls of the coming of the great Antichrist') that we reproduce them. After stating that it was his belief that the last attempt against the truth would come not so much in open denial as in a kind of admission while sapping the distinctive features of truth, and describes it as 'universal toleration,' 'a deep respect for religiousness everywhere, always providing that it is not that troublesome thing which, by being believed, affects men's conduct, is any limitation upon their thoughts, or even troubles what is called the course of society. That they will all agree to put out. I have no doubt myself that unbelief contains within itself the seed of the most intensely hating persecution the world has ever yet seen. Instead of being tolerant, I believe it is the very perfection of intolerance. I believe that the very moment it has achieved its own victory, toleration will be the thing above all others it will hate with an intensity short only of the hatred the evil spirit himself has for the simple faith of the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. It must be so, I think, because unbelief in whatever form it comes is the exaltation of the human intellect and the human will over the voice of revelation and revealed knowledge. It is thwarted to the utmost the very moment that it is met and confronted by the mighty rock of revealed truth. The stream flows on with the most delicious smoothness when there is nothing to thwart it. "Let us love one another. Let us be tolerant of each other's views. If you choose to worship the devil, worship him if you only do it quietly. If you choose to worship an anti-devil, do so if you do so quietly. Let us go on altogether in our worldly ways and worldly thoughts, holding nothing that may be disagreeable or troublesome. Anything disagreeable in religion is such a shocking thing." Well, then comes in the most disagreeable thing possible, the revelation of an absolute truth which says: "We will have nothing to do with this fellowship of evil. You are leading men into absolute destruction; you are promising them liberty and making them slaves; you are handing them over to the devil under the pretense of liberty and emancipation from their shackles;” and forthwith these men turn upon this stern declaration of the eternal verity of God with all the hatred of the human heart which the greatest rebel himself can stir up within it.’ Thus extremes meet: on the one hand, intense, selfish bigotry and exclusiveness, and on the other, a tolerance which ignores the plainest precepts and most fundamental truths. It is sad, that many professed preachers, pretending to be evangelical in sentiment (as e.g. Rev. Murray) affiliate with unbelief, and tell us that the Christianity of the past and present must give place to ‘a new religion of feeding the poor, visiting the sick, reforming the vicious, ministering to the insane,’ etc.” (Peters, TTK, 3:145) Bigotry, “Any position, however absurd to reason and fact, is allowable, provided it can be made to degrade the Bible teaching” (ibid., p. 499). Nihilism, “In a speech made at Geneva in 1868, Michael Bukunin, who has been called the father of Nihilism, asserted: ‘The first duty of mankind, is to obliterate from the heart any belief in a God’” (ibid., p. 154) Cultural development, “Every nation as it has advanced in age and strength also advanced in luxury and vice, immorality and infidelity” (ibid., p. 207) “We may well conclude with the words of Van Oosterzee (Lange’s Com. Luke, p. 269): ‘There is a heaven-wide distinction between the eschatological expectations which the friends of modern liberalism cherish, and those which are called forth by this teaching of our Lord. It is commonly supposed that in the proportion in which the principles of humanitarianism, culture, free thought, and the like, are more widely diffused, the world will become ever increasingly wiser, better, and happier. The Saviour here opens to us a very different view of the times immediately before the end. Of culture and the false semblance of external secular enlightenment, there will then undoubtedly be as little lack as in the days of Noah and Lot. But instead now of the great mass becoming continually better and more earnest, we have to expect, on the other hand, according to the Saviour’s words, a time of carelessness, hardening, and carnal security, just like that which preceded the destruction of the ancient world and the ruin of Sodom. These are the perilous times in the last days, of which Paul also speaks, 2 Tim. 3:1; and all which in the Apoc. is prophesied of the great apostasy of the last period of the world, is only a wider expansion of the theme here (Luke 17:20-38) given’” (ibid., p. 209). Self-sufficiency, “The false faith, now already so prevalent, in man as his own Saviour” (ibid., 2:722)

Religion, “...a sentimental religion, from which everything evangelical has been carefully eliminated” (Peters, TTK, 2:726). “...misguided zeal and unenlightened piety can, without pity, bestow as an alleged act of self-protection the most fearful deaths” (ibid., p. 731) Pantheism, “...the enticing

Pantheistic and mystical regions in which man is changed into God” (ibid., 3:540) “...Pantheistic, Impersonal God, with none of the necessary requisites to meet the heart, longings, practical wants, etc., of a suffering humanity” (ibid., p. 560). Spiritualism, “The truth is, that whatever esteem may be professed for the Bible in behalf of Spiritualism, the animus is seen in the constant efforts made to lower its inspiration, credibility, and authority” (ibid., p. 147). “...dangerous—because it draws nearer by its admissions of the Supernatural, etc., to the nature and wants of man than many other systems of unbelief do, and hence binds him the more effectually in its embraces” (ibid., p. 290). “The simplicity of such a procedure—a simplicity gratefully accepted by the ancient pious Jews and by the Primitive Church—is not suited to the mystical, spiritualistic tendencies of the age” (ibid.). “...materiality is not ultimately to be transcended, but rather transformed... Through the triumph of sovereign grace, both human and nonhuman aspects of creation, animate and inanimate, will be greatly blessed beyond the state of things prior to the transgression of Adam and Eve” (Horner, FI, p. 214). Gnosticism, “...Chiliasts were exceedingly hostile to the Gnostics” (Peters, TTK, 3:561). Mysticism, “...mysticism, in all its forms, with its higher inner light and lowering of written revelation before spiritual contemplation, has ever disastrously—in Romanism and Protestantism—manifested its scorn at Chiliasm” (ibid., 1:517) Monasticism, “The institution of monkery exerted a powerful influence in causing the rapid decline of our doctrine” (ibid.). “...the earlier favorers of monasticism, like Jerome, while rejecting our doctrine, were still unwilling to brand it as a heresy; this spirit of toleration, with increasing bigotry and ignorance, finally ceased” (ibid.).

Popes, “...the heresy of Chiliasm, which Pope Damasus had condemned” (Peters, TTK, 2:48) “Popery... The most precious promises relating to the future were prostituted to cover up its lust after aggrandizement” (ibid., p. 573). “Genebrand and Baronius are pointed out as designating the tenth century as containing popes ‘more like apostates than apostles’” (ibid., p. 676). Church councils, “The authority of Councils in the interest of hierarchical tendencies materially aided in obscuring the doctrine of the Kingdom. Indirectly, by exalting and confining the kingship of Christ to His Divine nature, and correspondingly lowering the human, forgetting that the covenanted kingship is given to ‘the Son of Man’ who is of the Davidic lineage. This resulted mainly from the Arian and other controversies respecting the natures of Christ, when one extreme led to its opposite” (ibid., 1:518). “After the Council of Nice, none gave utterance to anything in sympathy with Chiliasm” (ibid.). “We confess, that we are not great admirers of a Council called and presided over by such a man as Constantine... Our doctrine is not based on Councils” (ibid.) State churches, “Origen was the first one who made the Church the mystic Kingdom of God (see p. 112, Voice of the Church, by Taylor). Others followed in his interpretation; and if we narrowly examine history it will be found that two things materially aided in entrenching and extending this notion of Origen’s. The first was the Hierarchical encroachments which such an opinion sustained and flattered. The second was the fact that religions everywhere, among the Romans, Greeks, Egyptians, Asiatics, etc., were firmly united with the State, thus paving the way for a similar union and the exhibition of the Christian religion in a sphere not inferior to Pagan” (ibid., p. 611). “It is a sad truth, that if we once admit that the visible church, in any one of its forms, is the Kingdom of Christ on earth, we close the doors to the exclusion of freedom of investigation and of private judgment, elevating said church into the position of a dispenser and arbiter of God’s Word in the form (confession) it then may possess. This is abundantly made manifest by the pleas of Popery and of national establishments in the past. And we do not blame these for pressing very logical claims; for, if the premise be once conceded, i.e. that the visible church is such a Kingdom, then the rest legitimately follows. Consistency then demands an outward unity, and, in the efforts to secure such unity, force must be employed, and as a result, violence is done both to religion and man. The edicts of the first Christian Emperors become a model of church authority; the fulminations of certain Councils are cherished as the lawful exhibitions of authorized dominion; the canons and work of fallible man are elevated to tests of allegiance, resulting in crimination, excommunication, and anathema” (ibid., p. 653). “It is not surprising that the meaning of the Kingdom should be almost eradicated, when for ages the Bible was scarcely read, and was only interpreted by persons wedded and subservient to the Hierarchy itself” (ibid., p. 666). “...the Romish Church... It is only a caricature of the promised Messianic Kingdom, a self-appropriation of the work of Jesus” (ibid., p. 681). “...the Church (and its sham imitation of a Theocracy when Church and State were united under Constantine)” (ibid., p. 693) “... ‘the house of His servant David’ is made equivalent to ‘His holy Catholic Church’” (ibid., 2:206). “Reference has been made several times to the guarded manner in which the primitive Christians, including even Jesus and the apostles, spoke of the downfall of Gentile dominion. This was done in order to avoid the hostility and persecution of the Roman Emperors. Yet the view was more or less distinctly proclaimed by the believers, and was one reason why the millenarian doctrine fell into disrepute, especially after a union of State and Church, with those in power” (ibid., p. 776). “If any one desires to see what evils are engendered by the Church arrogating power over the civil authorities or of the civil exercising power over the Church, history is full of it, from the days of Constantine down to the present, as witnessed in the history of Rome, France, England, Germany, Holland (Motley's Life of Barneveld), etc." (ibid., p. 778) "Alas! What scenes of crime, bloodshed, and horror have been enacted under a fanatical plea that the extension of God's truth and rule demanded them" (ibid., 3:178). "...the union of state and Church instituted by Constantine (and which all good men must deplore, in view of the results)" (ibid., p. 267) "When the Roman Church set aside the truth of the imminent coming of the Lord, she allowed herself an earthly position and privileges not called for in the Word" (Feinberg, M, p. 291). "God has not established an earthly political government for the church" (Dr. Renald Showers, M, p. 230). "After they broke away from the Roman Catholic Church, they too became state churches. In Germany and Scandinavia, the Lutheran Church became the state church; in England, it was the Anglican Church or Church of England; in Scotland, the Presbyterian Church; in one part of Switzerland, the Calvinists or Reformed Church; in another part of Switzerland, the Zwinglian Church. The Reformation failed to correct the problem of church and state unity. Therefore, it eventually became a dead church... Because of the existence of state churches, children who were born in a given locality were simply baptized and by this means became members of the church. Personal faith had little or nothing to do with becoming a member of the church. In a matter of time, the greater part of the church was composed of unregenerate members. The churches all had good, solid creeds (except that they were still bound to Replacement Theology)... Even to this day there are state churches in Europe which have good doctrinal creeds, and they are composed of people who are spiritually dead" (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 62). "Theologically stated, theonomy confuses present spiritual kingdom (cf. Matt. 13) with future political kingdom (cf. Rev. 20)" (Geisler, ST, 4:225). Established churches, "Contrast the prevailing views—said to be derived under this fostering light of the creeds, etc.—respecting these things, with the faith exhibited by pious Jews and the early Christian Church, and the wide contrast between ancient and modern faith is seen at once. The multiplicity of meanings given to the Kingdom of God alone indicates how much reliance can be placed in a 'universal Church faith' which places itself first and the Bible second; which contends that the Word of God cannot be properly understood without first receiving the word of man... an exaggerated view of the Church, constituting it the covenanted Kingdom of David's Son" (Peters, TTK, 3:282) State education, "A thousand significant tokens bespeak the fatal mistake that Protestantism (Roman Catholicism was more wise and prudent, as a matter of mere policy) made when it gave up the education of its children to the State without the Bible... The idea of separating education of the young from religion is more than heathenish (e.g. the Greeks, Romans, etc., never dreamed of such irreligion); it is already antichristian in spirit and tendency... The truth is, that intelligence without Christianity, learning without love to God, education without religious basis, adds strength and enlarged capacity to do evil” (ibid., p. 158).

Replacement theology (see the section, The Church is Not Israel in our chapter The Mystery Kingdom (The Church)), Reformed theology “...champions of Reformed theology... denounced premillennialism” (Walvoord, MK, p. 11). “Reformed amillennialism... Under the amillennial viewpoint, the portions of Scripture dealing with the rapture and the judgment of the church, the resurrection of the righteous dead, the resurrection of the wicked dead, the judgment of the Gentiles, the judgment of Israel, and the judgment of Satan and angels are all combined in a closely knit sequence of events attending the second advent itself” (ibid., p. 82). “Reformed eschatology for the most part intends to honor the Scriptures as the Word of God and accepts the central doctrines of the bodily resurrection of all men, a final judgment before God, and an eternal state of bliss or punishment. Reformed eschatology has been predominantly amillennial. Most if not all of the leaders of the Protestant Reformation were amillennial in their eschatology, following the teachings of Augustine” (ibid., p. 108). “...there needs to be further ‘Reformation’ among many who so fervently proclaim their indebtedness to Reformed eschatology” (Horner, FI, p. 77). Amillennialism (see the Covenant: Amillennial section of our previous chapter Five Major Views of the Kingdom), Postmillennialism, “The trouble with many writers is simply this: the manner in which this Kingdom is introduced and the Kingdom itself is presented, does not fit in with their development theory, being too much indebted to supernatural power and indicating a too close relationship to a restored Theocracy, hence it is coolly set aside or spiritualized” (Peters, TTK, 3:370). (See also the Covenant: Postmillennial section of our previous chapter Five Major Views of the Kingdom.) Preterism, “a Preterite class... such as Grotius... they have but a small following” (ibid., p. 371).

Deceivers, “Christianity suffers severely from professed friends and adherents, who, Judas-like, betray with an alleged kiss of peace. Open infidelity is more honest, more honorable, and less dangerous. The fair and plain statements of the latter, evidence at least candor” (Peters, TTK, 3:281). Heretics, “Every unbeliever and every heretic throughout the entire church age has been antichiliastic” (Chafer, ST, 4:284). Cults, “The misapplication of the natural law among the various human cultures is no greater than the misinterpretation of supernatural revelation among the various cults. Careful examination of both areas indicates that in spite of the clarity of both revelations, depraved human beings have found a way to deflect, divert, or demean God's commands. Biblical teaching has no edge on natural revelation in the matter of immunity from distortion" (Geisler, ST, 4:234). Orthodox ministers, "Alas! They are afraid to endure the reproaches, innuendoes, sarcasms, if not worse, of their fellow-ministers or laymen. For it is notorious that just so soon as a man receives the Primitive Church view on these subjects, he becomes the object of contemptuous pity or scorn, and the most uncharitable construction is put upon his belief and piety. The writer has had sad experience in this direction, but it is the experience, more or less, of every true believer" (Peters, TTK, 2:734). "Assuming that something is false or invalid because it came from an allegedly bad source is the genetic fallacy. The model for the molecular structure of benzene originated from a vision that the Chemist August Kekule (1829-1896) had of a snake biting its own tail. The origin of the alternating current motor was derived from a vision Nicola Tesla (1856-1943) had while reading Johan Wolfgang von Goethe (1749-1832), a pantheistic poet. No one rejects the validity of these on the basis of their weird sources" (Geisler, ST, 4:631). Antiquity (particularly regarding pretribulationism), "Many anti-pretribulationists see the relative lateness of pretribulationism as an argument against it. They claim it began with John Nelson Darby (1800-1882)" (ibid.) "The fallacy of chronological snobbery wrongly argues that truth can be determined by time—that is, since the doctrine is late in origin, it's assumed to be untrue. However, time has no necessary connection with truth; something can be new and true just as it can be old and false" (ibid.). "What is more, some doctrines in the earliest church were false. Docetism (the denial of Christ's humanity) existed even in New Testament times (1 John 4:1-6). An incipient form of gnosticism that denied Christ's deity was present in the Colossian church (Col. 2). Baptismal regeneration was taught by some early Fathers. That these were early did not make them true, and neither does the relative lateness of a doctrine make it false" (ibid., p. 632). "Further, it fits with the overall progress of doctrinal development that eschatology was not a primary focus until modern times. As James Orr (1844-1913) noted in his classic Progress of Dogma, certain doctrines occupied different eras, with the doctrine of God coming first in the early centuries and the doctrine of last things coming last in modern times (20-30)" (ibid.). "In addition, pretribulationism is not as late as once supposed, for it is now known to have existed in the fourth century. With the discovery of Ephraem of Syria's teaching (c. 306-373), it has been established that pretribulationism was taught in the early church" (ibid.). "As already shown, premillennialism, of which pretribulationism is a derivative, was taught in the early church from shortly after the time of the apostles. The imminence of Christ's return has been emphasized from the start, and pretribulationism is based on a realistic concept of imminence" (ibid.). "Lastly, for an evangelical, the primary question is not whether the doctrine was taught by the early church, but whether it was taught by the earliest church—the church of the apostles. As we have thoroughly established, there is ample New Testament evidence to support pretribulationism" (ibid.). "It is as if history dominates, that is, Augustinianism reigns and holds exegesis in captivity" (Horner, FI, p. 201). And ultimately, the Antichrist, "...the visible church [the Tribulation saints—ed.] is to be overcome by the Antichrist... give the option of worship or death" (Peters, TTK, 1:654). (See our detailed discussion of the Antichrist in the Characters of the Tribulation section of our chapter The Great Tribulation.)

The History of Opposition

Opposition to the primitive chiliastic eschatology began in earnest in the third century, with the "spiritualizing" Alexandrian school (i.e. Clement of Alexandria and Origen). The "spiritualized" kingdom was subsequently accepted and promoted by Eusebius, Jerome, Augustine and the Roman Catholic Church. The "spiritualized" kingdom view held sway through the dark ages, and even through the Protestant Reformation. In summary, "It was only when the Scriptures and the promises were spiritualized, when, under the influence of release from persecution and incoming churchly prosperity, the church itself was exalted through civil patronage, that the Primitive doctrine was gradually but surely set aside, and the church itself was made (as by Origen) 'the mystic Kingdom of heaven,' or (as by Eusebius) 'the very image of the Kingdom of Christ,' or (as by Augustine) 'the City of God'" (Peters, TTK, 1:499). "Dr. Schaff (His. Ch. Church, vol. 1, pp. 299-301) presents the same testimony as Neander, Mosheim, Kurtz, etc., respecting the extent of Millenarianism in the Prim. Church, saying, for example: 'The most striking point in the Eschatology of the ancient Church is the widely current and very prominent Chiliasm, or the doctrine of the visible reign of Christ in glory on earth with the risen saints for a thousand years,' etc. After referring to the Fathers who taught it, he then remarks: 'In the age of Constantine, however, a radical change took place in this belief. After Christianity, contrary to all expectation, triumphed in the Roman Empire, and was embraced by the Caesars themselves, the Millennial reign, instead of being anxiously waited and prayed for, began to be dated either from the first appearance of Christ, or from the conversion of Constantine, and to be regarded as realized in the glory of the dominant imperial State Church.' Certainly it was not in the selfish nature of 'Patriarchs,' 'Metropolitans or Archbishops,' 'Bishops,' and others, who received princely endowments, to desire the Coming and Reign of the Christ—they rather wished their stations, honors, and emoluments to remain in perpetuity" (ibid., p. 506). "God... He has never supernaturally coerced any generation of mankind into virtue, nor rendered schism and heresy impossible in any age of the Church" (ibid., p. 634). "No doctrine of the Bible, however important, but has been perverted and abused by men, and has been allied with error and even extravagance. The doctrine of the Kingdom has not escaped the withering touch of depravity; and as we read, again and again the testimony comes how enthusiasm, mysticism, fanaticism have sought to engraft upon it the most outrageous and blasphemous assumptions" (ibid., p. 645). Walvoord agrees, "It is not surprising that opposition to premillennialism should arise. All forms of true doctrine have opposition and even the majority view in the history of doctrine is not necessarily the right one. The point of great significance is the form in which the opposition arose. It was not the product of orthodox studies in the Scripture, nor of the application of tried and true hermeneutics. It was rather the subversion of the plain meaning of Scripture not only as applied to the millennial question but all other areas of doctrine. The church today with one voice condemns all of the early opponents of premillennialism as heretics. Opposition to premillennialism had its rise in the attackers of true Scriptural doctrine, and it was not until the time of Augustine (354-430) that a reputable adherent of amillennialism can be cited. The opposition to premillennialism in the third century is no asset to amillennialism. While amillennarians may hail the conclusions of the enemies of premillennialism, they accept neither the general method nor the theology of those who participated in the attack. Usually, like Allis, amillennarians abandon the early centuries as a lost cause and begin with Augustine" (MK, p. 122). "Belief in the imminent coming of Christ began to be questioned by some church leaders at the end of the second century. When persecution against the Christians stopped and the union of church and state occurred in the 300s A.D., 'the hope of the church underwent a radical transformation' [quoting J. Barton Payne, The Imminent Appearing of Christ, p. 19]. As a result belief in the imminent coming of Christ 'had ceased to be of any great influence by the fourth century' [quoting G. Roger Huddleston, 'Monasticism,' The Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. X, p. 460]. It continued to have little influence in the major part of organized Christendom throughout medieval times and the Renaissance until the Reformation” (Showers, M, p. 144). “...amillennialism... those especially impacted by this teaching were Justin, Clement of Alexandria, Origen, Ambrose and Augustine” (Horner, FI, p. 215).

Formal opposition to chiliasm had as its primary source the Alexandrian school of theology during the early part of the third century. “The entire character of Biblical testimony was changed by Gnostic and Alexandrian influences, and, along with all vital truth, the church lost her conception of the purifying hope of Christ’s return, and, eventually, under Constantine, exchanged the divine program of a returning Lord for a world-conquering church” (Chafer, ST, 4:277). “At the very close of the second century and the beginning of the third we come upon the first bona fide amillenarians, Gaius (or Caius) who wrote early in the third century; Clement of Alexandria, a teacher at the school there from 193 to 220; his pupil, Origen (185-254); and Dionysius (190-265)” (Walvoord, MK, p. 44). “It is clear that the rising tide of amillennialism comes almost entirely from the Alexandrian school—in particular, from Clement, Origen, and Dionysius, all of this locality” (ibid.). “With the close of the second century and continuing through the third a new foe to premillennialism arose in the Alexandrian School of interpretation. Its roots were in Platonic philosophy and in keeping with it the literal and plain meaning of Scripture was sacrificed for allegorical interpretations, often of a most fanciful kind. Premillennialism was attacked then, not as a teaching unwarranted by the Word of God, but rather because it was a literal interpretation of it” (ibid., p. 46). “Nepos early recognized the heretical tendencies of the Alexandrian school of theology, which was the first effective opponent of premillennialism, and he attacked them with vigor... while the church managed to extricate itself from much of the other bad doctrine of the Alexandrian school, premillennialism became in time one of the fatalities” (ibid., p. 123).

Regarding Clement of Alexandria (150-215 A.D.) Peters says, “Clement... he was the one who introduced this allegorizing system at Alexandria... ‘If we are asked how Clement understood his bible, we must answer, pace tanti viri, very badly indeed’... His fame rests not in exegesis; his admirers (Kingsley, etc.) praise him for his philosophy and earnestness... His (Origen’s) principles of Scriptural interpretation are Philo’s, reduced to a still completer system; and the most remarkable feature in it is his bold avowal of his belief that the simple literal meaning is often not only untrue but impossible” (TTK, 1:507). Walvoord is even more bold, “Clement was a heretic whom no intelligent scholar today would follow” (MK, p. 122).

Regarding Origen (185-254 A.D.), “Origen in the third century was the first who wrote in opposition to the doctrine” (Peters, TTK, 1:462). “Origen [wrote]... ‘those of the simpler sort,’... ‘refusing the labor of intelligence, followed the superficial mode of literal interpretation’” (ibid., p. 455). “The Ency. Brit. says of Origen (De Princip., 211, s. 2) that he described those who refused his views as such, who ‘refusing the labor of intelligence, followed the superficial mode of literal interpretation’” (ibid., p. 508). “We commend the rebuke given by a writer (in the North Brit. Review, May, 1858, p. 273) to D’Aubigne (in Christianity in the First Three Cents.) as follows: ‘We are sorry to see Dr. Merle D’Aubigne eulogizing Origen as “the greatest luminary of ecclesiastical antiquity.” Concede to Origen learning, fervor, and a self-sacrificing life; but do not canonize as a luminary one who did more to darken Scripture and to obscure some of its fundamental truths than any Father of the first five centuries’” (ibid.). “...Origen, who became a Universalist” (ibid., p. 552) “This change, he [Neander] informs us in various places, was brought out in ‘the consciousness of the church’—whatever this may mean—but we have traced it directly to the Originistic and Alexandrian influence, and is in direct conflict with the Word” (ibid., p. 659). “The pity is that Origen ever conceived the allegorizing method of interpretation, and that his misleading and violent liberty with the text has since found such fertile soil in which to propagate” (Chafer, KHP, 7%). “...exegetical schools... the Allegorical, of which Origen is the foremost exponent” [quoting F.W. Farrar, History of Interpretation, p. 177] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 21) “Origen’s spiritualizing method of interpretation brought about the termination of the literal method of interpretation on which premillennialism rested” (ibid., p. 378). “...‘spiritualizing’... The great Church Father Origen is generally regarded as the originator of this method” (McClain, GK, p. 142). “The first notable denial of this premillennial viewpoint was made by Origen (185-253). His allegorical method of interpretation resulted in the destruction of not only the millennial doctrine but most other important aspects of Christian belief including the doctrine of resurrection” (Walvoord, MK, p. 19). “Origen... his hermeneutical method is repudiated at least in part by all modern scholars” (ibid., p. 45). “The first inroad of liberalism in the church historically in Origen, and in modern times as well, has been by subverting the meaning by spiritualizing the words” (ibid., p. 71). “...the allegorical school of Origen” (Geisler, ST, 1:295)

Regarding Eusebius (263-339 A.D.), “...such men as Jerome, Eusebius, and others—who like Eusebius could flatter the Emperors with the idea that the Millennial glory was already inaugurated under their sway, and that Rome itself was converted into the New Jerusalem” (Peters, TTK, 1:484)

“...even the New Jerusalem state (as by Eusebius)—to the then present period. The Alexandrian substitution of the Kingdom, surrounded by talent, wealth, power, influence, and catering to the wishes, hopes, and ambition of humanity, prospered and extended itself. As time progressed, it was fostered and cherished by mystical and scholastic tendencies, and finally strengthened and confirmed by various philosophical systems” (ibid., p. 503). “Eusebius was exceedingly bitter against the Chiliasts” (ibid., p. 506). “...Eusebius, an Arian” (ibid., p. 552)

Regarding Jerome (347-420 A.D.), “[Millennialism]...those who were among the first, and most bitter, opposers. Thus e.g. Jerome” (Peters, TTK, 1:484) “Dr. Fisher, Art. ‘Mill.’ M’Clintock & Strong’s Cyclop., although a Post-Mill., most candidly says: ‘It (the Mill. doctrine) was still common, however, in the time of Jerome, who himself was one of its opponents’” (ibid., p. 515).

Regarding Augustine (354-430 A.D.), “The opposition to our doctrine, when once inaugurated, was greatly aided by the talent and ability of a few great names. Conspicuously among these is that of Augustine. Probably no work has appeared that had such a powerful influence in overwhelming the more ancient doctrine, as Augustine’s leading one, The City of God. This was specially designed to teach the existence of the Kingdom of God in the church beside or contemporaneous with the earthly or human Kingdom. The proof for this is remarkably weak; the supposed fact being largely taken for granted, and a superstructure erected upon a hypothetical foundation” (Peters, TTK, 1:508). “Augustine (City of God, B. 20. s. 9) says: ‘The church could not now be called His Kingdom, or the Kingdom of heaven, unless His saints were even now reigning with Him;’ and endeavors to make out such an existing Kingdom by showing that the saints now reign, summing up: ‘in fine, they reign with Him who are so in His Kingdom that they themselves are His Kingdom’” (ibid., p. 601). “Augustine makes the 1000 years to begin with the earthly life of Jesus, when Satan was alleged to be bound, and he was cast out into the abyss, i.e., from Christendom into the hearts of the wicked, non-Christian nations” (ibid., 2:626). “Augustine... the man to whom the moderns are so largely indebted for spiritualizing views” (ibid., 1:313) “In the days of Augustine the method had degenerated into an artistic method of displaying ingenuity and supporting ecclesiasticism” [quoting F.W. Farrar, History of Interpretation, pp. 236-237] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 23). “The second reason for the importance of Augustinian amillennialism is that his viewpoint became the prevailing doctrine of the Roman Church, and it was adopted with variations by most of the Protestant Reformers along with many other teachings of Augustine. The writings of Augustine, in fact, occasioned the shelving of premillennialism by most of the organized church” [quoting John F. Walvoord, The Millennial Issue in Modern Theology, Bibliotheca Sacra, 106:420-21] (ibid., p. 381). “As a matter of fact, Augustine himself shared this belief [chiliasm] at first, but later changed his mind, with momentous consequences to the Christian Church” (McClain, GK, p. 9). “Among the orthodox fathers Augustine countered the Alexandrian heresy by suggesting a two-fold principle of interpretation of Scripture, namely, a literal interpretation of Scripture as a whole, but a spiritual or nonliteral interpretation of prophetic Scripture. With this presupposition he was able to deny a future millennium, and he became the principal source of amillennialism as it is taught today. The viewpoint of Augustine that most prophecy cannot be interpreted literally was unfortunately accepted without much debate by the Roman Catholic Church and was largely embraced by the Protestant Reformers. Though there was tenacious retention of such doctrines as eternal punishment for the wicked and eternal heaven for the blessed and reaffirmation of the doctrine of final judgment, the more detailed scheme of prophecy fell by the wayside” (Walvoord, MK, p. vi). “Augustine (354-430) also believed in the coming of Christ after the millennium and could for this reason be classified as post-millennial. His view of the millennium, however, was so removed from a literal kingdom on earth that it is virtually a denial of it, and he is better considered as an amillennialist” (ibid., p. 8). “Augustine... He held that the age between the first and second advents is the millennium of which the Scriptures speak and that the second advent would occur at the end of the millennium... his amillennial views became the dominant belief of both the Roman Church and the Reformers” (ibid., p. 19). “Augustine, with his denial of a millennium after the second advent, succeeded in displacing premillenarianism as the prevailing belief of the church” (ibid., p. 20). “Living in the first half of the first millennium of the Church’s history, Augustine naturally took the 1000 years of Rev. xx. literally; and he expected the second advent to take place at the end of that period” (ibid.). “There are no acceptable exponents of amillennialism before Augustine. Prior to Augustine, amillennialism was associated with the heresies produced by the allegorizing and spiritualizing school of theology at Alexandria which not only opposed premillennialism but subverted any literal exegesis of Scripture whatever. Few modern theologians even of liberal schools of thought would care to build upon the theology of such men as Clement of Alexandria, Origen, or Dionysius. Augustine is, then, the first theologian of solid influence who adopted amillennialism” (ibid., p. 47). “Augustine conceived of the present age as a conflict between the City of God and the City of Satan, or the conflict between the church and the world. This was viewed as moving on to the ultimate triumph of the church to be climaxed by a tremendous struggle in which the church would be apparently defeated, only to consummate in a tremendous triumph in the Second Coming of Christ to the earth. Augustine held that the present age of conflict is the millennium” (ibid., p. 49). “Augustine himself expressed it [in City of God, XX, 8], ‘This binding of Satan began when the church began to spread from Judea into other regions, and lasts yet, and shall do until this time be expired.’ Augustine considered the progress of the millennium of his day (400 A.D.) well advanced” (ibid.). “He has only one reason for avoiding the literal view—some had made the millennium a time of carnal enjoyment, a view which Augustine rightly opposed... ‘...fleshly banquets, where the cheer shall exceed both modesty and measure, this is gross and fit for none but carnal men to believe.’... Somehow, for all his genius, he did not see that he could abandon this false teaching without abandoning the doctrine of a literal millennium” (ibid., p. 50). “Revelation 20 was, then, a recapitulation of the present age which Augustine held was portrayed in the earlier chapters of Revelation. The present age, for Augustine, is the millennium promised in Revelation 20” (ibid.). “In arriving at his conclusion regarding the millennium Augustine used the principle of spiritualizing Scripture freely. While he did not use this principle in interpreting Scripture relating to predestination, hamartiology, salvation, or grace, he found it suitable for interpreting prophecy” (ibid.). “It is central to Augustine’s theology that he regards the church as ultimately triumphant” (ibid., p. 52). “The outstanding feature of Augustinian amillennialism which captured the church and caused the eclipse of premillennialism proved to be a total failure in the history of the church. There was absolutely nothing to confirm the Augustinian view of the millennium in the centuries which followed him. If the law of fulfillment is essential to establish an interpretation, the Augustinian view is tried and found wanting” (ibid., p. 55). “The Alexandrian school of theology which came into prominence in the third century followed a principle of interpretation which regarded all Scripture as an allegory... It remained for Augustine to give a more moderate application of this principle of interpretation. In general, he held that only prophecy should be spiritualized and that in the historical and doctrinal sections of Scripture the “historical-grammatical” literal method should be used... Because of the weight of Augustine in other major issues of theology where he was in the main correct, Augustine became the model of the Protestant Reformers who accepted his amillennialism along with his other teachings” (ibid., p. 60). “The earliest great Father of the Middle Ages was Augustine, bishop of Hippo, whose extensive and influential writings dominated the medieval church and continue to this day” (Geisler, ST, 4:288). “Premillennialism’s foundation is strong in the early church—it was the standard for the Fathers up to and through the early Augustine; Augustine, who powerfully influenced the thousand years that followed him, later incorrectly discarded the view” (ibid., p. 567). “The early Augustine was premillennial, but he changed his view when he overreacted to a chiliastic cult and adopted an allegorical approach, a crucial error that amillennialists and postmillennialists have perpetuated since his time” (ibid., p. 571). “Augustine... Whereas the Bishop of Hippo rejected the concept of extreme persecution of the Jews (that is, elimination), he favored their being kept in subjection and impoverishment” (Horner, FI, p. 157). “O. Heick, A History of Christian Thought... He quotes Anders Nygren, Agape and Eros: [p. 458] ‘all his life he [Augustine] remained a Neo-Platonic Christian or, if you will, a Christian Platonist’” (ibid., p. 211). “Not surprisingly, since Augustine was a Neoplatonist prior to his conversion, Warfield concluded, ‘It was as a Neoplatonist thinker that Augustine became a Christian; and he carried his Neoplatonic conceptions over into Christianity with him’” [quoting Warfield, Calvin and Augustine, p. 369] (ibid., p. 215).

Regarding The Roman Catholic Church, “The writer on ‘Revelation’ in M’Clintock Strong’s Cyclop. (and who cannot be charged with Chiliastic sympathies) thus candidly says: ‘Immediately after the triumph of Constantine, the Christians, emancipated from oppression and persecution, and dominant and prosperous in their turn, began to lose their vivid expectation of our Lord’s speedy Advent, and their spiritual conception of His Kingdom, and to look upon the temporal supremacy of Christianity as a fulfillment of the promised reign of Christ on earth. The Roman Empire, become Christian, was regarded no longer as the object of prophetic denunciation, but as the scene of a Millennial development’” (Peters, TTK, 1:513) “The Papacy has been ever hostile to our doctrine” (ibid.) “The early Millenarians, without exception, regarded the Roman Empire and the rising Papacy with distrust because of their belief that the Antichrist would in some way or form be identified with one or the other” (ibid.). “This [chiliastic] view, of course, would be offensive to the heads of the Romish Church, and naturally resulted in their decrying Chiliasm and condemning it as derogatory to the honor of the church. Pride, dignity, ambition, power, could not tolerate a view which, necessarily brought with it, expressed, or even implied, reproach” (ibid.). “Seiss (Last Times, p. 246-7) declares: ‘It is a sad fact, however, that from the fourth century until the sixteenth, this doctrine gradually lost its hold upon the minds and hearts of professed

Christians, and went down into almost absolute neglect. But with it went down the great doctrine of justification by faith, and nearly everything that is distinguishing in gospel religion... So long as men think they see and hear Christ in the Pope and believe that they are worshipping and honoring Christ by serving and obeying hierarchies regarded as jure divino, we need never expect them to believe that Christ will ever reign here in person. The two ideas are fundamentally antagonistic. If Christ is Himself to reign here in universal empire, He has not given that Empire into the hands of a vicar; and if He has made the Pope the supreme Lord of the world, it is settled that He will never reign here otherwise than by the Pope. Either proposition confutes the other. The two cannot live together. And this puts into our hands the key to the true explanation how the church has come to lose sight of the primitive and apostolic faith upon this subject” (ibid., p. 514). “It was an easy matter, by adopting the Origenistic interpretation of several senses, to reject the covenanted restored Davidic throne and Kingdom under a personal Messiah, and to substitute in its place an existing Kingdom under the rule of appointed hierarchs, and claim that in and through them Christ was already reigning in His promised Kingdom. This caricature of the Messiah’s Kingdom was varnished over by the most laudatory and fulsome language (even applying to it the predictions alone applicable to the mighty Theocratic King) which self-interest and vainglory could suggest” (ibid.). “Shimeall (Eschatology, p. 49) correctly observes: ‘Then, too, the Popes, in after ages, discountenanced Millenarianism, inasmuch as it militated against their anti christian usurpation and dogma, that the Millennium commenced with Romish domination in the church.’ Dr. West (His. Pre-Mill. Doc.) says: ‘By union of church and state, and perversion of victory, the foundation was laid in the Empire for a carnal and a Satanic caricature of the Millennial Kingdom of Christ on earth before the time—a Millennium sunk in the gross materialism and idolatry of a medieval, political, and military Christianity. By union of Church and State the martyr doctrine itself was martyred, no council resisting, and vanished from view with the departing glory and last remnant of a suffering, but pure apostolic church” (ibid., p. 515). “Starting with the idea—often taken for granted as a settled premise or inferred by far-fetched inferences—that the Romish Church is the predicted Kingdom of the Messiah, everything is made to bend to that theory” (ibid., p. 519). “So Dr. Willis Lord (The Blessed Hope, p. 79) remarks: ‘In the Apostolic and Primitive Church it is certain that for more than three centuries the Sec. Coming of Christ was expected to take place before the Millennium, and that the bliss and glory of that period would flow from His presence and reign. Especially was this so while Paganism still held the seat of power, and the church was despised and persecuted. Most keenly did she then feel the sorrows of widowhood, and long for the return of her absent Lord. That return would bring the day of her redemption and joy. When, however, Constantine mounted the throne, and the church with him, her spirit and her faith changed. Favor with men, and increasing flatteries, honors, wealth, and power, made the world seem less barren, and more attractive. Gradually, but surely, the blessed hope gave way to the power of present possession and enjoyment; the once desolate widow became elated, proud, and self-sufficient; and she said in her heart, "I sit as a queen, and shall have no sorrow." For many generations, it would have been the dread of the visible church to have the Lord to come" (ibid.). "The fact is, that Millenarians esteem it an honor that their doctrine was first suppressed by prelates possessing the character, etc., that history accords to them. The truth is, that while our doctrine was obnoxious to, and detested by, the Bishops, and many of the leading clergy, through partisanship, yet it was not so early authoritatively condemned, seeing that such a condemnation would involve a disastrous controversy respecting the regular perpetuation of the church. The Bishops and Prelates were too shrewd to do this, seeing, as they did, that this would involve so many of the Fathers that it would be difficult and hazardous, yea, impossible, to trace the true church unless through 'heretics'" (ibid., p. 521). "...the Eastern Church retained much longer the Chiliastic views... while the Western portion fell under the Alexandrian influence, and lost the Chiliastic influence" (ibid., 2:458). "...the Roman Catholic Church. Since the day of Augustine this body has been almost entirely amillennial... Nothing could be more antithetical than the Roman Church and premillennialism, and its influence is definitely amillennial" (Walvoord, MK, p. 10). "The Roman Church did not make any significant advance in the doctrine after Augustine, and Protestant teachings did not fare much better" (ibid., p. 55). "The Roman Church builds much of its claim for sovereignty on the inheritance from Israel of the combined political and religious authority revealed in the Old Testament. The concept of the church as an institution is enhanced, and ecclesiastical organization and authority given Scriptural sanction. By so much, also, the New Testament revelation of the church as essentially a spiritual organism rather than an organization is often slighted and in effect denied" (ibid., p. 81). "The Roman Church, first of all, regarded itself as the continuation of Israel as a spiritual entity. The political or theocratic character of Israel as well as its religious life was considered as continuing in new form in the Roman Church" (ibid., p. 94). "Only by denying fulfillment of the promises of God to Israel and by spiritualized interpretation transferring them to the Roman Church could any vital connection between Judaism and Christianity be established” (ibid., p. 95). “They held that there is no church invisible which is not a part of the visible Roman Church, and the important question was whether one was a part of this visible church... As Berkhof [in Systematic Theology, p. 562] summarizes the Roman position: ‘...The conception of the Church as an external organization became more important as time went on’” (ibid.). “As Berkhof states [in Systematic Theology, p. 569]: ‘...The Roman Catholic Church frankly identified the Kingdom of God with their hierarchical institution.’... The stark contrast of what the Roman Church is as compared to the millennial kingdom illustrates the extremes to which spiritualization of Scripture can go” (ibid., p. 99).

Regarding The Dark Ages, “...during the dark ages it [the doctrine of the Millennium] remained, like many other precious doctrines, under an eclipse” (Peters, TTK, 1:484). “...the Gentile Christians in their animosity to Judaism, which sought to impose its legality and ritualism, finally were carried to such an extreme that... everything that savored in their estimation of Judaism was cast aside, including of course the long-entertained Jewish notion of a Kingdom.” [quoting Peters, The Theocratic Kingdom, 1:501] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 379). “Some modern writers seem to realize but little that chiliasm or premillennialism was the all-but-universal belief of the early church, or the extent of that conviction in all centuries when any truth has been received at all. It is hardly worthy of any scholar to assert that this is a modern departure, or, if held in the early centuries, was looked upon as a heresy. It has been conceded that it was ‘lost,’ along with other vital truths, at the end of the third century and remained hidden until the Reformation” (Chafer, ST, 4:271). (See also our section Chiliasm in the Dark Ages below.)

Regarding The Protestant Reformation, “Unfortunately the Reformers went back to Augustine for their eschatology instead of the early chiliastic Fathers; and until premillennialism was again established in the post-Reformation period, the advance of the interpretation of prophecy had to wait” (Walvoord, TRQ, p. 156). “The early years of Protestantism saw little if any advance over the Augustinian view. It is clear that the great Protestant leaders such as Calvin, Luther, and Melancthon are properly classed as amillennial. As far as millennial teaching was concerned, they were content to follow the Roman Church in a weakened Augustinian viewpoint” (Walvoord, MK, p. 55). “Premillennialism at the time of the Reformation unfortunately was expounded chiefly by small groups of somewhat fanatical enthusiasts who were often discredited by extreme doctrines” (ibid., p. 61). (See also our section The Reformers below.)

Consequences of Opposition to Chiliasm

Opposition to chiliasm led eventually to rejection by the church of all Jewish elements of the Kingdom. “Gentile Christians in their animosity to Judaism, which sought to impose its legality and ritualism, finally were carried to such an extreme that, without discriminating between what was abrogated and the things of God that remained in force, everything that savored in their estimation of Judaism was cast aside, including of course the long-entertained Jewish notion of the Kingdom” (Peters, TTK, 1:504). This led to disinterest by, and eventually, outright persecution of the Jews. “It may be well to say here, that as long as this happy correspondence continued numerous Jews were converted to Christianity (as history attests), but just so soon as this disagreement arose respecting the Kingdom, and the Jewish faith in their Kingdom was derided and scorned, conversions became less and less until they almost ceased” (ibid., p. 281). “One of the darkest pages in the history of Christianity is that which records the tendering of insult, wrong, and death instead of the precious message of hope and peace to this covenanted favored people” (ibid., p. 416). “Under Constantine and the Crusades the Jews were badly treated” (ibid., p. 420). “As the early doctrine became obscured, substituted, and finally driven from the field, the conversions of the Jews became rarer and almost entirely ceased, excepting such as were produced under compulsion. How else account for so great a change, unless it be in the gradual engrafting of other than Jewish ideas to the Messiahship of Jesus, making the Messiah less and less in correspondence with the Messiah of the Old Test. Scriptures” (ibid., p. 467)? “The cessation, in almost a total manner, of the conversion of the Jews, also materially aided in extinguishing the doctrine of the Kingdom... heaping upon Gentiles the promises belonging to the Jews, substituting the church for the Messianic Kingdom” (ibid., p. 509) “After the Gnostic ideas and the Alexandrian school obtained the ascendancy, the preaching of the Kingdom, so widely different from that previously proclaimed by the Fathers, was no longer effective with the Jews, for the simple reason that it was opposed to the Kingdom presented in covenant and prophecy” (ibid.). “The student, if observant, must have noticed a remarkable feature in the history of this nation, viz., that immediately and some time after the First Advent many Jews were converted to Christianity, forming even churches composed almost entirely of them. The history of the first and second centuries shows that it was nothing unusual for Jews to embrace Jesus Christ as the promised Messiah. But gradually such conversions became rarer, until they either entirely ceased or formed exceptionable cases. If we inquire into the causes of this change, it will be found that it resulted almost entirely in the departure of the large body of the Church from the Millenarian ground occupied by the early Church. The Origenistic, Augustinian, and succeeding theology discarded what was pronounced to be 'the Jewish' element, and engrafted another, the Gentile, into its place. The result was seen in its contracting Jewish conversions and in its confirming Jewish unbelief. On the other hand, a return to the theology of the early Church invites the conversion of the Jews, seeing that it materially aids in removing the principal objections which hold them in unbelief" (ibid., 3:409). "How much injury the self-conceit and pride of Gentileism has inflicted is impossible to calculate" (ibid., p. 408). "Lederer, formerly editor of the Israelite Indeed (vol. 8, p. 82), and a missionary among the Jews, after delineating our doctrine as particularly adapted to reach the Jews, declares that 'Indeed, by the preaching of a full Gospel to the Jews, there have been more Jews converted in the last twenty-five years, than during seventeen centuries of the Christian era. All converted Jews, therefore, with but few exceptions, are Pre-Millenarians.' Our most bitter opponents concede that converted Jews are almost exclusively Millenarian" (ibid., p. 409). "Making the Christian Church, which is only preparative, to be the covenanted Messianic Kingdom, forms a fruitful source of difficulty to the Jew" (ibid., p. 422). "...amillennialists are not noted for their interest in Jewish evangelization" (Feinberg, M, p. 208) "...that anti-Jewish prejudice which has too often marked the course of Church history" (McClain, GK, p. 251). "Luther labeled the Jews as the devil's children impossible to convert" (Walvoord, MK, p. 189).

On the subject of Christian evangelization of the Jews, Barry Horner offers a thought-provoking extended quotation of J.C. Ryle: "You would probably tell the Jew that Jesus of Nazareth was the Messiah promised in the Old Testament Scriptures. To those Scriptures you would refer him to [sic] for proof. You would show him Psalm 22, Isaiah 53, Daniel 9:26, Micah 5:2, Zechariah 9:9 and 11:13. You would tell him that in Jesus of Nazareth those Scriptures were literally fulfilled. You would urge upon him that he ought to believe these Scriptures, and receive Christ as the Messiah. All this is very good. So far you would do well. But suppose the Jew asks you if you take all the prophecies of the Old Testament in their simple literal meaning. Suppose he asks you if you believe in a literal personal advent of Messiah to reign over the earth in glory, a literal restoration of Judah and Israel to Palestine, a literal rebuilding and restoration of Zion and Jerusalem. Suppose the unconverted Jew puts these questions to you, what answer are you prepared to make? Will you dare to tell him that Old Testament prophecies of this kind are not to be taken in their plain literal sense?

Will you dare to tell him that the words Zion, Jerusalem, Jacob, Judah, Ephraim, Israel, do not mean what they seem to mean, but mean the Church of Christ? Will you dare to tell him that the glorious kingdom and future blessedness of Zion, so often dwelt upon in prophecy, mean nothing more than the gradual Christianizing of the world by missionaries and gospel preaching? Will you dare to tell him that you think it “carnal” to expect a literal rebuilding of Jerusalem, “carnal” to expect a literal coming of Messiah to reign? Oh, reader, if you are a man of this mind, take care what you are doing! I say again, take care. Do you not see that you are putting a weapon in the hand of the unconverted Jew, which he will probably use with irresistible power? Do you not see that you are cutting the ground from under your own feet, and supplying the Jew with a strong argument for not believing your own interpretation of Scripture? Do you not see that the Jew will reply, that it is “carnal” to tell him that the Messiah has come literally to suffer, if you tell him that it is “carnal” to expect Messiah will come literally to reign? Do you not see that the Jew will tell you, that it is far more “carnal” in you to believe that Messiah could come into a world as a despised, crucified Man of sorrows, than it is in him to believe that He will come into the world as a glorious King? Beyond doubt he will do so, and you will find no answer to give. Reader, I commend these things to your serious attention. I entreat you to throw aside all prejudice, and to view the subject I am dwelling upon with calm and dispassionate thought. I beseech you to take up anew the prophetic Scriptures, and to pray that you may not err in interpreting their meaning. Read them in the light of those two great polestars, the first and second advents of Jesus Christ. Bind up with the first advent the rejection of the Jews, the calling of the Gentiles, the preaching of the gospel as a witness to the world and gathering out of the election of grace. Bind up with the second advent the restoration of the Jews, the pouring out of judgments on unbelieving Christians, the conversion of the world and the establishment of Christ’s kingdom upon earth. Do this and you will see a meaning and fullness in prophecy which perhaps you have never yet discovered” [quoting J. C. Ryle, Are You Ready For The End Of Time?, pp. 47-48] (FI, p. 342).

In the dark ages chiliasm was suppressed severely, but not extinguished entirely. “Brooks (El. Proph. Inter.)... Epiphanius (about A.D. 365) as mentioning ‘the doctrine being held by many in his time, and speaks favorably of it himself’” (Peters, TTK, 1:491). “...the Nicene council. Although the council was busy settling disputed questions, yet nothing was said against our view” (ibid.) “Baronius and others have asserted that for a long time the doctrine was ‘entirely extirpated.’ This is not strictly correct. It certainly was brought into such disfavor by a ruling Romish Church that during ‘the dark ages,’ down to the Reformation, it was scarcely known. Still we have intimations, plain and decided, that it was held by individuals (as e.g. Jerome mentions in his day, what Lorinus, the Jesuit, says of Tully Crispold, quoted by Brooks, El. Proph. Interp., p. 60; comp. Bernard, etc., quoted by Seiss, p. 26, in A Question in Eschatology, etc.), and, at least, in some of its features, by the Vaudois or Waldenses, Albigenses, Lollard, or Wickliffites, and the Bohemian Protestants” (ibid., p. 521). “Against this conversion of the Church into a Kingdom there was a protest, which was ultimately silenced as the Papacy increased in power, until finally it was only held by the Paulicans and Waldenses” (ibid., p. 611). “In spite of the ascendancy of Roman amillenarianism there did continue a small remnant that held to the premillennial position. Ryrie [in Charles C. Ryrie, The Basis of the Premillennial Faith, pp. 27-28] cites the Waldensians and the Paulicans, together with the Cathari, who held the Apostolic belief. Peters [in The Theocratic Kingdom, 1:521] cites, in addition, the Albigenses, Lollard, Wickliffites, and the Bohemian Protestants who espoused the premillennial cause” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 383).

Regarding Ephraim of Syria (306-373) (specifically regarding pretribulationism¹⁵), “Ephraem of Syria (c. 306-373)... Grant Jeffrey (b. 1948) discovered an untranslated manuscript by a Syrian Christian poet who was not only premillennial but also pretribulationist. This is a phenomenal find, particularly in light of posttribulationist pronouncements that ‘we can find no trace of pretribulationism in the early church’ (Ladd, The Blessed Hope, p. 31). The argument from perceived silence is often dangerous... ‘Why therefore do we not reject every care of earthly actions and prepare ourselves for the meeting of the Lord Christ?... All saints and the Elect of the Lord are gathered together before the Tribulation which is about to come and are taken to the Lord, in order that they may not see at any time the confusion which overwhelms the world because of our sins’ (cited in [Thomas] Ice, When the Trumpet Sounds, pp. 110-11)” (Geisler, ST, 4:570). “Ephraem of Syria (c. 306-373)... ‘We ought to understand thoroughly therefore, my brothers, what is imminent or overhanging. Already there have been hunger and plagues, violent movements of nations and signs, which have been predicted by the Lord, they have already been fulfilled, and there is no other that remains, except the advent of the wicked one in the completion of the Roman kingdom... All saints and the Elect of the Lord are gathered together before the tribulation which is about to come and are taken to the Lord, in order that they may not be seen at the time of the confusion which overwhelms the world because of our sins” [quoting Ephraem the Syrian, On the Last Times, the Antichrist, and the End of the World as cited in Ice and Demy, eds., When the Trumpet Sounds] (ibid., p. 658).

Regarding Commodianus (3rd to 5th centuries), “Commodianus [in Instructions of Commodianus Against the Gods of the Heathens, 44] (fl. between third and fifth centuries)... ‘We shall arise again to Him, who have been devoted to Him. And they shall be incorruptible, even already living without death. And neither will there be any grief nor any groaning in that city. They shall come also who overcame cruel martyrdom under Antichrist, and they themselves live for the whole time, and receive blessings because they have suffered evil things; and they themselves marrying, beget for a thousand years... the earth renewed without end pours forth abundantly” (Geisler, ST, 4:657).

Regarding Anselm (1033-1109), “Anselm (Bh. of Havilburg, Treat. on Rev.)... says: ‘The whole earth, which carried in its lap the body of the Lord, will be a Paradise” (Peters, TTK, 2:431).

The Reformers

The Protestant Reformers, while reclaiming and championing the biblical doctrines of sola scriptura (by Scripture alone) and sola fide (by faith alone), unfortunately failed to also reclaim the biblical doctrine of the Kingdom. Rather than go back to the first century for their doctrine of the Kingdom, as they had done with their doctrines regarding the primacy of Scripture and faith, they went back only as far as Augustine, and never progressed beyond Augustine’s allegorized, amillennial system of eschatology. “The Reformers, with all their greatness, were fallible, and differed among themselves” (Peters, TTK, 1:525). “...both Luther (Table Talk) and Melanchthon (India Doctrince Physica)... opposed the Copernican system by appeals to Scripture, Joshua, the Psalms, Ecclesiastes, etc., proving that the earth is the centre of the universe. In their conscientiousness Luther calls Copernicus ‘an upstart astrologer’ and ‘fool,’ while Melanchthon pronounces him guilty of ‘a want of honesty and decency to assert such notions publicly.’ This teaches us that good and great men may misjudge and misinterpret, under the impression that they are doing God’s service” (ibid., p. 527). “...the Reformers... they, more or less, adopted the Augustinian notion of a past, present, or existing Mill. age, identifying it with this dispensation” (ibid., p. 528). “While the reformers swept away much ritualistic and doctrinal rubbish they failed to recover the promise of the Second Advent. They turned to God from idols, but not to ‘wait for His Son from the Heavens’” (Larkin, DT, p. 131). “Actually, John Calvin and the Reformers were declared literalists, but they forsook the literal interpretation in eschatology to preserve the position of Roman Catholic eschatology in which they saw no harm” (Feinberg, M, p. 6). “...the kingdom... the Reformers hardly gave special attention to the subject or developed an adequate idea” (ibid., p. 26). “The major Reformers, like Luther and Calvin, were amillennial. As they were largely preoccupied with soteriological matters, they left latent their Augustinian eschatology to await a future consistent application of the literal hermeneutic (as they themselves had done to salvific matters, which made the Reformation possible)” (Geisler, ST, 4:572). “...the Reformers were amillennialists” (ibid., p. 658) “The Reformation did not involve an eschatological, biblical recovery according to the first and early second century but rather it embraced a medieval inheritance that has produced shameful consequences” (Horner, FI, p. 293). “Reformation... ‘this same age which so consciously scrutinized the medieval traditions simultaneously passed on, with new strength, whatever withstood the test of inspection’” [quoting Heiko Oberman, The Roots of Anti-Semitism in the Age of Renaissance and Reformation, p. xi] (ibid., p. 372).

Martin Luther

Martin Luther (1483-1546) held a number of correct (biblical) eschatological ideas. For instance, he denied that the church would transform the world. “...the notion of the conversion of the world under the present dispensation, the idea now regarded as orthodox, but one which Luther constantly condemned” (Peters, TTK, 1:534). “Luther wrote: ‘This is not true and is really a trick of the devil, that people are led to believe that the whole world shall become Christian’” (Chafer, ST, 4:278). “In another place Luther wrote, ‘I believe that all the signs which are to precede the last days have already appeared. Let us not think that the Coming of Christ is far off; let us look up with heads lifted up; let us expect our Redeemer’s coming with longing and cheerful mind’” (ibid.). He also believed correctly that the Abrahamic Covenant was still in effect. “Every Reformer saw and recognized the fundamental character of the Abrahamic covenant, that we lived under its promises, that Christ made provision for their fulfillment, and thus confirmed the covenant. Thus e.g. Luther repeatedly asserts the present existing force of the Abrahamic covenant in his Com. on Galatians; Calvin in his Institutes (B. 2, ch. 10) rightly makes the promises of this covenant to extend over into the future” (Peters, TTK, 1:325). “Thus Luther makes much of an existing Abrahamic covenant, confirmed to us by the death of Jesus, under which we already enjoy an earnest or prelude to the final inheritance” (ibid.). He believed the second Psalm’s fulfillment was yet future. “Why do the nations rage, And the peoples meditate a vain thing? The kings of the earth set themselves, And the rulers take counsel together, Against Jehovah, and against his anointed, saying, Let us break their bonds asunder, And cast away their cords from us. He that sitteth in the heavens will laugh: The Lord will have them in derision. Then will he speak unto them in his wrath, And vex them in his sore displeasure: Yet I have set my king Upon my holy hill of Zion. I will tell of the decree: Jehovah said unto me, Thou art my son; This day have I begotten thee. Ask of me, and I will give thee the nations for thine inheritance, And the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession. Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; Thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter’s vessel. Now therefore be wise, O ye kings: Be instructed, ye judges of the earth. Serve Jehovah with fear, And rejoice with trembling. Kiss the son, lest he be angry, and ye perish in the way, For his wrath will soon be kindled. Blessed are all they that take refuge in him” (Ps. 2:1–12). “...the vengeance of the 2d Psalm was understood by Luther (so Michelet, Life of Luther, App. p. 411, Hazlett’s Ed.) to be future” (Peters, TTK, 2:734). He looked forward to having a perfected body. “Even Luther (quoted, p. 40, in Lange) could not refer all to the past and present but brings in the future, as e.g. on [Hab 3] v. 19, ‘The Lord is still my God. Of this we will be so glad, that we will run and spring like hinds, so nimble are our feet to become; and we will no longer wade and creep in mire, but for perfect delight we will soar and fly in the high places, and do nothing but sing joyfully, and pursue all kinds of delightful employment’” (ibid., 3:398). However, he still had a limited understanding of the Kingdom. “The reason why Luther expressed himself so slightly respecting the Apoc. arose, as various writers have remarked, from his limited idea of the Kingdom. Thus e.g. Olshausen (Gen. Introd. Com., ch. 10) says: ‘This (Apoc.) was obscure to him from the fact that he could not thoroughly apprehend the doctrine of God’s Kingdom upon earth, which is exhibited in Revelation, and forms the proper centre of everything contained in it.’ Luther, in his views of the Kingdom, was too much under the influence of the Augustinian teaching, and he allowed doctrinal considerations (as in the rejection of James’s ‘strawy’ Epistle) to unduly influence him in criticism—always a dangerous and one-sided procedure” (ibid., p. 366).

John Calvin

John Calvin (1509-1564) also held a number of correct (biblical) eschatological ideas. For instance, he did not expect the Christian church to convert the world. “So, also, Calvin: ‘There is no reason, therefore, why any person should expect the conversion of the world, for at length—when it shall be too late, and will yield them no advantage, they shall look on Him whom they have pierced.’ Calvin also declares in the third book of his Institutes, chapter 25, ‘Scripture uniformly enjoins us to look with expectation for the advent of Christ’” (Chafer, ST, 4:278). He counseled his readers to be prepared at every moment for Christ’s coming. “With reference to Christ’s statements about His coming, Calvin said, ‘Besides, as he has promised that he will return to us, we ought to hold ourselves prepared, at every moment, to receive him, that he may not find us sleeping,’ [quoting John Calvin, Commentary on a Harmony of the Evangelists (volume third) in Calvin’s Commentaries, Vol. XVII, p. 163] and ‘He wished them to be uncertain as to his coming, but yet to be prepared to expect him every day, or rather every moment’ [ibid., p. 156]” (Showers, M, p. 145). However, he failed to distinguish between Israel and the church. “Calvin refers to the saints of the Old and New Testament under the one title of the ‘Church’” (Walvoord, MK, p. 97). “Like Augustine, Calvin taught that the Christian Church had become the new spiritual Israel” (Horner, FI, p. 6). He also restricted the thousand-year Kingdom to this dispensation. “Calvin... error, fell into another, viz., restricting the thousand years to the Militant Church in this dispensation, thus following Augustine” (Peters, TTK, 2:630). Consequently, he denied a future, earthly, Jewish kingdom. “Premillennialism superficially considered. Calvin’s discussion of the millennium is a fair sample of the attitude of the Reformers. They treated the doctrine superficially and arbitrarily, making the view ridiculous by misrepresentation. Calvin, for instance, has this to say [in Institutes of the Christian Religion, II, 250-51]: ‘...not long after arose the Millenarians, who limited the reign of Christ to a thousand years. Their fiction is too puerile to require or deserve refutation. Nor does the Revelation, which they quote in favour of their error, afford them any support; for the term of a thousand years, there mentioned, refers not to the eternal blessedness of the Church, but to the various agitations which awaited the Church in its militant state upon earth. But the whole Scripture proclaims that there will be no end of the happiness of the elect, or the punishment of the reprobate... Those who assign the children of God a thousand years to enjoy the inheritance of the future life, little think what dishonour they cast on Christ and his kingdom.’ While Augustine discarded premillennialism because he took a carnal interpretation of the millennium as essential to the view, Calvin commits a greater error in assigning to the premillennial view a limited eternity of one millennium. Neither view would be claimed by any thinking premillenarian of our day” (Walvoord, MK, p. 56). “Calvin, for instance, refers [in Institutes of the Christian Religion, I, 488] to ‘the folly of the whole nation of the Jews in the present age, in expecting any earthly kingdom of the Messiah...’ His conclusions were an outgrowth of amillennial theology and its method of interpretation” (ibid., p. 97). “Calvin regarded Israel’s hope of a future kingdom as without warrant—in fact, he held that this hope was a result of their spiritual blindness imposed as a judgment because of their rejection of Christ. Calvin stated [in Institutes of the Christian Religion, I, 488]: ‘And the folly of the whole nation of the Jews in the present age, in expecting an earthly kingdom of the Messiah, would be equally extraordinary, had not the Scriptures long before predicted that they would thus be punished for their rejection of the gospel.’ Calvin’s interpretation is based partially on the idea that Israel had erroneously interpreted the promises of a future kingdom on earth literally, and partially on the thought that Israel had forfeited these promises by disobedience. He seems to put most of his argument on the former point, however” (ibid., p. 101).

Premillennialism Following the Reformation

Due in large part to the Reformers’ revitalization of the exegetical use of the grammatical-historical hermeneutic, the centuries following the Protestant Reformation witnessed a resurgence of interest in and renewed study of the Bible as it relates to the primitive chiliastic or premillennial eschatology. “...allegorical amillennialism gained preeminence up to modern times. Through exegetical progress and reapplication of the literal hermeneutic, premillennialism has experienced revival” (Geisler, ST, 4:571). “After the Reformation, however, the Reformers and others indorsed certain distinctive features belonging, as parts of the system, to Millenarian doctrine, we are chiefly indebted to a few leading minds for bringing forth a return to the old Patristic faith in all its essential forms. Prominently among these are the following: the profound Biblical scholar Joseph Mede (born 1586, died 1638), in his still celebrated Childs Apocalypica (translated into English) and Exposition on Peter; Th. Brightman (1644), Expositions of Daniel and Apoc.; J. A. Bengel (a learned divine, born 1687, died 1752), Exposition of the Apocalypse and Addresses on the same; also the writings of Th. Goodwin (1679); Ch. Daubuz (1730); Piscator (1646); M. F. Roos (1770); Alstedius (1643 and earlier); Cressener (1689); Farmer (1660); Fleming (1708); Hartley (1764); J. J. Hess (1774); Homes (1654);

Jurieu (1686); Maton (1642); Peterson (1692); Sherwin (1665); and others (such as Conrade, Gallus, Brahe, Kett, Broughton, Marten, Sir I. Newton, Whiston, etc.), materially aided in directing attention to the Millenarian doctrine and to influence persons to Biblical study on the subject. When these were followed by men eminent for learning and marked ability (some have been mentioned, others will follow); when the leading poets and commentaries gave an additional impulse to Millenarian doctrine by their forcible portrayals and exegetical comments; when persons of the highest and lowest position, in all ranks and professions, of undoubted piety and usefulness, thus united in expressing Chiliastic views, the doctrine of the early church received correspondingly a revival and renewed strength in the hearts and hopes of believers” (Peters, TTK, 1:538). “A scholarly lineage of Lutheran premillennialists developed that included Bengel, Zahn, Delitzsch, Godet, Auberlen, and Rothe, along with van Osterzee who was Dutch Reformed... In the United States, three particular Lutherans encouraged Judeo-centric premillennialism: Samuel Simon Schmucker, Joseph Seiss, and George N. H. Peters” (Horner, FI, p. 158).

Well-known premillennialists (or men at least kindly-disposed toward premillennialism) from the post-Reformation period include John Bunyan (1628-1688), “Several Confessions (confined to small bodies of believers) have Chiliastic Articles... Baptists... signed by John Bunyan” (Peters, TTK, 1:531) “John Bunyan (First Chaps. Genesis) advocates ‘the glory that the Church shall have in the latter day, even in the seven thousandth year of the world, that Sabbath when Christ shall set up His Kingdom on earth’” (ibid., 2:459). Increase Mather (1639-1723), “Increase Mather, in his Discourse on Faith (A.D. 1710), and The Mystery of Israel’s Salvation, teaches: ‘He (Christ) will then (at Coming) remove His throne from heaven to this visible world. Then will his visible Kingdom appear in the greatest glory; when also there will be a personal reign and residence of Christ in this lower world.’ ‘When they that corrupt the earth are destroyed, a new earth will succeed, in which shall dwell righteousness. Then will the kingdoms of this world become the Kingdoms of Christ, and He shall reign forever and ever,’ etc.” (ibid., 1:541) Cotton Mather (1663-1728), “But Cotton Mather is more plain: ‘It is well known, that in the earliest of the primitive times the faithful did, in a literal sense, believe the second coming of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the rising and the reigning of the saints with Him, a thousand years before, the rest of the dead live again, a doctrine which, however, some of later years have counted heretical; yet in the days of Irenaeus, were questioned by none but such as were counted heretics. It is evident from Justin Martyr that the doctrine of the Chiliad was in his days embraced among all orthodox Christians; nor did this Kingdom of our Lord begin to be doubted until the Kingdom of Antichrist began to advance into a considerable figure, and then it fell chiefly under the reproaches of such men as were fain to deny the divine authority of the Book of Revelation, and of the Second Epistle of Peter. He is a stranger to antiquity who does not find and own the ancients generally of the persuasion. Nevertheless, at last men came, not only to lay aside the modesty expressed by one of the first Anti-Millenarians, namely, Jerome, but also with violence to persecute the Millenary truth as an heretical pravity. So the mystery of our Lord's appearing in His Kingdom lay buried in Popish darkness, till the light thereof had a fresh dawn. Since the Antichrist entered into the last half-time of the period allotted for him, and now within the last sevens of years, as things grow nearer to accomplishment, learned and pious men, in great numbers, everywhere come to receive, explain, and maintain, the old faith about it.' In the Student and Preacher, Mather is equally decisive: 'The Son of God, about to descend, will inflict vengeance on them who know not God and obey not His Gospel; but He will manifest His Kingdom of the saints in the earth, which is to be possessed by our second and heavenly Adam; and this, we confess, is ascertained to us by promise, but in another state, as being after the resurrection.' 'They indulge themselves in a vain dream, not to say insane, who think, pray, and hope, contrary to the whole sacred Scripture and sound reason, that the promised happiness of the Church on earth will be before the Lord Jesus shall appear in His Kingdom.' 'Without doubt the kingdom of this world will not become the Kingdom of God and His Christ, before the preordained time of the dead, in which the reward shall be given to the servants of God and to those that fear His name.' 'The rest of the saints, and the promised Sabbath, and the Kingdom of God, in which His will shall be done on earth as it is in heaven, and those great things of which God hath spoken by the mouths of His prophets, all prophesying as with one voice; all shall be confirmed by their fulfillment in the new earth, not in our defiled and accursed earth'" (ibid.). John Gill (1697-1771), "John Gill (1697-1771)... 'The rest of the dead... meaning not the dead saints, for they will be all raised together, but the wicked dead; and not them as morally or spiritually, but as corporeally dead: these lived not again until the thousand years were finished; so that there will be such an exact term of years between the resurrection of the saints and the resurrection of the wicked; nor will there be any [of these] wicked living upon earth, or in bodies, during that time; for the wicked dead will not be raised with the saints at Christ's coming, and the wicked living will be destroyed in the conflagration of the world, and neither of them shall live again until the end of these years'" [quoting

John Gill, Exposition of the Whole Bible, on Rev. 20:5] (Geisler, ST, 4:573). Jonathan Edwards (1703-1758), “Jonathan Edwards (1703-1758) is arguably the most significant and influential evangelical Christian in the history of the United States” (Horner, FI, p. 333). “Edwards was a decided millennialist, somewhat following a revival of interest in this aspect of biblical eschatology that erupted in England during the middle of the seventeenth century. Stephen J. Stein, editor of the Yale Edition, Volume 5, Apocalyptic Writings, explained, ‘The millennium remained a matter of consuming private interest for him... During the millennium kings will be like the judges who ruled ancient Israel before the monarchy was established—a form of government that pleased God greatly... In that glorious day, Edwards conjectured, a variety of forms of government may prevail, but none shall be contrary to “true liberty.”’... The geography of the millennium, another issue that divided commentators, attracted his exegetical attention. Edwards found scriptural warrant for placing the land of Canaan at the center of the coming kingdom of Christ... In like manner, he speculated that the return of the Jews to their homeland is inevitable because of the promises of land made to them have been only partially fulfilled. God intends the Jews to be ‘a visible monument’ of his grace and power. The return to their traditional homeland, however, was premised by Edwards upon a conversion of the Jews to Christianity... [Then] Canaan will be the spiritual center of the coming kingdom, and Israel will again be a truly distinct nation” [quoting S. J. Stein, ed., ‘Introduction,’ Jonathan Edwards, Works, Apocalyptic Writings, vol. 5 (1977), pp. 17-19] (ibid.). “Edwards was a postmillennialist, believing that authentic Christian expansion through evangelism would effectively sweep the world to such an extent that a largely Christianized, millennial world would result” (ibid., p. 334). “[Footnote:] At the urging of many for a Second American Bible and Prophetic Conference (premillennial) in Chicago in 1886, following the immensely successful first conference in New York in 1878, the organizing secretary, George C. Needham, commented, ‘Many of postmillennial faith ratified the call, and were present at every session as interested listeners’ (Prophetic Studies of the International Prophetic Conference [Chicago: F. H. Revell, 1886], 1). Classic postmillennialism is in mind here not the more recent revisionist, reconstructionist variety. Of course, nonmillennialists would sense relatively little affinity in such a setting” (ibid.). “...they have hitherto continued a distinct nation, that they might continue a visible monument of his displeasure, for their rejecting and crucifying their Messiah” [quoting Edwards, Works, Apocalyptic Writings, vol. 5, pp. 133-134] (ibid., p. 337) John Wesley (1703-1791), “John Wesley has often been claimed as Chiliastic (and is so given by Taylor, Shimeall, and others), because of his chiefly adopting Bengal's views in Revelation, and of the views presented in some of his sermons. This has been denied, and utterances seemingly contradictory presented in proof. But this has finally been settled by a Methodist historian, Tyerman, in his Life of John Wesley, vol. 2, p. 523, etc. After giving very candidly Hartley's Mill. views from 'Paradise Restored' (affirming the Pre-Mill. Advent, and the Mill. reign of Jesus, etc., which Wesley indorsed, see Works, vol. 6, p. 743), Tyerman then gives the fact that John Wesley read and approved of the same, writing (Meth. Mag., 1783, p. 498) to the author: 'Your book on the Millennium was lately put into my hands. I cannot but thank you for your strong and seasonable confirmation of that comfortable doctrine, of which I cannot entertain the least doubt, as long as I believe the Bible'" (Peters, TTK, 1:539). "John Wesley, the founder of Methodism who also played a major role in the evangelical spiritual awakening in Great Britain during the 1700s stated, 'Perhaps He will appear as the dayspring from on high, before the morning light. Oh, do not set us a time—expect Him every hour. Now He is nigh, even at the doors'" [quoting Jesse Forrest Silver, The Lord's Return, p. 161] (Showers, M, p. 146). Charles Wesley (1707-1788), "Tyerman unhesitatingly classes among Millenarians, Charles Wesley (as various hymns evidence)" (Peters, TTK, 1:540) George Whitefield (1714-1770), "George Whitefield, the great English preacher who played a major role in the evangelical spiritual awakenings in Great Britain and America during the 1700s, declared, "Where is the promise of His coming?' But perhaps today, perhaps this midnight, the cry may be made... Let that cry, Behold, the Bridegroom cometh! be continually sounding in your ears, and begin now to live as though you were assured [sic] that this night you were to go forth to meet Him'" [quoting Jesse Forrest Silver, The Lord's Return, p. 168] (Showers, M, p. 146). John Darby (1800-1882), "The 'Plymouth Brethren,' or Darbyites, entertain a prominent Chiliastic belief, being one of their chief characteristics" (Peters, TTK, 1:536) Dean Alford (1810-1871, "Alford (N. T., vol. 2, p. 350), speaking of the Apocalyptic interpreters since the French Revolution, says: "The majority, both in number, learning, and research, adopt the Pre-Millennial Advent, following the plain and undeniable sense of the sacred text'" (ibid., p. 546). "Dean Alford (N. T., vol. 2, p. 362), who thus writes against spiritualizing the promises and departing from the Primitive Church view: 'But I have again and again raised my earnest protest against evading the plain sense of the words, and spiritualizing in the midst of plain declaration of fact. That the Lord will come in person to this our earth; that His risen elect will reign with Him here and judge; that during that blessed reign the power of evil will be bound, and the glorious prophecies of peace and truth on earth find their accomplishment; this is my firm persuasion, and not mine alone, but that of multitudes of Christ's waiting people, as it was that of the His. Primitive Apostolic Church before controversy blinded the eyes of the Fathers to the light of prophecy" (ibid., 2:351). John Charles Ryle (1816-1900), "John Charles Ryle (1816-1900), the first Bishop of Liverpool, was, according to C. H. Spurgeon's consideration of that period, 'the best man in the Church of England'" (Horner, FI, p. 339). "By way of introduction, Ryle set forth his prophetic creed in eleven sections, three of which are especially pertinent here: '6. I believe that after our Lord Jesus Christ comes again, the earth shall be renewed, and the curse removed; the devil shall be bound, the godly shall be rewarded, the wicked shall be punished; and that before He comes there shall be neither resurrection, judgment, not millennium, and that not till after He comes shall the earth be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord (Acts 3:21; Isa. 25:6-9; 1 Thess. 4:14-18; Rev. 20:1; etc.). 7. I believe that the Jews shall ultimately be gathered again as a separate nation, restored to their own land, and converted to the faith of Christ, after going through great tribulation (Jer. 30:10-11; 31:10; Rom. 11:25-26; Dan. 12:1; Zech. 13:8-9). 9. I believe that the literal sense of the Old Testament prophecies has been far too much neglected by the Churches, and is far too much neglected at the present day, and that under the mistaken system of spiritualizing and accommodating Bible language, Christians have too often completely missed its meaning (Luke 24:25-26)" [quoting J. C. Ryle, Are You Ready For The End Of Time?, p. 9] (ibid.). "I am quite aware that many good men do not see the subject of unfulfilled prophecy as I do. I am painfully sensible that I seem presumptuous in differing from them. But I dare not refuse anything which appears to me plainly written in Scripture. I consider the best of men are not infallible. I think we should remember that we must reject Protestant traditions which are not according to the Bible, as much as the traditions of the Church of Rome. I believe it is high time for the Church of Christ to awake out of its sleep about Old Testament prophecy. From the time of the old fathers, Jerome and Origen, down to the present day, men have gone on in a pernicious habit of "spiritualizing" the words of the Prophets, until their true meaning has been well nigh buried. It is high time to lay aside traditional methods of interpretation, and to give up our blind obedience to the opinions of such writers as Poole, Henry, Scott and Clarke, upon unfulfilled prophecy. It is high time to fall back on the good old principle that Scripture generally means what it seems to mean, and to beware of that semi-skeptical argument, "Such and such an interpretation cannot be correct, because it seems to us 'carnal'"! It is high time for Christians to interpret unfulfilled prophecy by the light of prophecies already fulfilled. The curses of the Jews were brought to pass literally: so also will be the blessings. The scattering was literal: so also will be the gathering. The pulling down of Zion was literal: so also will be the building up. The rejection of Israel was literal: so also will be the restoration” [quoting J. C. Ryle, Are You Ready For The End Of Time?, pp. 48-49] (ibid., p. 343). George N. H. Peters (1825-1909), quoted throughout this book. Charles Spurgeon (1834-1892), “Numerous writers, who, in their occasional works, give expression to Chiliastic belief, without entering largely in details... Spurgeon” (Peters, TTK, 1:546) “Spurgeon (quoted by Dr. Brookes, p. 50, Proph. Times, vol. 10) in his sermon on The First Res., says: ‘I do look forward to this with joy, that though I may sleep in Christ before my Master come, and I know not whether that shall be or no, yet I shall rise at the day of His appearing, and shall be recompensed at the resurrection of the just, if I have truly and faithfully served Him; and that recompense shall be to be made like Him; and to partake of His glories before the eyes of men, and to reign with Him during the thousand years’” (ibid., 2:292). “Charles Spurgeon (1834-1892) [Sermons on the Second Coming, 134, 137-138]... ‘Watch for him, and be always ready, that you may not be ashamed at his [second] advent... The Scripture has left the whole matter, as far as I can see, with an intentional indistinctness, that we may be always expecting Christ to come, and that we may be watching for his coming at any hour and every hour... He may not come for a thousand years; he may come tonight’” (Geisler, ST, 4:659). “When the Jews are restored, then the fullness of the Gentiles shall be gathered in; and as soon as they return, then Jesus will come upon Mount Zion to reign with his ancients gloriously, and the halcyon days of the Millennium shall then dawn” [quoting C.H. Spurgeon, The C.H. Spurgeon Collection, Metropolitan Tabernacle Pulpit, I, no. 28, 1855, p. 382] (Horner, FI, p. 12) Dwight Moody (1837-1899), “Moody, the Evangelist, is a decided advocate of the Pre-Mill. Advent of Christ” (Peters, TTK, 3:139) “At a meeting in Glasgow (1876, reported by the Christian Weekly) Moody said: ‘Like some others, I was originally much opposed to this doctrine until, from constantly meeting with it in the reading of Scripture, I was constrained to become a believer in it; and now it is to my mind one of the most precious truths in the whole Bible. And I should feel self-condemned were I to leave Glasgow without speaking about it. All Scripture from Genesis to Revelation should be read as an entire whole, and not a few favorite portions dwelt upon to the exclusion of other parts; nor should our views of divine truth be merely grounded upon the opinions of others, as every one is responsible for his own individual belief; and it will be no excuse for persons to say as a reason for not believing any doctrine of the Bible, that they never had it taught to them. The promise and statements regarding Christ's Second Coming are among the things that are freely given to us by God, and are very much spoken about in the Bible. One verse in every thirteen in the New Test. refers more or less directly to the subject.' 'Surely if the Holy Spirit has brought it before our notice in one thirteenth part of the New Test., it must be a truth of great moment to all who love the Saviour. Although the event itself is certain, yet the exact time of its occurrence is spoken of in Scripture as being uncertain, and therefore calling for constant watchfulness. Although there will be signs of its approach discerned by those who watch, yet upon the world at large it is predicted to come suddenly'" (ibid., p. 141). Sir Robert Anderson (1841-1918), quoted throughout this book.

Semi-chilastic groups in the history of the United States include The settlers of New England, "Rev. Joshua Spaulding (Lectures, pp. 221-2, etc.) speaks of 'many Christians, who were looking, not for the modern Millennium, but for the Sec. Coming of Christ,' etc., and adds: 'I have had the testimony of elderly Christian people, in several parts of New England, that within their remembrance this doctrine was first advanced in the places where they lived, and have heard them name the ministers who first preached it in their churches. No doctrine can be more indisputably proved to have been the doctrine of the Primitive Church than those we call Millenarian; and, beyond all dispute, the same were favorite doctrines with the fathers of New England; with the words of one of whom, writing upon this subject, we shall conclude our observations upon their antiquity: "They are not new, but old; they may be new to some men, but I cannot say it is to their honor.'" In another place (p. 191) he says: "The doctrine of the Millennium is truth; and the prevailing expectation, that it is fast approaching, and is now very near, is doubtless rational,' etc. The same is true doctrinally of Thomas Prince (A.D. 1728 to 1758), pastor at Boston (so Spaulding's Lectures), of Dr. B. Gale (see Barber's His. Collections of Connecticut, p. 531, who also says: "This (Millenarianism) appears to have been the belief of pious persons at the time of the first settlement of New England,' etc.)" (Peters, TTK, 1:542). The Puritans, "The Westminster Confession, produced in England during the 1640s by the Westminster Assembly, which had an overwhelming majority of Presbyterian Puritan members, declared that men should 'shake off all carnal security and be always watchful, because they know not at what hour the Lord will come (xxxiii, 3)" [quoting J. Barton Payne, The Imminent Appearing of Christ, p. 25] (Showers, M, p. 145). Pietists, "Pietism... was always, more or less, allied with Millenarianism"

(Peters, TTK, 1:540). Mennonites, “The ‘Mennonites’ (art. in M’Clintock and Strong’s Cyclop. says) ‘in the 10th cent., held, in common with the Anabaptists, the belief in Christ’s personal reign during the Millennium.’ Buck’s Theol. Dic., art. ‘Mennonites,’ remarks, that Menno discarded the extravagant views of certain Anabaptists, but retained the doctrine of ‘the Millennium, or 1000 years’ reign of Christ upon earth’” (ibid., p. 537). Christadelphians, “The ‘Christadelphians’ have largely incorporated Chiliasm, and make it essential to their system” (ibid.). and Russellites (precursors of Jehovah’s Witnesses), “Chiliasmic views are dominant in small parties, as in... the adherents of Barbour, of Rochester, N.Y., and in the followers of Russell, of Pittsburg, Pa... theory of Restitution is in the main allied with Chiliasmic views, revived by Barbour, Russell, etc., in Three Worlds and their respective newspapers” (ibid.).

Premillennialism Today

Today, chiliasts or premillennialists are found in all the major Protestant denominations. “Pre-Millenarianism, being chiefly related to Eschatology, is adopted by persons in all (or nearly all) denominations” (Peters, TTK, 1:553). “Episcopalian, Lutheran, Reformed, Presbyterian, Baptist, Methodist, etc., who have been Millenarians” (ibid., 3:235) “Chiliasm... a doctrine which can be received by all denominations without interfering with their distinctive denominational characteristics” (ibid., p. 260). “Pre-Millenarians are to be found in the early Church, and in all Protestant denominations” (ibid., p. 261) “Pre-Millenarians are found in all Protestant denominations, and do not form a party, sect, or denomination separate and distinct from all others” (ibid., p. 263). “In my own denomination (Evang. Lutheran [in 1884—ed.]... Rev. Ebaugh in his brief His. of Mill. in Rupp’s Orig. His. of Relig. Denom’s, says: “The number of Christians who hold substantially the foregoing views of the Millennium [Chiliasmic], cannot be computed with any degree of certainty, but from the writings of distinguished divines, both in the European and American churches, we are warranted in estimating their number at many thousands already” (ibid., 1:547).

Premillennialism is subscribed to today (and has been subscribed to in recent history) by many of the church’s best theologians and ministers. “American evangelism after 1843... the noted evangelists have been uniformly premillennial” (Feinberg, M, p. 96). “Peters [in The Theocratic Kingdom, 1:542-46] lists some 360 adherents of this position among the leaders of eleven denominations in this country, and some 470 writers and ministers of Europe who espoused the premillennial cause” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 390). “Contained in Proposition 78 of his colossal work, The Theocratic Kingdom—published in 1884 and unsurpassed either for completeness or for scholarship—George N. H. Peters has listed by name the outstanding clergymen of the world in his day both with reference to country and denomination who were premillenarians. In the United States within eleven denominations he has named 360, a considerable number of whom where bishops, or doctors of divinity. Very many of America’s honored expositors, editors, and preachers are entered in this list. Similarly, at least 470 widely known ministers and writers of Europe are also indicated by name” (Chafer, ST, 4:283). Recent and present-day premillennialists include C.I. Scofield, “...the Scofield Reference Bible... It has probably done more to extend premillennialism in the last half century than any other volume” (Walvoord, MK, p. 12), Charles Feinberg, quoted throughout this book, Lewis Sperry Chafer, quoted throughout this book, Charles Ryrie, quoted throughout this book, *J. Chapter 3: Presuppositions and Premises

For the sakes of thoroughness and completeness, before getting into our detailed study of the Bible's teaching regarding the Kingdom of God, I'd like to first provide an overview of my foundational presuppositions (assumptions) and premises (contentions). This overview will clue the reader in on exactly where in the philosophical and theological spectrums I'm coming from, and what my primary contentions are, and will thereby lay the groundwork for the remainder of this book.

Our Presuppositions

My presuppositions are basic assumptions, or "givens," regarding reality, truth and the Bible.

Because most Bible-believing Christians will find my presuppositions or "givens" to be old hat, and will likely have no issues with them, I will simply state them here, without offering much if any evidence for their validity. Since this book is intended primarily for reading and study by members of the Christian church, I'm assuming that the (Christian) reader has already investigated these foundational things for himself or herself, and therefore has no need for my proving them here. However, if the reader is not a conservative Christian, he or she will likely take issue with at least some of these "Christian" presuppositions. For further evidence for the validity of these presuppositions, evidence which is outside the scope of this book, I recommend consulting a good work on the prolegomena ("first things") of Christian theology, such as volume one of Dr. Norm Geisler's Systematic Theology.

Presuppositions Regarding Reality

First of all, this work presupposes that the reader and I actually exist and that the world and the things in it are also real. I believe, as conservative Christian theology has taught for centuries, that we human beings exist independently as individuals, not just as figments of some higher being's imagination, or as part of some pantheistic collective consciousness, and that the world around us is also real, and is not an illusion. I believe both we and our world originated in causes outside ourselves, and that we did not and do not "create our own reality."

In this work I also presuppose that God exists. I agree with what George Peters wrote in 1884, "We confess ourselves old-fashioned enough, and such a believer in the representations of Scripture, to believe that reason, honestly exercised, can see the work of an intelligent Creator in the sky above us, on the earth beneath us, and in the world around us... the ten thousand thousand contrivances and relations indicative of intelligent design" (TTK, 3:510). And, "Whatever difficulties—as alleged—on the side of pure reason there may be to prove the existence and the revelation of God, far greater difficulties are met in the effort to show that there is no God or no Revelation, for the latter leaves nature, man, world, the Universe an inscrutable enigma" (ibid., 1:87).

I believe that the God of the Bible, Yahweh or Jehovah, is the only true God. Psalm 83:18 says, "thou alone, whose name is Jehovah, Art the Most High over all the earth." This Jehovah is the God of Israel, and is also the God of the historic Christian church. He is not the Allah of Islam, and is not a pantheistic deity as endorsed by Hinduism or Buddhism. He is the one and only Creator-God, and is a God not of nothingness, but of exquisite engineering, artistry and detail. As Dr. Geisler says, quoting Charles Hodge (in Hodge's Systematic Theology, 1:436), "Jehovah is the true God, because He is really God, while the gods of the heathen are vanity and nothing, mere imaginary beings, having neither existence nor attributes" (ST, 2:362). By the way, it will be noticed that in this book my quotations from the Old Testament are taken from the American Standard Version of the Bible, which uses the name Jehovah, rather than the more common THE LORD as used in other translations. While the exact pronunciation of the Hebrew tetragrammaton, the four letters YHWH or JHVH that compose the name Jehovah, is unknown, still, I believe the personal name Jehovah is a more correct portrayal of the Name of Israel's covenant God than the generic THE LORD used by most translations. In this book I'll be following the example of Dr. Fruchtenbaum, a Hebrew Christian who often quotes from the ASV. New Testament quotations will be taken from the New American Standard Bible [NASB], unless otherwise noted.

Presuppositions Regarding Truth

I believe that truth exists, that it is objective and static, is independent of ourselves, and is independent of its manner of presentation. I believe truth is exclusive, that it excludes what is false. I believe that the claim that truth does not exist is self-defeating (as is also the claim that truth cannot be known). I believe that pluralism, which among other things claims that two conflicting truth claims can both be true, is self-defeating because it excludes exclusivism. I believe all truth is divisive and discriminatory, that it always discriminates between truth and error, and that this is a good thing. I believe that all truth is literal truth, that even spiritual truths are literally true. I believe that symbols in Scripture represent literal truths, and that the purpose of both literal and figurative language is to impart literal truth. I believe that all truth is connected, that it is never contradictory, that it is knowable and communicable. I believe that truth is also fearless; it has nothing to fear from exhaustive investigation.

Presuppositions Regarding the Bible

I believe that the Bible, in its original writings, is a supernatural revelation from God, which makes both Judaism and Christianity supernatural revelations from God.

I believe Scripture's claim for itself, namely, that it is the inspired word of God, and that it therefore merits our personal faith: "he is not to honor his father or his mother.' And thus you invalidated the word of God for the sake of your tradition" (Matt. 15:6). See also Mark 7:13. "All Scripture is inspired by God and profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for training in righteousness" (2 Tim. 3:16) "But know this first of all, that no prophecy of Scripture is a matter of one's own interpretation, for no prophecy was ever made by an act of human will, but men moved by the Holy Spirit spoke from God" (2 Pet. 1:20–21). "But this I [Paul] admit to you, that according to the Way which they call a sect I do serve the God of our fathers, believing everything that is in accordance with the Law, and that is written in the Prophets" (Acts 24:14)

While a complete treatment of the evidences for the inspiration of Scripture is outside the scope of this book, I would like to here offer at least a few evidences that have been convincing to me:

1. Its denunciation of sin and its regenerating power. "Men, naturally loving sin, could never have devised the denunciations of sin and the holiness of life demanded as given in the Bible" (Peters, TTK, 3:286). "The chasm between the origin of matter and the results, the natural and the moral, the material and the spiritual, is an impassible gulf unless we receive the explanation vouchsafed by Revelation, thus vindicating its inspiration. Besides this, the heart-felt reception of succeeding Revelation, its influence and practical workings in heart and life, its adaptation to all our necessities, etc., this, as the Word invites us to experience, most conclusively and powerfully contributes to the proving of its Supernatural origin" (Peters, TTK, 3:496).

2. Its neutral and/or negative descriptions of its major players. "The silence of Scripture in the way of eulogies, explanations, etc., is to the reflecting mind a powerful argument in favor of its divine inspiration, seeing that such a silence is not natural to ignorance, fanaticism, enthusiasm, special pleading—in brief, to man and his impulses" (Peters, TTK, 3:483).

3. Fulfillment of prophecy. “Fulfilled prophecy is stronger evidence for the ‘Inspiration’ and ‘Authenticity’ of the Scriptures than miracles” (Larkin, DT, p. 6). (See our discussion of fulfilled prophecy in our next chapter Biblical Hermeneutics.)

4. Its negative prophecy concerning its major players. “It is against the national pride and love—against the noblest instinctive impulses of nature in its social aspects—that men for ages have predicted the down-trodden, despised condition of their own nation and Kingdom... The men who describe the Divine Purpose—against and in denouncement of the present natural wishes of the people then existing—profess to do it by inspiration” (Peters, TTK, 3:468).

5. Jesus’ confirmation. Jesus said, “Do not think that I came to abolish the Law or the Prophets; I did not come to abolish, but to fulfill. For truly I say to you, until heaven and earth pass away, not the smallest letter or stroke shall pass away from the Law, until all is accomplished” (Matt. 5:17-18). “At that time Jesus said to the multitudes, ‘Have you come out with swords and clubs to arrest Me as against a robber? Every day I used to sit in the temple teaching and you did not seize Me. But all this has taken place that the Scriptures of the prophets may be fulfilled.’ Then all the disciples left Him and fled” (Matt. 26:55-56). “But it is easier for heaven and earth to pass away than for one stroke of a letter of the Law to fail” (Luke 16:17). (See also Matt. 15:6, 19:4-5; Mark 7:13; John 10:35, 13:18; Luke 16:29-31, 18:31, 24:25-32, 24:44-46; John 5:46-47.) As Dr. Geisler points out, “He [Jesus] and the New Testament writers refer to persons or events from every chapter of Genesis 1-22 and many others in the rest of the Old Testament” (ST, 1:438).

In summary, in my opinion, there is just no better explanation for these facts than inspiration. As George Peters says, “It certainly is unwise, even unscientific or unphilosophical to discard a reason which is admitted to meet the exigencies of a case until a better one is substituted” (TTK, 3:468).

Therefore, in light of the above, I believe the Bible is:

True. I believe all of the Bible is true, including Genesis. Genesis is repeatedly confirmed in the New Testament: Jesus confirms the creation account in Matt. 19:3–6 and Mark 10:6–9, and Paul confirms it in 1 Cor. 15:45 and 1 Tim. 2:13. Jesus confirms the Genesis account of the Flood in Matt. 24:37–39, Sodom and Gomorrah in Luke 17:26–29, and Jonah in Matt. 12:39–41 and Luke 11:32. Peter also confirms the Flood in 1 Pet. 3:20. Genesis, with its accounts of creation, the fall of man, God’s very first promise of redemption (Gen. 3:15), the call of Abraham, and the Edenic, Adamic, Noahic and Abrahamic Covenants, contains many foundational truths that are integral to the overall Kingdom Plan. “The God who appears in Creation, who manifests His love for man and then His displeasure at sin again appears in love and mercy, manifested by the most extraordinary admirably adapted measures of grace looking forward to a magnificent re-creation, and thus stamps the first record as divine” (Peters, TTK, 3:494). Genesis is also confirmed by many of our personal observations and experiences. “Let us take what we see and know, and thus go back to Genesis, and we will find its statements substantiated by a connected chain of evidence, before which all purely inferential statements must vanish. Thus we see man fallen, i.e. naturally given to evil; God personally withdrawn; no Paradise; Creation with all its retained blessings burdened with evil; the creature man oppressed with sorrow and death; and with all this a self-consciousness impressed—arising out of our moral nature—of dependence upon a Higher Being, of relationship to an extra-mundane Will, and even of accountability to a Moral Governor” (Peters, TTK, 3:493).

Literally true. “If understood in the sense that all the Bible is literally true but not all is true literally, then literal seems to be the best term available” (Geisler, ST, 4:448). I also believe that most of the Bible is true literally, and that non-literal Scripture is readily identifiable as such. We’ll have more to say on this later, in our chapter Biblical Hermeneutics.

Inerrant. Whether the Bible is speaking on subjects spiritual or scientific, heavenly or earthly, I believe it is speaking inerrantly. In all candor, even after many thousands of hours of personal Bible study, I still have yet to find within Scripture even one incontrovertible contradiction or error.

Unbreakable. I believe that nothing we can say or do can ever either alter what Scripture says or inhibit its fulfillment. “...the Scripture cannot be broken” (John 10:35)

Unified. I believe all forty Bible writers, while have differing emphases and writing styles, all present the same doctrine.

Universal. I believe the Bible is true for everyone, in every place, for all time.

Eternal. I believe the Bible, the word of God, will remain forever. “The grass withereth, the flower fadeth; but the word of our God shall stand forever” (Isa. 40:8). “Heaven and earth will pass away, but My words will not pass away” (Mark 13:31). “But it is easier for heaven and earth to pass away than for one stroke of a letter of the Law to fail” (Luke 16:17). (See also Matt. 24:35 and Luke 21:33.)

Important. I believe all of the Bible is important. As Dr. McClain points out, “No mere man, not even the Apostle Paul, has ever been made the divine channel of all divine truth. Therefore, for any believer to feed on the Pauline Scriptures alone, or the Four Gospels alone, or to lean wholly upon any one human teacher of the Scriptures, or to restrict the total significance of a Biblical doctrine to the measure of a one-sided selection of texts, indicates spiritual immaturity and the limited discernment which always attends it” (GK, p. 264). I believe that Bible doctrine is important. “...the great fundamental framework of the Scriptures is its doctrines, and comparing them to the bones of the body, imparting consistency and form” (Peters, TTK, 1:111). “Theological ideas have longer-lasting consequences than mere political ideas—eternal consequences (Mark 8:36)” (Geisler, ST, 2:18). For example, “For what does it profit a man to gain the whole world, and forfeit his soul” (Mark 8:36)?

Authoritative. I believe the Bible is the ultimate authority: that it trumps all creeds, all theological tradition and even man’s logic and reason.

I believe that while the Bible was written by men, these men were superintended by God such that their writings were without error. “But know this first of all, that no prophecy of Scripture is a matter of one’s own interpretation, for no prophecy was ever made by an act of human will, but men moved by the Holy Spirit spoke from God” (2 Pet. 1:20–21). Imperfect men were used by God to pen a perfect document. As Dr. Geisler says, “It is possible to draw a straight line with a crooked stick” (ST, 1:249).

I believe our present-day Bible corresponds faithfully to the original writings. “Christians believe that God in His providence preserved the copies from all substantial error; in fact, the degree of accuracy is greater than that of any other book from the ancient world, exceeding 99 percent” (Geisler, ST, 1:257). “We can reconstruct the original text with over 99 percent accuracy” (ibid., p. 503).

Therefore, I’m writing this book from the presupposition of faith. With my assumptions that we, the world and God are real, that the Bible is the inspired, inerrant word of God, and that Bible prophecy is in fact supernatural revelation from God, I’m writing from the perspective of believing both these presuppositions and also the premises that I’ll be proposing next.

Our Premises

Next, I’ll outline my premises. My premises are things on which not all Christians will necessarily agree with me, but if he or she is a believer, he or she will probably agree with me on at least most of them. Other of my premises, though, may be new ideas to him or her or ideas that may be open for debate, ideas that, while not essential for our salvation, are in my mind worthy of defense, as they are the foundational ideas upon which this doctrine of the Kingdom is constructed. These premises are divided into two major categories: those regarding the Bible and those regarding the Kingdom.

Premises Regarding the Bible

First, I'll state my premises regarding the Bible and regarding our apprehension and understanding of the Bible.

The first four of these premises are further evidences for the inspiration of Scripture.

The first of these four evidences is the specified, or ordered complexity of the Bible's overall Kingdom Plan. To put it plainly, after examining the evidence in considerable detail, I don't believe that there's any possible way that forty independent writers, writing over a time span of sixteen hundred years, could possibly have designed a Plan like this on their own, one component at a time, without a super-intelligent, superintending Mind overseeing and directing the project. Each writer/prophet contributed his own unique set of components to this overall Plan, apparently without access to the overall blueprint. How was this possible? The blueprint, which we'll be examining in detail in this book, is both highly complex and highly ordered. How do we explain this complex yet ordered design, apart from a superintending Designer? George Peters suggests, "If it were impossible for unskilful, ignorant workmen to build a locomotive with its complicated application of mechanical principles and its confinement and allotment of a powerful force in nature (which in the very nature of the case requires, and is indicative of, intelligent comprehension) how much less is it possible for 'ignorant,' men to construct, develop, and exhibit such a Theocratic Plan as is embraced in the doctrine of this Kingdom; a Plan running through thousands of years, requiring the most extraordinary manifestations and provisions, incorporating an animating, pervading unity extending from the entailment of the curse to its removal, from the loss of a Paradise to its final restoration, from a withdrawal of God to His dwelling again with man, from the introduction of evil to its complete overthrow, from a Redemption needed to a Redemption fully gained" (Peters, TTK, 3:487). After many years of careful study of this theocratic Plan, I have no explanation for its astoundingly high level of ordered complexity other than that it was designed by the same One who also designed the cosmos, the laws of physics, the human body and DNA. It is my hope that by the time the reader has finished reading this book, that he or she will have come to this same conclusion.

The second further evidence for the inspiration of the Bible is the scope and internal consistency of its Plan. Peters continues, “The important question to be answered is not whether this or that portion may or may not be defective—but whether the Bible contains a Plan of Salvation worthy of God and adapted to secure the happiness of man in all his relations—worthy of the sacrifice alleged to have been made in its behalf, and adapted to the removal of the evils now unhappily burdening the world. While it is reasonable in studying a locomotive to consider its separate portions and desecant on their form, etc., it would be folly to confine ourselves only to these and neglect what is of far greater moment to consider, the locomotive as one whole—its capability of performing the work designed by its builder—and then to look at its various parts—not as misshapen or wrongfully constructed when contemplated by themselves irrespective of their designed use—but only in their adaptedness to subserve the intended end... If a man forms his estimate of the worthiness, the purpose, the capability, etc., of a machine only from viewing its several parts separated from the Plan designed by its designer, he is regarded as taking a low position in judgment, and this too in proportion to the complications, the numerous appendages of the machine, thus requiring for correct apprehension a constant reference to the plan. If this is true of things of a material interest, how much more noticeable is this fact, when we see it applied to the greatest of all interests, those relating to humanity, seeing that the Bible professes to be a book given in behalf of man” (TTK, 3:469).

The third evidence is the fitness of the Plan to achieve its stated purposes. “A consideration of our needs and that of the world, and then of the remarkable Divine Purpose in Redemption which so accurately meets and provides for these, in connection with an earnest of experimental knowledge; the historical evidences, the past and present fulfillment of prophecy, etc., form such a combination of proof, such a union of necessity and provision, that reason and faith acknowledge it as immensely superior to anything that humanity can produce” (Peters, TTK, 3:287). “The Theocratic idea is so grand in its conception and so sublime in its adaptation to man and its results, that it could not have been of human devising” (ibid., 3:592).

The fourth and final premise regarding the inspiration of the Bible concerns Bible prophecy, specifically the time compression of prophecy. This will be discussed later, in our chapter Biblical Hermeneutics.

Our next set of premises concerns six additional characteristics (in addition to its being inspired) of the Bible. In our discussion of these characteristics, we'll examine the premises that the Bible is Jewish, concrete rather than abstract, exclusive, progressive, sufficient and perspicuous.

First, the Bible is Jewish. Both the Old and New Testaments are thoroughly Jewish, both having been written entirely by Jews from within a Jewish context. And as we will see throughout this study, there are deliberate reasons why this is so. George Peters asks, "Why does God so carefully trace the rise and progress of the Jewish nation to the establishment of the Theocracy, then enter into fullness of detail respecting the Theocracy, its history and downfall; then avoiding any connected history of the nation so long as separated from the form of government He Himself instituted, He only presents a sufficiency to give coherency to predictions and preparations relating to the future? Why does God specially single out this Jewish nation as alone worthy of detailed mention, and pass by those mighty nations (with brief mention) that existed contemporaneously? Why does He devote so many pages to a special form of government, and pass by those forms which largely fill the pages of profane history and which play such a prominent part in the world's drama? Such questions are only satisfactorily answered by a reference to the Theocratic ordering. The Jewish nation being directly under God's own Kingdom, sustaining to Him a near national relationship as the Ruler, He, for the sake of His own Theocratic position, once occupied and to be again re-occupied, evinces this partiality to the nation in the recorded history. When history shall be read and studied after the thousand years are ended, the significancy of all this and the manifest omission respecting other governments and nations of vast proportions will appear self-evident in the then existing grandeur of the Theocracy, the restoration and supremacy of the Jewish nation, and in the Gentile nations having participated in its blessings" (TTK, 3:595).

Second, the Bible's message is concrete rather than abstract. "The great ideas of the Bible are concrete rather than abstract; and such terms as the Kingdom of God are intended to convey meanings which are pertinent to actual situations in the world of reality with which common men are somewhat familiar" (McClain, GK, p. 17).

Third, the Bible's correct interpretation is exclusive. While Scripture may have more than one application, it has only one correct interpretation. "...that golden rule of all sound interpretation which Luther first introduced, namely, that all the sacred books contain but one single meaning" (Peters, TTK, 1:49) "According to the literal method, there is only one textual meaning: the one expressed in it by its author" (Geisler, ST, 4:417). However, while it has only one correct interpretation, it has countless possible implications and applications. "There is a difference between the interpretation of a text (which is one), and the application of a text (which are many)” (Geisler, ST, 4:418). “Interpretation is one; application is manifold” (Feinberg, M, p. 145). “Also, while there is only one interpretation of a text—the one literally meant by the author—there are many implications. This is why New Testament use of the Old Testament sometimes seems removed from a proper interpretation; the New Testament is often not giving an interpretation, but an implication or application of that text. A text’s correct interpretation is the historical-grammatical interpretation” (Geisler, ST, 4:418). Also, the true meaning of Scripture is what the author meant; not what it means to me. “If it is requisite, in order to understand any author, to enter into his spirit and to comprehend the reasoning which leads him to definite conclusions, this is equally true of the primitive writers. Without a knowledge of the Covenant promises, the prophecies based upon them, etc., it is simply impossible to do justice to certain expressions and even doctrinal positions assumed by the Fathers” (Peters, TTK, 3:406). “The true meaning of a biblical passage is not what it means to me, but what was meant by the one who wrote it” (Geisler, ST, 4:416). “Martin Luther [in Basic Theological Writings, p. 129]... ‘The words [of Scripture] are to be considered according to the intention of the speaker’” (ibid., 4:454). “The Old Testament is to be interpreted in light of itself; whatever it meant in that context by those authors who wrote to those people is what it still means” (ibid., p. 587). “The reader’s task is to discover the meaning already in a text, not determine what he thinks it ought to mean” (ibid., p. 416).

Fourth, the Bible’s message is progressive. The entire Kingdom program is complex, and has been revealed piece by piece over an extended period of time. “Not all doctrine is revealed immediately and completely by God; most teachings are revealed progressively” (Geisler, ST, 2:298).

Fifth, the Bible is sufficient. “The Kingdom being thus postponed, and the process of the gathering out of the elect now going on, is sufficient reason why no additional Revelation is necessary. The Apocalypse of John, to encourage our faith and hope, includes all that is additionally required to be known, appropriately closing the direct Divine communications, and confirming the voices of the Prophets” (Peters, TTK, 1:626). “We possess a sufficient guide” (ibid., p. 627). It has been sufficient throughout history. “Irenaeus fought against the troops of heretics with arguments (munitions) drawn from the Scriptures alone. This was only an imitating of Christ, the apostles, and prophets, who constantly appealed to, and cited from, the Record, thus comparing the things of the Spirit” (ibid., 1:112). No new present-day revelation is needed.

And sixth, the Bible is also perspicuous: its main messages are intelligible and understandable. Dr. Geisler explains, “The oft-misunderstood principle of biblical perspicuity does not claim that everything in Scripture is clear; it affirms that Scripture’s central teachings are clear. As stated popularly: In the Bible, the main things are the plain things, and the plain things are the main things. Indeed, the gospel itself is stated in one-syllable words, none of which is over four letters: ‘He who has the Son has life; he who does not have the Son of God does not have life’ (1 John 5:12). Also, Jesus said plainly, ‘I am the way and the truth and the life. No one comes to the Father except through me’ (John 14:6). Doubters and distorters only need be asked, ‘Which of these words do you not understand?’” (ST, 4:92)

Our final set of premises regarding the Bible itself concern Bible prophecy. Specifically, we maintain that Bible prophecy is a major component of Scripture, that it is important for us to understand, that it is connected with history, and that it will all be fulfilled, whether we believe it or not.

First, prophecy is a major component of Scripture. As Chafer points out, “In the actual text of all the Scriptures, at least one-fifth was prediction at the time it was written” (ST, 4:257).

Second, prophecy is important for us to understand. Jesus castigated the Jewish leaders of His day for not discerning the times, as they should have done via their study of Daniel 9:24-27. “And the Pharisees and Sadducees came up, and testing Him asked Him to show them a sign from heaven. But He answered and said to them, ‘When it is evening, you say, “It will be fair weather, for the sky is red.” And in the morning, “There will be a storm today, for the sky is red and threatening.” Do you know how to discern the appearance of the sky, but cannot discern the signs of the times? An evil and adulterous generation seeks after a sign; and a sign will not be given it, except the sign of Jonah.’ And He left them, and went away” (Matt. 16:1-4). Also, all Scripture is inspired by God and profitable for us, including prophecy: “All Scripture is inspired by God and profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for training in righteousness; that the man of God may be adequate, equipped for every good work. (2 Ti. 3:16-17). (See also 1 Pet. 1:12 and 2 Pet. 3:2.) And specifically regarding the prophetic book of Revelation, “Blessed is he who reads and those who hear the words of the prophecy, and heed the things which are written in it; for the time is near” (Rev. 1:3). “And he said to me, ‘Do not seal up the words of the prophecy of this book, for the time is near’” (Rev. 22:10-11) Bible prophecy should become more relevant with the passage of time, rather than less: “Christian eschatology, the more the course of time advances, must become less and less an unimportant appendix, and more and more a locus primarius of Christian doctrine” [quoting Lange’s Com. Luke, p. 326, Doc. 1] (Peters, TTK, 1:33). An understanding of prophecy is necessary for a complete and well-rounded understanding of biblical theology. As Peters points out, “Therefore it is, that he who studies and compares Prophecy (teaching respecting the future), keeping in view that it is far more than mere prediction (in the sense of foretelling to convince men of the truth, etc.), that it is designed to teach a system of truth (one part adjusting itself to another in the thus revealed Plan), will obtain a deeper and more satisfactory insight into Redemption, as carried on and finally realized” (ibid., p. 170). “...our hopes all lay in the future... The covenants themselves, in their most precious aspects, relate to the future... Prophecy... it is a communication or message from God, a pre historic record of the Divine Purpose, and if properly linked together forms a continuous chain of evidence, evincing the unity of the Divine Plan in establishing the Kingdom. To perceive this unity, so confirmatory to faith, a knowledge of the future is indispensably necessary; hence it is graciously given, that we may, beholding the future as present, see the unfolding of covenanted grace, realize the evidences of a prevailing Sovereignty of the Most High, and have excited within us faith, childlike trust, hope, and love” (ibid., p. 340). Walvoord says, “The hope of future events is inseparable from Christian faith and any vagueness weakens and limits the whole perspective” (MK, p. 10). A good understanding of Bible prophecy will also help insure that we’re expending our efforts in Christian service in eternally meaningful ways. Dr. Chafer admonishes, “It is for every child of God to know the exact plan He has disclosed and to be wholly subject to it, else his ignorant service may but play into the hands of the enemy of God and add to the final bonfire of wood, hay and stubble” (KHP, 94%).

Third, prophecy is connected with history. McClain observes, “Viewed from one standpoint, prophecy arises out of a definite historical situation existing immediately before the eyes of the prophet. There is probably no exception to this rule. No matter how far into the future he was transported in vision, the prophet never lost his contact with history. He never forgot where he was, nor the people to whom he was sent to speak on behalf of God. Even in purely predictive prophecy, or what some have called apocalyptic vision, although the prophet may say little or nothing about the immediate historical situation, it is nevertheless not forgotten but furnishes the background of all that he has to say with reference to the future. In his vision of the coming Kingdom, the seer never cut loose from the kingdom of history” (GK, p. 135). Peters adds, “Prophecy is designed to reveal the Divine Purpose, to indicate and vindicate its unity of design, and therefore, instead of being ‘independent,’ one of another, all the predictions of God’s Word relating to the Redemptive process, and the history of His people, are mutually dependent upon each other” (TTK, 1:247).

Fourth, and finally, prophecy will all be fulfilled, whether believed by us or not. Jesus said, “For truly I say to you, until heaven and earth pass away, not the smallest letter or stroke shall pass away from the Law, until all is accomplished” (Matt. 5:18), and “But it is easier for heaven and earth to pass away than for one stroke of a letter of the Law to fail” (Luke 16:17). “From the decided and specific fulfillment of prophecy in the past, it is proper to hold that the remainder will also thus be verified” (Peters, TTK, p. 246). That being the case, might we not do well to believe as did Paul? “But this I [Paul, vs. 10] admit to you, that according to the Way which they call a sect I do serve the God of our fathers, believing everything that is in accordance with the Law, and that is written in the Prophets” (Acts 24:14)

Premises Regarding Our Apprehension and Understanding of the Bible

Before digging into our study of the Bible itself, which is the major task of this book, it will be helpful for us to first review some characteristics of the Bible that can make studying the Bible challenging, and we’ll also take a look at some of the helps and hinderances to our understanding the Bible.

First, we recognize that the Bible is complex, detailed and even obscure on some points.

Because the Bible is complex, “The issues of premillennialism are neither trivial nor simple” (Walvoord, MK, p. 127). But while the Bible and the issues related to premillennialism are complex, the subject of the Kingdom is still worthy of diligent study, with the goal being good comprehension. “Certainly if one is to reject a doctrine because it is complicated, no theologian could for a moment accept the doctrine of the Trinity or debate the fine points of the relation of the two natures in Jesus Christ” (ibid., p. 111).

The Bible is detailed, and minute detail permeates the doctrine of the Kingdom. “When these things are realized, men will be amazed to find how largely and minutely, all this has been described in the Word, and yet how little it has been noticed and appreciated, just as the things relating to the First Advent were overlooked” (Peters, TTK, 3:24).

The Bible is also obscure on some points. We suggest that this obscurity is intentional. “Admitting the Scriptures to be the Word of God, and that, as many writers have noticed, some indistinctness, a degree of obscurity, relating to time, explanations, etc., is manifested in the things of the Kingdom, these facts are indicative of design in the same” (Peters, TTK, 1:148). “There is, consequently, a deep wisdom, such as man could not evince, in those isolated, broken predictions” (ibid., p. 233). For instance, at times Jesus spoke in parables for the express purpose of hiding their meaning from some people. (See Matt. 13:10-13.) This obscurity on some points is intentional for at least three reasons: 1. To preserve moral freedom. Peters continues, “Again, another reason for [this obscurity] may be found in human freedom. Omnipotence inspired by mercy has given continued moral freedom, and it will do nothing, even by way of revelation, to exert an undue force upon the will. Preiswerk (quoted by Auberlen, Danl. and Rev., p. 84) says: ‘The Lord has always represented the events He announced by the prophets in such a manner, that they were sufficiently clear for him who approached with reverence and careful thought, and yet sufficiently dark and veiled not to limit the freedom of human action. For if the unchangeable decrees of the Eternal were presented to our eyes in unveiled features, what would become of the responsibility of man, of the free movements of human life, what of courage, and hope, and joy?’ Hence it is, e.g. that prophecies which particularly describe the time of the reestablishment of the Kingdom are given somewhat obscurely, as in Daniel and the Apocalypse. This, and other reasons, will become more apparent, when considering certain things pertaining to the Kingdom, especially the postponement, the ordering of the future Kingdom, the restoration of the Jews, the Antichrist, etc.” (ibid.) 2. For the safety of believers. “In answer to the question, frequently asked, why the revelations respecting the Messiah’s Kingdom were at first so obscure, were so gradually unfolded, and that some things, to be fully understood, require additional light, it has been said, that God makes long and secret preparations for important events; that He adapts His revelations to the necessities and circumstances of particular times, etc. Reflection will teach us an additional reason, viz.: that the depravity of man, exhibited in the pursuit of selfishness, would, hitherto, have rejected a plainer revelation, or else would have made it the basis of a continuous cruel persecution. If everything relating to the Kingdom would have been clearly revealed, in a systematic order, we are confident that such would have been the hatred of earthly kingdoms toward it, that no believer in it would have been safe, and, in consequence, the work of gathering out the elect would have been seriously impeded. The existence of Gentile domination, especially the hostile and jealous Roman power, prevented (as we shall show in the proper place) a plainer statement of various particulars, lest it should unnecessarily excite unremitting persecution. This Kingdom will be better understood as the Primitive view is revived; its nature and the things pertaining to it will be better comprehended as the Scriptures are compared; and the result will be, as prophecy teaches us (e.g. Rev. 19, etc.), that the kings and mighty of the earth will be arrayed against its re-establishment. God, foreseeing this antagonism as directed by ‘the god of this world,’ does not unnecessarily excite it by a premature disclosure of all things, but gives us the truth in detached portions, some of it veiled under prophecy, others under symbolical language, etc., so that His preparations, patiently conducted, may go on to a successful completion, and the Kingdom be suddenly—unexpectedly to many—manifested. The history of the world in its rejection of the truth, is evidence to justify such a conclusion” (ibid.). “...knowledge itself may give new weapons into the hands of evil” (ibid., 2:156) “So prevailing was the primitive view in its relation to the Empire that, as Gibbon (Decl. and Fall, vol. 2, p. 80) intimates, it was one cause of the hostile spirit and persecution of the emperors, although mentioned with caution and reserve it became known, and (Mosheim, vol. 1, p. 413) the Montanists were censured because they disclosed it so freely and prominently” (ibid., p. 640). “To indicate to the student how delicately this was anciently handled, we refer e.g. to Josephus (Ant. 10, 10, 4), who relates Daniel’s dream (Dan. 2), and vaguely refers to the interpretation of it. After intimating that the fourth kingdom is the Roman, he, in view of the action of the Stone, to avoid giving offence, says ‘Daniel did also declare the meaning of the Stone to the king; but I do not think proper to relate it, since I have only undertaken to describe things past or things present, but not things that are future’” (ibid., p. 640). 3. To set up the nations for destruction. “And now many nations are assembled against thee, that say, Let her be defiled, and let our eye see our desire upon Zion. But they know not the thoughts of Jehovah, neither understand they his counsel; for he hath gathered them as the sheaves to the threshing-floor” (Mic. 4:11-12). “The restoration of the Jews being intimately connected with the Kingdom, an essential accessory to its re-establishment, a degree of obscurity is thrown around the subject (as e.g. to the exact manner of occurrence, the time, etc.), in order that it may prove ‘a snare’ and ‘a net’ for the nations, who, at the consummation, shall be arrayed against it and the saints and God, saying, ‘Come and let us cut them off from being a nation; that the name of Israel may be no more in remembrance’ (Ps. 83:4)” (Peters, TTK, 1:148).

These factors notwithstanding, understanding the Bible still is possible. Jesus told His disciples, “and you shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free” (John 8:32). “But when He, the Spirit of truth, comes, He will guide you into all the truth; for He will not speak on His own initiative, but whatever He hears, He will speak; and He will disclose to you what is to come” (John 16:13). Daniel was told, “But as for you, Daniel, conceal these words and seal up the book until the end of time; many will go back and forth, and knowledge will increase” (Dan 12:4). “Many will be purged, purified and refined; but the wicked will act wickedly, and none of the wicked will understand, but those who have insight will understand” (Dan 12:10). Serious Bible students agree that “a sufficiency is given to every one who will ‘search the Scriptures’” (Peters, TTK, p. 51). “There are no limits to be placed on the possibility of the illumination of the mind by the Spirit” (Chafer, G, 88%). “The claim that the prophetic Scriptures cannot be understood is never made by those who give due attention to them” (Chafer, ST, 7:138). “Premillennialism not only takes the Bible as authoritative in opposition to liberalism but believes that an ordinary believer can understand the main import of the Scriptures including the prophetic Word” (Walvoord, MK, p. 15).

We suggest that it is also possible to understand the Bible with certainly. Peters is straight-forward regarding the premillennial view of the Kingdom: “Our position is an impregnable one” (TTK, 3:258).

Understanding will increase as history progresses. In the last days, knowledge will increase and become abundant. “But as for you, Daniel, conceal these words and seal up the book until the end of time; many will go back and forth, and knowledge will increase” (Dan 12:4). Even before the age of computers and the Internet Peters wrote, “The cheap publication and extended circulation in almost every language of the globe, the numerous aids to its comprehension, the varied versions and translations, the revisions and their discussions, the works in defense of, or against them, etc., has had a tendency to bring the Word of God before the people with such startling conspicuousness, that God justifies Himself in first warning before bringing upon the nations the terrible threatened judgments. The nearer we are to the end, the more prominent should be this interest in the Scriptures” (TTK, 3:130). In the last days, we should expect that study of prophecy will accelerate. Peters continues, “Oosterzee (Ch. Dog., vol. 2, P. 777) says: ‘In the nineteenth (century) the importance of the Eschatological—almost overlooked by the Reformers—becomes constantly more universally recognized;’ or as Kling (quoted by Oosterzee): ‘It is not to be denied that our age enters with an earnestness and intensity, such as no earlier one has done, into the Eschatological examination, and presses forward in the complete development of this doctrine, one sign among many that we are hastening toward the great decision.’... the study of Eschatology so earnestly and successfully prosecuted in recent times, is a sign that we are approaching the great crisis” (ibid., p. 135). And prophecy will surely be most clearly understood as the prophesied events actually unfold. “But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end: many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased” (Dan 12:4). Peters suggests, “Dan. 12:4 pertains exclusively to the one vision that was sealed, which will not (as to its conclusion) be fully understood until ‘the time of the end’ (which we place in the interval between the two stages [of Christ’s return, i.e., the Tribulation period—ed.]), when it will be thoroughly comprehended in view of the events transpiring, and the precise chronological status being recognized” (TTK, 3:150). “And he said, Go thy way, Daniel; for the words are shut up and sealed till the time of the end. Many shall purify themselves, and make themselves white, and be refined; but the wicked shall do wickedly; and none of the wicked shall understand; but they that are wise shall understand” (Dan 12:9–10). According to the book of Revelation, at some point when the Tribulation period is in full swing, even hardened, unrepentant sinners will recognize that God is at work in the events then transpiring: “And the kings of the earth and the great men and the commanders and the rich and the strong and every slave and free man, hid themselves in the caves and among the rocks of the mountains; and they said to the mountains and to the rocks, ‘Fall on us and hide us from the presence of Him who sits on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of their wrath has come; and who is able to stand” (Rev. 6:15–17)? “Whatever the wise may understand in reference to the general outlines of the prophecy ([Dan.] ch. 12:10), yet there is sufficient said in ch. 12:9 to indicate that some things shall not be clearly apprehended until the time of the end, the closing period has arrived and is actually inaugurated” (Peters, TTK, 2:657). “The Book of Dan. (Jewish Apoc.) remains at least sealed, 12:9, for the nation to the time of the end, while Rev. (Christian Apoc.) is unsealed, Rev. 22:10 [“And he said to me, ‘Do not seal up the words of the prophecy of this book, for the time is near’”], inviting study and knowledge” (ibid., p. 658). “The Bible will be read and searched with increasing interest—intensified by actual trial and suffering—and everything illustrative of the times then existing will be most carefully examined. Then it is that such a work like this—perhaps now derided and sneered at by some professed believers—will be thankfully perused and its deductions from the Scriptures gratefully contrasted with the then existing manifestations and the Divine original. It is both an honor and a privilege to write for such a period, thus becoming, by God’s grace, instrumental in upholding the faith and consoling the hearts of martyrs, of sustaining men and women under Antichrist's cruel rule by the assurance that this very trial shall redound, if faithful, to their everlasting honor and glory (Rev. 20:4, 6)" (ibid., p. 733).

Our understanding of the Bible will never be entirely complete in this life. There are difficulties that may be insurmountable for us, at least for the time being. Therefore, when we encounter difficulties, rather than pretend that they don't exist, we should be forthright and readily admit such. "Nearly all writers upon chronology and prophetic dates have manifested commendable modesty, and while giving in their judgment an approximation to the truth, do not conceal from themselves or readers the difficulties connected with the subject" (Peters, TTK, 3:102). We recognize that we will never fully understand everything in this life. "For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts" (Isa. 55:9). And, "Oh, the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are His judgments and unfathomable His ways" (Rom. 11:33)! Since God's wisdom is infinitely greater than ours, we should therefore expect at least some difficulty grasping His thoughts. "a believer... the promise is ours, but the manner of fulfilling it belongs to God" (Peters, TTK, 2:553). "The finite mind is soon overwhelmed in the contemplation of the eternal facts and purposes of God" (Chafer, G, 13%) "In the Scriptures we have a revelation coming down from an Infinite Mind, expressed in the vehicle of human language; and therefore, as Alford has well said, 'Its simplest saying has in it a depth which the human mind cannot fathom...' [quoting Henry Alford, New Testament for English Readers, Intro., p. 4]... There is no end to God" (McClain, GK, p. 265). However, again, we can know, and know with certainty, those things that God has revealed to us. "The secret things belong unto Jehovah our God; but the things that are revealed belong unto us and to our children for ever, that we may do all the words of this law" (Deut. 29:29).

Next we'll consider some things that are necessary in order for us to understand the Bible. Some of these necessary things are from God, and some are from us.

The necessities from God include spiritual regeneration and the teaching ministry of the Holy Spirit.

First, because "a natural man does not accept the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness to him, and he cannot understand them, because they are spiritually appraised" (1 Cor. 2:14), spiritual regeneration, or being "born again" is essential to understanding the Bible. Natural, or unregenerate man always misinterprets the work of God.

This can readily be seen by observing his claims concerning God, nature, the accuracy and sufficiency of the Bible, the gospel, someone becoming a believer, or any of a thousand other biblical subjects. A natural, or unregenerate man evaluates these things incorrectly because he simply does not have the spiritual tools necessary to interpret them correctly. Jesus spoke of “the Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, because it does not behold Him or know Him, but you know Him because He abides with you, and will be in you” (John 14:17). Paul said “For who among men knows the thoughts of a man except the spirit of the man, which is in him? Even so the thoughts of God no one knows except the Spirit of God” (1 Cor. 2:11), “but whenever a man turns to the Lord, the veil is taken away” (2 Cor. 3:16) and, “in whose case the god of this world has blinded the minds of the unbelieving, that they might not see the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God” (2 Cor. 4:4). “For among them are those who enter into households and captivate weak women weighed down with sins, led on by various impulses, always learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth” (2 Tim. 3:6-7). Dr. McClain explains, “Spiritual blindness... This is the condition of the whole unsaved world, so that we cannot expect anything but confusion in the ideas of unregenerated men regarding the essential truths of Scripture, no matter how great their scholarship” (GK, p. 264). “‘the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not’ (2 Cor. 4:4). In this verse it is worthy of notice that the particular object of Satan’s venomous hatred is ‘the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God’ (ASV)” (ibid.). “In summarizing this introductory discussion, two things should be emphasized: first, the crucial problems of understanding the written revelation of God are found in man, not in the revelation; and second, excepting man’s finitude, these problems are all basically moral and spiritual in nature. If men cannot see, it is not that they have lost their minds, but they have lost their holiness. If men do not believe, it is not that they are incapable of the intellectual act of assent, but that they will not believe. To say that the simple act of belief, considered psychologically, is beyond the power of man, is nonsense. Every day, men show clearly by their actions that they can believe in each other, in themselves, even in the lies of the propaganda mills. But men of themselves will not believe God. If there is an impossibility somewhere—and there is—it is not to be found in any alleged esoteric meaning of Scripture; nor can it be located in some defect of the human intellect. The impossibility is moral and spiritual. Man can not believe and understand what God says because he will not. That is why fallen men are ‘ever learning,’ yet never, without the saving operation of the Holy Spirit, 'able to come to the knowledge of the truth' as revealed in Jesus Christ and recorded in Scripture (2 Tim. 3:7). And that is why, in the last analysis, it is God who must open the 'understanding' of men that they might 'understand the scriptures' (Luke 24:45)" (ibid., p. 265).

Second, the teaching ministry of the Holy Spirit is needed. Jesus said, "I have many more things to say to you, but you cannot bear them now. But when He, the Spirit of truth, comes, He will guide you into all the truth; for He will not speak on His own initiative, but whatever He hears, He will speak; and He will disclose to you what is to come. He shall glorify Me; for He shall take of Mine, and shall disclose it to you. All things that the Father has are Mine; therefore I said, that He takes of Mine, and will disclose it to you" (John 16:12-15) and, "Now He said to them, "These are My words which I spoke to you while I was still with you, that all things which are written about Me in the Law of Moses and the Prophets and the Psalms must be fulfilled.' Then He opened their minds to understand the Scriptures" (Luke 24:44-46) Conservative scholars are in agreement with Jesus on this. "None will comprehend prophecy who are not taught by the Holy Spirit" (Chafer, ST, 4:257). "The remedy for such ignorance, of course, is to receive and read the whole Word of God with an open mind under the guidance of the Spirit of God" (McClain, GK, p. 263). "No amount of evidence apart from the work of the Holy Spirit will convince anyone of the significance of the fact that the Bible is God's Word" (Geisler, ST, 1:559). "God not only bears witness to the believer that Christ is the Son of God, but also that the Bible is the Word of God" (ibid., p. 559).

Now, while spiritual regeneration and the teaching ministry of the Holy Spirit, which both come from God, are essential, there are at least three other things that must come from us if we are to understand the Bible. These are faith, effort, and deep reflection.

First, faith. Scripture will only be truly understood as far as it is believed. Chafer says, "As to their theories concerning the origin of things, men are thus divided into two general classes. It is not a division between learned and unlearned men, or between good and bad men; but it is a division between men to whom God is sufficiently real and those to whom He is not sufficiently real to be accepted as the Creator of all things. There is an unalterable law which accounts for the capacity or incapacity of man to grasp the things of God (1 Cor. 2:12, 14; John 3:3). 'By faith we understand' (Heb. 11:3); but the man without faith does not understand, nor can he ever understand until he is saved in Christ. And since the unregenerate cannot understand, God has commissioned the Gospel to be preached to them rather than a ministry of useless controversy” (MBT, 42%).

Second, effort. “Prophecy... no man can make himself conversant with the same without considerable labor and time” (Peters, TTK, 1:170). “While all men can derive benefit from its study, yet few men are really qualified to perform the amount of labor required to bring together prophecy connectedly and systematically. And among the few, nearly all, possessing the requisite talent and ability, are so occupied with other labors that they cannot bestow the time that the subject demands” (ibid., p. 170). “The testimony in behalf of our position is cumulative” (ibid., p. 442). Dr. Fruchtenbaum observes, “...the mysteries of the Kingdom were not given to be understood by unbelievers, but only by believers; even then, it can only be understood by those believers who are willing to hear and understand. This requires discipline of study” (FM, p. 659).

And finally, deep reflection. “It is only the deeply reflective, who receive the Word as spoken, and recognize the predicted fact that there will be but little faith in Christ’s Coming as ‘the Son of Man’ to sit on the throne of His glory, that ponder and accept these things. The author anticipates unmeasured abuse from some quarters for stating his views so plainly, and insisting so strongly upon the future reign of Jesus as ‘the Son of Man,’ just as covenanted. But he anticipates it only from those whose reverence for the Word is outweighed by human authority, prejudice, and bigotry; men of candor, judgment and high honor, however unable to accept of these views, yet seeing how they at least have a basis in the grammatical sense of covenant, prophecy, etc., will treat them with respect, lest unhappily they should be eventually found to have derided God’s own ordering” (Peters, TTK, 3:566).

There are some things that will be helps to us in our endeavor to understand the Bible, one of which is the works of others. It’s been well said that “we stand on the shoulders of giants.” “as Sir I. Newton justly remarked, there is scarcely a prophetic writer but he adds something through his investigations to our stock of knowledge” (Peters, TTK, 3:97) However, we must be cognizant that others’ works will be fallible. “Infallibility does not belong to man, and hence the best of men—as if to encourage us in our own efforts—give us evidences of weakness and imperfection in some things” (ibid., p. 234).

There are also hinderances to our understanding the Bible. These include the piety and charisma of religious leaders, personal “revelations” and cultic arrogance. Regarding religious leaders to whom we may look up, and rightly so, because of their Godly manner of life, “Their piety, usefulness, ability, etc., enlarge the power to mislead in this direction, and materially aids in forming that ‘snare’ and ‘net’ in which both Church and world will be entangled at the Advent” (Peters, TTK, 2:164). Regarding personal “revelations,” “The world is full of... prophetic interpretation... many who deem their special theory or system the child of prayer and an answer from God, when it is the outgrowth of their own speculations and imaginations. Every student of God’s Word will, of course, ask His guidance and the Spirit’s influence, but he knows that such are only available and practical in so far as he accommodates himself to the guidance already given in the Holy Scriptures and to the utterances of the Spirit already recorded therein” (ibid., p. 719). And cultic arrogance, “They take their own mental deductions and imaginings for such as are divinely derived and authorized. Such, too, more or less influenced by their supposed elevation to a plane higher than that enjoyed by others are exceedingly exacting and bigoted, as the history of the past and present attests in various professed churches, parties, and individuals—salvation out of their own standpoint being impossible, or, at least, a matter of the utmost difficulty” (ibid., 3:76).

But the blessings of understanding the Scriptures are well worth the time and effort expended. The diligent Bible student will be blessed with enhanced faith, “...there is in Holy Scripture a ‘hidden harmony’ unknown to those who ignore the scheme of type and prophecy which permeates the whole. This study is a sure antidote to skepticism. No student of prophecy is a sceptic” (Anderson, SOG, p. 211). motivation for ministry, “And I went to the angel, telling him to give me the little book. And he said to me, ‘Take it, and eat it; and it will make your stomach bitter, but in your mouth it will be sweet as honey.’ And I took the little book out of the angel’s hand and ate it, and it was in my mouth sweet as honey; and when I had eaten it, my stomach was made bitter” (Rev. 10:9–10). “The content of the Little Book is prophecy, especially the prophecy of the middle and the second half of the Tribulation. This gives the clue to the meaning of verses 8-10. To almost all people, prophecy is sweet. Prophetic conferences draw larger audiences than virtually any other kind of conference. The voluminous sale of the more sensational prophecy books is another evidence of how ‘sweet’ Bible prophecy has become to so many people. But if ‘sweetness’ is all there is, then it is worth little. Every student of prophecy should have the second experience that John had: bitterness in the stomach. A knowledge of things to come should give every believer a burden for people. For the way of escape from these things is the Rapture, and the requirement to qualify for the Rapture is the acceptance of Messiah now. A true student of prophecy will not simply stop with the knowledge of things to come. Rather, this knowledge will create the strong burden to preach the gospel to others and thereby give them a way of escape” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 239). and enhanced ability to honor God and Christ “We only rightly honor Jesus when we accept of the promises relating to Him as found recorded in the Scriptures” (Peters, TTK, 2:516).

Premises Regarding the Kingdom

The biblical Kingdom of God is the major subject of this book. Throughout the book we will be endeavoring to, among other things, state, examine and hopefully prove our premises regarding the Kingdom. These premises are in relation to the Kingdom’s purpose, people, structure and nature, as well as the Kingdom’s relationships to the Bible, theology, God, man and history.

We suggest that the primary purpose of the Kingdom is to glorify God (hence one reason for the title of this book). Secondary purposes include the executing of justice, the defeat of evil, the righting of all wrongs, the defeat of Satan and his works, the reconciliation of men to God, the salvation of men from sin and death, the judgment of mankind, the restoration of man’s dominion over the earth, the government of the world, the blessing of mankind and the restoration of all creation. We’ll have much to say on each of these purposes in our chapter A Kingdom Needed.

We suggest that the people of the Kingdom consist of three major groups: Jews, Gentiles and the church of God. The apostle Paul divided humanity into exactly these three groups even after the Christian church had been formed. He counseled the Christians at Corinth, “Give no offense either to Jews or to Greeks or to the church of God” (1 Cor. 10:32). Walvoord points out, “In 1 Corinthians 10:32 it is specifically mentioned: ‘Give no occasion of stumbling, either to Jews, or to Greeks, or to the church of God.’ Here is a clear threefold division of humanity into (1) Jews, (2) Gentiles, (3) church of God” (MK, p. 164) and, “The continuance of Israel and Gentiles as such is a strong argument against either one being dispossessed of their own place. Israel is not reduced to the bankruptcy of the Gentiles—to become ‘strangers from the covenants of promises’ (Eph. 2:12), and the distinction between the two groups is maintained on the same sharp lines as before the church was instituted” (ibid., p. 165). Chafer agrees: “The real unity of the Bible is preserved only by those who observe with care the divine program for Gentiles, for Jews, and for Christians in their individual and unchanging continuity” (D, 28%). And Feinberg adds, “There are three divisions of the human race according to the clear testimony of Scripture; namely, the Jew, the Gentile, and the church. There is an eschatological judgment connected with each one of those three groups” (M, p. 360).

The Bible deals at length with two elect peoples, namely, Israel and the church, and one non-elect people, namely, the Gentiles.

The two elect peoples, Israel and the church, have two things in common. They both depend on the Jewish Messiah, Jesus Christ, for salvation and for the fulfillment of their eschatological hopes, and both of their ultimate purposes are to glorify God. “The vital point of contact between them is that they are both dependent upon the Lord Jesus Christ for their complete and final fulfillment” (Feinberg, M, p. 232). “No one, not even the Jew, can make any claim on God, but God will save men only by grace through faith, among both the Jews and among the Gentiles” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 782). “For both national Israel and the spiritual body of Christ, the ultimate purpose is to give glory to God. Indeed, this is the purpose for which everything was created” (Geisler, ST, 4:529) While Covenant theologians see only one people of God in Scripture, there is no logical reason why God can’t have two elect peoples, and in fact, this is what the Bible teaches. “Dispensationalists... do not agree with Ladd’s premise that there can be ‘but one people of God,’ which was Israel then and is now the Church. Dispensationalists agree that the Church is a people of God, but Israel still is as well” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 282). “If the dispensational emphasis on the distinctiveness of the Church seems to result in a ‘dichotomy,’ let it stand as long as it is a result of literal interpretation. There is nothing wrong with God’s having a purpose for Israel and a purpose for the Church and letting these two purposes stand together within His overall plan.” [quoting Ryrie, Dispensationalism Today, pp. 148-150] (ibid., p. 457).

First, let’s consider Israel. For a definition of Israel, we turn to Dr. Arnold Fruchtenbaum, who is himself both a Jew and a Christian. “This is the biblical definition of Jewishness: descendancy from Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob” (I, p. 336). “Biblically speaking, the Jewish people are a nation; a scattered nation but, nevertheless, a nation. They are a nation because they are descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. A simple definition then is: a Jew is any descendent of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob” (ibid., p. 749).

Israel is the subject of most of the Bible. “Most of the Bible in general and the Old Testament in particular deals with Israel” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 248). “Most ‘of the Bible from the early chapters of Genesis to the concluding chapters of Revelation either directly or indirectly relate to the nation Israel’” [quoting Walvoord, Israel in Prophecy, preface] (ibid., p. 496).

“The theme of the Old Testament is Israel past, present and future” (ibid., p. 254). “How important the Jews are in God’s sight is demonstrated in that ‘five-sixths of the Bible bears directly or indirectly upon them’” [quoting Chafer, Systematic Theology, 1:38] (ibid., p. 332). “With respect to primary application, Israel occupies nearly four-fifths of the text of the Bible, while the Church, with respect to primary application, occupies slightly more than one-fifth” [quoting Chafer, Systematic Theology, 4:47] (ibid., p. 422). “Premillennialists merely recognize that if God speaks about a certain people through two-thirds to three-fourths of His revelation and promises them certain blessings, which were noted in the survey of the premillennial view of the kingdom in the Old Testament, that He means for them to have just that much prominence. Millennialists do not find it their duty to instruct the Word as to the eminence it should or should not give to any nation” (Feinberg, M, p. 229).

It is evident from Scripture that Israel is an elect nation. For instance, “But against any of the children of Israel shall not a dog move his tongue, against man or beast: that ye may know how that Jehovah doth make a distinction between the Egyptians and Israel” (Ex. 11:7). “Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be mine own possession from among all peoples: for all the earth is mine: and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and a holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel” (Ex. 19:5-6). “Keep therefore and do them; for this is your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of the peoples, that shall hear all these statutes, and say, Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people. For what great nation is there, that hath a god so nigh unto them, as Jehovah our God is whensoever we call upon him? And what great nation is there, that hath statutes and ordinances so righteous as all this law, which I set before you this day” (Deut. 4:6-8)? “For ask now of the days that are past, which were before thee, since the day that God created man upon the earth, and from the one end of heaven unto the other, whether there hath been any such thing as this great thing is, or hath been heard like it? Did ever a people hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as thou hast heard, and live? Or hath God assayed to go and take him a nation from the midst of another nation, by trials, by signs, and by wonders, and by war, and by a mighty hand, and by an outstretched arm, and by great terrors, according to all that Jehovah your God did for you in Egypt before your eyes” (Deut. 4:32-34)? “For thou art a holy people unto Jehovah thy God, and Jehovah hath chosen thee to be a people for his own possession, above all peoples that are upon the face of the earth” (Deut. 14:2). “and Jehovah hath avouched thee this day to be a people for his own possession, as he hath promised thee, and that thou shouldst keep all his commandments; and to make thee high above all nations that he hath made, in praise, and in name, and in honor; and that thou mayest be a holy people unto Jehovah thy God, as he hath spoken” (Deut. 26:18-19). “He showeth his word unto Jacob, His statutes and his ordinances unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation; And as for his ordinances, they have not known them. Praise ye Jehovah” (Ps. 147:19-20). “Hear this word that Jehovah hath spoken against you, O children of Israel, against the whole family which I brought up out of the land of Egypt, saying, You only have I known of all the families of the earth: therefore I will visit upon you all your iniquities” (Amos 3:1-2). “Quite right, they were broken off for their unbelief, but you stand by your faith. Do not be conceited, but fear; for if God did not spare the natural branches, neither will He spare you” (Rom. 11:20-21). (See also Deuteronomy 10:15; 2 Samuel 7:23-25; Jeremiah 2:2-3 and John 4:22.) “No nation on earth, saving the Jewish, has God chosen, over whom He condescends to act in the capacity of an earthly Ruler” (Peters, TTK, 2:49) “Israel... ‘she is the only nation in Scripture that has ever been nationally elected’” [quoting Feinberg, Israel: At the Center of History & Revelation, pp. 117-126] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 504). It should be noted that the nation of Israel as a whole was elected, not just the elect or believing remnant of Israel. “(it is impossible that when Pharaoh was asked to let my people go, God meant for Pharaoh to let only the elect of Israel go and not the whole nation)... (when Saul was appointed by God to be king over my people, God did not mean only over the elect, but over all Israel, both elect and non-elect)... It is very obvious that expressions such as my people, his people, or thy people, when used of God, speaks of Israel as a nation. The above passages show that even when Israel is in a state of unbelief they are still the people of God. This is obviously not always true in a salvific sense. It is simply the result of their national election” (ibid., p. 851). And, Israel is still an elect nation. “I say then, God has not rejected His people, has He? May it never be! For I too am an Israelite, a descendant of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin. God has not rejected His people whom He foreknew. Or do you not know what the Scripture says in the passage about Elijah, how he pleads with God against Israel” (Rom. 11:1-2)? “The fact that Paul refers to Israel as his people in the present age shows that they are still the chosen people” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 740). “Even in unbelief, they are still His people” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 780). “The unbelief and sinfulness of the nation may, indeed, for a while remove the mercy and favor of God, but it does not remove the election” (Peters, TTK, 1:209) “While God’s people share equally in His salvation personally and spiritually, nonetheless, there will be a special future place for Israel collectively and nationally” (Geisler, ST, 4:436) Israel’s national election is secure and eternal. “And what one nation in the earth is like thy people, even like Israel, whom God went to redeem unto himself for a people, and to make him a name, and to do great things for you, and terrible things for thy land, before thy people, whom thou redeemest to thee out of Egypt, from the nations and their gods? And thou didst establish to thyself thy people Israel to be a people unto thee for ever; and thou, Jehovah, becamest their God. And now, O Jehovah God, the word that thou hast spoken concerning thy servant, and concerning his house, confirm thou it for ever, and do as thou hast spoken” (2 Sam. 7:23-25). We will have more to say on this in our chapter The Covenants of the Kingdom. We should be clear, however, that while Israel is an elect nation, not every individual Jew is elected. “Dispensationalists see the Bible as speaking of two elections. One is a national election which is the election of Israel. While a national election sets the Jewish nation apart from all others, this type of election does not guarantee the salvation of the individual Jew; it only guarantees the survival of the nation as a nation” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 333). “It has always been true that in Jewish history the majority of the nation was in unbelief, and only the remnant believed” (ibid., p. 513).

God revealed Himself in a special way to Israel for a specific purpose. “The reason why God did not reveal Himself directly to other nations as He did to the Jews—a problem, the subject of much thought to various writers—is found in this Theocratic idea. They were utterly unfitted for it, even as the Jews, although having a previous preparation of wonderful manner, evidenced themselves to be unworthy of its permanent retention in the form first presented. It was, therefore, as a preparatory measure, brought out in the Jewish line in order to provide for the Theocratic King, David’s Son, etc.... The Theocratic idea gives as the full explanation of such a position, and this, so objectionable to unbelief, enforces our argument and answers all objections” (Peters, TTK, 3:595). To Israel were given several major privileges. “He showeth his word unto Jacob, His statutes and his ordinances unto Israel” (Ps. 147:19). “What advantage then hath the Jew? or what is the profit of circumcision? Much every way: first of all, that they were intrusted with the oracles of God” (Rom.

3:1-2). “[Rom. 3:1-2] The key advantage... first of all that they were entrusted with the oracles of God. The oracles refer to God’s divine revelation; this was entrusted to the Jew both for recording and preserving it. For that reason, every author of every book of Scripture was a Jew” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 842). “who are Israelites; whose is the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises” (Rom. 9:4) “[Rom. 9:4] This passage lists four facets of Scripture and all belong to Israel. The covenants are the four unconditional covenants. The giving of the law is the one conditional covenant, the Mosaic. The service of God is the whole Levitical system. The promises are the prophetic and messianic promises. These are all facets of Scripture and Scripture is a product of Israel” (ibid.). “They alone produced the Scriptures (except perhaps Luke and Acts). They alone had prophets confirmed by God through miracles. They alone had Moses, the mediating lawgiver with whom God spoke face-to-face. They alone had the covenants. They alone had God, in His glory, dwell personally in their tabernacle and temple. They alone were a theocratic nation under the only God” (Geisler, ST, 4:525). All the prophets, inspired teachers, Jesus and the apostles were Jews. “But when the fulness of the time came, God sent forth His Son, born of a woman, born under the Law” (Gal. 4:4) “I say then, God has not rejected His people, has He? May it never be! For I [Paul] too am an Israelite, a descendant of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin” (Rom. 11:11). Israel brought the Savior to the world (Gal. 4:4). “All the prophets, all the inspired teachers, Jesus and the apostles, are Jews” (Peters, TTK, 1:210) “The Messiah Himself, in His humanity, ‘came from Israel’” [quoting McClain, The Jewish Problem and Its Divine Solution, pp. 9-10] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 505) “God has chosen to reveal Himself through the Jewish people only. That is why every writer (including Luke) had to be a Jew” (ibid., p. 709). Indeed, salvation is of the Jews. Jesus said to the woman at the well, “You worship that which you do not know; we worship that which we know, for salvation is from the Jews” (John 4:22). “Salvation is of the Jews, and not of the Gentiles” (Peters, TTK, 1:212) “Brethren, fellow-Gentiles, it is as true to-day as it ever was, that ‘salvation is of the Jews;’ and if, owing to their fall, we have been brought in by faith, let us exercise such faith in humble acknowledgment of our dependence on a covenanted people, lest we be ‘high-minded’ (as Paul warns us Rom. 11:20), and also be cut off on account of our unbelief and being ‘wise in our own conceits’” (ibid., p. 334). “In John 4:22, Jesus told the Samaritan woman that salvation is from the Jews. This was declared to a woman who was a member of a nation that despised the Jews” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 849).

*Israel is not a type*¹⁶, either of the church or of Jehovah's Witnesses, or of any other group. "The nation is no type, for it composes the real Kingdom of God when the Theocracy is manifested within it; and, hence in view of this relationship, the necessity of incorporation with it. If it were merely typical of another people (viz.: Christian believers in the church), why must such a people also become Abraham's seed" (Peters, TTK, 1:212)?

Israel is the nucleus of the earthly Kingdom. "The Jewish nation is the center of all things related to the earth" (Chafer, ST, 4:313). We'll have more to say on this in our chapters The Theocratic Kingdom and The Millennial Kingdom.

Next, let's consider the church. Because the church has a heavenly citizenship, rather than an earthly one, she is immediately differentiated from Israel. "For our citizenship is in heaven, from which also we eagerly wait for a Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ" (Phil. 3:20) "The Church is foreign to the earth and related to it only as a witnessing people. They are strangers and pilgrims, ambassadors whose citizenship is in heaven" (Chafer, ST, 4:313). Even so, the church is of Jewish origin. "Even unbelief (as e.g. Potter in The Genius of Christianity and Free Religion) declares 'Christianity to be developed Judaism,' basing it upon the fact that the link between Jesus and the Hebrew people is found in 'the Messianic idea,' as given in 'the Jewish prophets and literature'" (Peters, TTK, 1:427). Especially is this true of chiliasm, or premillennialism. "Our doctrine has a Jewish origin, founded upon Jewish covenants, Jewish predictions, Jewish faith, and a Jewish Messiah" (Peters, TTK, 1:457) "We leave an opponent to sum it up, and give the details as follows: The Princeton Review (Ap., 1850, p. 329), in a hostile notice of Rev. Imbrie's sermon, 'The Kingdom of God,' pronounces our view 'the Jewish doctrine; and by Jewish we mean that actually held by the Jews. They taught, 1. That the Messiah was to appear and reign in person gloriously in Jerusalem. 2. That all the Jews were to be gathered in the Holy Land. 3. That the pious dead were to be raised to share the blessings of the Messiah's reign. 4. That the Messiah and His people were to reign over all nations for a thousand years. 5. That at the end of that period Satan was to be loosed, and a great conflict ensue, after which were to come the general resurrection and final judgment. This theory was by many Christians, during the second and third centuries [observe, he omits the first, as if none existed then, over against the positive testimony in our favor], adopted bodily. The only difference was, that what the Jews expected to occur at the first coming, these Christians anticipated at the Second Advent of the Messiah” (ibid., p. 458). We’ll have more to say regarding the church’s identity, purpose and destiny in our chapter The Mystery Kingdom (The Church).

While the Bible deals with two elect peoples, Israel and the church, it also deals with one non-elect people, the Gentiles. Gentiles are all non-Israelites. “A Gentile is simply anyone who is not a descendant of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. In short, a Gentile is anyone who is not a Jew” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 750). In the Bible, Gentiles, even Gentile converts to Judaism, are never called Jews or Israel. “Acceptance of Judaism by a Gentile does not make him a Jew, but a proselyte” (ibid., p. 751). “Gentile converts to Judaism are never given the title of Jew. The Jews are those born that way. The proselytes are Gentile converts to Judaism” (ibid.). But interestingly, Gentiles are only mentioned in (again, thoroughly Jewish) Scripture as they relate to Israel. “The Bible concerns itself with the Gentiles only as they come in contact with Israel” (ibid., p. 333). We’ll have more to say about the Gentiles in the Times of the Gentiles section of our chapter Decline and Fall of the Theocratic Kingdom, and also in our chapter The Mystery Kingdom (the Church).

Confusing any of these three groups, Israel, the Gentiles and the church, confuses the nature and characteristics of the Kingdom. “Scripture is unintelligible until one can distinguish clearly between God’s program for his earthly people Israel and that for the church” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 529). We’ll have more to say on this in our chapter The Mystery Kingdom (The Church).

Now, concerning the structure of the kingdom, we suggest that the structure of the Kingdom is complex, that it has both temporal and spiritual aspects, that it has five major facets, and that it is at its nucleus a Jewish theocracy.

First, the Kingdom is complex. Like the cosmos, nature, and DNA, the Kingdom is complex yet ordered, having an analogically high level of specified complexity.

Second, the Kingdom has both temporal and spiritual dimensions. The temporal dimensions of the Kingdom pertain to its earthly aspects, particularly as they relate to Israel. “The Kingdom of covenant is a visible, outward Theocratic Kingdom, manifested here on earth, identified with a certain people, promised in a definite manner, and ruled over by ‘the man ordained’” (Peters, TTK, 1:556). “The points of emphasis Israelology would make in Eschatology would include the following: Israel was to become a state sometime before the Tribulation; the Great Tribulation begins with the signing of the seven-year covenant between Israel and the Antichrist;

the Tribulation primarily relates to Israel, secondarily to the Gentiles, and not at all to the Church; the 144,000 are literally Jews; the Woman of Revelation 12 is Israel; the pre-condition to the second coming is Israel's national salvation; there will be a national salvation of Israel; there will be a national restoration of Israel; a major purpose of the Messianic Kingdom is to fulfill literally the unfulfilled elements of the unconditional Jewish covenants; and, Israel's distinct identity will continue for all eternity" (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 856). We'll have more to say on the temporal dimensions of the Kingdom in the The Theocratic or Mediatorial Kingdom and The Messianic or Millennial Kingdom sections of our chapter Five Facets of the Kingdom. The spiritual dimensions of the Kingdom encompass both its earthly and its heavenly aspects. "Dispensationalists... also believe in the Spiritual Kingdom and that all 'believers in every age are part of this spiritual kingdom'" [quoting Charles C. Ryrie, Dispensationalism Today, pp. 170-173] (ibid., p. 389). We'll have more to say on the spiritual dimensions of the Kingdom in the The Spiritual Kingdom section of our chapter Five Facets of the Kingdom. The complete Kingdom encompasses both temporal and spiritual dimensions. "The Theocratic ordering necessarily embraces both the highest temporal and spiritual blessings to which Redemption, in its fullest, widest reach, extends" (Peters, TTK, 1:384). "The Mediatorial Kingdom of the prophets is one Kingdom, not two kingdoms. This one Kingdom has various aspects, as we shall see, but these aspects must not be pluralized into different kingdoms, the one spiritual and the other earthly.... in their predictions of a future Mediatorial Kingdom of God, which is the main burden of their message, they contemplate but one indivisible Kingdom" (McClain, GK, p. 146).

Third, the Kingdom has five primary facets. "Kingdom's theological meaning includes several dimensions, including God's overall reign in the universe, His present spiritual reign in His people, and His future messianic reign on earth" (Geisler, ST, 4:460). These facets include The Universal or Eternal Kingdom, The Spiritual Kingdom, The Theocratic Kingdom, The Messianic or Millennial Kingdom and The Mystery Kingdom. We'll explore these five facets in detail in our chapter Five Facets of the Kingdom.

Fourth, at its core, the Kingdom is a Jewish theocracy. "This Kingdom is then essentially a Jewish Kingdom. This follows from the Abrahamic, Sinaitic, and Davidic Covenants; this is uniformly taught by the Prophets in associating and identifying the Kingdom with the nationality of the Jews; this again is confirmed by the election of the Jewish nation, the oneness of the Kingdom, the preaching of John, Jesus, and the disciples, the renewed covenant, the offer of the Kingdom, the engrafting of Gentiles, the rejection of the nation only until the times of the Gentiles are ended, the postponement of the Kingdom, etc. The whole tenor and analogy of Scripture sustain this position; and it is but a weak, unsatisfactory, inconsistent procedure to deny what is so plainly the burden of Holy Writ” (Peters, TTK, 1:424). “Let the reader consider the precise promises of the Jewish covenants and the Jewish predictions, all uniting in a glorious Messianic Kingdom under the reign of a personal Son of David on a restored Theocratic throne with a Jewish supremacy, overthrow of enemies, irresistible power, vast dominion, etc., and it is utterly impossible, without a total perversion of the covenants and prophecies, to separate the Jewish cast from Christianity which is designed to prepare ‘heirs’ to inherit these promises and this Kingdom with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. It is folly to ignore, or to deny, this Jewish relationship, and in place of it attempt to make out a fulfillment of these things in the past history of a fighting, struggling Church” (ibid., p. 426). It is the Kingdom of a literal hermeneutic (see our next chapter Biblical Hermeneutics); it is the Kingdom needed (see our chapter A Kingdom Needed); it is the Kingdom covenanted (see our chapter Covenants of the Kingdom); it is the Kingdom prophesied (see our chapter The Kingdom in Hebrew Prophecy); it was the Kingdom expected by the first-century Jews (see our chapter Expectation of the Kingdom); it was the Kingdom announced by John the Baptist, Jesus, the 12, and the 70 (see our chapter Announcement and Offer of the Kingdom); it was the Kingdom reaffirmed by Jesus and the apostles (see our chapter Reaffirmation of the Kingdom); it was the Kingdom of the earliest church history (see our previous chapter The Kingdom in Church History); it is the Kingdom to be inaugurated at Christ’s Second Coming (see our chapter The Second Coming of the King); it is the Kingdom of perfect earthly government (see our chapter The Millennial Kingdom); and it is the Kingdom that will never pass away (see our chapter The Eternal Order).

Concerning the nature of the Kingdom, we suggest that the Kingdom is, among many other things (see, for instance, our chapter The Millennial Kingdom), both magnificent and glorious.

The very idea of the Kingdom is magnificent. “Take the highest thoughts of the sages of Asia, Greece and Rome; the loftiest conceptions of the philosophers of the world, and they pale before the brightness and splendor of the Theocratic conception. There is nothing so magnificent to be found outside of the Bible” (Peters, TTK, 3:477).

And fundamentally, the Kingdom is glorious. “And blessed be his glorious name for ever; And let the whole earth be filled with his glory. Amen, and Amen” (Ps. 72:19). “All thy works shall give thanks unto thee, O Jehovah; And thy saints shall bless thee. They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, And talk of thy power; To make known to the sons of men his mighty acts, And the glory of the majesty of his kingdom” (Ps. 145:10-12). “For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of Jehovah, as the waters cover the sea” (Hab. 2:14). “And Jesus said to them, ‘Truly I say to you, that you who have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man will sit on His glorious throne, you also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel” (Matt. 19:28). “and then the sign of the Son of Man will appear in the sky, and then all the tribes of the earth will mourn, and they will see the SON OF MAN COMING ON THE CLOUDS OF THE SKY with power and great glory” (Matt. 24:30). “But when the Son of Man comes in His glory, and all the angels with Him, then He will sit on His glorious throne” (Matt. 25:31). “so that you may walk in a manner worthy of the God who calls you into His own kingdom and glory” (1 Thes. 2:12). From passages such as these we can be assured that fulfillment of God’s prophetic word will be neither invisible, difficult to discern nor boring. It will be spectacular! For more on the glory of the Kingdom, see our chapters The Second Coming of the King, The Millennial Kingdom and The Eternal Order.

Now that we’ve taken a brief look at the Kingdom’s purpose, people, structure and nature, we’ll take a brief look at the Kingdom’s relationships to the Bible, theology, God, man and history.

First, we’ll consider the Kingdom’s relationships to the Bible.

The Kingdom of God is the major theme of the Bible. The Kingdom is the overarching theme of Scripture. We submit that without a correct understanding of the Kingdom, the Bible itself cannot be correctly understood. “The Kingdom of God is, in a certain and important sense, the grand central theme of all Holy Scripture” (McClain, GK, p. 4). “As Dr. Bright [John Bright, The Kingdom of God, pp. 7, 197] has correctly observed, ‘The concept of the Kingdom of God involves, in a real sense, the total message of the Bible;’ and, ‘Old Testament and New Testament thus stand together as the two acts of a single drama. Act I points to its conclusion in Act II, and without it the play is an incomplete, unsatisfying thing. But Act II must be read in the light of Act I, else its meaning will be missed. For the play is organically one. The Bible is one book. Had we to give that book a title, we might with justice call it “The Book of the Coming Kingdom of God.” That is, indeed, its central theme everywhere” (ibid., p. 5). “It is not too much to say that millennialism is a determining factor in Biblical interpretation of comparable importance to the doctrines of verbal inspiration, the deity of Christ, substitutionary atonement, and bodily resurrection... It is of course true that to an individual a denial of the deity of Christ is more momentous and far-reaching than denial of premillennialism, but, as far as a system of interpretation is concerned, both are vital” (Walvoord, MK, p. 16). “...the Kingdom the main, leading idea which includes all the rest” (Peters, TTK, 2:505).

The Kingdom is the major theme of Old Testament prophecy. “In a very real sense, all Messianic prophecy in the Old Testament is Kingdom prophecy. Even those predictions which deal with Messiah’s humiliation and sufferings cannot be separated from the context of regal glory. As Archibald M’Caig has rightfully observed concerning the great prophetic period in Old Testament history, “The prophecies all more or less have a regal tint, and the coming one is pre-eminently the coming king” [quoting Archibald M’Caig, ‘Christ as King,’ I.S.B.E., Vol. III, p. 1802] (McClain, GK, p. 145).

The Kingdom is consistent in both the Old and New Testaments. “The Old and New Testaments describe the same Kingdom—the same Theocratic arrangement under David’s Son. All the writers, separated by centuries, independent of each other, residing in various countries but still under the influence of the same Spirit, locate this Kingdom in the future, link it with the Sec. Advent, and agree in portraying its distinguishing peculiarities and blessings. In a comparison of their writings, entering even into details, there is no contradiction between them... The disagreement is found in the interpreters and not in the writers of the Bible; for the latter all start from the same point, holding up the same covenant as an everlasting one under which we receive the promises, and all declare the same provisionary and preparatory process, and all insist upon the same literal fulfillment. Harmony of design, unity of purpose is seen throughout their writings, but only so long—as the infidel even has forcibly stated and proven—as the plain grammatical sense is retained. Forsake this sense, and then, notwithstanding all the protests to the contrary, this harmony is violated, this unity is destroyed to the confirmation of unbelief” (Peters, TTK, 3:222).

The Kingdom unifies all of Scripture. “the Kingdom... binds the whole from Genesis to Revelation into one connected chain” (Peters, TTK, 3:467). “The reader is requested to notice the wonderful harmony of our doctrine. Although many things are requisite to give it completeness, every link in the chain of connection is forthcoming and expressed in a plain, easily understood, grammatical sense—the strongest proof that can be given to substantiate a doctrine. Aside from the details (in which we may, more or less, mingle error—being human) the grand outlines of the system evidence this harmony of teaching. It is a great gratification, a high comfort, to find such unity between the curse and redemption, the covenants and their realistic fulfillment” (ibid., p. 588). “For the first time it seems to be commonly recognized that premillennial theology has become a system of theology, not an alternate view of eschatology which is unrelated to theology as a whole” (Walvoord, MK, p. 15).

The Kingdom illuminates all of Scripture. “In brief, it is the testimony of every one who has given this subject any careful study, that it is such ‘a solvent of difficulties’ that its application has given great joy of heart and delighted surprise in discovering the import of passages which otherwise proved either to be unsatisfactory or dark” (Peters, TTK, 3:405). “Indeed, there is scarcely a point of importance and interest to which the doctrine of the Kingdom does not add force” (ibid., p. 506).

The Kingdom is not missing any of its parts in the Scriptures. “It is remarkable that for the complete success of our argument not one link, essential to its perfection, is missing in the Scriptures” (Peters, TTK, 3:181).

However, the entire Kingdom program is not systematized in any one biblical passage. All of the Bible is needed for a complete picture. “There is no systematic statement of the doctrine of the Kingdom in the Bible. It is given in brief covenants, in separate prophecies, in detached portions, in fragments, in hints, in promises, in concise outlines, and to bring all these together in their regular order much labor is requisite. Without diligent comparison, no progress can be made” (Peters, TTK, 1:152).

First, we must state clearly that we believe that having a correct view of the Kingdom is not a salvation issue. We believe, as do most conservative Christians, in salvation by grace through faith in Jesus alone, plus nothing. Indeed, one can be saved without holding to our doctrine of the Kingdom. In fact, we doubt that many, if any persons have ever had entirely correct, let alone complete views of the Kingdom at the moment of their regeneration (salvation). Neither do we believe that acquiring our view of the Kingdom is necessary for maintaining one’s salvation. It is Jesus who keeps us “until that day” (Jude 24, 2 Tim. 1:12). “The redeeming feature in some, however, is, that they make their Hope (delusive as it may be in the manner and place of realization) centre in Christ, and thus honoring Christ with us, they are still accounted worthy to experience the hope of the promise made to the Fathers” (Peters, TTK, 3:311). We believe this is so even though those not holding to our view of the Kingdom may reject our view, and even ridicule us for holding it. “Alas! So embedded is this modified Hope in the affections of many, that if we point to ‘the One Hope,’ sustained by Scripture and Tradition, and held by men whose praises are in the churches, it is pronounced ‘foolishness,’ or ‘heresy,’ or ‘a return to carnal Jewish notions,’ etc.” (ibid.). Rather than being a doctrine necessary of acceptance for salvation, this Kingdom will be, instead, when fully executed, whether believed or not, salvation actually completed. We believe anyone truly saved will find their salvation ultimately completed in this Kingdom. While many, and likely most believers are saved without (yet) correctly envisioning the structure of the Kingdom, we nonetheless rejoice with them in their salvation, and encourage them now to consider with us how their salvation will be accomplished in time, as part of the outworking of God’s overall Plan. “The consideration of personal salvation, however precious, should not hinder a due view and appreciation of the Divine Purpose in Redemption as exhibited in this Theocratic ordering. This would be religious selfishness, leaving out the most glorious results” (ibid., p. 597).

But while we’re not saved by or through our understanding of the Kingdom, it is true that our view of the Kingdom does color all our doctrine. “Any failure to understand the Kingdom as set forth in Biblical revelation, with its rich variety and magnificence of design, may actually blur the vision of good men to other matters of high theological importance to Christian faith. We may wonder sometimes at Luther’s open and determined attitude toward the Book of Revelation, as he bluntly said, ‘Even if it were a blessed thing to believe what is contained in it, no man knows what that is.’ But Olshausen [H. Olshausen, Biblical Commentary on the New Testament, p. cxv] puts his finger unerringly on the great Reformer’s blind spot when he remarks that the final book of the Bible was obscure to Luther simply because ‘he could not thoroughly apprehend the doctrine of God’s Kingdom on earth, which is exhibited in the Revelation, and forms the proper center of everything contained in it.’ ...Luther in his hasty exclusion of the Apocalypse from the canon of fully inspired Scripture” (McClain, GK, p. 6)

We maintain that this doctrine of the Kingdom needs restoration in our theology. “It is high time for reverent, intelligent piety to see this abuse of the Word, and aid in restoring its proper and faith-inspiring use” (Peters, TTK, 1:351). “...recalling the Church, if she heed the call, to the Primitive belief, before the catastrophe comes” (ibid., 3:132).

And, we are heartened that, at least to some extent, the correct concept of the Kingdom is being revived in our day. This can be seen by the recent popularity of television programs having to do with “last days” issues, on-line prophecy web sites, prophecy conferences, etc. “As the prophetic periods are drawing to their close and the time is rapidly approaching for the astounding events preceding and accompanying the Advent of the mighty King, it is reasonable that God should revive in His believing people the ancient faith to serve both as a source of warning and encouragement” (Peters, TTK, 3:199).

Next we'll consider the Kingdom's relationships to God.

First, we should recognize that the Kingdom of God belongs to God. God speaks of the future revived Davidic kingdom as “my kingdom” (1 Chron. 17:11-14). Jesus taught His disciples to pray to the Father, “Your Kingdom come” (Matt. 6:10).

That being the case, the Kingdom must be defined by God, not by man. We should not be “...placing ourselves in the place of judges respecting the expediency of the divine purposes, and the manner in which they should be carried out, which is always a dangerous procedure. We dare not confine God's purposes to one dispensation unless it is specifically stated; we must follow the purpose as it is unfolded and declared, observing how and when it is to be realized” (Peters, TTK, 3:211). “Multitudes, who are no professed unbelievers, reject the plain, contained grammatical sense, and insist upon giving a sense which shall harmonize with their own ideas of the fitness of things, thus paving the way for unbelieving license, forging the weapons for unbelief, and preventing the use of a consistent, manly Apologetics” (ibid., p. 219).

The Kingdom is God's idea, not man's. “A Theocracy, as the Bible describes, is the grand conception of inspiration. It belongs wholly and essentially to the divine, being a revelation of the Divine Purpose, and strikingly exhibiting the divine in all the preparatory stages and measures until the culmination, when the divine, connected with humanity, appears in overwhelming grandeur and glory. We may well, therefore, dismiss the vain efforts to trace the biblical idea to Oriental religions, to India, Egypt, etc., seeing that nothing approaching such a consecutively developed Theocratic Plan is to be found anywhere outside of the Bible. It is God's idea, not man's; it is God's work and not man's; to Him we gratefully and joyfully attribute all honor and praise” (Peters, TTK, 3:592).

If we are to apprehend the Kingdom, then, it must be communicated to us by God. “The Creator, and not the creature, must inform us what are the ends contemplated by an Infinite Mind” (Peters, TTK, 1:87).

The Kingdom is the responsibility of God, not man. “Reason asserts that the responsibility for the issues of His creation must, in the end, rest upon the Creator” (Chafer ST, 1:237).

Its program is to be executed by God, not man. “Then the nations that are left round about you shall know that I, Jehovah, have builded the ruined places, and planted that which was desolate: I, Jehovah, have spoken it, and I will do it” (Ezek. 36:36). “The Providence of God, both general and particular, is sufficiently evidenced in the call of Abraham; the raising up of the Jewish nation; the distinction made between Esau and Jacob; the history of Joseph; the removal from Egypt; the establishment of a Theocratic Kingdom; the varied transactions of that Kingdom; the care of good and punishment of wicked kings; the raising up of prophets; the removal of the Theocracy; the provisions made for its re-establishment; the rejection of the nation; the call of the Gentiles; the destruction of Jerusalem, and in hundreds of particulars; so much so that the student of the Theocratic Plan is constantly impressed with it, and feels it to be a living reality in which he can evermore trustingly confide. Every step in the progress of events, every unfolding of time, every reference to the Theocratic ordering, every provision made for the future Messianic Kingdom teaches him that underlying all, and having control over all, is a Divine Providence which has occupied itself with the high and the low, the lofty and the minute, the nation and the individual, the rich and the poor, the happy and the suffering, the pious and the wicked—all tending toward the one great goal in the future” (Peters, TTK, 3:341).

It is also to be justified by God, not man. It is not our place to be “...men thus presuming to set themselves up as the judges respecting what it is right and proper for Jesus to do” (Peters, TTK, 3:552).

Prophecy concerning the Kingdom will be fulfilled, not naturally, but supernaturally. “Those additions are so great in their nature, so striking in their characteristics, so manifesting the interference of the Supernatural, that no one can possibly mistake when this Kingdom is restored” (Peters, TTK, 1:248). “...hopes which must forever remain unrealized, unless a Saviour who can control nature and nature’s laws is accepted” (ibid., 3:289).

We can rest assured that Jehovah and His Kingdom will be vindicated in due time. “And I will sanctify my great name, which hath been profaned among the nations, which ye have profaned in the midst of them; and the nations shall know that I am Jehovah, saith the Lord Jehovah, when I shall be sanctified in you before their eyes” (Ezek. 36:23). “When regarding the history of this doctrine, how it has been treated; how it has been perverted; how it has been held in bigotry; how believers in it are held apart by incorporated erroneous doctrines; how bitterness, malice, and persecution have arisen concerning it; how on the one hand it is hated and abused, and on the other loved and cherished, we are sad at heart, and feel to say, ‘How long, O Lord.’ Its history impresses the view that we need our infallible Head, Jesus, to come, so that He Himself may vindicate His own truth, verify His own promises, and bring His brethren into the promised unity. How, then, men will rejoice; how, then, men will be ashamed” (Peters, TTK, 3:274). “Some (Froude’s Short Studies, p. 98) lament with Father Newman that “God’s control over the world is so indirect and His action so obscure;” others have their faith sorely tried by past and existing providences, but all this will be rectified when the Theocracy appears” (ibid., p. 590).

We are thankful that the outworking of this Plan has been graciously foretold to us by God. “...it being ever God’s method to give a foreview of all His great purposes and undertakings” (Chafer, KHP, 68%).

Next, we’ll look at the Kingdom’s relationships to Man.

In relation to people in general, the Kingdom is universal. We will all find ourselves in relation to the Kingdom one way or another.

In regard to its apprehension, the Kingdom cannot be seen by many. Most people are entirely blind to the future of this world, and it is disheartening to this writer that even so few Christians have caught a vivid vision of the Kingdom. In the main they are either just not interested or are “...blinded to the truth by the generally adopted spiritualizing system of interpretation” (Peters, TTK, 2:205). It is ignored by many. Peters points out “...the absurdity of totally ignoring the subject, as if it were a species of exaggerated human prediction” (TTK, 2:150). Even many pastors, “Men, whose special business it is to proclaim the Word of God, are found in large numbers, who have never made the prophecies a careful and serious study” (ibid., 3:200). This is largely due to the fact that “Most theological seminaries view the millennium as an unfruitful area for study and tend to suspend judgment on any detailed exegesis of related Scriptural passages” (Walvoord, MK, p. 14). It is also unfortunately true that “...in the minds of many scholars the matter is settled before it is fairly examined” (ibid., p. 111). The Kingdom is also confusing to many, and it is therefore not discussed as much as it otherwise would be. “We can hardly expect those who admittedly are bewildered and confused to be able to debate the issues” (Walvoord, MK, p. 111) Therefore, the Kingdom is misunderstood by many. “Though the kingdom occupies so large a place in the Sacred Text, the theme of the kingdom has been more misunderstood and its terminology more misapplied than any other one subject in the Bible” (Chafer, ST, 5:315). “Unbelief has a just right to object to the vast number of interpretations foisted upon the Word” (Peters, TTK, 3:296)

In regard to its reception, however, this doctrine of the Kingdom can be embraced by those with open minds. “Bh. Hopkins (Winthrop’s Letters, p. 6) declares that his opinions have undergone ‘a thorough revolution,’ and adds, ‘And I cannot but think that any man whose mind is ready to submit, with the humility of a child-like faith, to the only infallible teacher—the Word of God—must yield, even at the sacrifice of his previous prejudices, to the vast amount of testimony which the Scriptures furnish to that important doctrine, the personal Advent, and reign upon the regenerated earth, of the glorious Redeemer,’ etc. The honored friend to whom this work is dedicated, informed me years ago how he also changed his views, being impelled to it by Scripture testimony... hope of the ultimate salvation of the world was in the direct interposition of God... the Sec. Advent... since he had adopted such ideas, time and study had only strengthened them” (Peters, TTK, 3:179).

However, this doctrine of the Kingdom is often met with rejection. It is a tender subject to many. “The early belief is a tender subject to many, seeing that they cannot reconcile its existence and prevalence with their modern notions” (Peters, TTK, 1:489). It is undervalued by many. “It is strange that but few Confessions make the kingdom a distinctive article of faith” (Peters, TTK, 1:128) “It is sad to see the frailty and perversity of human wisdom in the things of God. The Jews believed in this restored Davidic throne and Kingdom, but overlooked the foretold sufferings, death, etc. of the Messiah; the Gentiles acknowledge the sufferings and death, but ignore the Davidic throne and Kingdom, the promises literally understood. The Theocratic-Davidic inheritance of Jesus is but rarely mentioned; it is scarcely ever heard in preaching or praying; it is deemed of so little importance that Christian teaching hardly refers to it; and when reference to it is made, it sounds a note of discord in prevailing systems of theology. Let us ponder: ought promises so solemnly given, so constantly presented, so literally reiterated, so precious confirmed, to be passed by in neglect, and even in silence? Ought they to become the objects of ridicule and reproach? No! To ignore them, or to mock them, is indicative of serious doctrinal defect” (ibid., p. 350). It is willfully ignored and/or rejected by many. “God has not left Himself without witness; and it is only by persistently closing our eyes to existing facts, prophesied thousands of years ago, that we can escape God’s manifested interest in sustaining our faith. To deny all this requires about as much assurance and love of singularity as it did in the philosophers who, against their senses and laws of being, denied the existence of an external world” (Peters, TTK, 2:150). “...can ignorance be pleaded, when they fully admit that the grammatical sense indeed teaches it, but claim that another (spiritual) sense is intended” (ibid., p. 350). “Spiritualism, mysticism, materialism, etc., close their eyes to both the Plan and the historical attestation, and such a mode of procedure, coming from cultivated minds, indicates a certain ‘willingness’ to engage in this one-sided consideration” (ibid., 3:436). It is unpalatable to many, especially to those who would appropriate to themselves the promises given to Israel. “...this doctrine. It certainly is unpalatable to all who strive to appropriate to themselves what lawfully belongs to others” (Peters, TTK, 2:98). It is simply not wanted by many. “But these enemies of mine, who did not want me to reign over them, bring them here and slay them in my presence” (Luke 19:27). “The sphere of man’s thought is limited to the circle in which his own will seems to him to be supreme” (Chafer, MBT, 35%). “The world will deify any leader who will give to the people enough ‘bread and circuses,’ while making no high moral and spiritual demands upon them. But they will reject the true God if He asks them to receive what they do not want” (McClain, GK, p. 383). It is denied by many. “The Jews misapprehended how and when the Kingdom was to be brought in, but it is left to Gentiles—also professing faith in the Scriptures not only in their ‘high-mindedness’ to misconceive the how and when, but to deny the Kingdom itself” (Peters, TTK, 3:230). And, it is rejected by many. “We are classed with heretics, fanatics, etc. But this is precisely the state of things that we ought to expect to find as the end draws nigh. If the entire Church would receive our view, if it were the great popular doctrine, all recognizing it as scriptural, etc., then indeed we might doubt its truthfulness. For one of the evidences that the world will not be converted before the Advent, is the predicted sign that the Church, under the influence of delusive hope (just such an one as the Whittier theory presents) will be in a state of fancied security and prosperity not looking for the Advent of Christ” (Peters, TTK, 3:199). “Relying upon the far-seeing and sure knowledge of the future as contained in this Book, it is certain that this return to the primitive faith will be accepted by the few; and that the protestations of these, however logically and forcibly presented, will utterly fail—for reasons previously given—to stem the torrent of unbelief which now receives its already swollen tributaries from all sides... every great providential movement in the progressive advancement of the Divine Purpose was met by a corresponding condition of unbelief” (ibid., p. 297).

Sometimes this rejection is pronounced. This doctrine of the Kingdom is often ridiculed. “Know this first of all, that in the last days mockers will come with their mocking, following after their own lusts, and saying, ‘Where is the promise of His coming?’ For ever since the fathers fell asleep, all continues just as it was from the beginning of creation” (2 Pet. 3:3-4). These mockers sometimes even come from within the church itself. “Individuals truly have peace with God in believing, but if faithful do not find it with their fellow-man, the world, or even in a great extent in the church itself” (Peters, TTK, 1:618). “As the period arrives for the Advent, unbelief in it shall characterize the Church and world. Hence, he expects its Pre-Mill. nature to be opposed and rejected; the passages which teach it to be glossed over with other meanings; the objects intended by it to be denied; the early Church doctrine to be derided as suited for children, and a soporific, worldly-wise interpretation to become generally prevalent. Indeed, to place the Church and world in the posture assigned to it just previous to the Advent, requires a display of learning, theology, philosophy, spiritual improvement, etc., in order to beat down the warnings of the Word and of a long line of faithful witnesses to the truth” (ibid., 2:163). “Let the student reflect: if the Lord Jehovah did not consider it derogatory to His honor and glory to act (as a multitude of able writers admit) in the capacity of an earthly Ruler under the initiatory form of the Theocracy, how then can it be derogatory to the honor and glory of the Son of Man, David’s Son, to come and act in a like capacity? This in itself should cause those persons, who slightly and dishonorably (to Christ) speak of this future reign of Jesus on earth (as advocated by us), to be careful lest they be found treating with disrespect and contempt the most astonishing, desirable, and glorious of God’s provisions for man’s welfare and the happiness of the world, and which immeasurably redounds to God’s praise and glory” (ibid., 3:452). This doctrine is also sometimes scorned. “Even to-day, when men arise and point us to the prophetic Word with warnings of danger, persecution, judgment, and bloodshed still in the future, and per adventure not very distant, multitudes arise in antagonism, and brand them as Jeremiah was branded, and would, if they dared, proceed to severer measures” (Peters, TTK, 3:214). “Multitudes who cannot be reached by an argument appealing to reason, will permit themselves to be influenced by invectives” (ibid., p. 231). And, at times, it is even persecuted. “When it cannot reach its victim personally, it will at least unchurch him, and consign him to perdition. It will do this under the cloak of superior sanctity, under the plea of greater knowledge and holiness. If it can do no more, it will—instead of meeting the arguments of an opponent—blacken character by an array of epithets that a bigot’s heart and mind can only concoct” (Peters, TTK, 3:276) (I experienced this variety of persecution when I left the Jehovah’s Witnesses.)

One reason for people’s rejection of this doctrine of the Kingdom is that it dashes human pride. Peters comments, “No matter what the covenants say, what the prophets describe, what the disciples preached, what the early Church believed, these live in a new era of enlightenment, and have nothing to do with ‘the old paths.’... The reflection follows: when we behold all those theories and systems of faith—all hostile to our doctrine—with numerous, learned, powerful, adherents, and these actuated by party attachments and associated inclinations and regard, it seems impracticable to hope for any large additions to our number... in all probability, the secret reason for rejecting faith in our doctrine lies with some in dislike to the humbling features of the doctrine, viz., that it utterly discards all human schemes and plans for ‘the regeneration’ of society and the world. This Kingdom that we teach, being God’s own Theocratic arrangement for the government of the world, repudiates all human organizations; it will completely set them aside and put in place of them the Theocracy under Jesus Christ and His associated Ruler. This takes such a low estimate of things that men prize so highly; this abases what so many now pride themselves in; this so degrades the boasted advancement and development of the race; this so debases the pet theories, hierarchical tendencies, claims of superiority, etc., advanced by multitudes—that it is too humiliating to their own dignity and the loftiness of humanity to accept of it. A doctrine which threatens the perpetuity of institutions, organizations, etc.—which teaches that they are all imperfect, and must give place to a divine revelation of the Theocracy, is far from being acceptable to powerful bodies, to partisan adherents, to wealthy corporations, to laborers for the conversion of the world, to ecclesiastical rulers, etc. The Kingdom requires a radical change, resurrection and glorification in its inheritors, a complete conversion and revolution of faith and practice in the Jewish nation, and an entire submission and consecration of the Gentiles to its dominion... Men, instead of studying and appreciating God’s plan for ‘regeneration’ and ‘restitution,’ hug their own delusive plans and existing forms for the salvation of the race and world” (TTK, 3:237).

To seekers of truth, the Kingdom should at least be interesting. Walvoord points out, “Prophetic Bible conferences are inevitably premillennial in their doctrine. Neither amillennialism nor postmillennialism ever aroused much interest in prophecy” (MK, p. 125). To these the Kingdom should also be desirable. “It is singular, and certainly worthy of reflection, that God’s Plan of Government falls within the line of man’s wishes, if we will only receive the covenants, prophets and apostles in their true grammatical sense” (Peters, TTK, 3:550). “Who, when viewing the sad history of the nations of the earth (a long, dreary catalogue of jealousies, wars, bloodshed, revolutions, etc.), and regarding the fearful condition and troubles still future (as delineated by the Spirit of God), does not earnestly desire the speedy Coming of this Theocracy” (ibid., p. 589). We point out to these seekers that this Kingdom is also reasonable. “In relation to the Kingdom itself and the Advent which is to introduce it, reason, if it desires to know something of the expediency and reasonableness of the establishment of such a Kingdom under David's Son, will fall back upon the preliminarily given Theocracy, study its nature, design, connections, and then regard the utterances of the Prophets in the light of the Divine Purpose previously indicated and determined. Prophecy thus finds itself confirmed by a solid foundation of noteworthy facts, which calls for unbounded faith in the things still future. Past and present fulfillment, in behalf of a divinely ordained Plan insures future fulfillment in the interest of the same purpose, and hence the extraordinary consistency (now by many called 'weakness') of the early Church in its belief based upon a union of reason and faith, of knowledge and trust" (ibid., p. 221). "Such a view indeed leaves much for faith, seeing that it places much in the future; but our position ought to be that of faith, not blind, unreasoning faith, but of faith suggested and sustained by the accumulated evidences of the Messiahship of Jesus" (ibid., p. 358). "...in considering the intelligent plan of the Creator—an intelligence existing outside of us, yet which, when established by facts, appeals to reason and can be comprehended as reasonable by the intelligence within us" (ibid., p. 497). Indeed, just such a Kingdom has been envisioned by the world's deepest thinkers. "Plato's (Seiss's Last Times, p. 64) declaration will come to pass: 'In the end, lest the world should be plunged into an eternal abyss of confusion, God, the author of the primitive order, will appear again, and resume the reins of empire; then He will change, embellish, and restore the whole frame of nature, and put an end to decay of age, sickness, and death'" (ibid., p. 590).

To believers, this doctrine of the Kingdom defines what we should be eagerly anticipating. "In comparison with the Second Advent and its glorious consequences, its grand results, death sinks into insignificance. Nothing, so far as the destiny of man or of the world is concerned, can be compared to it. The First Advent brings the saving grace, but the Second perfects it; the First brought the earnest of Redemption in humiliation, the Second completes it in glory. Hence the intentional scope and profound interest given to it in the New Test., lest (as foreseen) men and believers should give it its modern secondary position" (Peters, TTK, 3:312). To believers, it should also be appreciated. "The Scriptures assume to teach that it is a hope so well grounded and so clearly expressed, that we can fully appreciate it" (ibid.). And, it should be eagerly anticipated. "Whatever others may do, we dare not accept of this transmutation introduced by uninspired men (who gave evidence to much weakness) and which was firmly established in the Church by the rise and progress of the Papacy. Besides this, the sanctifying (Heb. 3:6; 1 John 3:2, 3; 1 Pet. 1:13, etc.) influence of this Hope, when appreciated, as exemplified in Jewish history and in the Christian confessors of the truth, is still connected with it, seeing that instead of a vagueness and indefiniteness thrown around the promises, it brings them forth with clearness and vividness, distinctly perceiving and embracing the great object of Hope—the Kingdom” (ibid., p. 311). “The exceeding prominence given to ‘the blessed hope’ in the New Test., should in view of its contents most certainly influence us to give it a like prominence in our faith. In reference to the Sec. Advent, Brookes (Bible Readings) says: ‘It is mentioned 318 times in the 260 chapters that make up the New Test., or if the whole book is divided into verses, it occupies one of twenty-five verses from the first of Matthew to the last of Revelation’” (ibid., p. 313). “Dr. Bonar’s language: ‘Weary of man’s rule, we long for God’s.’ In the Church itself, in view of the differences, dissensions, divisions, etc., who has not longed for an infallible head, teacher, and guide, seeing that the most pious and devoted are thus separated both in doctrine, practice, and government. Our hope is in the Second Coming of One in whom is lodged all power and wisdom” (ibid., p. 551). We’ll discuss in some detail the Christian’s proper attitude toward the Rapture of the church in our chapter The Rapture of the Church.

In relation to theologians, historically speaking, this doctrine of the Kingdom has captured the minds of some of the church’s greatest thinkers. “Our Lord’s inseparable and central relation to the Kingdom may serve to explain, at least in part, the compelling interest and fascination which the subject of the Kingdom of God has exercised upon the greatest minds in the Church, from Augustine with the twenty-two books of his De Civitate Dei (426) down to the massive treatise by George N. H. Peters under the title of The Theocratic Kingdom (1884)” (McClain, GK, p. 5). We discussed this briefly in our previous chapter The Kingdom in Church History. Sadly, however, the Kingdom is being ignored by many. “Systematic Theology, as set forth generally in textbook, is without recognition of the divine program of the ages” (Chafer, ST, 1:xiii). It is often considered to be too simple. “The very simplicity of the plan causes men to discard it for something, in their estimation, higher and better” (Peters, TTK, 2:82). It is sometimes unfairly linked with heresy. “Allis tries to link premillennialism with Russellism because both believe the Abrahamic covenant is unconditional” (Walvoord, MK, p. 13). “Dr. Patterson (Princeton Review, 1878) in an art. against us, concedes that it is not ‘heresy,’ endorsing the following: ‘This doctrine (says the latest Church His. which has come into our hands) though ultimately rejected by the Roman Catholic Church, was too frequently held by the early Fathers to be ranked as a heresy’” (Peters, TTK, 3:231). However, “The perversion of any one point, or the rashness of men in dealing with a doctrine—seeing that every important truth of the Bible has been, by some, either perverted or rashly dealt with—has no weight with the real student” (ibid., p. 257). Nonetheless, despite its common rejection, we counsel our fellow believers that this Kingdom should be berated with caution. “We ask our opposers to be very guarded, if reverent believers of the Word, in their denunciations of our doctrine, lest, peradventure, they be found to disown and disparage God’s own appointments” (ibid., p. 462).

To ministers of the gospel, we suggest strongly that the Kingdom should be preached and taught boldly. “One reason for this lack of faith in the Church results from eminent divines, who hold to the cardinal outlines of our doctrine being afraid to express them with a becoming freedom, or giving but a faint and indistinct utterance, or when declaring their faith neutralizing the whole by endeavoring to incorporate the leaven or development theory. From those who ought to give no ‘uncertain sound,’ we have but vagueness or silence. We could give several striking illustrations, but, for the sake of others, forbear. To their own Master they must give account for the influence exerted; but the fear may be stated, that while the dread of controversy, antagonism, loss of patronage, etc., causes the adoption of such a procedure, the pleasantness of the present life is no compensation for ‘the loss’ that will be sustained because of a concealment, or neutralizing presentation, of truth. The number that occupy this position is not a small one, and the plea of ‘prudence’ is presented in order to shield themselves from the charge of not proclaiming these doctrines, and thus warning the Church and world. What weight such a plea will have with the Judge Himself, we leave them to estimate after contrasting it with His expressed commands” (Peters, TTK, 3:225).

By cults and other false religions, the Kingdom is being counterfeited. Jesus said, “Many will say to Me on that day, ‘Lord, Lord, did we not prophesy in Your name, and in Your name cast out demons, and in Your name perform many miracles?’ And then I will declare to them, I never knew you; depart from Me, you who practice lawlessness” (Matt. 7:22–23). And Paul cautioned, “But I am afraid, lest as the serpent deceived Eve by his craftiness, your minds should be led astray from the simplicity and purity of devotion to Christ” (2 Cor. 11:3). And, “And no wonder, for even Satan disguises himself as an angel of light” (2 Cor. 11:14). Scripture makes it clear that one of Satan’s activities is to deceive the nations, an activity that will increase even more during the Tribulation period. “And I saw an angel coming down from heaven, having the key of the abyss and a great chain in his hand. And he laid hold of the dragon, the serpent of old, who is the devil and Satan, and bound him for a thousand years, and threw him into the abyss, and shut it and sealed it over him, so that he should not deceive the nations any longer, until the thousand years were completed; after these things he must be released for a short time” (Rev. 20:1–3). Chafer points out, “Kingdom and prophetic truths are being falsely represented... The country is being swept by ‘Russellism’ (so-called ‘Millennial Dawn,’ ‘International Bible Students’ League,’ etc.), and the appalling progress of this system which so misrepresents the whole revelation of God can only be accounted for in the unsatisfied hunger of the people for the prophetic portions of Scripture. Such a false system, mixing truth with untruth, and designed to interpret all of the divine revelation, is evidently more engaging to the popular mind than only the Scriptural presentation of the fundamental doctrines concerning God, Man and Redemption. Satan’s lies are always garnished with truth and how much more attractive they seem to be when that garnishing is a neglected truth! And insurance against the encroachment of such false teaching lies only in correctly presenting the whole body of truth rather than in treating any portion of it as impractical or dangerous. No minister need greatly fear any false system when he is intelligently and constantly feeding the people on the Word in all its symmetry and due proportions. This is not only true concerning the teachings of ‘Millennial Dawn,’ but is equally true of the teachings of ‘Christian Science,’ ‘New Thought,’ ‘Spiritism,’ ‘Seventh Day Adventism’ and all unscriptural doctrines of Sanctification” (KHP, 5%).

In regard to the nations of the world, the Kingdom will be resisted. “Why do the nations rage, And the peoples meditate a vain thing? The kings of the earth set themselves, And the rulers take counsel together, Against Jehovah, and against his anointed, saying, Let us break their bonds asunder, And cast away their cords from us” (Ps. 2:1–3). Peters comments, “It is not dependent upon the choice of any nation or nations, for, as prophecy predicts, it will be so unwelcome to the nations of the earth that, to establish it, the kingdoms of the world will be broken to pieces by it... Just as the establishment of the Theocracy in Palestine brought on a conflict with its rulers, so the reestablishment of a Theocracy in Palestine (as its centre), destined to extend its sway over all the nations of the earth, must, in the very nature of the case, lead to a serious contest... Alas! so blinded is man that but few appreciate its design and adaptation to bless, and it is only when introduced under the auspices of the Theocratic King and His associated rulers, amid opposition and the fall of its enemies, that the eyes of multitudes will be opened to the grandeur, majesty, blessedness, and glory pertaining to it, and they will also gladly submit themselves to its ordering” (TTK, 3:591).

Finally, we’ll look at the Kingdom’s relationships to history.

First, the Kingdom explains why the Bible is full of history. “The doctrine of the Kingdom as presented, shows why the form and structure of the Bible is so largely historical and prophetic, and why so much stress is laid on the history and future of the Jewish nation. The Theocratic idea and purpose require it. The facts in reference to the Kingdom make this feature—considered objectionable and a blemish by some—a necessity. It is so historical, because the covenant, the Kingdom, and the downfall demand it; prophetic, because the assured fulfillment of covenant in the restitution of the Theocracy requires it; Jewish, because the Theocratic relationship of that nation forbids a departure from it. Hence narrative, prophecy, events connected with the elect nation rather than events related to the vast Gentile monarchies, etc., receive new light in that of the Theocratic ordering” (Peters, TTK, 3:477).

The Kingdom also explains world history. This can be seen in several different facets.

The Kingdom explains that history does have meaning, purposes and goals. Peters observes, “A divine ordering toward a specified end, is manifest in all history” (TTK, 3:427). “We do not then need to occupy the position of Hume, who (as quoted by an anon. writer, Proph. Times, vol. 6, p. 6) remarks respecting the suffering and evils of the world: ‘The whole is a riddle, an enigma, an inexplicable mystery. Doubt, uncertainty, suspense of judgment, appear the only result of our most accurate scrutiny concerning this subject.’ Fully admitting that we now must, in the nature of the case, see through a glass, darkly, and that God now hides Himself in Providence as in nature, yet certain great landmarks are given, within whose limits we find rest to our souls, peace to our minds, and hope to our hearts. The amplitude of evidence respecting the Divine Purpose, supported by a personal experience derived from faith in Jesus, gives us the assurance and confidence that evil is temporary, and will, in God’s own good time be blotted out of this world” (ibid., 3:436).

The Kingdom explains the design and divine purposes of history. “To give an accurate description of a machine it must embrace not merely its several parts but the design or end for which it is intended; precisely so with an attempt to portray the world’s history, for every effort which does not embrace the great end, the gracious design (and exhibited in this Kingdom) that God has in view, will utterly fail to do justice to the problems of history” (Peters, TTK, 3:427).

The Kingdom explains how the divine purposes are to be realized. “Prophecy simply teaches us what history will be in the future; it does not itself make history, for that which gives prophecy—a power more potent than prophecy—makes history, either directly or permissively... much of prophecy is given not merely to foretell future events, but to inform us how and when certain things pertaining to the Divine Purpose are to be realized, and, therefore, is a portrayal of what God will do to carry out His Plan. It is thus the revelation of God’s will and design” (Peters, TTK, 3:437).

The Kingdom explains that God is the Maker of history via both providence and intervention. “The Theocratic order unmistakably teaches us that there is a Divine Providence overruling all things, even down to that dark end when Antichrist is allowed, for a brief space, to triumph, making victory and punishment the more signal and glorious” (Peters, TTK, 3:430).

The Kingdom explains the origin and progression of evil in the world. “Again, take the fall of man and the personal withdrawal of God. However the historical account may be explained, fact demonstrates the truthfulness of both, viz., that restraining influences are requisite to incline man to virtue and holiness, to moral law and order; and that God is not personally present with man. So long as these facts exist, it is folly to deny them; and unless a better explanation than that given in the Word to account for the introduction of such facts is presented (which has never yet been done), it is both unwise and unsafe to reject the Biblical statement on the subject... a Divine Plan for the removal of such a fall and the restoration of the personal Divine Presence... While the Bible appeals to the fall of man as a fact that self-consciousness attests to, and that the history of the race abundantly confirms, it at the same time predicts (which is now so abundantly fulfilled) that men will arise and ignore this fall, decry the natural depravity of the race, reject with scorn the provisions made for its removal as unnecessary, laud and magnify the natural ability of humanity to save and exalt itself, until the Perfectibility of Human Nature shall be endorsed and advocated by the multitude... While the Bible insists upon the depravity of man, yet at the same time it also states that such is his condition, mental, moral, and physical, that God still deemed him worthy of redemption, and in the determination of such redemption and the provision made for it through Jesus Christ elevated man to a position of dignity which he is now at liberty either to retain, confirm, and enlarge (viz., by the reception of Christ), or to degrade and forever forfeit (viz., through the rejection of proffered salvation). The establishment of this Kingdom (in the kingship and priesthood of the saints, in the restored happy condition of the elect Jewish nation, and in the rich blessings bestowed upon Gentile nations) vindicates the dignity (bestowed by grace) of man, exhibiting his capacity for (advanced by love) and enjoyment of its privileges, honors, and happiness” (Peters, TTK, 3:433).

The Kingdom explains the need for a cure and the cure for evil in the world. “There is only one solution, and that contained in the Bible, to the evils of the world, to the removal of the curse, to the enigmas of regeneration puzzling the minds of statesmen and others; this is found in the Second Advent of ‘the Christ,’ and its related truths, especially the one pertaining to the Kingdom. The six thousand weary and sad years of humanity, bound in a curse and adding to its horrors by the effects of willful wickedness, are designed to teach man that he needs Theocratic help in the Person and Power of the Theocratic King, Jesus the Christ—the earnest now, the perfect realization hereafter. Faith holds fast to this hope” (Peters, TTK, 3:434).

The Kingdom explains why Scripture gives only a brief mention of antediluvian history, and disproportionately great attention to Israel’s history. “The antediluvian world, as its fate testifies, was not favorable for a Theocratic ordering, and hence it was not attempted; Gentile nations, as their history indicates, could not be brought into the spirit and obedience requisite for such an ordering, and therefore it was not proposed to them; even the Jewish nation, so highly favored, God foreknew was lacking in qualifications (which was foretold), but God had a plan to overrule even this in mercy, and consequently the initiatory form was introduced... History in its more particular or minute form begins with Abraham. His call is a remarkable epoch; so marked that the Bible gives more place to Abraham’s history than to the antediluvian period... Let the reader mark it well, it was owing to this Theocratic idea and rule that the history of the Jewish nation alone assumes such prominence and importance in the eyes of the Almighty God, while mighty nations and empires receive but the slightest notice... The particular and the prophetic history, just as they are given, are needed, together with the Gospel history, to give us a complete and perfect view of God’s Purpose in the re-establishment of the downfallen Theocracy. Everything relating to this idea, and essential to its comprehension, is carefully portrayed; all else outside of it, is passed by or referred to as it may be effected by it. Hence the history of the Jewish nation even, outside of this Theocratic idea, has only the briefest prophetic delineation, such as is given to Gentile nations. God shows respect to His own Theocratic ordering, and when this Theocracy is restored again under David’s Son, persons will wonder that this feature was so much overlooked or undervalued” (Peters, TTK, 3:432).

The Kingdom explains the contexts and purposes of Jesus' death, burial and resurrection. "...the voluntary offering of Jesus, so that through it God's forbearance and love could be manifested in continuing (against the sinfulness of the nation and world) His gracious purpose to fulfill the covenants... By this death and resurrection Jesus Christ as David's Son becomes the covenanted immortal, glorified Son of David. He gives the highest possible expression of obedience to the Divine Will; and He that has thus obeyed is worthy also to reign. By these He gains power over death, so that He is able to deliver His own from the prison house at the time appointed. These constitute Him a King worthy of all love, for the Theocratic King, the King of glory died and was raised to deliver His coheirs and subjects... His death and resurrection are the two most noted events that history thus far records, and they form the real basis of past, present, and coming history, inasmuch as they show that through the provision made by them all history thus far has been possible, and that future history, as represented in the Word by anticipation, will exist" (Peters, TTK, 3:438).

The Kingdom explains the purposes of the age in which we currently live. "The history of the world down to the Second Advent allows that God's estimate of human nature is the only correct one... this long series of repeated depravity, finally culminating in the Antichrist, was only permitted in order that during this period this distinctive and peculiar people of God, designed for coheirship with Jesus the Christ, might be formed for the Theocratic Kingdom" (Peters, TTK, 3:436). We'll have more to say about this in our chapter The Mystery Kingdom (The Church).

The Kingdom explains the goal of history. "The question, then arises, what great leading (biblical) fact does the Word present for which all others are more or less preparatory. The answer is plain, it is found in this Theocratic Kingdom of the Messiah... If the Jews were not a scattered people; if Jerusalem were not in the possession of Gentile nations; if the Church had not tares, divisions, trials etc.; if wickedness did not abound; if the Roman Empire was not divided, etc., then palpable contradictions would exist, and unbelief could triumph. But present history contains no such adverse statements invalidating the truthfulness of Holy Writ. Therefore, for this and other reasons, we hold implicit confidence in the history of the future as also given in the same unfailing Word... dispensations... Jesus Christ the Son of God and the Son of David, the promised Theocratic King as the central figure of history" (Peters, TTK, 3:428) "The world's history is a mystery and incomplete without this restored Theocracy; for God to undertake a Theocratic form of government and not to complete it, and for Him to promise its restoration and make the most suitable provision for it, and then not to manifest it, would leave a void fatal to the happiness of the individual, of the race, and of the world” (ibid., p. 588).

And finally, the Kingdom explains the vindication and glorification of God in history. God “...by the end accomplished vindicates His perfections, His rights, and His glory. Before man attempts to criticize God it is best for him to await the ultimate result of these preparatory dispensations... The author of The Ancient History of the East in the pref. remarks: ‘...all ancient history is the preparation for—modern history the consequence of—the divine sacrifice of Calvary.’ To this we add that both ancient and modern history are only preparative for the wider and grander results at the Sec. Advent of the once crucified One, to which all prophetic history points us. It is this Advent with its grand results that illuminates history, showing what the Divine Purpose intends to accomplish, bringing in an eventually worldwide Theocracy, a completed Salvation, a manifestation of God’s glory, and the reflection of that glory in His creatures” (Peters, TTK, 3:428).

Chapter 4: Biblical Hermeneutics

In this chapter we'll discuss some basic principles that will help us correctly interpret the Bible.

Foundational Hermeneutical Principles

Definition of Hermeneutics

“Hermeneutics is the study of the general principles of biblical interpretation” (Geisler, ST, 1:160).

A Discussion of Hermeneutics is Necessary

A discussion of hermeneutics is necessary, especially when attempting to accurately define and describe the Kingdom of God. For instance, consider these two key texts: “And in the days of those kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, nor shall the sovereignty thereof be left to another people; but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever. Forasmuch as thou sawest that a stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold; the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter: and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure” (Daniel 2:44–45). and, “And behold, you will conceive in your womb, and bear a son, and you shall name Him Jesus. He will be great, and will be called the Son of the Most High; and the Lord God will give Him the throne of His father David; and He will reign over the house of Jacob forever; and His kingdom will have no end” (Luke 1:31–33). How are we to interpret these passages? Are they meant to be taken literally, or figuratively? Is the plain sense the correct sense when interpreting passages like these? If so, how do we know that?

It is our contention that the plain sense is indeed the correct sense when interpreting these passages and hundreds of other similar passages, and that an unbiased reader would naturally interpret these passages this way, if the “spiritualizing” of Bible texts were not so prevalent. Ideally, this discussion of hermeneutics would hardly be necessary if men were content with taking the vast majority of what they read in the Bible literally, or plainly, but alas, many “experts” say that in many, many cases, and especially in cases such as these, while the Bible clearly says one thing, it really means something else. “Break in pieces,” they explain, means “gently transform,” “the house of David,” they say, means the church. As Dr. Chafer says, “Human authors seem hopelessly unable to let simple facts speak for themselves, nor are they willing to credit the reader with the requisite sagacity to draw his own conclusions” (ST, 1:33). Therefore, to peel away these ubiquitous, yet entirely unwarranted layers of “spiritualizing” that have been imposed on texts such as these over the years, by men considered to be experts on the Bible, a discussion of hermeneutics becomes necessary. “The issue, then, between amillennialism and premillennialism is their respective methods of interpretation, and little progress can be made in the study of the millennial issue until this aspect is analyzed and understood” (Walvoord, MK, p. 59). “Dwight Pentecost [in Things to Come, p. 1]... “No question facing the student of eschatology is more important than the question of the method to be employed in the interpretation of prophetic Scriptures” (Geisler, ST, 4:456).

Characteristics of Scripture that Influence our Interpretation

Before accurately and confidently determining what the Bible really means in its eschatological passages, we should first familiarize ourselves with several characteristics of Scripture that influence our interpretations of these passages. These characteristics include whether these passages of Scripture are to be taken literally or non-literally, the symbiotic relationship between the Old and New Testaments, the eclectic composition of the synoptic gospels, the relationships between the Old and New Testaments, the four different ways the New Testament quotes the Old Testament, and some basic but important characteristics of prophetic Scripture.

Literal vs. Non-Literal

First let’s consider some characteristics relating to literal versus non-literal passages.

As we’ve already mentioned, it is our position that the vast majority of Scripture, including the vast majority of historical and prophetic passages, is meant to be understood literally. For many people, when reading the Bible for the first time with unbiased and unfiltered eyes, it’s a major revelation how little of it is actually anything but literal. As George Peters points out, “While there are a few prophetic types (e.g. Isa. 22:2; Jer. 13:1-7; Jer. 16:2, etc.), these are but rare, exceptional cases; the immense mass of prophecy, in no shape or sense, is typical but real descriptions or representations in language of things to come” (TTK, 1:193).

However, even the staunchest of literalists recognizes that the Bible does, on occasion, use figurative, allegorical or symbolic language. That being the case, a few things regarding these non-literal genres of Scripture should be kept in mind.

Regarding figurative Scripture, it should be recognized that the purpose of both literal and figurative language is always to impart literal truth. “It should be observed at the very outset that the purpose of figurative language is to impart some literal truth” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 42). “The literal method of interpretation does not take Jesus’ statement “I am the true vine” (John 15:1) as physically actual. That He is a vine is literally true, but it is not true literally (i.e., physically). Literally and physically Jesus was a human being, and His hearers understood this; since a vine is not a person, it follows that Jesus is not literally a vine. Nevertheless, there is a literal truth behind this metaphor, viz., that as we are branches on the vine (v. 5), our source of spiritual life literally (actually) comes from Christ” (Geisler, ST, 4:418). And, “Paul said plainly, ‘Christ, our Passover [Lamb] was sacrificed for us’ (1 Cor. 5:7 NKJV)... This fulfillment is in no sense a spiritualization or allegorization of any literal thing or event; it is a literal fulfillment of the literal type by a literal antitype” (ibid., p. 419).

Regarding allegorical Scripture, we should be aware that whenever allegory is used in Scripture, it is always plainly presented as such. “The writers of the New Testament themselves make a clear distinction between the allegorical and literal interpretation of the Old Testament. When they use the allegorical method, they either say expressly, here is allegory, Gal. 4:24, or they show it by the context, or by prefixing some particle of comparison, e.g., [two Greek words], Heb. 7, John 3:14, Matt. 12:40” (Peters, TTK, 1:50). “Even when allegory is admissible it is confined to the subject in hand and does not vitiate or alter (as seen in Paul) the proper, legitimate covenanted Messiahship and Messianic Kingdom” (ibid., 3:525).

Regarding symbolic Scripture, it should be pointed out that every symbol in Scripture represents something literal. “We encounter symbols in road signs all the time, but we never doubt that they signify literal realities” (Geisler, ST, 4:420). And, each symbol’s meaning remains highly consistent throughout the Bible. “A specific symbol will mean the same thing throughout the Old and New Testaments in about 95 percent of the cases. For example, whenever the word ‘stone’ is used symbolically, it is always the symbol of the second Person of the Trinity, God the Son, or Jesus the Messiah” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 545). Also, Revelation’s symbols are all explained elsewhere in Scripture. “While it is true that the Book of Revelation uses many symbols, the meaning of all those symbols is explained either in Revelation itself or elsewhere in the Scriptures” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 791). For instance, Revelation alone contains over five hundred references to the Old Testament. It may take some time and effort to make all the connections, but they’re there. (For an exhaustive list of the five hun-

Again, while the Bible does at times use figurative, allegorical or symbolic language, it must be kept in mind that these non-literal passages are almost always readily identifiable as such. "One can be sure that, when the Holy Spirit wants a concept taken in other than the literal sense, He will use the qualifying word or words that make the idea intelligible" (Feinberg, M, p. 356). Therefore, when reading and studying Scripture, our default disposition should be a willingness to receive and understand what is written literally or plainly, just as we would with any other text, unless we encounter clear indicators within the texts themselves that the authors intended that we do otherwise.

The Relationship Between the Old and New Testaments

Next, let's take a brief look at the symbiotic relationship between the Old and New Testaments. Dispensational premillennialists emphasize that:

Both the Old and New Testaments are needed. "No rule or interpretation should be endured which arbitrarily distinguishes between, virtually severs, the same Word of God, but we must regard the Scriptures as one whole, all significant, important, and weighty, giving only when in combination, in firm union, the steady, brilliant light that we need" (Peters, TTK, 1:158). And, "It is not uncharitable to suspect, that one reason why so many meanings and contradictory definitions are given to the Kingdom, arises from the neglect—conscious or unconscious, designed or undesigned—of the Old Test. Scriptures, or, from an artful, misleading, but well-intended exaltation of the New over the Old, as if some great and vital difference existed between them instead of their being inseparably one" (ibid., p. 161).

Both the Old and New Testaments present the same Kingdom. For example, compare Luke 1:26-33 with Isaiah 9:6-7:

Luke 1:26-33: Now in the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God to a city in Galilee, called Nazareth, to a virgin engaged to a man whose name was Joseph, of the descendants of David; and the virgin's name was Mary. And coming in, he said to her, "Hail, favored one! The Lord is with you." But she was greatly troubled at this statement, and kept pondering what kind of salutation this might be. And the angel said to her, "Do not be afraid, Mary; for you have found favor with God. And behold, you will conceive in your womb, and bear a son, and you shall name Him Jesus. He will be great, and will be called the Son of the Most High; and the Lord God will give Him the throne of His father David; and He will reign over the house of Jacob forever; and His kingdom will have no end.”

Isaiah 9:6-7: For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of Jehovah of hosts will perform this.

Is it not obvious that both Luke and Isaiah are describing the same Kingdom? “Did Mary for one moment hold the amillenarian view? Would she spiritualize this passage—the throne of David is God’s throne in heaven; the kingdom is a spiritual kingdom; Israel is synonymous with the church? Certainly not! It was totally foreign to her thinking. If the amillenarians are right, Mary was sadly deceived. The prophecy of the angel could hardly have been better worded to confirm the ordinary Jewish hope as well as the exact essentials of the premillennial position—the literal and earthly fulfillment of the Davidic covenant” (Walvoord, MK, p. 117). “...Gabriel’s message to Mary: that her Son would sit upon the throne of His father David and will have ‘rulership over Israel forever.’ This is in keeping with a literal understanding of the Davidic Covenant and Gabriel made no effort to correct a supposed Jewish misunderstanding of the nature of the kingdom” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 348). This is the same Kingdom that Jesus’ disciples were expecting, even following His resurrection, after Jesus had just finished “appearing to them over a period of forty days, and speaking of the things concerning the kingdom of God” (Acts 1:3) “And so when they had come together, they were asking Him, saying, “Lord, is it at this time You are restoring the kingdom to Israel” (vs. 6)? “Our position... Such a view binds the contents of both Old and New Tests. into a unity, which no other can present, and evidences the pre-eminent logical position occupied by the first churches of believers in ‘the gospel of the Kingdom’” (Peters, TTK, 3:358).

The New Testament assumes familiarity with the Old Testament. “The New, taking a familiar acquaintance of the Old for granted, and proceeding on this supposition, does not supersede the Old” (Peters, TTK, 1:158).

The New Testament is built on an Old Testament foundation. “The New [Testament], as evidenced by our remarks, is built on the Old as on a foundation, and if separated from the latter, its strength and stability is diminated, if not destroyed” (Peters, TTK, 1:158). Without a good understanding of the Old Testament, understanding the New Testament, particularly in relation to the Kingdom, is impossible.

The New Testament confirms the Old Testament. Jesus said to His disciples, “These are My words which I spoke to you while I was still with you, that all things which are written about Me in the Law of Moses and the Prophets and the Psalms must be fulfilled” (Luke 24:44). Peter wrote to His fellow Jewish believers, “And so we have the prophetic word made more sure, to which you do well to pay attention as to a lamp shining in a dark place, until the day dawns and the morning star arises in your hearts” (2 Pet. 1:19). “The promises of the New Test. relating to the future are based on unfulfilled predictions of the Old, are repetitions of the same, and thus renewed predictions” (Peters, TTK, 1:163). And even, “Numerous writers reject the New Test. books because a continuation and confirmation of the Jewish ideas of the Old” (ibid., 3:490).

The New Testament does not contradict the Old Testament. “There is an unerring test: if any teaching is directly opposed to that which is recorded in Holy Writ, it is to be rejected at once, because the Spirit will not be in conflict with truth previously given. Truth is harmonious and not discordant; the Spirit is not antagonistic to itself” (Peters, TTK, 1:203).

The New Testament does not supersede the Old Testament. “...the idea that the Old Test. is superseded by the New, and that the interpretation of the Old, as once held by the Jews, is antagonistic to the New, and that, consequently, the literal, grammatical sense must give place to another, additional one grafted upon the Old. This whole theory is a violation of the laws of language, of the Revelation of God’s Purposes as given to ancient believers and trusted in by them, and it places the Israelites, before the Advent, in the posture of an ignorant, self-deceived people who trusted in a grammatical sense which is a lie—in plainly expressed covenants and promises which, as understood by them, they never comprehended. In brief, it makes God teaching what they could not understand, prophesying what they could not apprehend, and developing a faith and hope that can never be realized... Briefly, no student can afford to occupy such an exclusive position; the true scholarly method, commended by common sense and due respect for God’s whole Word, is to interpret both by the same laws of language, and to observe, on any given subject, which part, the Old or the New, advances the most revelation or information, receiving the same as of equal authority” (Peters, TTK, 1:160). “The Old Test. is not superseded by the New, and we are urged to observe the intimate and enduring connection existing between them” (ibid., 2:64).

The New Testament does not reinterpret the Old Testament. As we'll see below, the New Testament quotes the Old Testament in four different ways, one of which is "literal plus application." An application of an Old Testament passage to a New Testament situation does not "reinterpret" the Old Testament passage; the originally intended interpretation of the Old Testament passage remains intact.

The New Testament should not be read back into the Old Testament. "The Old Testament should not be interpreted in light of the New, because later writings, inspired or not, do not change the meaning of earlier writings. Meaning is objective and absolute; a text means what the author meant by it, nothing more and nothing less. Later authors can add more information on the same topic, but they cannot change the meaning" (Geisler, ST, 4:587). "Dispensationalism refuses to read the New Testament back into the Old, a major principle in Covenant Theology" (Fruchtenbaum, I, 322).

On some subjects, the Old Testament is more clear and/or more complete than the New Testament. "The Old Testament... in its covenants and prophecies... it contains stronger proof and clearer light in reference to some things that are yet to be fulfilled than the New Testament" (Peters, TTK, 1:159). "The Old Testament, as comparison abundantly shows, has more to say of the final realization than the New" (ibid.). "...without the Old Testament the kingdom cannot be understood" (Feinberg, M, p. 279).

The New Testament quotes the Old Testament in four different ways. Because writers of the New Testament sometimes quote the Old Testament in unusual and/or unexpected ways, Covenant theologians will point to this as evidence that we cannot simply accept what the Old Testament says at face value, but rather that we must reinterpret the Old Testament through the lens of the New Testament. However, as Dr. Fruchtenbaum explains, "Another key factor under Bibliology concerns the way the New Testament quotes the Old. It has been shown several times that this is a major evidence Covenant Theologians use to prove that the Old Testament prophecies cannot be understood literally. They claim that the New Testament 'changed' the meaning of the Old Testament or 'reinterpreted' it. Even Covenant Premillennialism has a hard time using the Old Testament as evidence for their Premillennialism. What this boils down to is that the original intended meaning of the Old Testament was changed by the New and this requires an ignoring of the original context. The Old Testament cannot be understood on its own merit and saints had to wait until the writings of the New to understand the Old. According to Covenant Theology, in light of the New Testament's use of the Old Testament prophecy, these prophecies cannot be understood literally. What they fail to see is that the New Testament also treats historical passages in the Old Testament the same way, but does not intend to mean that the historical event never literally happened. In Galatians 4:21-31, Paul gives an allegorical application to the story of Sarah and Hagar, and Isaac and Ishmael, but he does not deny that these were literal people and that the Genesis account of their history literally did happen. The solution to the problem is simply to recognize that the New Testament quotes the Old in four different ways. This was a typical Jewish way of quoting the Old Testament in that period and the writers were Jews. They often gave a spiritual meaning or a new application to an Old Testament text without denying that what the original said literally did or will happen. There is one example of each of the four ways in Matthew two and so this will be the basis for explaining them.” [reference is made in this section to David L. Cooper, Messiah: His Historical Appearance, pp. 174-177] (I, p. 843).

The first of these four different ways is literal plus literal. Consider these two passages: “But thou, Bethlehem Ephrathah, which art little to be among the thousands of Judah, out of thee shall one come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth are from of old, from everlasting” (Micah 5:2) and “And they said to him, ‘In Bethlehem of Judea, for so it has been written by the prophet, “And you, Bethlehem, land of Judah, Are by no means least among the leaders of Judah; For out of you shall come forth a Ruler, Who will shepherd My people Israel”’” (Matt. 2:5-6). “The first is called literal prophecy plus literal fulfillment. This example is found in Matthew 2:5-6, which quotes Micah 5:2. In the original context of Micah 5:2, the prophet is speaking prophetically and prophesying that whenever the Messiah is born, He will be born in Bethlehem of Judah. That is the literal meaning of Micah 5:2. When a literal prophecy is fulfilled in the New Testament, it is quoted as a literal fulfillment. Many prophecies fall into this category such as Isaiah 7:14; 52:13-53:12; Zechariah 9:9, etc.” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 843)

The second way is literal plus typical. Consider these two passages: “When Israel was a child, then I loved him, and called my son out of Egypt” (Hosea 11:1) and “and was there until the death of Herod, that what was spoken by the Lord through the prophet might be fulfilled, saying, “Out of Egypt did I call My Son” (Matt. 2:15). “The second is called literal plus typical. This example is found in Matthew 2:15, which is a quotation of Hosea 11:1. However, the original context is not a prophecy, it is an historical event. It is a reference to the Exodus when Israel, the national son of God, was brought out of Egypt. It is obvious that Hosea is thinking of literal Israel for in the following verses he points out how Israel quickly slipped into idolatry. The literal meaning in context of Hosea 11:1 is a reference to the Exodus. There is nothing in the New Testament that can change or reinterpret the meaning of Hosea 11:1, nor does the New Testament deny that the literal Exodus actually happened. However, Israel as the national son of God coming out of Egypt becomes a type of the individual Son of God, the Messiah coming out of Egypt. The passage is quoted, not as a fulfillment of prophecy, since Hosea 11:1 was not a prophecy to begin with but as a type. Matthew does not deny, change, or reinterpret the original meaning. He understands it literally, but the literal Old Testament event becomes a type of a New Testament event. This is literal plus typical. Many of the citations in the Book of Hebrews of Exodus and Leviticus fall into this category” (Fruchtenbaum, I, 843).

The third way is literal plus application. Consider these three examples: Rachel weeping for her children, the pouring out of the Spirit prophesied by Joel, and “calling them who were not my people ‘my people.’” First, Rachel weeping for her children: Consider “Thus saith Jehovah: A voice is heard in Ramah, lamentation, and bitter weeping, Rachel weeping for her children; she refuseth to be comforted for her children, because they are not” (Jer. 31:15). and “Then that which was spoken through Jeremiah the prophet was fulfilled, saying, ‘A voice was heard in Ramah, Weeping and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children; And she refused to be comforted, Because they were no more” (Matt. 2:17-18). “The third is called literal plus application. This example is found in Matthew 2:17-18 which is a quotation of Jeremiah 31:15. In the original context, Jeremiah is speaking of an event soon to come as the Babylonian Captivity begins. As the Jewish young men were being taken into captivity, they went by the town of Ramah. Not too far from Ramah is where Rachel was buried and she was the symbol of Jewish motherhood. As the young men were marched toward Babylon, the Jewish mothers of Ramah came out weeping for sons they will never see again. Jeremiah pictured the scene as Rachel weeping for her children. This is the literal meaning of Jeremiah 31:15. The New Testament cannot change or reinterpret what this verse means in that context, nor does it try to do so. In this category, there is a New Testament event that has one point of similarity with the Old Testament event. The verse is quoted as an application. The one point of similarity between Ramah and Bethlehem is that once again Jewish mothers are weeping for sons they will never see again and so the Old Testament passage is applied to the New Testament event. Otherwise, everything else is different. In Jeremiah, the event takes place in Ramah, north of Jerusalem, but in

Matthew, it takes place in Bethlehem, south of Jerusalem. In Matthew, they die, but in Jeremiah they are still alive and are going into captivity. This is literal plus application. The original text may be history or prophecy. The Jeremiah quote is an example of history” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 844). Second, the pouring out of the Spirit prophesied by Joel: Consider “And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions: and also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my Spirit. And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth: blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and terrible day of Jehovah cometh. And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of Jehovah shall be delivered; for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem there shall be those that escape, as Jehovah hath said, and among the remnant those whom Jehovah doth call” (Joel 2:28-32). and “but this is that which hath been spoken through the prophet Joel: And it shall be in the last days, saith God, I will pour forth of My Spirit upon all flesh: And your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, And your young men shall see visions, And your old men shall dream dreams: Yea and on My servants and on My handmaidens in those days Will I pour forth of My Spirit; and they shall prophesy. And I will show wonders in the heaven above, And signs on the earth beneath; Blood, and fire, and vapor of smoke: The sun shall be turned into darkness, And the moon into blood, Before the day of the Lord come, That great and notable day. And it shall be, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved” (Acts 2:16-21). “An example of prophecy is in Acts 2:16-21 which quotes Joel 2:28-32. Nothing that happened in Acts two was predicted by Joel two. What actually did happen in Acts two (the speaking in tongues) was not mentioned by Joel. What Joel did mention (dreams, visions, the sun darkened, the moon turned into blood) did not happen in Acts two. Joel was speaking of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the whole nation of Israel in the last days, while Acts two speaks of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the Twelve Apostles or, at most, on the 120 in the Upper Room. This is a far cry from Joel’s all flesh. However, there was one point of similarity, an outpouring of the Holy Spirit, resulting in unusual manifestations. Acts two does not change or reinterpret Joel two, nor does it deny that Joel two will have a literal fulfillment when the Holy Spirit will be poured out on the whole nation of Israel. It is simply applying it to a New Testament event because of one point of similarity” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 844). Third, “calling them who were not my people ‘my people:’

Consider “Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered; and it shall come to pass that, in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people, it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God” (Hosea 1:10), “And I will sow her unto me in the earth; and I will have mercy upon her that had not obtained mercy; and I will say to them that were not my people, Thou art my people; and they shall say, Thou art my God” (Hosea 2:23) and “As He says also in Hosea, ‘I WILL CALL THOSE WHO WERE NOT MY PEOPLE, “MY PEOPLE,” AND HER WHO WAS NOT BELOVED, “BELOVED.” AND IT SHALL BE THAT IN THE PLACE WHERE IT WAS SAID TO THEM, “YOU ARE NOT MY PEOPLE,” THERE THEY SHALL BE CALLED SONS OF THE LIVING GOD” (Rom. 9:25–26). “Can the New Testament so unilaterally change or reinterpret the meaning of the Old? If so, this calls into real question the inspiration and validity of one or the other or both. However, the validity of both can be maintained by recognizing the quotation for what it is: an application. Hosea’s prophecy will be fulfilled to Israel. Because of one point of similarity, the passage is applied to a New Testament event. The one point of similarity is that the Gentiles at one time were not my people but now have become my people. Paul neither changes nor reinterprets the meaning of the Old Testament. He merely makes an application” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 293). In summary, “Covenant Theology fails to distinguish when the New Testament is actually interpreting the Old and when it is merely applying an Old Testament passage to a New Testament event because of a similar situation. This failure leads many Covenant Theologians to ignore the original Old Testament text in its context, and to ignore its original meaning. It makes the New Testament guilty of actually changing the original Old Testament meaning” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 256). “The New Testament often cites the Old Testament purely as an application and not as an interpretation. Ladd basically says that the Old Testament context must be set aside and ignored. As he admits, ‘this involves reinterpretation’ of the Old Testament. This cannot help but lead to the questioning of the validity of the original prophecy. Ladd goes so far as to say: ‘Sometimes the fulfillment is different from what we would expect from the Old Testament.’ This would render the Old Testament useless since the original cannot be understood in its own context. This is no different than the Mormon claim that the New Testament must be understood by the Book of Mormon; but for Ladd, the Book of Mormon’s contradiction (reinterpretation?) of the New Testament would render the Book of Mormon invalid. Ladd fails to see that if the New Testament actually changes the meaning of the Old Testament, then either one or the other is invalid. The Old Testament cannot stand on its own for ‘the final word in doctrine... must be found in the New Testament.’ It is this approach to the Old Testament by which Ladd develops his Israelology” (ibid.). “Application is not reinterpretation... The original Old Testament prophecy is neither changed nor cancelled” (ibid., p. 294).

The fourth way is summation. Consider this verse: “and came and resided in a city called Nazareth, that what was spoken through the prophets might be fulfilled, ‘He shall be called a Nazarene’” (Matthew 2:23). “The fourth is called summation. The example is found in Matthew 2:23:... that it might be fulfilled which was spoken through the prophets, that he should be called a Nazarene. However, no such statement is found anywhere in the Old Testament. Since Matthew used the plural prophets, one should be able to find at least two, yet there is not even one. The fourth category does not have an actual quotation as in the first three categories, but only a summary of what the prophets actually said. The plural use of prophets is a clue to this category. In the first century, Nazarenes were a people despised and rejected and the term was used to reproach and to shame (John 1:46). The prophets did teach that the Messiah would be a despised and rejected individual (e.g. Isa. 53:3) and this is summarized by the term, Nazarene” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 845). Consider also: “And He took the twelve aside and said to them, ‘Behold, we are going up to Jerusalem, and all things which are written through the prophets about the Son of Man will be accomplished. For He will be delivered to the Gentiles, and will be mocked and mistreated and spit upon, and after they have scourged Him, they will kill Him; and the third day He will rise again’” (Luke 18:31–33). “Another example of this category is Luke 18:31-33. Using the plural for prophet again, Jesus states that the time for fulfillment has come and He states what is to be fulfilled: the Messiah will go to Jerusalem, be turned over to the Gentiles; the Gentiles will mock Him, treat Him shamefully, spit on Him, scourge Him, and kill Him, but He will rise again the third day. Not one prophet ever said all this, but the prophets together did say all this. Hence, this is a summation” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 845).

While the New Testament does quote the Old Testament in these four ways, it is important to point out again that the New Testament does not ever quote the Old Testament allegorically, unless it also states explicitly that it is doing so (as Paul does in the story of Sarah and Hagar in Galatians chapter 4). “...about 400 citations from the Old Testament found in the New Testament... It is one of the characteristic and instructive features of the New Testament writers that they absolutely refrain from the allegorical method of interpretation current in those times, particularly in the writings of Philo” [quoting G. H. Schodde, ‘Interpretation,’ International Standard Bible Encyclopedia, Vol. III, p. 1490] (McClain, GK, p. 259).

In conclusion, “Every New Testament quotation of the Old will fit into one of these four categories. The procedure is not simply ‘to interpret the Old by the New’ as Covenant Theology insists. The procedure is first to see what the original quotation means in its own context. Once that is determined, then it can also be determined in just which of the four categories the quotation belongs. There is no need to conclude that the New Testament changes or reinterprets the Old Testament. Even preachers today make applications of biblical historic or prophetic texts to the modern situation without implying that that was the intent of the original author” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 845). “While the New Testament sometimes gives an application (rather than an interpretation) of an Old Testament passage, it never spiritualizes away the literal truth of an Old Testament text” (Geisler, ST, 4:444). “...the Hebrew authors of the NT... quote from the OT in a more applicatory, illustrative sense without invalidating the original literal meaning” (Horner, FI, p. 182)

The Eclectic Composition of the Gospels

Next, we’ll take a look at the eclectic composition of the synoptic gospels.

Has the reader ever wondered, if we’re saved by grace alone through faith in Christ alone, how Jesus could say “if you do not forgive men, then your Father will not forgive your transgressions” (Matt. 6. 15)? How could this be true, if, as John said in 1 John 1:9, “If we confess our sins, He is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness”? Or, has the reader ever thought about how impractical, or even impossible it would be, in this day and age, to consistently follow the golden rule, “However you want people to treat you, so treat them” (Matt. 7:12)? How could we always “give to him who asks of you, and do not turn away from him who wants to borrow from you” without literally losing our shirts (Matt. 5:40), and everything else, to those who would be only too happy to take advantage of our generosity? How practical would it be for us to always “turn the other cheek” (Matt. 5:39) when we’re met at every turn by those who would be only too happy to harm us if they knew they could get away with it? How can Jesus’ command to Peter, “Put your sword back into its place; for all those who take up the sword shall perish by the sword” (Matt. 26:52) be reconciled with His later admonition, “let him who has no sword sell his robe and buy one” (Luke 22:36)? Is it possible to rec-oncile the Sermon on the Mount, which when read carefully, seems to be more legalistic than even the Mosaic Law, with the grace teachings of the later sections of the New Testament?

We suggest that the best solution to these apparent contradictions in Scripture is the recognition that within the synoptic gospels is an intersection of three separate and distinct dispensations: Law, Grace and Kingdom. First, Jesus was a Jew, born under the Law (Gal. 4:4), and He preached and taught a Jewish audience that was also under the Mosaic Law covenant. Second, He announced an eschatological Kingdom that was to come in the (potentially near) future (Matt. 6:20). Third, after His official rejection by the Jewish leaders in Matthew chapter 12, He foretold, for the first time in the history of the world, a new entity and a new age, the age of the church (Matt. 16:18). So, within the synoptic Gospels, and even within just the one book of Matthew, we have the confluence of three different dispensations. So in order to avoid actual contradictions in Jesus' apparently contradictory statements, we must be careful to first ascertain to which dispensation, and to which people group, each of these statements or commands belongs. "The Gospels are complex almost beyond any other portion of Scripture, since they are a composite of the teachings of Moses, of grace, and of the kingdom" (Chafer, G, 38%). "The Gospel of Matthew, while in general addressing itself to the subject of why Jesus Christ did not bring in His millennial kingdom at His first coming, actually involves three dispensations in its teaching, sometimes referring to the law of Moses in the Old Testament, sometimes to the present church age as in the announcement of the coming church in Matthew 16:18, and sometimes to the end of the age and the Millennium that will follow. All of these phases of truth were addressed to His disciples" (Walvoord, TRQ, p. 185).

The reconciliation comes in the recognition that while all Scripture is written for us, not all Scripture is written to us. "There is a dangerous and entirely baseless sentiment abroad which assumes that every teaching of Christ must be binding during this age simply because Christ said it. The fact is forgotten that Christ, while living under, keeping, and applying the law of Moses, also taught the principles of His yet future kingdom, and, at the end of His ministry and in relation to His cross, He also anticipated the teachings of grace. If this three-fold division of the teachings of Christ is not recognized, there can be nothing but confusion of mind and consequent contradiction of truth" (Chafer, G, 52%). The Sermon on the Mount, for example, was spoken by Jesus, not to the church, which was not yet in existence, but rather to first-century Jews who were on the threshold of the restored Davidic Kingdom, should the required condition of national repentance be met. “P. B. Fitzwater [in Christian Theology, p. 535] has summarized the situation well: ‘This so-called Sermon on the Mount is the royal proclamation, or the setting forth of the laws which shall prevail when Christ shall reign as King. The Sermon on the Mount is strictly kingdom and not Church truth. However, the principles of righteousness set forth are of perpetual and universal application’” (Feinberg, M, p. 223). “Finally, as for truth for the church, the teachings of the Lord Jesus [in the Sermon on the Mount] on the way of salvation, the Holy Spirit, the church itself, prayer in Christ’s name, and the rapture are not found once” (ibid., p. 222). “The Golden Rule, apart from a society of regenerated men whose desires are morally right, is never wholly workable and may actually prove to be a perilous mode of action... short of heaven and the eternal state, only in a Kingdom of God on earth... can the Golden Rule become fully a practical principle for all human action” (McClain, GK, p. 289).

Characteristics of Prophetic Scripture

Finally, let’s consider some basic but important characteristics of prophetic Scripture.

First, again, it should be recognized that prophecy is always connected with history. (See our discussion of the Bible’s relation to history in the section Premises Regarding the Bible in our previous chapter Presuppositions and Premises.)

Next it should be understood that prophecy often does not contain a precise chronology. “In prophecy there is only a general, indefinite appeal to chronology (excepting Daniel and the Apoc.)” (Peters, TTK, 1:246). This can be seen in the fact that Old Testament prophecy is generally compressed time-wise, and that even Jesus’ prophecies did not contain a precise chronology.

Time is generally compressed in Old Testament prophecy. “Two events, widely separated as to the time of their fulfillment, may be brought together into the scope of one prophecy” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 46). “The prophets often saw together on the screen of revelation certain events which in their fulfillment would be greatly separated by centuries of time. This characteristic, so strange to Western minds, was in perfect harmony with the Oriental mind which was not greatly concerned with continuous chronology. And the Bible, humanly speaking, is an Oriental book” (McClain, GK, p. 137). This time compression can be seen by examining three Old Testament prophecies: First, Isaiah 9:6 says, “For a child will be born to us, a son will be given to us; And the government will rest on His shoulders; And His name will be called Wonderful Counselor, Mighty God, Eternal Father, Prince of Peace.” While the first part of this prophecy, the prediction that “a child will be born to us,” was fulfilled at Jesus’ Incarnation, the second part of the prophecy, stating that “the government will rest on His shoulders” awaits fulfillment at His Second Coming. Second, Isaiah 61:1-2 says, “The Spirit of the Lord Jehovah is upon me; because Jehovah hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound; to proclaim the year of Jehovah’s favor, and the day of vengeance of our God; to comfort all that mourn” The first part of this prophecy was fulfilled at Jesus’ First Advent. Luke writes, “And He came to Nazareth, where He had been brought up; and as was His custom, He entered the synagogue on the Sabbath, and stood up to read. And the book of the prophet Isaiah was handed to Him. And He opened the book, and found the place where it was written, “The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me, Because He anointed Me to preach the gospel to the poor. He has sent Me to proclaim release to the captives, And recovery of sight to the blind, To set free those who are downtrodden, To proclaim the favorable year of the Lord.” And He closed the book, and gave it back to the attendant, and sat down; and the eyes of all in the synagogue were fixed upon Him. And He began to say to them, “Today this Scripture has been fulfilled in your hearing” (Luke 4:16-21). The first part of Isaiah’s prophecy, that “Jehovah hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek,” was fulfilled at Jesus’ First Advent, as Jesus explained to those in attendance at the synagogue in Nazareth. However, the latter part of the prophecy, concerning “the day of vengeance,” is yet future. Therefore, while contained within the same prophecy, the fulfillments of these two prophetic events are actually separated by many centuries. Third, Zechariah said “Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy king cometh unto thee; he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, even upon a colt the foal of an ass. And I will cut off the chariot from Ephraim, and the horse from Jerusalem; and the battle bow shall be cut off; and he shall speak peace unto the nations: and his dominion shall be from sea to sea, and from the River to the ends of the earth.” The first part of this prophecy was fulfilled on Palm Sunday, when Jesus rode into Jerusalem on a donkey (Matt. 21:5), presenting Himself as peaceful King to the Jewish nation. However, now, almost two thousand years later, the latter part of this prophecy still awaits fulfillment when Jesus returns to earth, at which time He will present Himself to Israel and to the world, not as the peace-offering King riding on a donkey, but rather as the conquering King of Kings and Lord of Lords (Rev. 19:16), atop a white war horse (vs.

11). Indeed, “It is not uncommon for future events to be initially lumped together, and then for further revelation to show that they are separable” (Geisler, ST, 4:474).

There are several purposes for this time compression. Peters suggests, “This intermingling and blending of Advents, or rather, this non-discrimination of Advents, is purposely done, (1) to allow full latitude to the freedom of the nation; (2) to evince the foreknowledge, truthfulness, and faithfulness of God; (3) to test the faith of His people; (4) to throw the responsibility of Christ’s rejection upon the nation; (5) to prepare the way for the engrafting of the Gentiles; (6) to avoid the despondency, etc., that must arise, if the long intervening period of time were presented” (TTK, 1:242). He adds, “This characteristic of not distinguishing between the two Advents, excepting as the events connected with one or the other now (in view of fulfillment) enables us to discriminate between them, has been often ridiculed by unbelief as an evidence of weakness. We, on the other hand, find in it a profound meaning and an indication of the highest wisdom and the greatest strength. Indeed, when properly comprehended in its true relationship to the Jewish nation and the Theocracy, it forms a strong proof of inspiration, being a phase beyond human conception and continuance. Foreknowing the facts, it carefully avoids contradiction in the least particular; aware of the result, it gives due latitude to moral freedom; and conscious of a postponement resulting from the conduct of the Jewish nation, it still proclaims that God’s Plan shall be ultimately accomplished. Divine Wisdom alone could devise such a wonderful way of predicting the future” (ibid., p. 244). “Now it is no longer a matter of difficulty to discriminate; the fulfillments at the First Advent teach us what to apply to it and what to refer to the Second. Both Advents are plainly delineated—one of humiliation, suffering and death, and exaltation; the other, one of triumph, vengeance, dominion, and glory. The Primitive Church view gives us the key to this peculiar prophetic style, and this very delineation, now so perplexing to Jewish Rabbis and to unbelievers, is evidence, if we will receive it, of Divine inspiration” (ibid., 1:385).

One purpose of this time compression is to give us assurance of the distant aspects of these near-and-distant prophecies. “It was the purpose of God to give the near and far view so that the fulfillment of the one should be the assurance of the fulfillment of the other” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 47). “The student may find a prophecy having all the external marks of literary unity, yet referring to some event in the near future connected with the historical phase of the Kingdom and also to some far-off event connected with the Messiah and His Millennial Kingdom. When the first event arrives, it becomes the earnest and divine forecast of the more distant and final event” (McClain, GK, p. 137).

A second purpose of this time compression is to insure the literalness of the fulfillment of the distant aspects of near-and-distant prophecies. “The manner in which the prophecies were fulfilled at the First Advent teaches us how we may expect the prophecies pertaining to the Second to be realized, viz.: in the strict grammatical sense contained in them” (Peters, TTK, 1:243). “Take, for example, the anti-millennial approach to such a passage as Isaiah 9:6-7 which in part reads: ‘For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder... Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David.’ Now the normal and natural sense here should be perfectly obvious: A Child will be born, and He will reign universally upon the throne of David. And so we begin our interpretation with a literal child and a literal birth. But now consider what happens if an unbroken mould of continuous time is clamped on the prophecy. Because the regal Child did not immediately take the literal throne of David to rule the world, it is argued that such a thing will never come to pass. And then, to preserve the assumption of unbroken time-sequence which cannot allow room for any literal fulfillment of the second part of the prophecy at some future time, the throne of David on earth is changed into the throne of God in heaven, and Messiah’s reign is reduced to the ‘influence of the Gospel’ or the rule of God in the ‘hearts of men’” (McClain, GK, p. 137).

A third purpose of time compression in the prophecies is to preserve moral freedom. “It will be observed that, owing to the terrible period of punishment for the rejection of ‘the Christ,’ etc., no distinction of First and Second Advent is made, and a little reflection will show the great wisdom and mercy of God in not making it. Had it been made, its revelation would have had crushing force, and would have interfered with moral freedom. We regard this very feature, so delicately handled, as a decisive proof of divine inspiration” (Peters, TTK, 1:243).

A fourth and final purpose of time compression is to allow for the rejection and postponement of the Kingdom. “The leading motive for such a non-discrimination of First and Second Advent will be found in the offer of this same Kingdom to the Jewish nation at the First Advent, and, upon its rejection by the nation, in its postponement to the Sec. Advent” (Peters, TTK, 1:242).

It will be noticed that even Jesus’ prophecies did not contain a precise chronology. McClain says, “We must be careful, however, not to read into the words of Christ any hard and fast chronological scheme. For, in conformity with the general method of predictive prophecy, our Lord pictured together future events which would be outrolled separately in their historical fulfillment. This method is not something wholly arbitrary but has a gracious purpose. Within certain limits, it leaves room in history for the interplay of both divine sovereignty and human freedom. The future event is always certain, but the time element (with certain important exceptions) has elasticity... For, viewed from the standpoint of Jewish opportunity and responsibility, the siege of Jerusalem in A.D. 70 might have led directly to the end of the age... This divinely ordained elasticity of time is the rock upon which, fortunately, all rigid chronological charts of the present age have been wrecked” (GK, p. 365).

It should also be noticed that future events are sometimes spoken of in past or present tense, for emphasis. “The present tense is often put for the future, to show that the thing spoken of shall as certainly happen as if it were already present” (Peters, TTK, 1:415). For example, “But you have come to Mount Zion and to the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to myriads of angels... And His voice shook the earth then, but now He has promised, saying, ‘Yet once more I will shake not only the earth, but also the heaven.’ And this expression, ‘Yet once more,’ denotes the removing of those things which can be shaken, as of created things, in order that those things which cannot be shaken may remain. Therefore, since we receive a kingdom which cannot be shaken, let us show gratitude, by which we may offer to God an acceptable service with reverence and awe” (Heb. 12:22-28). Also, “and whom He predestined, these He also called; and whom He called, these He also justified; and whom He justified, these He also glorified” (Rom. 8:30). And, “and He has made us to be a kingdom, priests to His God and Father; to Him be the glory and the dominion forever and ever. Amen” (Rev. 1:6). Also, “I, John, your brother and fellow partaker in the tribulation and kingdom and perseverance which are in Jesus, was on the island called Patmos, because of the word of God and the testimony of Jesus” (vs. 9) “This feature heightens the Divine in the Word, making it to speak in the largeness and fulness of the Spirit, as e.g. in that Divine Purpose portrayed in the declaration that Jesus is ‘the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world’ (Rev. 13:8)” (Peters, TTK, 1:415). “Thus the Kingdom of God, the great object of faith and hope, being sure, founded on the Word and oath of the Almighty, is in view of its certainty spoken of as present, being received, etc. in Heb. 12:22-28; Rom. 8:30; Rev. 1:6, 9, etc. To take such passages, given through the intensity of faith and hope, and make them contradictory and inconsistent with the general analogy of the Word, is certainly both unwise and unnecessary” (ibid.).

Finally, since God is both the originator and the fulfiller of Bible prophecy, prophecy will be fulfilled whether believed or not. “The refusal of man to believe does not alter the predictions or change God’s purpose in their fulfillment” (Peters, TTK, 2:722).

Rules For the Interpretation of Scripture

We interpret everyday language, whether spoken or written, according to basic, universally recognized and understood rules of speech, or rules of grammar. We don’t normally discuss these rules when speaking, writing, listening or reading, because they’re simply taken for granted. In everyday language, the plain, ordinary sense of language is always assumed by the listener or reader. However, for a variety of reasons, when reading and interpreting the Bible, many Bible interpreters feel compelled to reject the plain sense of the written text in favor of a more allegorical or “spiritual” sense. Because this spiritualizing of Scripture is so common, we need to discuss it here, and demonstrate that this “spiritualizing” of the text is almost never warranted. Instead, we suggest strongly that the same basic rules of grammar that we use for interpreting everyday language also apply to Scripture interpretation, and that, generally speaking, the further we stray from these basic rules, the further we stray from the true, intended meaning of Scripture.

Rules Are Important and Are Readily Available

Rules for Scripture interpretation are important. “...a bad methodology leads to a bad theology” (Geisler, ST, 4:440). And, these rules are readily available. “Our rules can be found in every grammar and rhetoric, and are common to all languages” (Peters, TTK, 3:244).

General Rules

We begin with the premise that Scripture can indeed be interpreted correctly. “and you shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free” (John 8:32). “But when He, the Spirit of truth, comes, He will guide you into all the truth; for He will not speak on His own initiative, but whatever He hears, He will speak; and He will disclose to you what is to come” (John 16:13). “Sanctify them in the truth; Thy word is truth” (John 17:17). “I have not written to you because you do not know the truth, but because you do know it, and because no lie is of the truth” (1 John 2:21). “The elder to the chosen lady and her children, whom I love in truth; and not only I, but also all who know the truth” (2 John 1:1)

Here are some basic rules of interpretation that we suggest:

First, we should interpret Scripture using the normal rules of language. “...limiting the interpretation of the Bible by the laws of language, as universally held” (Peters: TTK, 1:64)

Next, we should allow Scripture to interpret Scripture. “Scripture is the best interpreter of Scripture” (Geisler, ST, 4:420) “Much that is mystical, or purely inferential, is put on the phrase by various writers, which a simple comparison of Scripture avoids” (Peters, TTK, 2:115).

Simple problems should be solved before complicated ones. “The Cartesian principle of solving the more simple problems first...” (Walvoord, MK, p. 18)

Clear passages should interpret obscure ones. “From the literal to the figurative, from the clearer to the more obscure, has been ever recognized as the law of Scripture interpretation” (Peters, TTK, 2:20). “...the more obscure passages must be interpreted by those decisive” (ibid., p. 26) “Hermeneutics teach that obscure and ambiguous places must be explained by the light of such clear and unambiguous places, and not the converse” (Chafer, ST, 4:425). “One should not use a disputed passage to prove a doctrine” (Geisler, ST, 3:336). “...difficult texts must be interpreted in light of clear ones rather than vice versa” (ibid., p. 467).

Doctrine should not be derived from types or parables. “While parables may assist to illustrate a doctrine already given, a doctrine is itself derived from another class of Scripture” (Peters, TTK, 2:223). “Many an error has found its basis in some parabolic detail, e.g., the gradual and ultimate triumph of the Church in converting the world through the ‘leavening process’ of the Gospel. It is never safe to use either a type or parable to teach something not elsewhere taught directly and clearly in the Word of God” (McClain, GK, p. 324). “Typology is useful to illustrate a doctrine, but cannot be the basis of it” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 488).

We must not interpret Scripture to fit current events; rather, vice versa. “Let all men refrain from interpreting Scripture in the light of current events, rather than events in the light of Scripture. The latter course is the only trustworthy one” (Feinberg, M, p.167).

Finally, we must not go beyond what is written. “Now these things, brethren, I have figuratively applied to myself and Apollos for your sakes, that in us you might learn not to exceed what is written, in order that no one of you might become arrogant in behalf of one against the other” (1 Cor. 4:6). “In reference to so important a matter as the Kingdom, we unhesitatingly adopt the language of Eaton (Perm. of Chris., p. 46), ‘we cannot, however, accept, we can only repudiate and challenge all asserted improvements, whether by substitution or omission, in the subject matter of Christianity itself, effected by alleged advances in knowledge and civilization” (Peters, TTK, 1:492). The truly spiritual interpreters are those who, submitting themselves to the inspired Word of God, neither add to nor subtract from Scripture.

In order for our interpretation of the Bible to be correct, it must have the following characteristics:

First, it must be systematic. “A rejection of the systematic and logical statements of the Word forming a regular, unbroken series, is the source of much error” (Peters, TTK, 3:566).

Then, it must be objective. Not all Scripture is about us. “It has been said ‘All Scripture is for us, but all Scripture is not about us.’ It all bears a message to us, but is not all our rule of life. It will not do for Gentile believers to read themselves into the great portion of the Bible which treats distinctly of a chosen nation, still a separate people in the earth, under the special unbroken purpose of God and exactly where God intended them to be at this very hour” (Chafer, KHP, 7%). Also, we must be careful not to read our prejudices into the text. “He is the best reader who rather expects to obtain sense from the words than imposes it upon them, and who carries more away than he has brought, nor forces that upon the words which he had resolved to understand before he began to read” (Peters: TTK, 1:51). “So be it then, if men desire to elevate themselves to the judgment seat, deeming themselves perfectly adequate to decide what is proper and what improper for the Almighty to perform; what is worthy and what unworthy of credence in His Word” (ibid., p. 165). “Van Oosterzee... (Ch. Dog., vol. 2, S. 145)... ‘him who interprets the Scripture without preconceived views and allows his thoughts to be brought into captivity to the obedience of the Word’” (ibid., 2:679). “Martin Luther [in Basic Theological Writings, p. 595]... ‘The best teacher is the one who does not bring his meaning into the Scripture but gets his meaning from Scripture’” (Geisler, ST, 4:438).

It must be exhaustive. “A painful lack of candor toward the entire truth, a specious, unsound form of reasoning, which takes just as much as suits its purpose and leaves out the most important in its bearing, characterizes the attacks upon the King and Kingdom” (Peters, TTK, 3:296). “The doctrine of the Kingdom should be determined by an inductive examination of all the Biblical material on the subject, and it should not have to stand or fall by the inclusion or exclusion of isolated passages where interpretation may be in serious dispute” (McClain, GK, p. 16). The only way to be certain of any Bible doctrine is to consider all that the Bible teaches on the subject.

Our interpretation must be contextual. “The Law of the Context, which states: A text apart from its context is a pretext. A verse can only mean what it means in its context and must not be taken out of its context... The common saying, ‘You can prove anything by the Bible,’ is only true when this law is violated” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 6).

And, it must be cultural. “Modern systems of theology are erected in such an elaborate and systematic mode, a scientific and philosophical manner, that they are widely different from the simple and unscientific—yet purposely designed—treatment of doctrine in the Bible. The effect sometimes is, that the student, attracted by the elegance and magnitude of the superstructure of such systems, underrates the more rugged but firmer stones of the foundation in the Scriptures. Impressed by modern modes of thinking and the results of modern thought, he forgets to transport himself back to the ancient manner of thinking and expression. He lives in a world very different from that which existed when prophets predicted and disciples preached. This naturally leads to misconception and misinterpretation of the Scriptures. Hence it is, that the rule (which Horne, in Introd., justly remarks, is constantly violated by commentators and others) appropriately commends itself: ‘We must endeavor to carry ourselves back to the very times and places in which they (the Scriptures) were written, and realize the ideas and modes of thinking of the sacred writers’” (Peters, TTK, 1:183).

And, the vast majority of the time, it must be literal. For the most part, Scripture should be interpreted in its most plain, simple and obvious sense. “The premillennial position is that the Bible should be interpreted in its ordinary grammatical and historical meaning in all areas of theology unless contextual or theological reasons make it clear that this was not intended by the writer” (Walvoord, MK, p. 128). “A literal promise spiritualized is exegetical fraud” (ibid., p. 200). As much as any other kind of Scripture, prophecy should be interpreted literally. Nowhere do we find in Scripture that God ever suggested that prophecy should be interpreted less literally than any other kind of Scripture. Unwarranted spiritualization of Scripture, including prophetic Scripture, is not “progress;” it’s counterproductive. “We earnestly protest against this leavening process being introduced into—with the purest of motives—Protestantism—a process by which, under the plea of progress and development, the authority of Bible truth is certainly undermined. Let us be sure of this: that any professed increase of knowledge which conflicts with the plain meaning of the Bible is not in the direction of true development” (Peters, TTK, 1:203). We’ll cover this more fully in our discussion of the grammatical-historical method below.

Our interpretation must be consistent. “To the degree we have been inconsistent in the application of sound hermeneutical principles we have been in error in our conclusions and interpretations. The observance of these sound rules of prophetic interpretation will lead one into a correct interpretation of the Scriptures” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 64).

Finally, if we consistently follow these rules, the result will be harmonious. Peters summarizes, “In relation to the analogy of Scripture, which exhibits a general connection and agreement subsisting between the truths contained in Holy Scripture, such connection and correspondence is strikingly manifested. Thus we have first the covenant with its promises; then a Theocracy with a special ordering growing out of it; then the amplification of this covenant with David, owing to the foreseen fall; then the overthrow of the Theocratic Kingdom on account of sinfulness; then the prophetic announcements, based on the covenants, of the restoration of this Theocratic Kingdom (under a new arrangement) by David’s Son and Lord; then the First Advent of the promised Messiah, David’s Son, and the tender of this Kingdom on condition of repentance; then the rejection of it by the nation and the atoning death of Jesus, with the postponement of the Kingdom to the Sec. Advent; then, to provide a seed for Abraham, the call of the Jews and Gentiles; the establishment of the Chr. Church; the connection that this Church sustains to the postponed Kingdom; the relation that the Messiah maintains toward it; the assurances that we have in Christ’s ability in virtue of His death, resurrection, and exaltation to fulfill the covenanted promises; the fulfillment of covenant and promises at the Sec. Advent; the condition of the Church during this intermediate period, and the attitude of nations during the Times of the Gentiles—are all given, so unmistakably and connectedly by the different writers, as to form a complete chain, one link firmly fastened to another. A perfect historical connection is apparent in the Word, and is repeated in verified history, showing us, if we will accept of it, an agreement of Scripture in affirming God’s purpose to raise up a glorious Theocratic Kingdom, strengthened by the present abundant provision made through Christ for its consummation. Revelation, in all its varied utterances, constantly responds to this Theocratic idea, and upholds the blessed work of Redemption that is to be perfected and realized in the Theocratic Kingdom. So naturally does this run through Scripture, that we need not depreciate or set aside any portion of the Word (as e.g. the distinctive preaching of John, Jesus, and the disciples); there is no part of it that we find antagonistic (as e.g. Zech., ch. 14); there are no promises that we need to spiritualize away (as e.g. those to the Jewish nation as such); there is no portion that we must regard with mistrust (as e.g. the Apoc., 2 Pet., etc.);

there are no utterances that require toning down (as e.g. in reference to watching for the Advent, etc.); there are no sections of it that we must separate and subdivide in the most arbitrary manner (as e.g. Mill. prophecies in Isa. 25, etc.). Instead of this, one part of Scripture fully sustains another, and combined form a distinct related series from which, taken in its plain grammatical sense, we would not remove an iota either by direct denial, or by fastening upon it a sense not grammatically expressed in the words. But having already shown such a connection to exist under our propositions, we only add that this feature is corroborative of the truthfulness and logical correctness of our position. If this were lacking—if such a connection were wanting (as e.g. in the announcement of the postponement of the Kingdom)—then a material flaw would be found in our doctrinal teaching, and the Analogy of Scripture (which is the foundation of the Analogy of Faith) would lead to mistrust and doubt, instead of being, as now, confirmatory of faith and strength” (TTK, 3:343). “One of the sweetest consolations that this doctrine of the Kingdom affords, is that it thus supports, strengthens, and elucidates the other doctrines of the Bible, and binds them into a symmetrical whole, required to attain to the majestic design held by the Divine Purposes” (ibid., p. 345).

The Grammatical-Historical Method

In theological terminology, this “plain sense” way of interpreting the Bible is called the grammatical-historical hermeneutical method. Dr. Geisler explains the terms historical and grammatical: “Historical... A common way of describing the literal means of interpretation is the historical-grammatical method. The word historical in this term means the sentences should be understood in their historical setting; they should not be taken out of the space-time, cultural context in which they were uttered. Dwight Pentecost (b. 1915) describes this point well: ‘[The exegete] will have to transfer himself mentally into the first century [when interpreting the New Testament]... He must place himself on the standpoint of the author, and seek to enter into his very soul, until he, as it were, lives his life and thinks his thoughts... [This is in order to] guard carefully against the rather common mistake of transferring the author to the present day and making him speak the language of the twentieth century.’ (Things to Come, 37) Grammatical... The term grammatical indicates that the true meaning of a sentence is rooted in its grammar, emerging from the structure wherein all parts of speech—including nouns, verbs, adjectives, adverbs, articles, prepositions etc.—are placed in a form from which a specific meaning can be derived. Alleged textual meaning that ignores and/or is opposed to grammatical structure is not the correct meaning. The historical-grammatical method involves giving each word ‘the same exact basic meaning it would have in normal, ordinary, customary usage, whether employed in writing, speaking or thinking.’ (ibid., 9)” (ST, 1:415). Pentecost describes the historical-grammatical method concisely: “When the plain sense of Scripture makes common sense, seek no other sense; therefore, take every word at its primary, ordinary, usual, literal meaning unless the facts of the immediate context, studied in the light of related passages and axiomatic and fundamental truths, indicate clearly otherwise.” [quoting David L. Cooper, The God of Israel, p. iii] (TTC, p. 42). Peters (TTK, 1:46), Fruchtbaum (FM, p. 4) and Geisler (ST, 4:419) concur with Pentecost on this.

One of the most important ideas that this writer would like the reader to take from this book is this “plain sense” or grammatical-historical way of interpreting the Bible. With it, the reader will be equipped to interpret the Bible for himself or herself. Because of its importance, we will explore the merits of this hermeneutical method in some detail.

Characteristics of the Grammatical-Historical Method

In this section, we’ll examine approximately one hundred reasons¹⁷ why this “plain sense” way of interpreting the Bible, otherwise known as the grammatical-historical hermeneutical method, is incomparably (in relation to all other methods) correct, helpful and God-honoring. We’ll be demonstrating that the grammatical-historical hermeneutic (henceforth abbreviated G-HH for brevity) is, in broad categories (each category containing several reasons): factual, biblical, in harmony with fulfilled prophecy, historical, acknowledged by orthodoxy, self-affirming, natural, comprehensive, universal, scripture-honoring, God-honoring, God’s people-honoring, fall-en-man-deprecating, edifying, unifying, protective and sufficient.

Before examining the one hundred reasons why the Bible means what it plainly says, let’s first take a look at some passages that have been commonly interpreted in ways other than in their plain, historical, grammatical sense. These are all passages that have some bearing on the nature of the Kingdom. Should these passages be interpreted plainly (meaning in most cases, literally), or figuratively? The answer to this question will to a high degree determine our view of the Kingdom. It is our contention that all of these passages should be interpreted plainly (and in most cases, literally).

¹⁷ This writer had considered writing a book on this subject, “100 Reasons Why the Bible Means What it Says,” but has decided instead to incorporate the material into this book. Confidence that the the plain sense of Scripture is the correct sense (in relation to Israel, etc.) is crucial for developing a correct view of the Kingdom.

It will then be with these passages in mind that we'll make our case (by citing our one hundred reasons) that the G-HH is the correct way to interpret the Bible.

First, consider these passages regarding Christ's humanity: "I saw in the night-visions, and, behold, there came with the clouds of heaven one like unto a son of man, and he came even to the ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all the peoples, nations, and languages should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed" (Dan 7:13–14). "Jesus answered and said to them, 'Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up.' The Jews therefore said, 'It took forty-six years to build this temple, and will You raise it up in three days?' But He was speaking of the temple of His body. When therefore He was raised from the dead, His disciples remembered that He said this; and they believed the Scripture, and the word which Jesus had spoken" (John 2:19–22). "For there is one God, and one mediator also between God and men, the man Christ Jesus" (1 Tim. 2:5) Questions: Is the Kingdom to come to be given to an incorporeal spirit creature (as taught, for instance, by Jehovah's Witnesses), or to a human being? Was Jesus' human body raised from the dead? Is Jesus a man today? The G-HH will help us answer these questions.

Regarding the Rapture of the church, "But we do not want you to be uninformed, brethren, about those who are asleep, that you may not grieve, as do the rest who have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so God will bring with Him those who have fallen asleep in Jesus. For this we say to you by the word of the Lord, that we who are alive, and remain until the coming of the Lord, shall not precede those who have fallen asleep. For the Lord Himself will descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trumpet of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and thus we shall always be with the Lord" (1 Thes. 4:13–17). Questions: Will the Lord Jesus remain in heaven forever (again, as taught, for instance, by Jehovah's Witnesses), or will He return, as this passage seems to indicate, to the earth's atmosphere? Is this being "caught up... in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air" something that will literally happen sometime, or is this passage speaking of a "spiritual" catching-up of some kind? Again, the G-HH will help us answer these questions.

Regarding Christ's Second Coming, "And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east; and the mount of Olives shall be cleft in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south” (Zech. 14:4). “BEHOLD, HE IS COMING WITH THE CLOUDS, and every eye will see Him, even those who pierced Him; and all the tribes of the earth will mourn over Him. Even so. Amen” (Rev. 1:7). Questions: When Jesus returns, will it be a visible, or an invisible event? If visible, who will see Him, and where on earth will He return? Again, we believe the grammatical-historical hermeneutic will help answer these questions clearly and definitively.

Regarding Israel’s future, “Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and he shall reign as king and deal wisely, and shall execute justice and righteousness in the land. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called: Jehovah our righteousness. Therefore, behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that they shall no more say, As Jehovah liveth, who brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but, As Jehovah liveth, who brought up and who led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all the countries whither I had driven them. And they shall dwell in their own land” (Jer. 23:5–8). “Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was a husband unto them, saith Jehovah. But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith Jehovah: I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write it; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people: and they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know Jehovah; for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith Jehovah: for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin will I remember no more. Thus saith Jehovah, who giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, who stirreth up the sea, so that the waves thereof roar; Jehovah of hosts is his name: If these ordinances depart from before me, saith Jehovah, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever. Thus saith Jehovah: If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, then will I also cast off all the seed of Israel for all that they have done, saith Jehovah. Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that the city shall be built to Jehovah from the tower of Hananel unto the gate of the corner” (Jer. 31:31–38). “And Jesus said to them, ‘Truly I say to you, that you who have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man will sit on His glorious throne, you also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel’” (Matt. 19:28). “And the angel said to her, ‘Do not be afraid, Mary; for you have found favor with God. And behold, you will conceive in your womb, and bear a son, and you shall name Him Jesus. He will be great, and will be called the Son of the Most High; and the Lord God will give Him the throne of His father David; and He will reign over the house of Jacob forever; and His kingdom will have no end” (Luke 1:30–33). “For I would not, brethren, have you ignorant of this mystery, lest ye be wise in your own conceits, that a hardening in part hath befallen Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in; and so all Israel shall be saved: even as it is written, There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer; He shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob: And this is my covenant unto them, When I shall take away their sins” (Rom. 11:25–27). “After this I saw four angels standing at the four corners of the earth, holding back the four winds of the earth, so that no wind should blow on the earth or on the sea or on any tree. And I saw another angel ascending from the rising of the sun, having the seal of the living God; and he cried out with a loud voice to the four angels to whom it was granted to harm the earth and the sea, saying, ‘Do not harm the earth or the sea or the trees, until we have sealed the bond-servants of our God on their foreheads.’ And I heard the number of those who were sealed, one hundred and forty-four thousand sealed from every tribe of the sons of Israel: from the tribe of Judah, twelve thousand were sealed, from the tribe of Reuben twelve thousand, from the tribe of Gad twelve thousand, from the tribe of Asher twelve thousand, from the tribe of Naph-tali twelve thousand, from the tribe of Manasseh twelve thousand, from the tribe of Simeon twelve thousand, from the tribe of Levi twelve thousand, from the tribe of Issachar twelve thousand, from the tribe of Zebulun twelve thousand, from the tribe of Joseph twelve thousand, from the tribe of Benjamin, twelve thousand were sealed” (Rev. 7:1-8). Questions: Does national Israel have any future role in God’s Kingdom program? Are the Jews to be literally gathered back to the land of Palestine? With whom is the “new covenant” made? Who comprises the “all Israel” that is to be saved? Where is David’s throne, in heaven or on earth? Will ethnic Israelites have any special roles to play during the Tribulation? Again, the G-HH will suggest some clear, unambiguous answers to these questions.

Regarding the government of the Millennial Kingdom, “And it shall come to pass in the latter days, that the mountain of Jehovah’s house shall be established on the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it. And many peoples shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of Jehovah, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of Jehovah from Jerusalem. And he will judge between the nations, and will decide concerning many peoples; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more” (Isa. 2:2–4). “For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of Jehovah of hosts will perform this” (Isa. 9:6–7). “And they sang a new song, saying, ‘Worthy art Thou to take the book, and to break its seals; for Thou wast slain, and didst purchase for God with Thy blood men from every tribe and tongue and people and nation. And Thou hast made them to be a kingdom and priests to our God; and they will reign upon the earth’” (Rev. 5:9–10). Questions: In the Millennial Kingdom, from where will the law go forth? Is this location in heaven, or on earth? And again, where is David’s throne? And, where will Christ’s co-rulers reign, in heaven or on earth?

Regarding conditions under the Millennial Kingdom “And the wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the adder’s den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of Jehovah, as the waters cover the sea” (Isa. 11:6–9). Question: In this passage, is Isaiah referring to people, or to animals?

Regarding the duration of the Millennial Kingdom, “And I saw an angel coming down from heaven, having the key of the abyss and a great chain in his hand. And he laid hold of the dragon, the serpent of old, who is the devil and Satan, and bound him for a thousand years, and threw him into the abyss, and shut it and sealed it over him, so that he should not deceive the nations any longer, until the thousand years were completed; after these things he must be released for a short time. And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given to them. And I saw the souls of those who had been beheaded because of the testimony of Jesus and because of the word of God, and those who had not worshiped the beast or his image, and had not received the mark upon their forehead and upon their hand; and they came to life and reigned with Christ for a thousand years. The rest of the dead did not come to life until the thousand years were completed. This is the first resurrection. Blessed and holy is the one who has a part in the first resurrection; over these the second death has no power, but they will be priests of God and of Christ and will reign with Him for a thousand years. When the thousand years are completed, Satan will be released from his prison” (Rev. 20:1–7). Question: Will the duration of the Millennial Kingdom be a literal thousand years, or a figurative thousand years?

Regarding life after death and eternal punishment, “And these will go away into eternal punishment, but the righteous into eternal life” (Matt. 25:46). “Now there was a certain rich man, and he habitually dressed in purple and fine linen, gaily living in splendor every day. And a certain poor man named Lazarus was laid at his gate, covered with sores, and longing to be fed with the crumbs which were falling from the rich man’s table; besides, even the dogs were coming and licking his sores. Now it came about that the poor man died and he was carried away by the angels to Abraham’s bosom; and the rich man also died and was buried. And in Hades he lifted up his eyes, being in torment, and saw Abraham far away, and Lazarus in his bosom. And he cried out and said, “Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water and cool off my tongue; for I am in agony in this flame.” But Abraham said, “Child, remember that during your life you received your good things, and likewise Lazarus bad things; but now he is being comforted here, and you are in agony. And besides all this, between us and you there is a great chasm fixed, in order that those who wish to come over from here to you may not be able, and that none may cross over from there to us.” And he said, “Then I beg you, Father, that you send him to my father’s house — for I have five brothers — that he may warn them, lest they also come to this place of torment.” But Abraham said, “They have Moses and the Prophets; let them hear them.” But he said, “No, Father

Abraham, but if someone goes to them from the dead, they will repent!” But he said to him, “If they do not listen to Moses and the Prophets, neither will they be persuaded if someone rises from the dead”” (Luke 16:19–31). “And the devil who deceived them was thrown into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are also; and they will be tormented day and night forever and ever” (Rev. 20:10). Questions: Is it possible to experience conscious torment in Hades? What is the ultimate eventuality of the lost?

These passages could be multiplied a hundred times, and indeed they will be, in our detailed study of the Kingdom in Section 2, The Biblical Kingdom.

Now I will present my one hundred reasons why I believe the Bible, including the representative passages cited above, should be interpreted plainly, as per the grammatical-historical hermeneutic.

First, the grammatical-historical hermeneutic is factual. “It grounds interpretation in fact. It seeks to establish itself in objective data—grammar, logic, etymology, history, geography, archaeology, theology...” [quoting Bernard Ramm, Protestant Biblical Interpretation, p. 54] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 11) “The test of any system of interpretation is its correspondence to the facts of history” (Walvoord, MK, p. 53).

Next, the G-HH is biblical, unlike spiritualization. “From an evangelical point of view, perhaps the most telling argument against allegorism is that it is unbiblical. With the exception of one New Testament passage that clearly labels itself as a nonliteral allegory (or illustration—Gal. 4:21-31), there are no allegorical interpretations in the Bible” (Geisler, ST, 4:425). In the Bible, which is God’s revelation to mankind, God never specified nor authorized any other method. “Just so soon as God declares that the grammatical sense is the one not intended, then, and only then, other engrafted senses may be tolerated” (Peters, TTK, 1:349). “What satisfactory reason can be assigned for introducing an entire new element of interpretation which emasculates some of the most precious of God’s promises to man? Where is the authority for this most arbitrary dealing with the Word? Are the rules for such a proceeding given authoritatively by God or man; and if so, where found? Simple consistency, if nothing else, demands that if one portion of these prophecies is conceded to be literal (i.e. to mean what the laws of language present) then the other portion must be understood in like manner. For, having applied the literal interpretation, compatibility requires its continuance, unless God Himself, the only Being having authority to indicate a change, in express terms revokes it, or informs us that it is to be understood differently” (ibid., 2:84). “Is it requisite that such an antagonism should exist between the plain language of the Bible and that of the dominant Theology? No! Never, for this would at once argue imperfection in God's Word, a mere accommodation to human weakness, and that He, the God of all truth, purposely led a host of believing people (both Jews and Christians) into gross error pertaining to the leading doctrine of the Bible. Before such a change of meaning can be adopted, it must be shown that God Himself directed such a transformation of the import and signification of language; that He cancelled the covenant made with David and the elect position of the Jewish nation; that He recalled the predictions of prophets, and that He altered the Divine Plan originally proposed" (ibid., 3:223). The G-HH fits biblical history. Is it not true that all of biblical history is intended by God to be understood literally? If so, then why not biblical prophecy, which is only history told in advance?

The G-HH fits fulfilled prophecy. Regarding prophecy in general, "None could question with fairness that the prophecy now fulfilled has followed the literal method to the last detail. It is therefore both unreasonable and unbelieving to suppose that, to relieve some incredulity, the predictions yet unfulfilled will be realized in some spiritualized manner" (Chafer, ST, 4:288). "Inasmuch as all prophecies that have been fulfilled have been fulfilled literally, consistency demands that this method must be adopted for those portions of the prophetic Scriptures that, as yet, may be unfulfilled" (Pentecost, TTC, p. 84). "(Zech. 14:3)... 'his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east' (vs. 4)... 'behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass' (Zech. 9:9). Since this has been literally fulfilled, why should the other be rejected as unreasonable" (McClain, GK, p. 191)? "Bernard Ramm [Protestant Biblical Interpretation, pp. 261-262]... '...literal interpretation... The literal fulfillment of some of the prophecies within the Old Testament period indicates the validity of that principle'" (Geisler, ST, 4:455). George Peters offers an interesting example: "From what has taken place in the past, we rest assured that God means just what the words in their plain grammatical sense convey, and that as such they will, in God's own time, be realized. God has hitherto rejected substitutions of His Word. Abraham tried it, when, after waiting for some years he contemplated adopting a son, thinking that God probably meant an adopted son, and then after another waiting he went in to Hagar supposing that the seed would be his and not Sarah's, but God fulfilled His Word just as written" (TTK, 1:317). Regarding prophecy concerning Israel, "Planting ourselves on the past literal fulfillment, unswerving faith accepts of what is recorded still relating to the future of city and nation, as that which shall become historical verity” (ibid., 2:61). For example, Israel’s first three dispersions (into Egypt, into Babylon and into all nations) and first two regatherings (from Egypt and from Babylon) were literal; with these five precedents, wouldn’t we normally expect Israel’s third regathering (from all nations) to be literal, as well?

The GH-H fits the prophecies concerning Jesus’ First Advent, the fulfillments of which are all readily available for our inspection, enabling us to determine whether they were fulfilled literally or in some other way. Jesus Himself said, “And He took the twelve aside and said to them, ‘Behold, we are going up to Jerusalem, and all things which are written through the prophets about the Son of Man will be accomplished” (Luke 18:31). And, “Now He said to them, ‘These are My words which I spoke to you while I was still with you, that all things which are written about Me in the Law of Moses and the Prophets and the Psalms must be fulfilled” (Luke 24:44). Peters says on this, “Simpson (Plea for Religion) makes the prophecies of the Old Test. to be fulfilled in Christ, literally in one hundred and nine instances; Horne (Introd., vol. 1, pp. 126 and 461), and many others, produce a wonderful array of literal fulfillment as to (1) descent, (2) time of Coming and forerunner, (3) place of birth, (4) particulars of birth, (5) life and qualifications, (6) miracles, (7) special events, (8) rejection and sufferings, (9) death, (10) burial, (11) resurrection and exaltation. These embrace an astounding array of minute particulars, so that we can readily see how (Acts 18:8) ‘the Apostles mightily convinced the Jews shewing by the Scriptures that Jesus was the Christ’ in a reference to them, confirmed as they were by their personal witnessing of them” (TTK, 3:413). Chafer adds, “Upwards of three hundred separate prophecies have been identified which belong to the first advent, and these, without exception, follow the plan of a literal fulfillment. It is, therefore, reasonable to expect that the yet future second advent program—far greater in extent—will be fulfilled after the same manner. Especially is this a natural conclusion since, as foreseen in the Old Testament, the features which make up the two advents are combined into one story. To introduce a literal fulfillment for those items which forecast the first advent—and such an interpretation cannot be avoided—with a spiritualizing conception of the features which preview the second advent is nothing short of violence to the Sacred Text” (ST, 4:304). And Feinberg, “Note how literally the Old Testament predictions were honored and fulfilled in the events of our Lord’s earthly life. There was a literal virgin birth; it was in literal Bethlehem that He was born; He was literally betrayed by a friend and sold for thirty pieces of silver; He literally rode into Jerusalem on a donkey; He was literally crucified and that between transgressors; He was literally raised from the dead; He literally performed miracles before His death and after His resurrection” (M, p. 144). “According to Old Testament prophecy, Messiah would be the divine Son of God; yet also a descendant of David, born of a virgin, in the village of Bethlehem; who would present Himself as the King of Israel riding on the foal of an ass. He would be rejected, suffer, die, and rise again from the grave. In such details as these it is acknowledged that there is clear and literal correspondence between the Old Testament prophecies and their historical fulfillment as recorded in the New Testament” (McClain, GK, p. 259). “...at His first coming. Furthermore, this coming provided a pattern of literal fulfillment to guard the reader against any misinterpretation of unfulfilled prophecy” (ibid., p. 261). “Even Berkhof would admit that at least most of the first coming prophecies were literally fulfilled, so why is the expectation of a literal fulfillment of the prophecies of ‘the future of Israel...entirely untenable’” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 203)? “In dealing with the fulfillment of first coming prophecies, the New Testament takes a very literal approach. There is no reason not to expect other prophecies to be fulfilled in the same way” (ibid., p. 207). “The ultimate proof that Old Testament prophecies should be taken literally and not spiritually (or allegorically) is that of its 113 messianic predictions that Christ has already fulfilled, all were fulfilled literally” (Geisler, ST, 4:426). “If the predictions surrounding Christ’s first coming are to be taken literally, then by logical extension there is no justification for spiritualizing predictions about His second coming” (ibid.). “Messianic events predicted by the prophets have literal identity with the life of Christ. Again, with all of these literally fulfilled, why should anything else be expected for the rest of the messianic oracles concerning a literal, political earthly kingdom” (ibid., p. 478)?

Because this is such an important point, let’s examine some of these prophecies regarding Christ’s First Advent and the manner in which they were fulfilled.

Jesus was born of a virgin: “Therefore the Lord himself will give you a sign: behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel” (Isa. 7:14). “Now all this took place that what was spoken by the Lord through the prophet might be fulfilled, saying, ‘Behold, the virgin shall be with child, and shall bear a Son, and they shall call His name Immanuel,’ which translated means, ‘God with us’” (Matt. 1:22-23).

He was born in Bethlehem: “But thou, Bethlehem Ephrathah, which art little to be among the thousands of Judah, out of thee shall one come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth are from of old, from everlasting” (Mic. 5:2). “And gathering together all the chief priests and scribes of the people, he began to inquire of them where the Christ was to be born. And they said to him, ‘In Bethlehem of Judea, for so it has been written by the prophet’” (Matt. 2:4–5)

He was heralded by a messenger: “The voice of one that crieth, Prepare ye in the wilderness the way of Jehovah; make level in the desert a highway for our God” (Isa. 40:3). “Behold, I send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me: and the Lord, whom ye seek, will suddenly come to his temple; and the messenger of the covenant, whom ye desire, behold, he cometh, saith Jehovah of hosts” (Mal. 3:1). “Now in those days John the Baptist came, preaching in the wilderness of Judea, saying, ‘Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.’ For this is the one referred to by Isaiah the prophet, saying, ‘THE VOICE OF ONE CRYING IN THE WILDERNESS, ‘MAKE READY THE WAY OF THE LORD, MAKE HIS PATHS STRAIGHT’”” (Matt. 3:1–3)!

He was rested upon by the Holy Spirit: “And the Spirit of Jehovah shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of Jehovah” (Isa. 11:2). “And after being baptized, Jesus went up immediately from the water; and behold, the heavens were opened, and he saw the Spirit of God descending as a dove, and coming upon Him, and behold, a voice out of the heavens, saying, ‘This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleased’” (Matt. 3:16–17).

He performed miracles: “It shall blossom abundantly and rejoice even with joy and singing. The glory of Lebanon shall be given to it, the excellency of [Mount] Carmel and [the plain] of Sharon. They shall see the glory of the Lord, the majesty and splendor and excellency of our God. Strengthen the weak hands and make firm the feeble and tottering knees. Say to those who are of a fearful and hasty heart, Be strong, fear not! Behold, your God will come with vengeance; with the recompense of God He will come and save you. Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap like a hart, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing for joy. For waters shall break forth in the wilderness and streams in the desert” (Isa. 35:2–6). “THE SPIRIT of the Lord God is upon me, because the Lord has anointed and qualified me to preach the Gospel of good tidings to the meek, the poor, and afflicted; He has sent me to bind up and heal the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the [physical and spiritual] captives and the opening of the prison and of the eyes to those who are bound, To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord [the year of His favor] and the day of vengeance of our God, to comfort all who mourn” (Isa. 61:1-2, AMP) “And Jesus was going about all the cities and the villages, teaching in their synagogues, and proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every kind of disease and every kind of sickness” (Matt. 9:3). “And He came to Nazareth, where He had been brought up; and as was His custom, He entered the synagogue on the Sabbath, and stood up to read. And the book of the prophet Isaiah was handed to Him. And He opened the book, and found the place where it was written, ‘THE SPIRIT OF THE LORD IS UPON ME, BECAUSE HE ANOINTED ME TO PREACH THE GOSPEL TO THE POOR. HE HAS SENT ME TO PROCLAIM RELEASE TO THE CAPTIVES, AND RECOVERY OF SIGHT TO THE BLIND, TO SET FREE THOSE WHO ARE DOWNTRODDEN, TO PROCLAIM THE FAVORABLE YEAR OF THE LORD.’ And He closed the book, and gave it back to the attendant, and sat down; and the eyes of all in the synagogue were fixed upon Him. And He began to say to them, ‘Today this Scripture has been fulfilled in your hearing’” (Luke 4:16–21).

He rode into Jerusalem on a donkey: “Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy king cometh unto thee; he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, even upon a colt the foal of an ass. And I will cut off the chariot from Ephraim, and the horse from Jerusalem; and the battle bow shall be cut off; and he shall speak peace unto the nations: and his dominion shall be from sea to sea, and from the River to the ends of the earth” (Zech. 9:9-10). “Now this took place that what was spoken through the prophet might be fulfilled, saying, ‘Say to the daughter of Zion, ‘Behold your King is coming to you, Gentle, and mounted on a donkey, Even on a colt, the foal of a beast of burden’” (Matt. 21:4-5). McClain points out, “If the colt ridden by the King upon His arrival had to be literal, so also must the warfare be literal which will be abolished when He reigns. If Matthew had believed in a ‘present Messianic reign’ ushered in by the first coming of the King, here would have been the time and place to cite in full the details of Zechariah 9:9-10, but He says not a word about the wondrous things of verse 10” (GK, p. 347).

He was hated without a cause: “They that hate me without a cause are more than the hairs of my head: They that would cut me off, being mine enemies wrongfully, are mighty: That which I took not away I have to restore” (Ps. 69:4). “Thus saith Jehovah, the Redeemer of Israel, and his Holy One, to him whom man despiseth, to him whom the nation abhorreth, to a servant of rulers: Kings shall see and arise; princes, and they shall worship; because of Jehovah that is faithful, even the Holy One of Israel, who hath chosen thee” (Isa. 49:7). “But they have done this in order that the word may be fulfilled that is written in their Law, “THEY HATED ME WITHOUT A CAUSE”” (John 15:25).

He was rejected by the Jews, particularly the Jewish leaders: “The stone which the builders rejected Is become the head of the corner. This is Jehovah’s doing; It is marvellous in our eyes” (Ps. 118:22–23). “He was despised, and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and as one from whom men hide their face he was despised; and we esteemed him not” (Isa. 53:3). “Jesus said to them, ‘Did you never read in the Scriptures, “THE STONE WHICH THE BUILDERS REJECTED, THIS BECAME THE CHIEF CORNER stone; THIS CAME ABOUT FROM THE LORD, AND IT IS MARVELOUS IN OUR EYES”’” (Matt. 21:42)? “This precious value, then, is for you who believe. But for those who disbelieve, “THE STONE WHICH THE BUILDERS REJECTED, THIS BECAME THE VERY CORNER stone” (1 Pet. 2:7) “He was in the world, and the world was made through Him, and the world did not know Him. He came to His own, and those who were His own did not receive Him” (John 1:10–11). “For not even His brothers were believing in Him” (John 7:5). “No one of the rulers or Pharisees has believed in Him, has he” (John 7:48)?

He was betrayed by a friend: “Yea, mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, Who did eat of my bread, Hath lifted up his heel against me” (Ps. 41:9). “And while He was still speaking, behold, Judas, one of the twelve, came up, accompanied by a great multitude with swords and clubs, from the chief priests and elders of the people. Now he who was betraying Him gave them a sign, saying, ‘Whomever I shall kiss, He is the one; seize Him.’ And immediately he went to Jesus and said, ‘Hail, Rabbi!’ and kissed Him. And Jesus said to him, ‘Friend, do what you have come for.’ Then they came and laid hands on Jesus and seized Him” (Matt. 26:47–50).

He was sold for thirty pieces of silver: “And I said unto them, If ye think good, give me my hire; and if not, forbear. So they weighed for my hire thirty pieces of silver. And Jehovah said unto me, Cast it unto the potter, the goodly price that I was prized at by them. And I took the thirty pieces of silver, and cast them unto the potter, in the house of Jehovah” (Zech. 11:12–13). “Then when Judas, who had betrayed Him, saw that He had been condemned, he felt remorse and returned the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders, saying, ‘I have sinned by betraying innocent blood.’ But they said, ‘What is that to us? See to that yourself!’ And he threw the pieces of silver into the sanctuary and departed; and he went away and hanged himself. And the chief priests took the pieces of silver and said, ‘It is not lawful to put them into the temple treasury, since it is the price of blood.’ And they counseled together and with the money bought the Potter’s Field as a burial place for strangers. For this reason that field has been called the Field of Blood to this day. Then that which was spoken through Jeremiah the prophet was fulfilled, saying, ‘AND THEY TOOK THE THIRTY PIECES OF SILVER, THE PRICE OF THE ONE WHOSE PRICE HAD BEEN SET by the sons of Israel; AND THEY GAVE THEM FOR THE POTTER’S FIELD, AS THE LORD DIRECTED ME’” (Matt. 27:3–10).

He was silent before His accusers: “He was oppressed, yet when he was afflicted he opened not his mouth; as a lamb that is led to the slaughter, and as a sheep that before its shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth” (Isa. 53:7). “And while He was being accused by the chief priests and elders, He made no answer. Then Pilate said to Him, ‘Do You not hear how many things they testify against You?’ And He did not answer him with regard to even a single charge, so that the governor was quite amazed” (Matt. 27:12–14).

The shepherd was struck; the sheep were scattered: “Awake, O sword, against my shepherd, and against the man that is my fellow, saith Jehovah of hosts: smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered; and I will turn my hand upon the little ones” (Zech. 13:7). “Then Jesus said to them, ‘You will all fall away because of Me this night, for it is written, “I WILL STRIKE DOWN THE SHEPHERD, AND THE SHEEP OF THE FLOCK SHALL BE SCATTERED”’” (Matt. 26:31). “But all this has taken place that the Scriptures of the prophets may be fulfilled.’ Then all the disciples left Him and fled” (Matt. 26:56). “And Jesus said to them, ‘You will all fall away, because it is written, “I WILL STRIKE DOWN THE SHEPHERD, AND THE SHEEP SHALL BE SCATTERED”’” (Mark 14:27). “Every day I was with you in the temple teaching, and you did not seize Me; but this has happened that the Scriptures might be fulfilled.’ And they all left Him and fled” (Mark 14:49–50).

He was mocked: “All they that see me laugh me to scorn: They shoot out the lip, they shake the head, saying, Commit thyself unto Jehovah; Let him deliver him: Let him rescue him, seeing he delighteth in him” (Ps. 22:7–8). “And after they had mocked Him, they took His robe off and put His garments on Him, and led Him away to crucify Him” (Matt. 27:31). “And those passing by were hurling abuse at Him, wagging their heads, and saying, ‘You who are going to destroy the temple and rebuild it in three days, save Yourself! If You are the Son of God, come down from the cross.’ In the same way the chief priests also, along with the scribes and elders, were mocking Him, and saying, ‘He saved others; He cannot save Himself. He is the King of Israel; let Him now come down from the cross, and we shall believe in Him. HE TRUSTS IN GOD; LET HIM DELIVER Him now, IF HE TAKES PLEASURE IN HIM; for He said, “I am the Son of God.” And the robbers also who had been crucified with Him were casting the same insult at Him” (Matt. 27:39–44).

He died a humiliating death: “Who hath believed our message? and to whom hath the arm of Jehovah been revealed? For he grew up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground: he hath no form nor comeliness; and when we see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him. He was despised, and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and as one from whom men hide their face he was despised; and we esteemed him not. Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and Jehovah hath laid on him the iniquity of us all. He was oppressed, yet when he was afflicted he opened not his mouth; as a lamb that is led to the slaughter, and as a sheep that before its shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth. By oppression and judgment he was taken away; and as for his generation, who among them considered that he was cut off out of the land of the living for the transgression of my people to whom the stroke was due? And they made his grave with the wicked, and with a rich man in his death; although he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth. Yet it pleased Jehovah to bruise him; he hath put him to grief: when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of Jehovah shall prosper in his hand. He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied: by the knowledge of himself shall my righteous servant justify many; and he shall bear their iniquities. Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong; because he poured out his soul unto death, and was numbered with the transgressors: yet he bare the sin of many, and made intercession for the transgressors” (Isa. 53:1–12). “and how the chief priests and our rulers delivered Him up to the sentence of death, and crucified Him” (Luke 24:20).

Consider these details of the crucifixion, all from Psalm 22: “For the Chief Musician; set to Aijeleth Hash-shahar. A Psalm of David. My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? Why art thou so far from helping me, and from the words of my groaning? O my God, I cry in the daytime, but thou answerest not; And in the night season, and am not silent. But thou art holy, O thou that inhabitest the praises of Israel. Our fathers trusted in thee: They trusted, and thou didst deliver them. They cried unto thee, and were delivered: They trusted in thee, and were not put to shame. But I am a worm, and no man; A reproach of men, and despised of the people. All they that see me laugh me to scorn: They shoot out the lip, they shake the head, saying, Commit thyself unto Jehovah; Let him deliver him: Let him rescue him, seeing he delighteth in him. But thou art he that took me out of the womb; Thou didst make me trust when I was upon my mother’s breasts. I was cast upon thee from the womb; Thou art my God since my mother bare me. Be not far from me; For trouble is near; For there is none to help. Many bulls have compassed me; Strong bulls of Bashan have beset me round. They gape upon me with their mouth, As a ravening and a roaring lion. I am poured out like water, And all my bones are out of joint: My heart is like wax; It is melted within me. My strength is dried up like a potsherd; And my tongue cleaveth to my jaws; And thou hast brought me into the dust of death. For dogs have compassed me: A company of evil-doers have inclosed me; They pierced my hands and my feet. I may count all my bones; They look and stare upon me. They part my garments among them, And upon my vesture do they cast lots” (Ps. 22:0–18). “HE TRUSTS IN GOD; LET HIM DELIVER Him now, IF HE TAKES PLEASURE IN HIM; for He said, “I am the Son of God”” (Matt. 27:43). “And about the ninth hour Jesus cried out with a loud voice, saying, ‘ELI, ELI, LAMA SABACHTHANI?’ that is, ‘MY GOD, MY GOD, WHY HAST THOU FORSAKEN ME’” (Matt. 27:46)? “And when He had said this, He showed them both His hands and His side. The disciples then rejoiced when they saw the Lord” (John 20:20). “The other disciples therefore were saying to him, ‘We have seen the Lord!’ But he said to them, ‘Unless I shall see in His hands the imprint of the nails, and put my finger into the place of the nails, and put my hand into His side, I will not believe’” (John 20:25). “The soldiers therefore, when they had crucified Jesus, took His outer garments and made four parts, a part to every soldier and also the tunic; now the tunic was seamless, woven in one piece. They said therefore to one another, ‘Let us not tear it, but cast lots for it, to decide whose it shall be’; that the Scripture might be fulfilled, ‘THEY DIVIDED MY OUTER GARMENTS AMONG THEM, AND FOR MY CLOTHING THEY CAST LOTS’” (John 19:23–24).

Also at Jesus’ crucifixion, He was numbered with transgressors: “Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong; because he poured out his soul unto death, and was numbered with the transgressors: yet he bare the sin of many, and made intercession for the transgressors” (Isa. 53:12). “For I tell you, that this which is written must be fulfilled in Me, ‘AND HE WAS NUMBERED WITH TRANSGRESSORS’; for that which refers to Me has its fulfillment” (Luke 22:37). and was given gall and vinegar to drink: “They gave me also gall for my food; And in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink” (Ps. 69:21). “they gave Him wine to drink mingled with gall; and after tasting it, He was unwilling to drink” (Matt. 27:34).

He was buried in a rich man’s tomb: “And they made his grave with the wicked, and with a rich man in his death; although he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth” (Isa. 53:9). “And when it was evening, there came a rich man from Arimathea, named Joseph, who himself had also become a disciple of Jesus. This man went to Pilate and asked for the body of Jesus. Then Pilate ordered it to be given over to him. And Joseph took the body and wrapped it in a clean linen cloth, and laid it in his own new tomb, which he had hewn out in the rock; and he rolled a large stone against the entrance of the tomb and went away” (Matt. 27:57–60).

He was resurrected: “For thou wilt not leave my soul to Sheol; Neither wilt thou suffer thy holy one to see corruption” (Ps. 16:10). “And he said to them, ‘Do not be amazed; you are looking for Jesus the Nazarene, who has been crucified. He has risen; He is not here; behold, here is the place where they laid Him’” (Mark 16:6). “Brethren, I may confidently say to you regarding the patriarch David that he both died and was buried, and his tomb is with us to this day. And so, because he was a prophet, and knew that GOD HAD SWORN TO HIM WITH AN OATH TO SEAT one OF HIS DESCENDANTS UPON HIS THRONE, he looked ahead and spoke of the resurrection of the Christ, that HE WAS NEITHER ABANDONED TO HADES, NOR DID His flesh SUFFER DECAY. This Jesus God raised up again, to which we are all witnesses. Therefore having been exalted to the right hand of God, and having received from the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, He has poured forth this which you both see and hear. For it was not David who ascended into heaven, but he himself says: “THE LORD SAID TO MY LORD, SIT AT MY RIGHT HAND, UNTIL I MAKE THINE ENEMIES A FOOTSTOOL FOR THY FEET.” Therefore let all the house of Israel know for certain that God has made Him both Lord and Christ — this Jesus whom you crucified” (Acts 2:29–36).

He ascended: “Thou hast ascended on high, thou hast led away captives; Thou hast received gifts among men, Yea, among the rebellious also, that Jehovah God might dwell with them” (Ps. 68:18). “And after He had said these things, He was lifted up while they were looking on, and a cloud received Him out of their sight” (Acts 1:9). “Therefore it says, ‘WHEN HE ASCENDED ON HIGH, HE LED CAPTIVE A HOST OF CAPTIVES, AND HE GAVE GIFTS TO MEN.’ (Now this expression, ‘He ascended,’ what does it mean except that He also had descended into the lower parts of the earth? He who descended is Himself also He who ascended far above all the heavens, that He might fill all things.)” (Eph. 4:8–10)

And finally, He sat at God’s right hand: “Jehovah saith unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand, Until I make thine enemies thy footstool” (Ps. 110:1). “And He said to them, ‘How is it that they say the Christ is David’s son? For David himself says in the book of Psalms, “THE LORD SAID TO MY LORD, ‘SIT AT MY RIGHT HAND, UNTIL I MAKE THINE ENEMIES A FOOTSTOOL FOR THY FEET’” David therefore calls Him “Lord,” and how is He his son” (Luke 20:41–44)? “For it was not David who ascended into heaven, but he himself says: “THE LORD SAID TO MY LORD, ‘SIT AT MY RIGHT HAND, UNTIL I MAKE THINE ENEMIES A FOOTSTOOL FOR THY FEET’” Therefore let all the house of Israel know for certain that God has made Him both Lord and Christ — this Jesus whom you crucified” (Acts 2:34–36). “who being the effulgence of his glory, and the very image of his substance, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had made purification of sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high” (Heb. 1:3)

From these examples it is evident that Christ’s first-advent prophecies were fulfilled literally. If that be the case, then logically, how could we expect Christ’s second-advent prophecies to be fulfilled any other way than literally?

Next, the grammatical-historical hermeneutic is historical. First, it was the only interpretive method accepted by the church during the first three centuries of her history. “Let the reader consider that the grammatical interpretation was for ages the only one used; and can a reason be given why it should suddenly be abandoned for another” (Peters, TTK, 1:49)? Second, the G-HH was championed by the reformers. Regarding Luther, “Luther (On Deut., quoted Seiss’s Last Times, p. 253) pointedly says: ‘I here once more repeat, what I have so often insisted on, that the Christian should direct his efforts toward understanding the so-called literal sense of Scripture, which alone is the substance of faith and of Christian theology, which alone will sustain him in the hour of trouble and temptation, and which will triumph over sin, death, and the gates of hell, to the praise and glory of God. The allegorical sense is usually uncertain, and by no means safe to build our faith upon; for it depends for the most part on human opinion only, on which if a man lean he will find it no better than the Egyptian reed. Therefore Origen, Jerome, and similar of the Fathers are to be avoided, with the whole of that Alexandrian school which abounds in this species of interpretation’” (ibid., p. 48). “In Luther’s Pope Confounded (quoted by Taylor, Voice of the Church)... ‘You will thus keep to one simple and uniform sense of Scripture, as I always do, and always have done... in every controverted subject we must abide by the literal sense, which is uniform throughout the Scripture’” (ibid., 2:190). Regarding Calvin, “Calvin holds a unique place in the history of interpretation. Of him Gilbert [George Holley Gilbert, The Interpretation of the Bible, pp. 37 ff.] writes: ‘...For the first time in a thousand years he gave a conspicuous example of non-allegorical exposition. One must go back to the best work of the school of Antioch to find so complete a rejection of the method of Philo as is furnished by Calvin’” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 28). “Calvin states his own position very clearly. In the commentary to Galatians, he writes: ‘Let us know then, that the true meaning of Scripture is the natural and obvious meaning, and let us embrace and abide by it resolutely.’ [John Calvin, Commentary on Galatians, p. 136, cited by Gerrit H. Hospers, The Principle of Spiritualization in Hermeneutics, p. 11] In the Preface to Romans Calvin says: ‘It is the first business of an interpreter to let his author say what he does say, instead of attributing to him what we think he ought to say.’ [cited by F.W. Farrar, History of Interpretation, p. 347]” (ibid., p. 29). Third, the G-HH interprets history correctly. “Premillennialists take both history and prophecy literally” (McClain, GK, p. 141). We’ve already examined in some detail our premise that the grammatical-historical view of the Kingdom correctly explains human history in the section Premises Regarding the Kingdom of our previous chapter Presuppositions and Premises.

The G-HH is acknowledged by orthodoxy. It is accepted by all orthodox (non-heretical) Christians on all foundational doctrines other than es- chatology. “...the same grammatical sense (unless this is shown to be invalid) which they employ to sustain other great, cardinal doctrines of the Word. They defend the birth, life, death, etc., of Jesus Christ, the rest of the doctrines of Salvation, the character, attributes, etc., of God, the sinfulness of man and necessity for Redemption, etc., by this sense” (Peters, TTK, 3:246) “It has had the greatest success in opening up the Word of God. Exegesis did not start in earnest till the church was a millennium and a half old. With the literalism of Luther and Calvin the light of Scripture literally flamed up... This method is the honored method of the highest scholastic tradition in conservative Protestantism. It is the method of Bruce, Lightfoot, Zahn, A.T. Robertson, Ellicott, Machen, Cremer, Terry, Farrar, Lange, Green, Oehler, Schaff, Sampey, Wilson, Moule, Perowne, Henderson Broadus, Stuart—to name but a few typical exegetes.” [quoting Bernard Ramm, Protestant Biblical Interpretation, p. 62-63] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 11). “The whole Reformation movement may be said to have been activated by a return to the literal method of interpretation of the Scriptures” (ibid., p. 26). “In actuality, the charge of choosing a hermeneutic to fit preconceived theology can more appropriately be applied to the covenant approach. Most covenant (specifically) and amillennial (generally) theologians use the literal method to interpret the rest of Scripture but then inconsistently switch to an allegorical or symbolic method when it comes to texts that, if interpreted literally, would contradict their preestablished system” (Geisler, ST, 4:448). “...there is no more reason to change one’s hermeneutic when it comes to prophetic Scripture than there is for one to change to an allegorical hermeneutic when he moves from a newspaper’s local news to the weather forecast” (ibid., p. 449). The G-HH is even used (inconsistently) by anti-millenarians. “It should be clear, however, that regardless of the terms chosen to designate the anti-millenarian scheme of prophetic interpretation, it is a combination of two different systems, shifting back and forth between the spiritualizing and literal methods. The hermeneutical plow is pulled by ‘an ox and an ass.’ For this reason, the scheme may appropriately be called eclectic” (McClain, GK, p. 144).

The G-HH is self-affirming. It is self-evident. It is self-evident to everyone. “the plain grammatical sense—one that all admit exists in the Word” (Peters, TTK, 1:448) “In looking over the works of opponents, it will be found that not one of them denies the grammatical sense, but upon this sense fasten another to suit their theory” (ibid., 2:571). It is the only method that results in only one possible interpretation. “John Walvoord [End Times: Understanding Today’s World Events in Biblical Prophecy, p. 10] adds correctly: ‘If a person does not interpret the plain statements of prophecy literally, there is no rule by which any consensus of meaning can be established; the existence of a wide diversity of interpretations shows the failure of this approach” (Geisler, ST, 4:415). It is the only method not subject to “interpretation.” “Le Roy Pope (Modern Fancies and Follies, p. 337) takes the position, owing to the variety of interpretation, that the true meaning of the Bible cannot be obtained from the language of Scripture... But he forgets... that the variety of interpretation springs not so much from the grammatical sense as from the system of spiritualizing the language” (Peters, TTK, 1:65) “It is said... that ‘the prophecies themselves are typical.’ This conveniently enables the student to reject the literal sense, and engraft upon it whatever he may consider a suitable fulfillment of the type. It is a dangerous procedure, opening a wide door to arbitrary interpretation” (ibid., p. 193) It is self-interpreting. It allows Scripture to interpret itself. “Luther says: ‘Every word should be allowed to stand in its natural meaning and that should not be abandoned unless faith forces us to it... It is the attribute of Holy Scripture that it interprets itself by passages and places which belong together, and can only be understood by the rule of faith’” [quoting Charles Augustus Briggs, General Introduction to the Study of Holy Scripture, p. 30] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 27). It is self-affirming. It is the only method that is not self-defeating. “Any other approach is self-defeating, for it claims that the literal truth is not the proper way to interpret, even though it expects its reader (listener) to take its words literally” (Geisler, ST, 4:421). “The allegorical method of interpretation is self-defeating, for the very claim that ‘all meaning is allegorical (nonliteral)’ is itself a claim to have the literal truth about this matter. To put it another way, no allegorist wants us to take his claims allegorically—he wants his writings to be interpreted literally” (ibid., p. 424).

The G-HH is natural. It is simple. It allows God to speak to us as plainly and as clearly as possible. “Men in search of truth must return to the old-fashioned notion that God’s words are ‘pure words,’ and that His doctrine does not require the devices of human wisdom either to be remodeled, or changed, or burnished. They speak for themselves” (Peters, TTK, 1:204). “The whole field of complexity has by many been found to disappear when terms are taken in their normal, grammatical, and natural meaning—Israel is not the Church now, nor is the kingdom the Church; Zion is Jerusalem and not heaven; and the throne of David is precisely what David believed it to be, an earthly institution which has never been, nor will it ever be, in heaven” (Chafer, ST, 4:315). Isn’t His speaking to us plainly and clearly exactly what we would expect from a holy and loving God? The G-HH allows Scripture to speak for itself. “Let the Word give its own testimony, and the plain grammatical sense will always be found to be the true one—in unity with all Scripture” (Peters, TTK, 2:51). It allows Scripture to speak in simplicity. “[allegorizing]... burdens the doctrine with a Kingdom-theory which tends to confuse the student and mars the simplicity of inspired statements” (ibid., 1:657). It allows Scripture to be true as written. “in order that by two unchangeable things, in which it is impossible for God to lie, we may have strong encouragement, we who have fled for refuge in laying hold of the hope set before us” (Heb. 6:18). “This method is the only one consonant with the nature of inspiration. The plenary inspiration of the Bible teaches that the Holy Spirit guided men into truth and away from error. In this process the Spirit of God used language, and the units of language (as meaning, not as sound) are words and thoughts. The thought is the thread that strings the words together. Therefore, our very exegesis must commence with a study of words and grammar, the two fundamentals of all meaningful speech” [quoting Bernard Ramm, Protestant Biblical Interpretation, p. 54] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 10). “The meaning is not found beyond the text (in God’s mind), beneath the text (in the mystic’s mind), or behind the text (in the author’s unexpressed intention); it is found in the text (in the author’s expressed meaning)” (Geisler, ST, 1:174). It doesn’t rely on any extra-biblical presumptions. “When we ask why this introduction of a sense so radically diverse from that entertained for thousands of years (and which, the latter, was a source of confident hope and joy to so many believers), the answer is given, that as the Kingdom as predicted by the prophets was not literally established at the First Advent, the Christian Church being then instituted, the Church must be the Kingdom intended. Upon this presumption—seized and used against Christianity by the destructive school—the superstructure of a Kingdom now present is reared, and the language of covenant, prophet, Jesus, and Apostle is spiritualized to fit the assumed theory. And in the contest it is strange to find that men materially differing in the use they make of it (as e.g. the author of Ecce Homo on the one side, and the writer of Ecce Deus on the other) still agree in taking for granted a premise utterly unproven, actually resisted by the Word, and which in its nature and tendency makes the Scriptures and Theology irreconcilable” (Peters, TTK, 3:223). It eliminates the necessity of grafting another (non-literal) sense onto Scripture. “If the literal interpretation is acceded to, then, as our opponents themselves admit, our doctrine is clearly and unmistakably taught. For the difference between us and the followers of Whitby, is not whether the Word contains our doctrine in its literal sense, but whether such a sense is to be retained” (ibid., p. 180). It eliminates the necessity of choosing between multiple possible interpretations.

“Has any passage of Holy Writ more than one literal sense?... all admit that since the sacred books were composed by men, and for men, their writers naturally conformed to that most elementary law of human intercourse, which requires that only one precise sense shall be proximately and directly intended by the words of the speaker or writer...” [quoting Francis E. Gigot, General Introduction to the Study of the Holy Scriptures, pp. 386-387] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 13) “Briggs, certainly no friend to the literal interpretation of the Word, quotes Tyndale himself, who says: ‘Thou shalt understand, therefore, that the Scripture hath but one sense, which is the literal sense. And that literal sense is the root and ground of all, and the anchor that never faileth, whereunto if thou cleave, thou canst never err or go out of the way. And if thou leave the literal sense, thou canst not but go out of the way’” [quoting Charles Augustus Briggs, General Introduction to the Study of Holy Scripture, pp. 456-57] (ibid., p. 27). However, it is just this simplicity that often makes it difficult to accept. “The truth is, that the very plainness, the remarkable simplicity of ‘the Gospel of the Kingdom’ is its chiefest obstacle in the minds of many, for while it may do for ignorant Jews and unlettered fishermen, etc., as ‘a harmless error’ adapted to their capacities and circumstances, it is not sufficiently refined, etc., for the enlightenment afterward bestowed” (Peters, TTK, 3:229). The G-HH is efficient. It eliminates the necessity of wasting time and effort on interpretive dead ends. It is also natural. Really, it’s just amazing the odd, convoluted procedures that many Bible interpreters subject themselves and their students to in order to avoid the plain sense of Scripture. The G-HH is comprehensible. It conforms to the normal laws of language. “The difference between us lies in the fact that after the plain, unobscure sense is presented, then, in opposition to us who hold to the sense thus conveyed, another ungrammatical and unrhetorical operation must be performed, viz.: this sense thus obtained must have engrafted upon it (as e.g. David’s throne and kingdom) a different and very spiritual or mystical meaning; must be tortured by the Origenistic process until it evolves something that suits the taste or option of the interpreter; must, in brief, be explained by a mode that has never been applied to any other written document in existence, and which is utterly unknown to the laws of language” (Peters, TTK, 1:173). It allows Scripture to be interpreted with the same hermeneutic used for non-Scripture. “The skills of scriptural interpretation are the same as those for interpreting any other document: to understand in the text the author’s expressed meaning” (Geisler, ST, 4:87). “It is a profound insult to our God-given intelligence to suggest that we can read and understand the daily news but need some infallible magisterium in order to understand God's Good News for all people" (ibid.).

The G-HH is consistent. It allows all doctrine to use the same hermeneutic. "Amillenarians use two methods of interpretation, the spiritualizing method for prophecy and the literal method for other Scriptures. They differ from early amillenarians who regarded all Scripture as an allegory" (Walvoord, MK, p. 63). "To the extent the spiritualizing method is used, to that very extent their theology loses all uniformity and self-consistency" (ibid., p. 73). It allows all dispensations to use the same hermeneutic. "No one doubts the propriety and force of this so far as it relates to the past and present, but just so soon as we undertake to insist upon the same grammatical sense pertaining to prophecies describing the future, then a multitude arises and derides our system of interpretation as crude, unreasonable, Jewish, etc." (Peters, TTK, 1:175). "The change of dispensation does not affect the interpretation of the Word, no change of the latter being anywhere intimated; and that the reason why so much is spiritualized respecting the church, etc., is simply owing to the sad fact that predictions solely relating to the future, to another dispensation, to the Jewish nation, to the period after the Sec. Advent, men apply to the present time, to this dispensation, to the Gentiles, and to the church, and the result unavoidably is, that an immense amount of spiritualizing and accommodation must take place to cause these things to fit into their system of belief. A system of interpreting prophecy that cannot be equally available in any period of history, in any dispensation, is open, at once, to the gravest suspicion of unsoundness. We, at least, with the early church, reject it as entirely untrustworthy" (ibid., 1:175). "...dispensationalism with its single hermeneutic" (Feinberg, M, p. 171) "Only Premillennialism Employs a Consistent Hermeneutic" (Geisler, ST, 4:553) "Cast aside the old traditional idea that Jacob, and Israel, and Judah, and Jerusalem, and Zion must always mean the Gentile Church, and that predictions about the second Advent are to be taken spiritually, and the first Advent predictions literally... If you expect the Jews to take the 53rd of Isaiah literally, be sure you take the 54th and 60th and 62nd literally also. The Protestant Reformers were not perfect. On no point, I venture to say, were they so much in the wrong as in the interpretation of Old Testament prophecy" [quoting J. C. Ryle, Are You Ready For The End Of Time?, p. 157] (Horner, FI, p. 347).

The G-HH is comprehensive. It is applicable to all of Scripture. "The greater part of the Bible makes adequate sense when interpreted literally" [quoting Bernard Ramm, Protestant Biblical Interpretation, p. 54] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 1). It allows for non-literal renderings as required. "Some Millenarian writers (as Dr. Craven in Lange's Com. Rev., p. 98) prefer 'normal' to the word 'literal,' as more expressive of our views of interpretation, not discarding the figurative" (Peters, TTK, 1:52). "Literality best preserves and enhances the symbolical values" (McClain, GK, p. 142).

The G-HH is universal. It makes the Bible understandable to everyone. "A man may be learned and able, and yet utterly fail to receive the truth as intended (thus failing in his apprehension), while an unlearned believer, cordially accepting and appropriating personally the Scriptures, experiences their power in his own heart and life. ('If any man will do His will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God,' John 7:17); but both combined, learning and religious experience, elevates the man to the highest plane" (Peters, TTK, 1:67). "A literal fulfillment is adapted to all classes of minds, for which the Bible is designed" (ibid., p. 167) "The truth is, that the Word of God does not need the testimony of learned and scientific men, for its best evidence it carries within itself corroborated by personal experience and history. This allusion to a prevailing skeptical tendency... Alas! if it were only confined to unbelievers! Many believers of the Word, savingly united to Christ by faith, who would shudder to adopt such a hopeless platform of unbelief, who actually receive these promises as divine, still by a fatal process so fritter them away or deny their intention or validity that they, too, with infidels, disbelieve in their ultimate fulfillment as written" (ibid., p. 289). "Difficulty arises only for those who are determined to metamorphose a literal, earthly throne and kingdom into some vague and wholly imaginary spiritual idealism" (Chafer, ST, 5:321). "It delivers us from both reason and mysticism as the requisites to interpretation. One does not have to depend upon intellectual training or abilities, nor upon the development of mystical perception, but rather upon the understanding of what is written in its generally accepted sense. Only on such a basis can the average individual understand or interpret the Scriptures for himself" (Pentecost, TTC, p. 12). The G-HH is understood by everyone. "There is no difference of opinion as to what meaning the words in their common usage convey; this is conceded" (Peters, TTK, 1:349). "It is fully admitted by able writers, of all classes, that the Scriptures, taken in their literal aspect, do expressly teach a Jewish Kingdom; but our opponents contend that this literal rendering is to be discarded for a spiritual or mystical one, mainly on the ground that the literal has not been verified" (ibid., p. 425).

The G-HH is Scripture-honoring. It demands strict adherence to Scripture. "The safeguard here, as always, is in adhering strictly to the Word of God" (Chafer, MBT, 29%). It accepts Scripture unaltered. "I testify to everyone who hears the words of the prophecy of this book: if anyone adds to them, God shall add to him the plagues which are written in this book” (Rev. 22:18) “...‘the things of God’ can only be obtained by observing what the Spirit has recorded and retaining what is written unaltered” (Peters, TTK, 1:627). “According to the Scriptures, no such change or modification was ever made under divine direction, and the same is fully sustained by the history of the early Church. Men, uninspired men, led by mere reason and supposing that they could improve what Scripture so plainly has given, under the mistaken notion of elevating ‘the One Hope’ by spiritualizing its substance, tampered with it and finally modified and so changed it, that as it appears in many works it bears no resemblance whatever to ‘the hope of the Gospel’ as recorded” (ibid., 3:311). It allows Scripture to speak for itself. There is only one way for the Bible to speak for itself, and that’s when it’s taken plainly. It confirms the inspiration of Scripture. “Fairbairn (On Proph., p. 171) not knowing what to do with this prophecy... he and others interpret the Coming from Teman, the mention of Paran, etc., as language taken from the past to heighten the effect; or, to be plain, a poetical license is taken to give proper coloring to the picture. Alas! When able writers thus explain prophecy, what confidence can we have in its inspiration? How can we possibly discriminate the play of fancy or imagination from the intended realities? Such interpretation is both dangerous and derogatory to the Word” (ibid., p. 397). It accepts Scripture as inerrant. “If Scripture which teaches something contrary to a preconceived theory can be altered by spiritualizing it, of what importance is the concept of inerrancy” (Walvoord, MK, p. 73)? It allows Scripture to be authoritative. “Making Scripture figurative which should be taken literally subverts its meaning and evades its authority. The result is the denial of the plain intent of the Scriptures” (ibid., p. 25). “Allegorism is a way to ‘pervert the true meaning of Scripture’ rather than to interpret it; ‘the basic authority in interpretation ceases to be the Scriptures [and is instead] the mind of the interpreter’” [quoting J. Dwight Pentecost, Things to Come, p. 5] (Geisler, ST, 4:424). “Chafer [Systematic Theology, 4:266-267] points out that a ‘method of interpretation which is free to spiritualize’ is a short step away from an actual denial of the authority of Scripture” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 383). It allows all Scripture to be meaningful. “One of the obvious problems of amillennialism in the field of bibliology is that their method of interpretation leaves large areas, particularly of the Old Testament, without any generally accepted meaning” (Walvoord, MK, p. 72). It allows Scripture to mean what it says. “...an Origenistic rule of interpretation which makes the Old Test. say one thing respecting the Kingdom but mean another; and which causes the Prophets to predict, in the grammatical sense, one thing (believed in by the ancients) concerning the Kingdom but which must be understood differently” (Peters, TTK, 3:220). The G-HH is covenant-honoring. As we’ll mention again below, it allows all Israel’s covenants and prophecies to have (eventual) fulfillment. The G-HH is prophecy-honoring. It allows us to accept most, if not all, prophecy at face value. “If the nation of Israel is not to have priority in the Kingdom, then we must reject great areas of divine prophecy at its face value” (McClain, GK, p. 424). And finally, because of these characteristics, the G-HH promotes certainty. “The degree of certainty that we now possess is solely derived from the plain grammatical sense of the Scriptures, and so long as there is a continued rejection of this sense and the substitution of others, just so long will uncertainty continue and increase” (Peters, TTK, 3:224).

The G-HH is God-honoring. It allows God to say what He meant to whom He said it. “...we firmly hold that God’s promises are to be fulfilled just as they read; that He means what He says” (Peters, TTK, 2:571) “The Scriptures must be allowed to mean what they say and to whom they say it” [quoting Chafer, Systematic Theology, 4:19-21] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 376). “I wish never to learn the art of tearing God’s meaning out of his own words” [quoting C.H. Spurgeon, The C.H. Spurgeon Collection, Metropolitan Tabernacle Pulpit, I, no. 582, 1864, pp. 536-37] (Horner, FI, p. 12) It allows God to be ethical in His manner of speech. “Never, never can we receive any theory, however plausibly and learnedly presented, which thus reflects on God’s goodness, makes Him virtually a party to gross deception, and which degrades the intelligence and piety of former saints. Who can censure us for believing in a sense so generally admitted as given by God himself, placing ourselves where prophets, pious Jews, and the early Christians stood” (Peters, TTK, 1:191)? “...the bold expression of Pascal: ‘God owes it to mankind not to lead them into error’” (ibid., p. 192) “The reader will consider how unnatural—even cruel—it would be, if the doctrine of a restoration is not to be received, to give so many predictions which in their plain grammatical sense teach a future glorious national restoration of the Jews to their once possessed land. Why thus excite the expectations and hopes of a multitude for many centuries of oppression and exile, if they are never to be realized? Would such a course of procedure be honorable even in man, knowing as he must the deception that would accrue from it? To trifle with the dearest, most heart-felt hopes of a nation by language pre-eminently calculated to excite the same, is not Divine, and we earnestly repudiate every theory which either directly or indirectly charges Holy Writ with such a mode of procedure. No, God’s Word is the truth, and the grammatical sense—the sense which all men agree is the most legitimate in language—contains the plain truth, which God will fulfill at the appointed time” (ibid., 2:73). “Would God give a sense, with which man is conversant, and which is connected with the common usage of language, knowing that for centuries it must inevitably lead Apostles and their successors into error” (ibid., p. 166)? “If our doctrine is wrong, we are held responsible for it, and must render an account for holding it. But in the last day, we at least can put in two pleas before the Judge that would largely palliate our error, viz., that our doctrine was contained in the plain grammatical sense of the Word; and that we injured no man in urging him to live soberly, righteously and godly, because of an impending Advent, because of frightful judgments soon to be poured out, because the coveted first resurrection was nigh at hand, because the wicked would be destroyed, this earth be renewed and Christ and His saints reign. We can justly claim that the entire tendency of our view, thus given in the literal sense of Scripture, was to preserve men from sin that they might inherit with Christ and participate in His glory. But what if our doctrine is true and the opposite is an error?... then multitudes that have been deceived by ‘the peace and safety’ cry, when aroused from their Whitbyan dream of security by the persecuting and bloody demands of a culminated Antichrist, will accuse the ministry of having blinded them to the truth. To lead men on and on by a false hope until it gives place to appalling despair and martyrdom under Antichristian power is no trifling affair” (ibid., 3:198). “He has a right to assume that no sensible author will be knowingly inconsistent with himself, or seek to bewilder and mislead his readers” [quoting Milton S. Terry, Biblical Hermeneutics, pp. 203-4] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 39). “If God did not mean what he said when he used those terms [‘Israel’ and ‘land’], then do they not lose their meaning? The Covenant Amillennialist leaves God open to the charge of unethical conduct” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 218). It allows God, not man, to be the determiner of the proper interpretive method. “If the grammatical meaning of the Word is to be changed, should not God Himself plainly tell us of the change, and not leave it to uninspired men, centuries after the canon is completed, to inform us of it” (Peters, TTK, 1:241)? “Which is the safest to accept of, a God-given sense, or of one which is at the option of the interpreter” (ibid., 2:311)? It conveys God’s ideas, rather than man’s. “...making Canaan a type of the third heaven without a particle of proof... Such writings cannot stand before a scriptural examination, and are misleading multitudes, causing them to put their faith and hope in man’s promises instead of God’s oath-bound declarations of inheritance. And yet the sad fact is that such writings, filled with perversions and leading the Church into unbelief, are extremely popular” (ibid., p. 505). It allows us to believe that God will fulfill His word as written. This is in contrast with those who would have “...an expressed doubt of God’s intention to fulfill His Word as written” (ibid., p. 58). It allows God’s originally-stated purposes for mankind to be realized. It allows God to accomplish His original purpose in creating man, as we’ll see in our chapter A Kingdom Needed. It allows God’s “very good” creation to be restored. We’ll explore this idea also in our chapter A Kingdom Needed. It enables God-honoring faith. Faith that honors God is that which is attached to His revelation to us. And it vindicates God. “...time will vindicate God’s promises” (Peters, TTK, 2:96). “How wonderful will then the history of this people appear, and how astonishing that the Divine Purpose so plainly revealed should have been, by lack of faith and with the notion of exalting the meaning of Scripture itself, so persistently overlooked by the multitude” (ibid.). “Indeed, in that day, many a prediction now imperfectly understood, shall stand forth with a distinctness that will reproach the weakness of our faith in God’s Word, when the last prayer of Moses, the benedictions of Jacob, the covenanted relationship of the people, etc., are vindicated by this tremendous overthrow of enemies—then truly prophecy itself, now the sport of scientific unbelief and the butt of un-scholarly ridicule, will secure the profound esteem and praise of all nations” (ibid., p. 114).

The G-HH is God’s people-honoring. It is Israel-honoring. It allows all Israel’s covenants and prophecies to have (eventual) fulfillment. “Both Orthodox and Rationalistic deem the principle of interpretation thus upheld irrelevant and untrustworthy, making the Old Test. to predict on its plain surface what shall never be realized in the form announced. The Jew, however, cannot object to our system of interpretation, charging it with inconsistency, seeing that we apply the prophecies pertaining to their nation continuously; not only receiving the temporary rejection, the punishment inflicted, but also fully admitting the importance of the nation, its near (Theocratic) relation to God, and its ultimate restoration and triumph just as the grammatical sense predicts” (Peters, TTK, 3:410). “The Press (quoted Proph. Times, June, 1877) remarks: ‘Rabbi Marks, of London, in a sermon, says the Jews reject Jesus Christ as the Messiah, because “of the three distinctive facts which the inspired seer of Judah inseparably connects with the Advent of the Messiah, viz., the cessation of war and the uninterrupted reign of peace, the prevalence of a perfect concord of opinion on all matters bearing upon the worship of the one and only God, and the gathering of the remnant of Judah and of the tribes of Israel”—not one of these prophecies has yet been fulfilled.’ Now our system of interpretation cordially receives these three characteristics as plainly taught and connected with the Advent of the Messiah. We just as fully as the Jew believe that they will yet be realized just as predicted. And this confirms us the more in the Messiahship of the crucified Jesus, because (1) all these 'distinctive facts' are attributed to His Second Advent; (2) the reasons why they were not realized at the First Advent are fully given in the non-repentance of the nation, its rejection of the Christ, as shown in both the Old and the New Testaments; (3) the First Advent with its results, confirmed by a continuous fulfillment of prediction and promise down to the present, confirms the ability of this Jesus to fulfill the covenants and prophecies at the specified Advent; (4) but we do not confine ourselves to these 'three distinctive facts,' but compare and receive all the prophecies relating to the Messiah. Doing this, we find one class referring to the humiliation, rejection, suffering, and death of the Messiah verified in Jesus, and this only immeasurably confirms our faith in Him and that ultimately, as promised, all the Scriptures will be realized in and through Him. Thus that which forms an objection to the Jewish mind by only receiving a part of God's Word, becomes to us, when believing the whole Word, a tower of strength" (ibid.). We'll examine the fulfillments of Israel's covenants and prophecies in detail in our chapters The Covenants of the Kingdom, The Kingdom in Hebrew Prophecy and others. It allows Israel to keep her prophesied blessings. "...take the predictions relating to the Jewish nation, and interpret the one part referring to its tribulation, desolation, etc. literally, and then, when the prophecies go on without any sign of a change to speak of the same nation, proceed to spiritualize the rest and apply it to us Gentiles, we do a violence to the text and manifest injustice to the nation of whom the things are specially predicted... To such an extent has this been carried that it is almost a proverb that curses belong to the Jews and blessings to the Gentiles" (ibid.). It allows the expectations of the first-century Jews to be correct. We'll take a detailed look at this in our chapter First-Century Expectation of the Kingdom. The G-HH is Hebrew prophet-honoring. It allows the (inspired) prophets to not be mistaken. "A second critical method of rejection is to admit the literal meaning of the prophets but deny, at least in part, its present validity... What did the prophets mean? 'And to this question there can be but one answer,' writes Davidson, 'Their meaning is the literal sense of their words' (italics added). 'There is no question as to the meaning of the Old Testament prophecies; the question is how far this meaning is now valid' (italics added). [quoting 'Eschatology,' Dictionary of the Bible, Vol. I, p. 737] In substance, Davidson seems to reach much the same goal that appears in the 'spiritualizing' school of Dr. Allis, only by a different and more forthright road. Although we may regret his lack of concern with reference to Biblical inspiration, at least Davidson's candor is to be commended" (McClain, GK, p. 145). And the G-HH is apostle-honoring. It allows the apostles to have not been mistaken regarding their Messianic hopes. "When men once assume a superiority of knowledge—which many today do—over the Apostles [i.e. Acts 1:6—ed.], it is scarcely practicable to influence them" (Peters, TTK, 3:135).

The G-HH is (fallen) man-deprecating. It makes God, not man, responsible for determining truth. "If the grammatical word contains foolishness, then the Spirit is justly chargeable in its production" (Peters, TTK, 1:62). "God holds us only responsible for the plain, naked, grammatical sense of the Word, and not for recondite, hidden senses that the ingenuity or imagination of man may concoct" (ibid., p. 130). "If the Kingdom is not such as these Jews held it to be, who is justly chargeable with their error, if it be not the great Author of those prophecies" (ibid., p. 192)? "If the Jews were 'fanatical' in their belief of 'an universal dominion' under the rule of the Messiah, it was a fanaticism inspired by the God-given, plain, grammatical sense of the Word" (ibid., 2:100) It makes man, not God, responsible for man's unbelief. "If there is difficulty connected with the understanding of the essential doctrines of Scripture—and surely the Kingdom is one such doctrine—the problem must be found in man rather than in the revelation. As Schodde [G. H. Schodde, 'Interpretation,' International Standard Bible Encyclopedia, Vol. III, p. 1489] has correctly observed, 'The Bible is written for men... and accordingly there is no specifically Biblical logic, or rhetoric, or grammar.' This is why God can hold all men responsible for believing and meeting the essential demands of the written Word at every stage of revelation. If it is possible for human authors to make what they write sufficiently clear for the understanding of those who read, shall we say that God cannot do as much" (McClain, GK, p. 262)? "It is possible for men to know and yet to draw back in unbelief. This is true even of the saved, who may believe one part of the Word of God and at the same time hesitate at another part which is just as clear" (ibid., p. 263). It is this writer's opinion that the problem is not that the Bible is unintelligible, but rather that so few people are able (i.e. willing) to receive its message. The G-HH rebukes man's boasting about his impressive knowledge and interpretive skills. "...exaggerating the knowledge of the present day over that of inspired men" (Peters, TTK, 3:122) It has no need for man to add to the Scripture. "I testify to everyone who hears the words of the prophecy of this book: if anyone adds to them, God shall add to him the plagues which are written in this book; and if anyone takes away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part from the tree of life and from the holy city, which are writ- ten in this book” (Rev. 22:18-19). It has no need for man to “improve” the Scripture. “...a sad commentary of human infirmity, which thinks to improve covenanted and oath-bound language by spiritualizing it, making it to mean something very different from the expressed grammatical sense” (Peters, TTK, 1:570). “...spiritualizing them to make them consistent with human opinions” (ibid., p. 592) It has no need for man to interpret the Scripture. “Another serious cause of unbelief in this Kingdom arises from the infirmity of human nature, its reliance upon authorities outside of the Bible... Admitting the great value, the priceless influence of many human compositions, yet in our search after the truth they should not stand between us and God’s own revelation; for as the tree, however lovely and fruitful, standing between us and the sun will cast its shadow, so, more or less, will be the shading, the interception of light when humanity, however sincere and honest, is placed between us and the divine truth. The source of all true knowledge of the Kingdom is found alone in God’s Word, and to that Word, if wise and prudent, we should come for instruction and guidance, seeing that the words of God are mightier and more truthful than those of men however pious and learned. Indeed, in not a few cases, the lack of faith can be traced to a certain disposition of the heart, mentioned by Jesus (John 5:44), ‘How can ye believe, which receive honor one of another, and seek not the honor which cometh from God only?’ In this day of unbelief and reproach cast upon our doctrine, it requires courage to oppose the sweeping popular current of belief on the subject. Especially when a return to the early Church faith causes the charge of ‘credulity,’ ‘fanaticism,’ ‘heresy,’ etc. to come from the multitude, and even from brethren united by the same denominational ties. How many have had their attention directed to this subject, have promised investigation, have been persuaded of the truth, but have recoiled, fearful of the loss of reputation, influence, honor, and preferments... If honest, however, with ourselves and with God, human approval, however desirable and agreeable, should weigh nothing against truth, especially when warned that there will be a great departure from the truth as the times of the Gentiles draw to a close... To this class, who do not want doctrine but piety, it may be said that two extremes are to be avoided; first, theoretical knowledge of doctrine without practical application of the same, or personal piety conjoined; second, piety isolated from doctrine, just as if it could exist without a previous knowledge of the truth. The persons who make this objection against our doctrine are the very ones who deal largely in doctrine concerning the Church-Kingdom, Millennium, etc., in prayer, preaching, writing, etc., but as soon as something is said in conflict with their own doctrinal position then we need no doctrine... The doctrine of the Kingdom is the teaching of God concerning it, and is not derived from the piety of men, but from God's Word" (ibid., 3:225). It has no respect for man's piety. "Many refuse faith in the doctrine of this Kingdom because of the claimed piety, sanctity, prayerful spirit, gifts of the Holy Ghost, etc., bestowed upon those who have turned away from the ancient belief... after all that we can do we still remain unprofitable servants... making no great professions of humility... to God we stand or fall... we positively object to our making the experience of man the measure by which we are authoritatively to judge the Bible... the semi-infidel and infidel statement that 'doctrines are of little importance if the life is only right'... how important is the most valuable life in comparison with the Divine Purpose which involves the truthfulness and honor of God and the glory of His Son?... Alas, how often are we asked, 'what is the practical worth of your doctrine,' just as if God's utterances are to be measured by man's practice" (ibid., p. 226). "The history of the Church abundantly proves that error may exist in connection with great piety, fervor, zeal, and usefulness" (ibid., p. 254). "The appeals to superior piety, to special enlightenment, to personal assaults, to claims of exclusiveness, are of no weight whatever in an argument or presentation of truth. The question is, What do the Scriptures teach, not inferentially or spiritually, but, directly and in their plain grammatical sense" (ibid., p. 272)? "The plea of superior piety, increased spirituality, honoring of Christ, or ignorance, will avail nothing before the plain teaching of the Word. Some think that by a continuous adhesion to 'milk,' 'the first principles,' they are advancing in the divine favor and assure themselves of a reward, but even such 'milk' is diluted and weakened by the rejection of the 'cream' and the 'meat' imparted by our doctrine" (ibid., p. 328) It exposes prejudice. "Prejudice can refuse to receive the plainest statements of the Word" (ibid., 1:600). It makes allegorization unnecessary. "Allegorization in the interpretation of Scripture is never called for" (Feinberg, M, p. 189). It keeps man's imagination in check. "Dwight Pentecost [in Things to Come, p. 10]... Literal interpretation is the only 'sane and safe check on the imagination of man'" (Geisler, ST, 4:421). It makes philosophy unnecessary. "What Luther, and many others said respecting the influence of philosophy in the Church can be truthfully repeated to-day, at least in reference to the subject of the Kingdom philosophy, whatever its mission may be intellectually and morally, is not necessary to an understanding of this Kingdom. The Kingdom is founded on covenant and prophecy, and not on human speculations. We find this Kingdom only in the Scriptures and not in human systems. We do not even require its aid in ascertaining the sense or meaning of Scripture. Philosophy, if she is (as some claim, and justly too) a handmaiden to Christianity, is a very humble one, that has too often, under the desire to serve, injured her mistress” (Peters, TTK, 1:504). “...the hopeless dilemma of Platonic dualism, which is still the curse of much that is called Christian thinking in the field of eschatology” (McClain, GK, p. 521). “Christianity is not a philosophy. But Christianity has a philosophy—the best and the brightest of all philosophies. In fact, it will be the final philosophy, not only because it is founded upon divine revelation but also because it does justice to all points of view which have any value... In Christian philosophy both mind and matter are recognized as worth-while realities, each being given its proper place and function in the Kingdom of God” (ibid., p. 527). “Others, also wrongly, have scorned the present life as of small or no account, even arguing that salvation consists in getting loose from it altogether. On this philosophic road, at various stages, were the Hindu religionists, the monastics of the middle ages; even Plato” (ibid., p. 528) “Luther... his dislike of scholastic philosophy in general (he once called it a ‘whore’), and to metaphysical formulations applied to theology in particular” (Geisler, ST, 4:172) It makes esoteric “keys” to the Scriptures unnecessary. “...conclusions which are often arbitrary, mystical, and far-fetched. According to such schemes, in order to get at the hidden sense of prophecy it is alleged that we must find some ‘key’ which will unlock the mystery of Scripture. And almost always this ‘key’ turns out to be some exclusive theological emphasis or some New Testament text, the meaning of which may itself be in serious dispute. Then the interpreter insists that everything must be read according to this ‘key.’ Or, to vary the figure, the key text or special emphasis becomes a set of colored spectacles through which Old Testament prophecy is read, distorting some things and filtering out completely other things. Against such procedures the weight of Biblical testimony is both clear and convincing” (McClain, GK, p. 260). “There is no intimation that the Old Testament writings in general were esoteric in character, incapable of being understood except by the use of some ‘key’ given or discovered centuries after their composition” (ibid., p. 261). And, it frees us from slavery to allegorical interpreters. “It is also a sad commentary on human weakness that tracts and books, containing doctrinal statements, interpretations of prophecy, etc., claim that their interpretations were given by special Divine inspiration or enlightenment through the Spirit. Without questioning the sincerity of these persons (for men are easily led to such a belief, if they assume themselves to be the special favorites of the Spirit in the reception of gifts), it is sufficient to say that every such a plea vitiates the value of their teaching, and imposes alone upon the weak, ignorant, or unreflecting, who are unable to test their utterances by the general analogy of the Word” (Peters, TTK, 1:55). “If the Word is at the mercy of the interpreter, then the Bible is no longer a revelation, but a concealment of God’s will” (ibid., p. 56). “...a professed spirit of self-renunciation, but which really exalted self in that it possessed a private inspiration” (ibid., p. 60) “There is something anti-scriptural in the position of Romanism, Symbolic Lutheranism, Anglican High Churchism, Ultra Calvinism, Reformed Confessionalism—in brief, in all attempts to bring in the work of man as an authoritative interpreter of Scripture. However well intentioned the design, it is a virtual lowering of Scripture to a human level, and an abridgment of true Christian liberty” (ibid., p. 127). “When argument is weak threats are resorted to in order to prop it up, thus repeating the painful history of the past” (ibid., p. 481). “...all their monkish, popish tendencies... as if Scriptural doctrine depended on human learning and talent, and not on divine declarations” (ibid., p. 487) “No wonder that we are so carefully cautioned to beware of mere human wisdom” (ibid., p. 657). “Alas! How such men of ability lead the Church into blindness and unbelief” (ibid., p. 696). “It is definitely not safe to allow any church creed, however good, to shape our thinking on the whole range of Bible truth” (Feinberg, M, p. 101). “Once we start with the rule that whole passages and books of Scripture say one thing when they mean another, the reader is delivered bound hand and foot to the caprice of the interpreter” [quoting F.W. Farrar, History of Interpretation, p. 232] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 6). “He can be sure of absolutely nothing except what is dictated to him by the Church, and in all ages the authority of “the Church” has been falsely claimed for the presumptuous tyranny of false prevalent opinions” [quoting F.W. Farrar, History of Interpretation, p. 238] (ibid.). “The biblical and historical evidence favors the Protestant view, which asserts that an infallible Bible is sufficient for faith and practice without any alleged infallible interpreter of it” (Geisler, ST, 4:101).

The G-HH is edifying. It is convicting. “...the language itself arrests unbelievers, and, in consequence, leaving them inexcusable in rejecting the truth as given” (Peters, TTK, 3:37). It is salvific. It brought this writer out of a pseudo-Christian cult (Jehovah’s Witnesses) and into saving faith in Christ (for a complete account, see my book Pilgrimage Through the Watchtower). When the gospel (of the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ, 1 Cor. 15:1-4) is interpreted literally and believed, salvation results (Eph. 1:13). It is marvelous. It is an amazing thing to this writer that all his theological studies have led him to nothing other than an ever-deepening satisfaction with the plain sense of Scripture! It is satisfying. It is an ongoing fact that the more fully this writer understands Scripture, the less he finds that he wants to change any of it. It is spiritual. It is this writer's conclusion that the plain sense of Scripture is the ideal vehicle for conveying spiritual truth, and that unwarranted spiritualizing of Scripture is in fact not spiritual at all. It is practical. It makes Old Testament prophecy's and the Revelation's details useful (e.g. for the Tribulation saints in particular). "Let men sneer at it now; let professed believers turn away from it as an unwelcome subject; yet the time is coming when men shall profoundly study it in order to comfort and sustain themselves under Antichrist's fearful persecution" (ibid., 2:770). "This Book [Revelation] was specially designed to sustain the Christian and the Church [Tribulation saints—ed.] under sore trial; its magnificent portrayals of ultimate deliverance, reward, and glory at the Coming of Jesus being most admirably adapted for such a purpose. It has done this in the past, comforting and strengthening the persecuted in his flight or in his dungeon, sustaining the martyr at the stake or in the presence of the wild beasts. It has, from the days of John down to the present, consoled, cheered, and confirmed in faith and hope many a depressed, discouraged, tried believer. It will again do this work during the interval between the two stages of the Advent, when the Church [Tribulation saints—ed.], enduring her most bitter and unrelenting persecution, needs special aid and strength to endure unto the end. Then this Book, so full of the events then experienced, so full of Antichrist and his doom, so full of ultimate glorious deliverance, will be studied with an interest and intensity never before realized. Then, too, it will impart the needed consolation and hope, so that a multitude, fortified by its precious promises, will come out of the great tribulation, and receive their reward for faithfulness and endurance" (ibid., 3:387). "Dr. Schaff (His. Apost. Church) says: 'The Apoc. accordingly is a book of warning, encouragement, and hope, and is best understood practically in times of trial and persecution.'... In seasons of great security it was almost forgotten" (ibid.) It is likely that the New Testament, particularly Matthew chapter 24 and the book of Revelation, will be instrumental in opening Jewish peoples' eyes to Jesus' identity during the Tribulation, as Israel witnesses end-times prophecy being fulfilled in extraordinary precision and detail. During the Tribulation, Matthew 24 and Revelation will come alive!

The G-HH is unifying. It unifies the Kingdom. "The Old and New Testaments describe the same Kingdom—the same Theocratic arrangement under David's Son. All the writers, separated by centuries, independent of each other, residing in various countries but still under the influence of the same Spirit, locate this Kingdom in the future, link it with the Sec. Advent, and agree in portraying its distinguishing peculiarities and blessings. In a comparison of their writings, entering even into details, there is no contradiction between them... The disagreement is found in the interpreters and not in the writers of the Bible; for the latter all start from the same point, holding up the same covenant as an everlasting one under which we receive the promises, and all declare the same provisional and preparatory process, and all insist upon the same literal fulfillment. Harmony of design, unity of purpose is seen throughout their writings, but only so long—as the infidel even has forcibly stated and proven—as the plain grammatical sense is retained. Forsake this sense, and then, notwithstanding all the protests to the contrary, this harmony is violated, this unity is destroyed to the confirmation of unbelief” (Peters, TTK, 3:222). It also unifies believers. “There is far more agreement between Pre-Millenarians than between Post-Millenarians” (ibid., 1:491)

The G-HH is protective. It safeguards all doctrine. “If the Kingdom was symbolical, why not then repentance, faith, and everything else connected with this Kingdom? For, if the main subject is such, why not the subsidiary? This leads us where some have, from a false premise, logically landed, making the whole teaching of Jesus and the apostles a symbolical or typical one of that religion of humanity which is now arising” (Peters, TTK, 1:633). “If millennial prophecies could be spiritualized, why not the doctrine of inspiration, the deity of Christ, the substitutional atonement, the doctrine of resurrection, and the final judgment” (Walvoord, MK, p. 35)? It protects us from Gnosticism. “One cannot go along with survivals of Gnosticism in the amillennial view, which makes them discountenance all that is material, as though directly antithetical to the spiritual and moral... Spiritualization in Scripture is indefensible even when employed in the interests of ‘a higher, spiritualized world’” (Feinberg, M, p. 259). It protects us from delusion. “I hold for a most infallible rule in expositions of the Sacred Scriptures, that where a literal construction will stand, the furthest from the letter is commonly the worst. There is nothing more dangerous than this licentious and deluding art, which changes the meaning of words, as alchemy doth, or would do, the substance of metals, making it anything what it pleases, and bringing in the end all truth to nothing.’ —Richard Hooker” (McClain, GK, p. 132) It protects us from fanciful thinking. “The writer has personally examined some fifty historical interpretations of Revelation, all of which would be rejected by any intelligent person today. The literal method which regards the bulk of Revelation as future is the only consistent approach possible. The spiritualizing method of interpretation is a blight upon the understanding of the Scriptures and constitutes an important hindrance to Bible study” (Walvoord, MK, p. 73). It protects us from liberalism. “...modern liberalism... its adherents are drawn almost entirely from amillennial ranks” (ibid., p. 71) “Amillennialism clearly, then, offers no defense against modern liberalism” (ibid., p. 72). “The amillenarian who wants to forsake conservatism for liberalism needs no change in method and the transition is not difficult. On the other hand, a premillenarian if enamored of modern liberalism would have to forsake all he had formerly stood for in order to adopt liberalism” (ibid., p. 73). “...spiritualization and unbelief as they combine in modern liberal amillennialism” (ibid., p. 108). It protects us from apostasy. “The amillennial method does not provide a solid basis for a consistent system of theology. The hermeneutical method of amillennialism has justified conservative Calvinism, liberal modernism, and Roman theology [and Jehovah’s Witnesses—ed.] alike” (ibid., p. 67). “...premillennialists are less likely to slip into liberalism, while those who allegorize prophecy are more likely to spiritualize (and, thereby, perhaps deny) doctrinal nonnegotiables” (Geisler, ST, 4:553). It protects us from heresy. “They gave an allegorical interpretation to the historical portion of the Old Testament, and thus cast a sacred veil over their monstrous errors. Heresy is no friend to the plain grammatical sense of the Word” (Peters, TTK, 1:51). “If the same liberty were taken in the interpretation of redemptive truth that is often taken in prophetic truth, the doors would be instantly flung open to every soul-destroying heresy of the present time” (Chafer, KHP, 76%). “Like all the other reformers he [Martin Luther] set aside the dreary fiction of the fourfold sense... ‘The literal sense of Scripture alone,’ said Luther, ‘is the whole essence of faith and of Christian theology.’ ‘I have observed this, that all heresies and errors have originated, not from the simple words of Scripture as is so universally asserted, but from neglecting the simple words of Scripture, and from the affectation of purely subjective... tropes and inferences” [quoting F.W. Farrar, History of Interpretation, pp. 325-30] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 28). “If every problem of Scriptural interpretation is to be solved by spiritualization, there are left no boundaries for proper doctrine, no certain basis for erecting a theology” (Walvoord, MK, p. 66). And, it protects us from cults. Cults often know what the Bible says, but they’ve developed their own creative lines of reasoning as to why it supposedly doesn’t mean what it says. Cults claim that they “know better” than to believe all of the Bible as written; the G-HH demonstrates that theirs is a lethal mistake. “Cults, especially New Age and pantheistic types, are infamous for their allegorical approach to God’s Word; Mary Baker Eddy’s (1821-1910) entire Science and Health With Keys to the Scriptures uses allegorical interpretation. Eddy denied the reality of Satan, the material world, all evil, death, and hell. Broadly, Christian Science rejects any literal interpretation that contradicts its assumed pantheistic and spiritualistic foundation. This includes all evangelical doctrines, including the Virgin Birth, Christ's deity, the (substitutionary) Atonement, Christ's bodily resurrection, and the literal Second Coming" (Geisler, ST, 4:422).

And finally, the G-HH is sufficient. It needs no other, added sense. "...spiritualizing (i.e. adding another sense to the one given in the text)" (Peters, TTK, 2:155) The bottom line of this discussion: If the plain sense makes good sense, seek no other sense. "We unhesitatingly plant ourselves upon the famous maxim (Eccl. Polity, B. 2.) of the able Hooker: 'I hold for a most infallible rule in expositions of the Sacred Scriptures, that where a literal construction will stand, the furthest from the letter is commonly the worst. There is nothing more dangerous than this licentious and deluding art, which changes the meaning of words, as alchymy doth, or would do, the substance of metals, making of anything what it pleases, and bringing in the end all truth to nothing'" (ibid., 1:46). "As in the perusal of other books, so in reading the Bible, there is no better general rule than that the obvious meaning is the true" (ibid., 1:57). "If the careful reader finds that this literal sense produces a harmonious whole, an unbroken unity in the Divine Purpose (the great test after all), he surely is authorized, in confirmation of faith to receive and treasure it as a most precious guide" (ibid., p. 191). "Of any particular passage the most simple sense—or that which most readily suggests itself to an attentive and intelligent reader, possessing competent knowledge—is in all probability the genuine sense or meaning" [quoting Thomas Hartwell Horne, Introduction to the Critical Study and Knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, I, 325-26] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 35). "Since the literal is the most usual signification of a word, and therefore occurs much more frequently than the figurative, any term will be regarded as literal until there is good reason for a different understanding... The literal or most usual meaning of a word, if consistent, should be preferred to a figurative or less usual signification" [quoting Clinton Lockhart, Principles of Interpretation, p. 49] (ibid., p. 40). "...extensive allegorization. This runs contrary to all the principles of sound Bible interpretation, and leaves us with no way of determining which portions of Scripture should be understood normally and which should be taken as allegorical or mystically symbolic. The serious student of Scripture, on the other hand, will approach these important issues by letting the plain language of the Bible speak for itself. Unless there is a good reason in the sacred text to understand it other than normally and literally, the words of the Bible should logically be understood according to their real and intended meaning" (Pentecost, TKC, p.

143). “The Golden Rule of Interpretation: When the plain sense of Scripture makes common sense, seek no other sense; therefore, take every word at its primary, ordinary, usual, literal meaning, unless the facts of the immediate context, studied in the light of related passages and axiomatic and fundamental truths, indicate clearly otherwise” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 4). “Milton Terry [Biblical Hermeneutics, p. 40]... [The interpreter is to] proceed on the presupposition that the word is literal unless there is a good reason for deciding otherwise (ibid.)” (Geisler, ST, 4:455). “As the dictum goes, When the literal sense makes good sense, seek no other sense, lest it result in nonsense” (ibid., p. 419).

In summary, the grammatical-historical hermeneutic is indeed factual, biblical, in harmony with fulfilled prophecy, historical, acknowledged by orthodoxy, self-affirming, natural, comprehensive, universal, scripture-honoring, God-honoring, God’s people-honoring, (fallen) man-deprecating, edifying, unifying, protective and sufficient. Make no mistake: Scripture means what it says! Israel always means Israel; never the church, and never the Jehovah’s Witness organization. If the plain sense makes good sense, seek no other sense. In this way, God is sure to receive the glory, not man. It is His word, inspired and written in such a way that anyone with an open mind and heart can receive and understand it. Regardless of what church magistrates and cultic organizations would tell us, we don’t need their “has God really said?” (Gen. 3:1) help to “understand” what God has caused to be plainly written. Though sinful man would twist, allegorize and spiritualize away the obvious meaning of Scripture, the Holy Spirit would have us “believe everything that is written” (Acts 24:14), to self-aggrandizing and manipulative man’s rebuke, but to our salvation and entrance into the Kingdom, and to God’s eternal glory.

Chapter 5: Five Facets of the Kingdom

Who, what, why, when and where is the Kingdom of God? Who, what, why, when and where was the Kingdom of God back in ancient times, and who, what, why, when and where is it today? Who, what, why, when and where will it be in the future? Are there multiple Kingdoms of God, or just one? How are we to reconcile passages of Scripture regarding the Kingdom that seem to be contradictory? For instance, how can the Kingdom be both temporal and eternal, and both physical and spiritual? In this chapter, we'll answer these questions by suggesting that while there is only one Kingdom, the Kingdom has multiple facets.

The Kingdom of God is the reign or rule of God. “and He will reign over the house of Jacob forever; and His kingdom will have no end” (Luke 1:33). “And Thou hast made them to be a kingdom and priests to our God; and they will reign upon the earth” (Rev. 5:10). “And the seventh angel sounded; and there arose loud voices in heaven, saying, ‘The kingdom of the world has become the kingdom of our Lord, and of His Christ; and He will reign forever and ever” (Rev. 11:15). “Any rule of God at any time is kingdom in its character” (Chafer, ST, 2:79). “The ‘Kingdom of God’ may be defined broadly as the rule of God over His creation” (McClain, GK, p. 19). “A general survey of the Biblical material indicates that the concept of a ‘kingdom’ envisages a total situation containing at least three essential elements: first, a ruler with adequate authority and power; second, a realm of subjects to be ruled; and third, the actual exercise of the function of rulership” (ibid., p. 17). “The Kingdom of God, that is, God’s rule, has always been around, and there are various aspects and facets of God’s kingdom program” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 196). “A good definition is that the Kingdom of God is God’s rule” (ibid., p. 607).

The Kingdom of God in the Bible deals with the rule of God in this world; not in other worlds. “The Bible deals almost exclusively with this world—this earth, and not with others, or the universe... it teaches us how Divine Sovereignty in and through Man himself, by a specially delegated Kingdom under ‘the ordained Man,’ i.e. David’s Son, is to save man and restore him to a forfeited position in the moral government of God without any violation of the immutable principles of justice” (Peters, TTK, 3:562).

The Kingdom of God has both spiritual and physical aspects. “The Kingdom of God is both spiritual and physical” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 661).

Dr. McClain summarizes the biblical Kingdom of God, “This reign of God arises out of His own sovereign nature, was reflected in the ‘dominion’ bestowed by God upon the first Adam, was forfeited quickly by reason of the sin of man, has been restored judicially in the Last Adam, will be realized on earth in the final age of human history, and reaches out endlessly beyond history where we behold a throne which, as John explains, is ‘the throne of God and of the Lamb’ (Rev. 22:3)” (GK, p. 5). And, “It seems quite certain that we shall never again be even measurably safe here on earth until all men without exception have become good men, or until God Himself breaks once more into human history supernaturally—this time to establish with divine omnipotence a Kingdom of righteousness and compassion upon earth, thus supplanting the misrule and impotence of men. Of the two alternatives, the latter seems by far the most plausible and fraught with better hope for the future. In the meantime, the wise will not forget that above all the uncertainties and tragedy of human action there is a present Universal Kingdom of God which even now ‘ruleth over all,’ and that its Invincible King will have the last word in history” (ibid., p. xiii).

In Scripture, the Kingdom can refer to any of a number of different things. “The Bible speaks of the Kingdom of God in more than just one term, and even in contradictory terms. It is seen as both eternal and temporal, both universal and local, both administered by God and by man” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 391).

Pentecost notes that in the Bible, the term “Kingdom” is used in seven different ways. “In the Scriptures the term kingdom is used in seven different ways: (1) the Gentile kingdoms; (2) the kingdoms of Israel and Judah; (3) the kingdom of Satan; (4) God’s universal kingdom; (5) a spiritual kingdom; (6) the millennial Davidic kingdom; and (7) the mystery form of the kingdom” (TTC, p. 142). Five of these ways, (2, 4, 5, 6 and 7) relate to five different facets of God’s kingdom, and are the subjects of this chapter. The other two ways (1 and 3) relate to man’s and Satan’s kingdoms, respectively, and will be discussed later, in Section 2: The Biblical Kingdom.

Fruchtenbaum confirms that the Kingdom of God has multiple facets. “Chafer [in Systematic Theology, 7:223-224] also shows that the kingdom program of God had several facets... The first is the ‘theocratic’ kingdom which was God’s rule over Israel through ‘divinely appointed leaders, judges, and patriarchs.’ The second is the ‘covenanted’ kingdom which is the Messianic Kingdom or the Millennial Kingdom as promised in the Davidic Covenant by which it became ‘the national hope of Israel.’ The third is the ‘predicted’ kingdom which is the Messianic Kingdom as portrayed by the Old Testament prophets and so anticipated ‘a glorious kingdom for Israel on earth.’ The fourth is the ‘announced’ kingdom which is the Messianic Kingdom announced as being at hand by John the Baptist, Jesus, and the Apostles. It was an offer of the Messianic Kingdom to the nation but the prerequisite was to accept the King. However, that offer was rejected. The fifth is the ‘postponed until Christ returns’ aspect which is the Messianic Kingdom that was rejected and, therefore, the offer was rescinded. Where Covenant Theology goes wrong is that they fail to understand the nature of the kingdom that was offered to Israel and so try ‘to build a kingdom on the first advent of Christ as its basis, whereas... it will be realized only in connection with the second advent.’ The sixth is the ‘mystery’ kingdom which is the present facet of God’s kingdom program resulting from the rejecting and rescinding of the Messianic Kingdom. The Mystery Kingdom is defined as ‘Christendom’ and constitutes ‘the new message of the New Testament.’ The seventh is the ‘realized’ kingdom which is the Messianic Kingdom when it will be established on earth after the second coming. As Chafer states, ‘Not until the millennium will the kingdom... come to realization’” (I, p. 384).

McClain sees at least three facets of the Kingdom of God: the Universal Kingdom, the mediatorial kingdom and the church. “...antinomies... two kingdoms revealed in the Bible... In seeking for terms which might best designate these two things, I can find nothing better than the adjectives ‘universal’ and ‘mediatorial’” (GK, p. 21). “...the Mediatorial Kingdom and the Church, both of which must be regarded as within the Kingdom of God” (ibid., p. 425).

Fruchtenbaum sees the Kingdom of God has having five primary facets. “In total, there are five facets. Four of these facets were already known in the Old Testament; the fifth facet is the mystery that is only now revealed in the New Testament” (FM, p. 662). These five facets, the Universal Kingdom, the Spiritual Kingdom, the Theocratic Kingdom, the Millennial Kingdom and the “Mystery” Kingdom, are the subjects of this chapter.

The Kingdom also has multiple stages. Dr. Geisler sees seven primary stages in the overall Kingdom program: “God’s plan to defeat evil was and is (and will be) carefully and gradually executed in seven primary stages: (1) the creation of free creatures; (2) the fall of humankind; (3) the preparation for the Savior; (4) the incarnation of the Savior; (5) the present session of the Savior (in heaven); (6) the return and reign of the Savior (the final judgment); and (7) the new heaven and the new earth” (ST, 3:164). These seven stages will be presented in detail in Section 2: The Biblical Kingdom.

1. The Universal or Eternal Kingdom

The first of the five facets of the Kingdom of God is the Universal or Eternal Kingdom.

Definition of the Universal or Eternal Kingdom

The Universal or Eternal Kingdom can be defined as the universal sovereignty of God. Dr. Fruchtenbaum explains, “The first facet of the kingdom program is called the Universal Kingdom or the Eternal Kingdom. This facet refers to God’s rule in providence, in sovereignty, in that God is always in control. Nothing ever happens outside of God’s will. What happens might be because of God’s directive or decretive will or it might be because of God’s permissive will. The point is, God is always in control. The reason for the two names is to emphasize two different aspects of this facet of the kingdom. The term eternal emphasizes the timeless aspect, the fact that God is always in control; He is eternally in control. The term universal emphasizes the sphere and scope that no matter where things exist, everything is within the sovereign will and control of God. This includes the angelic realm. Pentecost gives four characteristics of this facet of the Kingdom of God: timeless, universal, providential, and miraculous. This first facet of God’s kingdom program emphasizes His eternal, sovereign rule everywhere over His entire creation. This facet is spoken of in 1 Chronicles 29:11-12; Psalm 10:16; 29:10; 74:12; 90:1-6; 93:1-5; 103:19-22; 145:1-21; 148:8; Proverbs 21:11; Jeremiah 10:10; Lamentations 5:19; Daniel 4:17, 25, 32; 6:27; Acts 17:24; et al. This is the kingdom that the believer enters upon death (1 Cor 15:50; 2 Tim. 4:18). The dispensations are the outworking of this kingdom in human history” (I, p. 609).

Description of the Universal Kingdom

This universal sovereignty applies not only to that of God the Father, but to that of God the Son, as well. Scripture says regarding the Son, “And Jesus came up and spoke to them, saying, ‘All authority has been given to Me in heaven and on earth’” (Matt. 28:18). “For by Him all things were created, both in the heavens and on earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones or dominions or rulers or authorities — all things have been created by Him and for Him. And He is before all things, and in Him all things hold together” (Col. 1:16–17). “But of the Son He says, ‘THY THRONE, O GOD, IS FOREVER AND EVER, AND THE RIGHTEOUS SCEPTER IS THE SCEPTER OF HIS KINGDOM’” (Heb. 1:8). Peters comments, “We gladly receive the declaration that ‘all power in heaven and on earth is given to Me;’ that He is above all earthly kings; that all things are subject to Him; that He can do all things in behalf of His people, etc.; but we add to all this, precisely what the Bible adds, that, aside from His Divine nature, we do not yet see ‘the Christ’ as ‘the Son of Man’ openly exercise this power, outwardly manifest this exaltation, visibly bring all things into subjection, and here on the earth perform all things that are promised” (TTK, 1:564). McClain concurs, “Any adequate discussion of the Universal Kingdom of God must give some recognition to the high place occupied by the Son of God in relation to that Kingdom. Sometimes men have thought too narrowly of His regal activity, restricting it almost exclusively to His office as the incarnate Ruler of a purely Messianic Kingdom... the creation of the universe and the establishment of the Universal Kingdom must be regarded as contemporaneous events... the creation with its divine control was and continues to be a standing revelation of the invisible God. As the Apostle Paul argues, ‘The invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead’ (Rom. 1:20)... the Son of God is spoken of in the Gospel of John as the eternal ‘Word’ (Grk. logos), who is from the beginning both the ‘life’ and the ‘light’ (1:1-5). Now since it is the nature of light to shine and overcome the darkness, we must conclude that the creative and sovereign power of Deity has always been revealed in and through the activity of the eternal Son who in the fulness of time became our incarnate Saviour” (GK, p. 31). “The passage in Hebrews 1:8 unquestionably refers to the eternal throne of Deity, which our Lord shares in His own right as ‘the Son’ in the Universal Kingdom of God” (ibid., p. 436).

God is sovereign over everything, for all time. “Thine, O Jehovah, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty: for all that is in the heavens and in the earth is thine; thine is the kingdom, O Jehovah, and thou art exalted as head above all. Both riches and honor come of thee, and thou rulest over all; and in thy hand is power and might; and in thy hand it is to make great, and to give strength unto all” (1 Chron. 29:11-12). “Yet God is my King of old, Working salvation in the midst of the earth” (Psalm 74:12). “Lord, thou hast been our dwelling-place In all generations. Before the mountains were brought forth, Or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, Even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God. Thou turnest man to destruction, And sayest, Return, ye children of men. For a thousand years in thy sight Are but as yesterday when it is past, And as a watch in the night. Thou carriest them away as with a flood; they are as a sleep: In the morning they are like grass which groweth up. In the morning it flourisheth, and groweth up; In the evening it is cut down, and withereth” (Psalm 90:1-6). “Jehovah hath established his throne in the heavens; And his kingdom ruleth over all. Bless Jehovah, ye his angels, That are mighty in strength, that fulfil his word, Harkening unto the voice of his word.

Bless Jehovah, all ye his hosts, Ye ministers of his, that do his pleasure. Bless Jehovah, all ye his works, In all places of his dominion: Bless Jehovah, O my soul” (Psalm 103:19-22). “I will extol thee, my God, O King; ...They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, And talk of thy power; To make known to the sons of men his mighty acts, And the glory of the majesty of his kingdom. Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, And thy dominion endureth throughout all generations” (Psalm 145:1-13). “In one sense, everything is in God’s kingdom, for since He reigns over the entire universe and nothing is out of His control, it is appropriate to speak of everything as under His dominion” (Geisler, ST, 4:464).

God is sovereign over nature. “Jehovah sat as King at the Flood; Yea, Jehovah sitteth as King for ever” (Psalm 29:10). “Jehovah reigneth; He is clothed with majesty; Jehovah is clothed with strength; he hath girded himself therewith: The world also is established, that it cannot be moved. Thy throne is established of old: Thou art from everlasting. The floods have lifted up, O Jehovah, The floods have lifted up their voice; The floods lift up their waves. Above the voices of many waters, The mighty breakers of the sea, Jehovah on high is mighty. Thy testimonies are very sure: Holiness becometh thy house, O Jehovah, for evermore” (Psalm 93:1-5). “Fire and hail, snow and vapor; Stormy wind, fulfilling his word” (Psalm 148:8) “Because God is in the operations of what men are pleased to call ‘natural law,’ He is able to ‘tip the scales’ of nature in ways indiscernible to the eyes of men” (McClain, GK, p. 26). “He does concern Himself with small affairs, because the fall of a raindrop or the sleeplessness of a king may, under God, have momentous consequences” (ibid., p. 28).

His sovereignty affects all people. “I said unto the arrogant, Deal not arrogantly; And to the wicked, Lift not up the horn: Lift not up your horn on high; Speak not with a stiff neck. For neither from the east, nor from the west, Nor yet from the south, cometh lifting up. But God is the judge: He putteth down one, and lifteth up another” (Ps. 75:4-7). “Thou, O Jehovah, abidest for ever; Thy throne is from generation to generation” (Lamentations 5:19). “And at the end of the days I, Nebuchadnezzar, lifted up mine eyes unto heaven, and mine understanding returned unto me, and I blessed the Most High, and I praised and honored him that liveth for ever; for his dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom from generation to generation. And all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing; and he doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth; and none can stay his hand, or say unto him, What doest thou” (Dan 4:34-35)? “We can be grateful that God has left a place for personal choice and freedom in His dealings with men, but we must understand that there is no room for any freedom with respect to this divine rule. It is not for men to choose whether or not they will be under the rule of the Universal Kingdom. Whether they like it or not, they are already under it (Ps. 75:4-7)” (McClain, GK, p. 31). “...the Universal Kingdom of God... ‘He reigns, but He is invisible, and the world at large knows it not; the nations pay Him no conscious obedience” [quoting S. J. Andrews, God’s Revelations of Himself to Men, pp. 284-285] (ibid., p. 437).

He is sovereign over nations. “Jehovah is King for ever and ever: The nations are perished out of his land” (Psalm 10:16). “But Jehovah is the true God; he is the living God, and an everlasting King: at his wrath the earth trembleth, and the nations are not able to abide his indignation” (Jer. 10:10).

He is sovereign over governments. “Then was the secret revealed unto Daniel in a vision of the night. Then Daniel blessed the God of heaven. Daniel answered and said, Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever; for wisdom and might are his. And he changeth the times and the seasons; he removeth kings, and setteth up kings; he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that have understanding” (Dan 2:19-21) “The sentence is by the decree of the watchers, and the demand by the word of the holy ones; to the intent that the living may know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the lowest of men” (Dan 4:17). “that thou shalt be driven from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field, and thou shalt be made to eat grass as oxen, and shalt be wet with the dew of heaven, and seven times shall pass over thee; till thou know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will” (Dan 4:25). “and thou shalt be driven from men; and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field; thou shalt be made to eat grass as oxen; and seven times shall pass over thee; until thou know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will” (Dan 4:32). “Daniel (e.g. chs. 2 and 7)... The prophecies indicate the Divine Sovereignty controlling all things, even while the Kingdom of God did not exist on earth as promised” (Peters, TTK, 1:251). “This is the providential factor, for the most part overlooked or ignored by men, which confounds at last all the Hamans and the Hitlers and wrecks their well-laid schemes” (McClain, GK, p. 28).

He is sovereign over the church. “For the husband is the head of the wife, as Christ also is the head of the church, He Himself being the Savior of the body” (Eph. 5:23). “Our Lord is never called the King of the Church, nevertheless there is no abrogation of the Universal Kingdom of God, and the Church cannot be set outside of it” (McClain, GK, p. 30).

2. The Spiritual Kingdom

Definition of the Spiritual Kingdom

The Spiritual Kingdom can be defined as all the saved people of all dispensations. Dr. Fruchtenbaum explains, “The second facet of God’s kingdom program is called the Spiritual Kingdom. The Spiritual Kingdom is composed of all who have experienced the new birth in all times by the Holy Spirit. From Adam until our day and as long as men continue to be born on this earth there will be the existence of the Spiritual kingdom. Every individual since Adam onward who has been born again by faith through the regenerating work of the Holy Spirit is a member of this kingdom. This is the Kingdom of God that Jesus spoke of to Nicodemus when he said that unless one is born again he cannot see, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God. This is God’s rule in the heart of the believer. For some Covenant Amillennialists, this is the totality of God’s kingdom program on earth, but for Dispensationalists it is only one facet of it. Dispensationalists do not deny the fact of God’s rule in the hearts of the saints. They simply refuse to force every Scripture on the Kingdom of God into this one facet when it simply does not fit. This facet is found in Matthew 6:33, 19:16 with 23-24; John 3:3-5; Acts 8:12; 20:25; 1 Corinthians 4:20; Colossians 1:13-14; 4:11; 1 Thessalonians 2:12; et al. In this present age, from Acts two until the Rapture, the spiritual kingdom and the Church are synonymous. However, the spiritual kingdom was in existence before the Church began and will continue to exist after the Church is removed in the Rapture” (I, p. 610).

Description of the Spiritual Kingdom

Time-wise, the Spiritual Kingdom covers all dispensations. “Just as there were believers in God before there was a theocratic nation of Israel, even so there were Israelites before there was a church of Christ. The kingdom of God is broader than Israel and broader than the church” (Geisler, ST, 4:26). “God’s family of all ages has many basics in common, such as one God, one Savior, one brotherhood as God’s children, one great plan of God, and one ultimate purpose to glorify God” (ibid.). “The kingdom of God is broader than the church. All who are in the church are in the kingdom of God, but not all in the kingdom of God are in the church—again, such as Old Testament saints, John the Baptist, and other believers who died before the message of Pentecost came to them” (ibid., p. 464).

The Spiritual Kingdom encompasses this present dispensation. “For He delivered us from the domain of darkness, and transferred us to the kingdom of His beloved Son, in whom we have redemption, the forgiveness of sins” (Col. 1:13-14). “No Millenarian writer ever noticed by the writer but ascribes to Jesus, in some form, a present reigning—a present exercise of exalted power” (Peters, TTK, 1:580). “Of the seventeen passages [in the epistles] dealing with the kingdom, there are only three (Rom. 14:17; 1 Cor. 4:20; Col. 1:13) that can be taken to apply to the present time” (Feinberg, M, p. 255). “Those who contend that dispensational pre-millennialists hold to no present spiritual phase of the kingdom (see Col. 1:13), reveal that they do not understand that position relative to the kingdom of heaven in mystery form” (ibid., p. 269).

The Spiritual Kingdom involves individual believers, rather than nations. “The Spiritual Kingdom is offered to individuals, not nations, and received by individuals by means of faith” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 625).

The Spiritual Kingdom was the focus of Jesus’ ministry. “But seek first His kingdom and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added to you” (Matt. 6:33). “And Jesus said to His disciples, ‘Truly I say to you, it is hard for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven. And again I say to you, it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God’” (Matt. 19:23-24). “Jesus answered and said to him, ‘Truly, truly, I say to you, unless one is born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God.’ Nicodemus said to Him, ‘How can a man be born when he is old? He cannot enter a second time into his mother’s womb and be born, can he?’ Jesus answered, ‘Truly, truly, I say to you, unless one is born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God’” (John 3:3-5). “...the Messiah... His total work, within which the spiritual aspect was supreme and the foundation of everything else” (McClain, GK, p. 287).

The Spiritual Kingdom is also the focus of the church’s ministry. “strengthening the souls of the disciples, encouraging them to continue in the faith, and saying, Through many tribulations we must enter the kingdom of God” (Acts 14:22). “And now, behold, I know that all of you, among whom I [Paul] went about preaching the kingdom, will see my face no more” (Acts 20:25). “for the kingdom of God is not eating and drinking, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit” (Rom. 14:17). “For the kingdom of God does not consist in words, but in power” (1 Cor. 4:20). “For He delivered us from the domain of darkness, and transferred us to the kingdom of His beloved Son, in whom we have redemption, the forgiveness of sins” (Col. 1:13-14). “and also Jesus who is called Justus; these are the only fellow workers for the kingdom of God who are from the circumcision; and they have proved to be an encouragement to me” (Col. 4:11). “so that you may walk in a manner worthy of the God who calls you into His own kingdom and glory” (1 Thes. 2:12). “This is a plain indication of God’s righteous judgment so that you may be considered worthy of the kingdom of God, for which indeed you are suffering” (2 Thes. 1:5). “Peter used the ‘keys’ to open the door of God’s spiritual kingdom to both Jews (Acts 2) and Gentiles (Acts 10)” (Geisler, ST, 4:187). Dr. Pentecost comments regarding Philip’s ministry, “But when they believed Philip preaching the good news about the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were being baptized, men and women alike” (Acts 8:12) “It is interesting to note that Philip’s preaching of Christ is called the ‘good news of the kingdom of God.’ Philip was not preaching concerning the earthly Davidic kingdom; rather, he was preaching the message of salvation through Jesus Christ, which was called the good news of the kingdom of God. This reveals that the ‘kingdom of God’ as is used here is a reference to God’s program in this present age of bringing men to Himself through the preaching of the death and the resurrection of Jesus Christ. The kingdom of God is made up, then, of all who by faith have received Jesus Christ as personal Saviour. The kingdom of God as used here is soteriological (salvation-related), not eschatological (prophecy-related). And those who believed the message became a part of that present form of theocracy” (TKC, p. 276). Dr. Geisler comments regarding Paul’s ministry, “1 Thessalonians 2:12... Paul reminds the Thessalonians of his ministry that is ‘encouraging, comforting and urging you to live lives worthy of God, who calls you into his kingdom and glory.’ Since by virtue of being saved they were already in His kingdom (cf. John 3:3, 5), it makes sense to take this as speaking of God’s present spiritual kingdom” (ST, 4:497).

3. The Theocratic or Mediatorial/Monarchial Kingdom

The third facet of the Kingdom of God is the Theocratic or Mediatorial/Monarchial Kingdom.

Definition of the Theocratic or Mediatorial/Monarchial Kingdom

The word “theocratic” means “God ruling over men.” “the very essence... of a Theocracy is that of God ruling over men as an earthly ruler” (Peters, TTK, 3:478). “...the establishment of a theocracy: Israel accepted the role of being directly ruled by God. They were God’s kingdom on earth, and He was their King” (Geisler, ST, 4:466).

The Theocratic or Mediatorial/Monarchial Kingdom is the facet of the Kingdom of God that relates to God’s ruling over, in and through the nation Israel. It is the theocratic kingdom of Israel. Dr. Fruchtenbaum continues, “The third facet of God’s kingdom program is called the Theocratic Kingdom. This facet refers to God’s rule by means of and through a theocracy over one nation: Israel. The Theocratic Kingdom was God’s rule over Israel. The Theocratic Kingdom was established by Moses. With the giving of the law the foundations of Israel as a Theocratic Kingdom were laid. The Theocratic Kingdom underwent two aspects in its history. First came the mediatorial form, meaning that God ruled through mediators. From Moses until Samuel God ruled by means of mediators. These mediators were Moses, Joshua, and then the Judges, of which Samuel was the last. The second aspect was the monarchial form in that God ruled through monarchs from Saul, the first king of Israel, until Zedekiah, the last king. Samuel marked the transition for he was not only the last Judge, he also anointed the first two kings: Saul and David. David, in turn, began a dynasty which continued to occupy the throne until Zedekiah. It is during the latter stages of the monarchial form of the Theocratic Kingdom that the kingdom went into a decline in quality. With the decline, the prophets began announcing a future form, a better form of God’s kingdom program which would be the Messianic Kingdom. Finally, the Theocratic Kingdom came to an end with the Babylonian destruction of Jerusalem. With Babylon, the Theocratic Kingdom came to an end and the Times of the Gentiles began, which has continued until this day. Old Testament history from Exodus 19 to 2 Chronicles 36 is a history of the Theocratic Kingdom” (I, p. 610).

Description of the Theocratic Kingdom

The Theocratic Kingdom is different from the Universal or Eternal Kingdom. Peters points out, “The reader will carefully observe (as use will be made of it hereafter) that this Theocracy is very different from God’s universal, general sovereignty exercised by virtue of His being the Creator. Kurtz (His. Old Cov., vol. 3, p. 104) says: ‘As the Creator and Governor of the world, He was the Lord and King of every nation, but He did not base His kingly relation to Israel upon this foundation; He founded it rather upon what He had done especially for Israel: it was not as Elohim, but as Jehovah, that He desired to reign over Israel” (TTK, 1:224).

The Theocratic Kingdom is mediatorial because in it God rules men through a mediator. “Why the Law then? It was added because of transgressions, having been ordained through angels by the agency of a mediator, until the seed should come to whom the promise had been made. Now a mediator is not for one party only; whereas God is only one” (Gal. 3:19–20). McClain explains, “The Mediatorial Kingdom may be defined tentatively as: (a) the rule of God through a divinely chosen representative who not only speaks and acts for God but also represents the people before God; (b) a rule which has especial reference to the earth; and (c) having as its mediatorial ruler one who is always a member of the human race” (GK, p. 41) He continues, “The English term ‘mediator’ does not occur at all in the Old Testament, and only six times in the New Testament... Yet scholars are quite generally agreed that the idea of mediation between God and man permeates the entire field of written revelation. In fact, D. Miall Edwards [‘Mediation,’ International Standard Bible Encyclopedia, Vol. III, p. 2025] asserts that in this idea we have the ‘key to the unity of the Bible’” (ibid.).

The Theocratic Kingdom is a God-ordained union of church and state. “Is God’s Kingdom, which requires, as essential to its very existence, the union of church and state, never to be re-established” (Peters, TTK, 1:664)?

The Theocratic Kingdom will be restored in the Messianic or Millennial Kingdom. “In that day I will raise up the fallen booth of David, And wall up its breaches; I will also raise up its ruins, And rebuild it as in the days of old” (Amos 9:11–12) “This theocracy, insignificant as was its origin in Israel, has a world-embracing destination” (Peters, TTK, 1:557). “The Theocracy is a visible, outward Kingdom. Now indeed overthrown, but its restoration promised under this ‘Son of Man,’ and so openly, so visibly that all flesh shall realize and acknowledge it... an external organized form” (ibid., p. 569). “There is only one covenanted Kingdom promised to David’s Son here on the earth, and that is the Theocratic-Davidic Kingdom now still withdrawn and overturned as Bible and history testify” (ibid., 3:527). This writer would also point out that it is likely not by accident that a large portion of the world’s attention is even now focused on this tiny nation Israel.

The Theocratic Kingdom will be covered in detail in our chapter The Theocratic Kingdom.

4. The Messianic or Millennial Kingdom

The fourth facet of the Kingdom of God is the Messianic or Millennial Kingdom.

Definition of the Messianic or Millennial Kingdom

The Messianic or Millennial Kingdom is a future, literal, global government administered by Christ from David's throne in Jerusalem. Fruchtenbaum explains, "The fourth facet of God's kingdom program is also given two names: the Messianic Kingdom or the Millennial Kingdom. The name, Messianic Kingdom, emphasizes that this kingdom will be ruled directly by the Messiah Himself. The name Millennial Kingdom emphasizes how long this kingdom will last: one thousand years. The form of the Messianic or Millennial Kingdom is that of an earthly literal kingdom which Jesus will rule from the Throne of David. It is rooted in the Davidic Covenant. When God made a covenant with David He promised that David would have an eternal house, an eternal kingdom, an eternal throne and an eternal descendent. It is this fourth facet of the kingdom program, the Messianic Kingdom, that was a major area of Old Testament prophecy. This was the kingdom proclaimed as being at hand by John the Baptist. This was the kingdom Jesus offered to the Jewish people. It is this kingdom that was rejected. As a result of the rejection of the Messianic Kingdom, the offer was rescinded or 'taken away' from that generation and from a human perspective the Messianic Kingdom was 'postponed' and not to be set up at this time. From the divine perspective, this rejection was part of God's plan and the means by which the Messiah would die to provide the atonement and by which the gospel would extend to the Gentiles (Isa. 49:1-13). Instead, the Messianic Kingdom will be re-offered to the Jewish generation of the Tribulation, which will accept it" (I, p. 611). Geisler adds, "...the messianic kingdom, which will be an overarching religious, moral, political, and economic system" (ST, 4:465). And, "With regard to the messianic kingdom, several comments are in order. From Genesis to Revelation there are promises of a literal, political kingdom in which the Ruler (King), who is Christ, will reign on earth. This kingdom (1) was promised in the Old Testament, (2) was offered by John the Baptist, Jesus, and his disciples to the Jews in the Gospels, (3) was rejected by the Jewish authorities, (4) was, in accord with God's eternal plan, put on hold while He brought Gentiles into a new body (the church), (5) will be offered again by Jesus at His return, and (6) will be accepted by the Jewish nation and fulfilled in the Millennium (Rev. 20:1-6). Any attempt to spiritualize away these yet unfulfilled prophecies is a violation of literal, historical-grammatical biblical interpretation; if this same allegorical hermeneutic were applied to the rest of Scripture, it would undermine the fundamentals of the historic Christian faith” (ibid., p. 497).

The Millennial Kingdom is not an obscure subject in the Bible. Walvoord says, “One of the most significant facts relating to the millennial doctrine distinguishing it from the amillennial point of view is the teaching that the millennial kingdom is a rule of God on earth, thereby distinguishing it from a purely spiritual reign in the hearts of men through centuries of human history and distinguishing it from the will of God as expressed in heaven or in eternity future. The evidence for this is so abundant that it is strange that learned men have been able to deny this plain teaching of the Word of God” (MK, p. 297). “In short, with regard to the messianic kingdom of Israel, (1) The Old Testament predicted it. (2) Jesus confirmed it (Luke 21:24; Acts 1:6-7). Peter promised it (3:19-21). Paul reaffirmed it (Rom. 11:11-36). (5) God never revoked it (v. 29; cf. v. 26)” (Geisler, ST, 4:492).

The Millennial Kingdom is a major component in the overall Kingdom program. “In the Premillennial view the coming Kingdom becomes the consummating link between history and the eternal order” (McClain, GK, p. xii).

Description of the Millennial Kingdom

The Millennial Kingdom is not the Universal or Eternal Kingdom. “The Davidic throne, which once existed, which was withdrawn, and which is promised to be restored under David’s Son, is something widely different from the general Sovereignty of the Almighty over the universe” (Peters, TTK, 1:557).

It is a re-establishment of the Theocratic Kingdom. “In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof; and I will raise up its ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old” (Amos 9:11) “The main features of this Kingdom of good may be found, at least in germ, in the Mosaic theocracy, and also in the prophets who not only called their contemporaries back to its moral principles but also at the same time predicted a future and more perfect reestablishment of the Kingdom on earth” (McClain, GK, p. 288).

It is a literal kingdom. “The Kingdom at the time of the covenant was literal; the promise of inheriting is literal, confined as it is by the express terms to the literal Theocracy; the Coming of the Heir is literal; the postponement is literal; all is literal” (Peters, TTK, 2:204).

It supersedes all other earthly empires. “And in the days of those kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, nor shall the sovereignty thereof be left to another people; but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever. Forasmuch as thou sawest that a stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold; the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter: and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure” (Dan. 2:44–45). “And the seventh angel sounded; and there arose loud voices in heaven, saying, ‘The kingdom of the world has become the kingdom of our Lord, and of His Christ; and He will reign forever and ever’” (Rev. 11:15). “Able writers, under the influence of a spiritual Church-Kingdom theory, that warps their interpretation, fall into mistakes, showing that they do not correctly apprehend the covenanted and predicted Kingdom that is to take the place and sway of the preceding world empires” (Peters, TTK, 2:600).

It is future. “Pray, then, in this way: “Our Father who art in heaven, Hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, On earth as it is in heaven”” (Matt. 6:9–10). “There is no divine objective in the present age unto the setting up of that earthly kingdom” (Chafer, ST, 5:111). “Merrill Tenney [Interpreting Revelation, p. 145]... ‘The more literal an interpretation that one adopts, the more strongly will he be construed to be a futurist’” (Geisler, ST, 4:455).

It is visible and tangible. “Thine eyes shall see the king in his beauty: they shall behold a land that reacheth afar. Thy heart shall muse on the terror: Where is he that counted, where is he that weighed the tribute? where is he that counted the towers? Thou shalt not see the fierce people, a people of a deep speech that thou canst not comprehend, of a strange tongue that thou canst not understand. Look upon Zion, the city of our solemnities: thine eyes shall see Jerusalem a quiet habitation, a tent that shall not be removed, the stakes whereof shall never be plucked up, neither shall any of the cords thereof be broken. But there Jehovah will be with us in majesty, a place of broad rivers and streams, wherein shall go no galley with oars, neither shall gallant ship pass thereby. For Jehovah is our judge, Jehovah is our lawgiver, Jehovah is our king; he will save us” (Isa. 33:17–22). “and the glory of Jehovah shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together; for the mouth of Jehovah hath spoken it” (Isa. 40:5). “BEHOLD, HE IS COMING WITH THE CLOUDS, and every eye will see Him, even those who pierced Him; and all the tribes of the earth will mourn over Him. Even so. Amen” (Rev. 1:7). “The Word always speaks of this Kingdom as something visibly, externally manifested in the form covenanted” (Peters, TTK, 1:599). “The Kingdom when established is something recognizable by all men, something that all will acknowledge as indisputable in its manifestation” (ibid., p. 619) McClain agrees, “In concluding our discussion of the relation of the future Mediatorial Kingdom to historical considerations, it should be said that this indubitable relationship goes far toward establishing the literality of the Kingdom of Old Testament prophecy. Although in a real sense an embodiment of the finest ideals and aspirations of men, it is not merely an ‘ideal’ kingdom like the Kantian ‘kingdom of ends’ toward which man must ever strive but never wholly attain. On the contrary, the coming Kingdom will be as concrete and literal in the realm of sense experience as the historical kingdom of Israel or the kingdom of Great Britain today. All prophecy from first to last asserts and implies this genuine tangibility: ‘Thine eyes shall see the king... they shall behold the land’ (Isa. 33:17); and ‘all flesh shall see it together’ (Isa. 40:5). While it is true that only the pure in heart will ever see God in a moral and spiritual sense (Matt. 5:8), and there are some things which must by their very nature remain forever invisible even to the pure in heart (1 Tim. 6:16), it is nevertheless also true that some of the ‘invisible things’ of God can be made tangibly manifest to the eyes of men, regardless of their moral condition. Because of the derangement caused by sin, men may become vain in their reasonings and arrive at false conclusions, but this cannot erase the tangible facts of divine revelation which ‘are clearly seen’ (Rom. 1:20-22). It is wrong, therefore, in the interest of a purely philosophic ‘spirituality,’ to close our eyes to what the Scriptures so unmistakably assert about the future Kingdom of Old Testament prophecy” (GK, p. 160).

It is on Earth. “Ask of Me, and I will surely give the nations as Thine inheritance, And the very ends of the earth as Thy possession” (Ps. 2:8). “But the meek shall inherit the land, And shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace” (Ps. 37:11). “And whereas thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men; but they shall not cleave one to another, even as iron doth not mingle with clay. And in the days of those kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, nor shall the sovereignty thereof be left to another people; but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever” (Dan. 2:43-44). “I saw in the night-visions, and, behold, there came with the clouds of heaven one like unto a son of man, and he came even to the ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all the peoples, nations, and languages should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed” (Dan. 7:13–14). “For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of Jehovah, as the waters cover the sea” (Hab. 2:14). “And Jehovah shall be King over all the earth: in that day shall Jehovah be one, and his name one” (Zech. 14:9). “Blessed are the gentle, for they shall inherit the earth” (Matt. 5:5). “Pray, then, in this way: “Our Father who art in heaven, Hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, On earth as it is in heaven. “Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven our debtors”” (Matt. 6:9–12). “with a view to an administration suitable to the fulness of the times, that is, the summing up of all things in Christ, things in the heavens and things upon the earth” (Eph. 1:10). “And they sang a new song, saying, ‘Worthy art Thou to take the book, and to break its seals; for Thou wast slain, and didst purchase for God with Thy blood men from every tribe and tongue and people and nation. And Thou hast made them to be a kingdom and priests to our God; and they will reign upon the earth’” (Rev. 5:9–10). “And the seventh angel sounded; and there arose loud voices in heaven, saying, ‘The kingdom of the world has become the kingdom of our Lord, and of His Christ; and He will reign forever and ever’” (Rev. 11:15). Peters comments, “The predicted Kingdom of the Messiah, David’s Son, is nowhere specified to be a Kingdom in the third heaven, but ‘of heaven’ or rather ‘of heavens’ or ‘of heavenlies.’ According to the Covenant it could not be in heaven, but it is of heaven; that is, given by God, made as God designs it, fashioned after the will of heaven, and containing in itself ‘heavens,’ or ‘heavenlies’” (TTK, 2:13). “When this earth has a God-man for its Ruler, a Theocratic ordering manifested in its glory, a God again dwelling with man and disseminating His blessings, the will of God done on earth as in heaven, etc., then we have ‘the heavenly country’ which (Heb. 11:16) the Patriarchs sought, and this is consistent with the inheritance covenanted to them, which then is ‘filled with the glory of the Lord’” (ibid., p. 15). “In every aspect that we view the subject, it seems suitable and necessary to have such a Theocracy as predicted. Besides the reasons adduced derived from covenant, the faithfulness of God, the redemption of the earth, etc., it does appear eminently proper that the theatre of King Jesus’ humiliation, sufferings, and death should witness also His exaltation and glory. The Bible, in addition to the pleas presented by us, points to the time coming when Christ shall be openly and visibly recognized as the glorious One, who, as the Second Adam, having substituted Himself through love, is the efficacious Head of humanity in its newly begun destiny; who, as Redeemer, having offered expiation to and honored the justice of God, now practically manifests the fruits of salvation; who, as prophet, having taught restitution, now exhibits Himself as the Truth evidenced by the work performed before Him; who, as Priest, having made an acceptable sacrifice, now presents before the world the fruit resulting from it; who, as King, in virtue even of His Divine union and showing it by guidance, supporting, etc., now manifests it in the special ordained manner as Sovereign Ruler. In brief, this Theocracy is the restoration of a God again dwelling with man, accessible, and constituting in Jesus an infallible Head, just such as the world needs, just such as man for ages has longed for, and just such as will place David's Son in honor and glory in a world where He suffered and died. The past treatment and brief stay of the Son of God and David's Son insures a triumphant return, and a sojourn in power among men whom He will save, verifying the name Immanuel, God with us, in the Theocratical sense" (ibid., p. 129). "Abraham—to whom this earth, and not another, was promised" (ibid., p. 514) "The place where this reign is to be manifested is expressly stated: 'We shall reign on (or as Stuart, over) the earth.' In the very nature of the case, if they inherit with David's Son, the restored Theocratic-Davidic Kingdom, it must be a reign here on and over the earth. It is after the Coming of the Son of man, after the rise and progress of the fourth beast, the ten horns and the little horns, and at the destruction of these Gentile and Antichristian powers (Dan. 7:22) that 'the time came that the saints possessed the Kingdom,' and that 'the Kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the Kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High.' It is taking an unwarranted liberty with covenant, prophecy, and promise to locate this Kingdom and reign in any other place than this earth; and yet multitudes venture to assume it, believing themselves, under a spiritual interpretation, not only justified, but that they are actually exalting the Word by so doing" (ibid., p. 574). "The benefits resulting from the work of Christ are both spiritual and temporal; refer to soul, body, race, and earth... it is astonishing that they cannot see that Redemption itself would be imperfect without the direct conference of earthly good and blessing. Indeed more than this, the very nature of the Kingdom includes a bountiful and continuous supply of temporal good for the restored Jewish nation and spared Gentiles... The Kingdom of Christ, with all its extraordinary spiritual manifestations, is over nations living in the flesh, and in an earth dispensing the favors of bountiful seasons... the revived Gnostic idea of the innate sinfulness of matter (at least it assumes or takes for granted some such notion), which the Bible repudiates in the person of Jesus, in the original creation, and in the recreation. To confine Redemption exclusively to one aspect, either spiritual or temporal, is to make it one-sided and imperfect; both must be included to give a perfect representation" (ibid., 3:457). "Ladd [G. E. Ladd, The Presence of the Future: The Eschatology of Biblical Realism, p. 59, 63]... 'The biblical idea of redemption always includes the earth... The Old Testament nowhere holds forth the hope of a bodiless, nonmaterial, purely "spiritual" redemption as did Greek thought.'... He rightly states: 'There is no Greek dualism or Gnosticism in the Old Testament hope'" (Feinberg, M, p. 279). "The Kingdom will be on earth" (McClain, GK, p. 148). "The theocratic kingdom, therefore, of which the prophets spoke is an earthly kingdom which can find its fulfillment only in a literal reign of Christ upon the earth" (Walvoord, MK, p. 299).

It is Jewish. "And Jesus said to them, 'Truly I say to you, that you who have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man will sit on His glorious throne, you also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel'" (Matt.19:28). "And behold, you will conceive in your womb, and bear a son, and you shall name Him Jesus. He will be great, and will be called the Son of the Most High; and the Lord God will give Him the throne of His father David; and He will reign over the house of Jacob forever; and His kingdom will have no end" (Luke 1:31–33). "To illustrate, aside from the covenants and reasoning already given, how intensely Jewish this Kingdom is, we refer (by way of anticipation) the reader to two or three particulars. (1) At the restoration of this Jewish nation, while Gentile nations shall experience great blessedness, the supremacy among all nations is accorded to the Jewish nation, as e.g. Micah 4:8, and 7:15-20; Zeph. 3:14-20; Zech. chs. 10, 12, 14, etc. (2) Jerusalem shall be wonderfully exalted in that day, as e.g. Zech. 8:3; Jer. 3:17; Joel 3:17; Isa. 24:23, etc. (3) The land itself shall be highly honored, as e.g. Ezek. 36:34, 36; Isa. 51:3; Zech. 2:12; Isa. 60:15 and 62:4, etc. To separate these predictions from their connection with the Jewish nation, is a destroying of their consistency and force, for the same identical nation, Jerusalem, and land that was suffering under Gentile dominion, is to enjoy such honor and happiness. To apply these predictions to another and mystical nation, city, and land is to make the threats all 'Jewish' and the blessings all of a Gentile nature;—which procedure is a gross violation of the well-founded laws of language. Hence we reject it as unwarranted, deceptive, a degradation of the election, and as virtually making God unfaithful to oath-bound promises" (Peters, TTK, 1:427).

It is monarchial. "Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in justice" (Isa. 32:1). "This Theocracy will realize the idea of universal Empire, the darling wish of mighty monarchs” (Peters, TTK, 2:127). “Concerning this there can be no question. The Mediatorial Kingdom of Old Testament prophecy is monarchial in form” (McClain, GK, p. 206). “...the Messianic concept was primarily regal in nature” (ibid., p. 413).

It is theocratic. “This is a Theocracy in deed and in truth, for in this re-organized Kingdom we find the Theocratic idea—God’s idea of a perfect government—fully consummated. The Rulership is safely and powerfully lodged in one Person, who in Himself unites the human and the Divine” (Peters, TTK, 2:123) “...perfect government can only come directly through God” (ibid., p. 126). “Our trust is in God, that the Kingdom of this world shall yet be His in the appointed, covenanted Theocratic order. Plato (and with him many others) will yet be verified: ‘In the end, lest the world should be plunged into an eternal abyss of confusion, God, the author of the primitive order, will appear again and resume the reins of empire; then He will change, embellish, and restore the frame of nature, and put an end to decay, sickness, and death.’ Unbelief sarcastically tells us, if the Bible is true, why does not God in our day appear, set up a Theocratic Kingdom, and make Himself felt as a Ruler indeed. The fact of a non-Theocratic government in actual force influences them to reject the entire Theocratic idea as of mere human invention. We point, however, to the most solid reasons for the withdrawal of the Theocracy (evidenced e.g. even in the past history of the Jewish nation), and its delay to the future Advent (shown e.g. in gathering out a people to sustain it in power and glory when restored)” (ibid.). “While civil government is ordained of God as something that necessarily proceeds from the nature of man and society, God has nowhere excepting only the Theocratic—given His approval to a special form” (ibid., p. 776). “Men will be surprised that this Theocratic feature so plainly revealed should ever have been doubted” (ibid., 3:545). “A Theocracy... cannot be spiritualized away without doing violence to a thousand promises and calling into question the faithfulness of God” (ibid., p. 582).

It is political. “For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of Jehovah of hosts will perform this” (Isa. 9:6–7). “Did not the ancient Theocratic-Davidic Kingdom include political rulership, and, if restored, as covenanted and predicted, must it not embrace the same? Will not the restored Jewish nation and spared Gentile nations be, of necessity, in order to meet the requirements of prediction, under political rule” (Peters, TTK, 2:600)?

It is a union of legislative, executive and judicial branches of government. “Thine eyes shall see the king in his beauty: they shall behold a land that reacheth afar. Thy heart shall muse on the terror: Where is he that counted, where is he that weighed the tribute? where is he that counted the towers? Thou shalt not see the fierce people, a people of a deep speech that thou canst not comprehend, of a strange tongue that thou canst not understand. Look upon Zion, the city of our solemnities: thine eyes shall see Jerusalem a quiet habitation, a tent that shall not be removed, the stakes whereof shall never be plucked up, neither shall any of the cords thereof be broken. But there Jehovah will be with us in majesty, a place of broad rivers and streams, wherein shall go no galley with oars, neither shall gallant ship pass thereby. For Jehovah is our judge, Jehovah is our lawgiver, Jehovah is our king; he will save us” (Isa. 33:17-22). McClain explains, “All the functions of government are centered in the glorious Person of this Mediatorial King. The prophet Isaiah paints a vivid picture of the political situation in the days of the established Kingdom: Then the eyes of men ‘shall see the king in his beauty’ ruling upon the earth as a ‘Judge,’ ‘lawgiver,’ and ‘king’ (Isa. 33:17, 22)—a remarkable forecast of the conventional divisions of modern government; judicial, legislative, and executive” (GK, p. 207). He adds, “The founding fathers of our own American state, approaching their task with a deep suspicion of human nature, designed an ingenious system of checks and balances to separate these three functions into departments and keep any one of them from usurping too much power. Although it seems clumsy and inefficient at times, lacking both in unity and economy, nevertheless our government has furnished a welcome refuge for political liberty in a sinful world, and will continue to do so—if we can keep it... But this precarious balance of powers is not the most ideal political form. When God’s own glorious King takes over the kingdoms of earth, it will be safe at last to concentrate all the functions of the state in one Person” (ibid.).

It is a union of church and state. “And Jehovah shall be King over all the earth: in that day shall Jehovah be one, and his name one” (Zech. 14:9). “And it shall come to pass, that every one that is left of all the nations that came against Jerusalem shall go up from year to year to worship the King, Jehovah of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles. And it shall be, that whoso of all the families of the earth goeth not up unto Jerusalem to worship the King, Jehovah of hosts, upon them there shall be no rain”

(Zech. 14:16-17). “And Melchizedek king of Salem brought out bread and wine; now he was a priest of God Most High” (Gen. 14:18). “For this Melchizedek, king of Salem, priest of the Most High God, who met Abraham as he was returning from the slaughter of the kings and blessed him” (Heb. 7:1) “For it is witnessed of Him [Jesus], ‘Thou art a priest forever According to the order of Melchizedek’” (Heb. 7:17). “Blessed and holy is the one who has a part in the first resurrection; over these the second death has no power, but they will be priests of God and of Christ and will reign with Him for a thousand years” (Rev. 20:6). “In the future Kingdom there is a perfect union of church and state under one Head without absorption or prejudice to either one or the other” (Peters, TTK, 1:651). “Let us be content with our ‘stranger and pilgrim’ allotted condition until the time comes when God and His Son shall unite church and state, not under rulers liable to corruption, etc., but under tried and immortal ones” (ibid., p. 652). “The nature of a Theocracy... the inseparable union of State and Church” (ibid., 2:607) “The inseparable union of Church and State, the Head of both Church and State being God Himself” (ibid.) “With the Jew politics and religion were inseparable. Every hope of spiritual blessing rested on the coming of Messiah” (Anderson, SOG, p. 40). “A union between church and state is safe only when inaugurated and controlled by the one true God in a kingdom of His own (Zech. 14:9, 16-21)” (McClain, GK, p. 75). “...in that day what we call ‘religious freedom’ must come to an end. Today men are allowed to rebel against the true God, but there is no freedom to rebel against the State” (ibid., p. 245)! “Under the immediate and personal reign of the divine Mediatorial King, what is called ‘freedom of religion’ will properly come to an end” (ibid., p. 295).

It is the central theme of the Bible. “A. G. Hebert [The Throne of David, p. 39]... ‘The Messianic Hope is the central theme of the Bible. It is that which gives to the two Testaments their unity’” (Feinberg, M, p. 84).

It is not carnal. “If contact with the earth makes carnal, then Christ must have been carnal in living here; and Adam in his innocence carnal, simply because he lived in Eden on earth” (Peters, TTK, 3:556).

And, it is not demeaning to Christ. “Surely if the Christ came, in the covenanted way, as a babe—if He died on the cross after a life of humiliation—is it unreasonable or a lowering of Him to expect His return in great power and glory, and to anticipate a reign which only shows Him forth as the Mighty Redeemer and the King of kings” (Peters, TTK, 3:552).

We’ll have more to say about the Millennial Kingdom in our chapter The Millennial Kingdom.

5. The Mystery Kingdom

The fifth and final facet of the Kingdom of God is the Mystery Kingdom.

Definition of the Mystery Kingdom

The Mystery Kingdom is the present “mystery” form of the Kingdom, commonly known as “Christendom.” Dr. Fruchtenbaum sums up, “The fifth facet of the kingdom program is the Mystery Kingdom. The name is derived from Matthew 13 where, following the rejection of His Messiahship, Jesus introduced this facet of God’s kingdom program by means of the mysteries of the kingdom. Paul defines what a divine mystery is in Ephesians 3:3-5, 9 and Colossians 1:26-27. A New Testament mystery is a divine truth which was not revealed in the Old Testament, but is revealed in the New. In Paul’s words, in the Old Testament it was not made known unto the sons of men because it hath been hid in God and hath been hid for ages and generations. In New Testament times, it hath now been revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets in order to make all men see what is... the mystery which for ages hath been hid in God and so it has now been manifested to the saints. The Mystery Kingdom is the one facet of the kingdom program which was not revealed in the Old Testament” (I, p. 611). “Because of the rejection of the Messiahship of Jesus, instead of the Messianic Kingdom, the fifth facet of the kingdom program, the Mystery Kingdom, is to be initiated. The parables of Matthew 13 describe the mystery form of the kingdom program. The Mystery Kingdom covers the age between the two comings of the Messiah, between the first and second coming. More specifically, it begins with the rejection of the Messiahship of Jesus in Matthew 12-13 and continues until the acceptance of the Messiahship of Jesus by Israel just before the second coming. Perhaps the best single word to define the Mystery Kingdom is the term ‘Christendom.’ It describes conditions on this earth while the King is absent from the earth and is in heaven” (ibid., p. 612).

Description of the Mystery Kingdom

The Mystery Kingdom includes all the hidden aspects of this present Church Age, an age that was itself entirely hidden from the purview of the Old Testament saints and prophets. “And the disciples came and said to Him, ‘Why do You speak to them in parables?’ And He answered and said to them, ‘To you it has been granted to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it has not been granted. For whoever has, to him shall more be given, and he shall have an abundance; but whoever does not have, even what he has shall be taken away from him. Therefore I speak to them in parables; because while seeing they do not see, and while hearing they do not hear, nor do they understand” (Matt. 13:10–13). “Behold, I tell you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet; for the trumpet will sound, and the dead will be raised imperishable, and we shall be changed. For this perishable must put on the imperishable, and this mortal must put on immortality” (1 Cor. 15:51–53). “that by revelation there was made known to me the mystery, as I wrote before in brief. And by referring to this, when you read you can understand my insight into the mystery of Christ, which in other generations was not made known to the sons of men, as it has now been revealed to His holy apostles and prophets in the Spirit” (Eph. 3:3-5) “and to bring to light what is the administration of the mystery which for ages has been hidden in God, who created all things” (Eph. 3:9) “For He delivered us from the domain of darkness, and transferred us to the kingdom of His beloved Son” (Col. 1:13) “that is, the mystery which has been hidden from the past ages and generations; but has now been manifested to His saints, to whom God willed to make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles, which is Christ in you, the hope of glory” (Col. 1:26-27). “and also Jesus who is called Justus; these are the only fellow workers for the kingdom of God who are from the circumcision; and they have proved to be an encouragement to me” (Col. 4:11). “so that you may walk in a manner worthy of the God who calls you into His own kingdom and glory” (1 Thes. 2:12).

The Mystery Kingdom includes both believers and unbelievers. “Allow both to grow together until the harvest; and in the time of the harvest I will say to the reapers, First gather up the tares and bind them in bundles to burn them up; but gather the wheat into my barn” (Matt. 13:30). Dr. Fruchtenbaum explains, “The Mystery Kingdom... This is a present facet of God’s kingdom program that comes between the two comings of the Messiah. This kingdom can be defined as ‘Christendom’ for it includes ‘true believers, professing people, rejecters, and even opponents.’ In this case, ‘the ruler is God.’ ‘The ruled are people on the earth who have related themselves in a positive, neutral, or negative way to “Christendom.”’ The place is the earth and the timing is ‘the period between His comings.’ The relationship of the Church to this kingdom is that of being part of it: ‘Since the church is part of Christendom, she is part of this concept of the kingdom’” [quoting Charles C. Ryrie, Basic Theology, pp. 397-399] (I, p. 387).

The Mystery Kingdom affirms that the Kingdom of God includes the rule of God in the heart of the believer. “Premillennialists do not deny that there is a facet of God’s kingdom program that is a present reality. Among Dispensationalists this is known as the Mystery Kingdom” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 193). “It should be obvious that Dispensationalism does not deny that the Kingdom of God includes God’s rule in the heart of the believer” (ibid., p. 388). “Dispensationalism does not deny the claim of Covenant Amillennialism that the rule of God is to be found in the hearts of the believers. In fact, Dispensationalists affirm it” (ibid., p. 389). “As we survey Paul’s ministry as recorded in the Book of Acts, we see that he was an ambassador of the kingdom of God—but his message was salvation through the death and the resurrection of Jesus Christ. No reference is made to support the notion that the earthly Davidic kingdom had been established. Rather, the message concerns entrance into a present form of the kingdom of God by faith in Jesus Christ” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 280). “Christ, following His resurrection, spent time with those whom He had chosen (John 15:16), instructing them concerning the new form of the kingdom and preparing them for their ministry of introducing the new form of the kingdom to Jew and Gentile alike. He reiterated His promise of empowerment by the Holy Spirit for the discharge of their ministry. On the Day of Pentecost the promised Spirit was poured out and came to indwell believers as His temple. In the Book of Acts their ministry of proclaiming the new message of the new form of the kingdom is recorded, by which the Gospel was proclaimed and spread throughout the world” (ibid., p. 281). “The term kingdom is used... in the Epistles... the third and most common use by far is in reference to the present form of the kingdom, that into which a believer enters by faith in Jesus Christ” (ibid., p. 283).

The Mystery Kingdom is still a mystery to many people. This is true both of people who are passive or neutral toward the church and the gospel, and also of those who actively oppose the church and the gospel, such as Jehovah’s Witnesses. “For the word of the cross is to those who are perishing foolishness, but to us who are being saved it is the power of God” (1 Cor. 1:18). “And even if our gospel is veiled, it is veiled to those who are perishing, in whose case the god of this world has blinded the minds of the unbelieving, that they might not see the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God” (2 Cor. 4:3–4).

We’ll have more to say about the Mystery Kingdom in our chapter The Mystery Kingdom (The Church).

So, with a modest amount of effort, we're able to discern five distinct facets of God's overall Kingdom program. While these five facets each have as their basic purpose the accomplishing of the will of God, if we are to understand the Bible correctly, it is essential that we keep these five facets clearly delineated in our minds, lest we mistakenly apply Scripture passages and/or theological concepts to one facet, when they actually belong to another. In this way, we will be greatly aided in "rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Tim. 2:15, NKJV).

Now while these five facets of the Kingdom are each unique and distinct, we should point out too that they do all work in concert to accomplish the one singular overarching purpose of the Kingdom of God, which is to glorify God. The Universal Kingdom glorifies God everywhere, at all times; the Spiritual Kingdom glorifies God through the salvation of men throughout all human history; the Theocratic Kingdom glorified Jehovah on earth through the nation Israel; the Millennial Kingdom, which is to be a restoration of the Theocratic Kingdom, will glorify God on earth for a thousand years via perfect human government, regenerated and holy subjects and an ideal environment; and finally, the Mystery Kingdom glorifies God now through the salvation of men, and will glorify Him forever by exhibiting the surpassing riches of His grace toward the church in the ages to come (Eph. 2:7).

In review, we began this Section 1: Introductory Considerations by first reviewing five popular views of the Kingdom. We then traced chiliasitic/premillennial eschatology through church history. Then, we listed our relevant presuppositions and premises, then we took a look at some basic hermeneutical principles. We concluded this Introductory Considerations section by reviewing the five primary facets of the Kingdom. We're now ready to trace the revelation of the Kingdom of God through the Bible itself, from Genesis to Revelation. We'll do this in Section 2: The Biblical Kingdom.

Section 2: The Biblical Kingdom

Chapter 6: God and Creation

Before the world was, God was.

“In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth”
(Gen. 1:1).

With quintessential elegance and simplicity, these first ten words of the Bible set the stage for all that is to follow. In these first words of inspired Scripture the eternal God is differentiated from His temporal creation, and God is stated to be the creative cause of everything that has come into existence. (See also John 1:1-3.)

According to the Bible, in contrast with their eternal Creator, the present “heaven and earth” had a beginning, and they will also have an end. “Worthy art Thou, our Lord and our God, to receive glory and honor and power; for Thou didst create all things, and because of Thy will they existed, and were created” (Rev. 4:11). “Heaven and earth will pass away, but My words shall not pass away” (Matt. 24:35). “And I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth passed away, and there is no longer any sea” (Rev. 21:1). Again, in stark contrast with His creation, almighty God is eternal, having neither beginning nor end of existence. “Before the mountains were brought forth, Or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, Even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God” (Ps. 90:2).

God

Because God is invisible to us, whatever we can know about Him must come from either general (i.e. nature) or special (i.e. the Bible) revelation from Him. Thankfully, He has chosen to reveal to us specific information about Himself via inspired Scripture. By examining His written revelation, then, we are able to learn much about Him, including His nature and attributes.

God's Nature

Regarding God's nature, the Bible presents us with three eternal Persons: the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit.

Individually, Scripture teaches that each of these three is eternal. Jesus said the Father was “before the world was.” “And now, glorify Thou Me together with Thyself, Father, with the glory which I had with Thee before the world was” (John 17:5).

Likewise, the Son was also in existence before anything that came into existence came into existence. “But thou, Bethlehem Ephrathah, which art little to be among the thousands of Judah, out of thee shall one come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth are from of old, from everlasting” (Mic. 5:2). “In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. He was in the beginning with God. All things came into being by Him, and apart from Him nothing came into being that has come into being” (John 1:1–3). “And now, glorify Thou Me together with Thyself, Father, with the glory which I had with Thee before the world was” (John 17:5). “And He [Jesus, vs. 3] is the image of the invisible God, the first-born of all creation. For by Him all things were created, both in the heavens and on earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones or dominions or rulers or authorities — all things have been created by Him and for Him. And He is before all things, and in Him all things hold together” (Col. 1:15–17). We’ll have more to say regarding the Son’s eternity and deity in our chapter The King of the Kingdom.

According to inspired Scripture, the Holy Spirit is a Person (John 14:16–17, 16:13–15; Acts 5:3; Eph. 4:30) and is also eternal. “how much more will the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered Himself without blemish to God, cleanse your conscience from dead works to serve the living God” (Heb. 9:14)?

Now, we also know from Scripture that there is only one God, not three. “That they may know that thou alone, whose name is Jehovah, Art the Most High over all the earth” (Ps. 83:18). “Jesus answered, ‘The foremost is, “HEAR, O ISRAEL! THE LORD OUR GOD IS ONE LORD”’” (Mark 12:29) “Now to the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only God, be honor and glory forever and ever. Amen” (1 Tim. 1:17). Scripture therefore presents us with one God existing eternally in three eternal Persons: the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit. We suggest that this is why Jesus commanded Christians to baptize in the name (singular) of the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit. “Go therefore and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them in the name [singular] of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all that I commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the age” (Matt. 28:19–20). (For a more complete discussion of God’s nature, including His tri-unity, see this writer’s book Reasoning with Jehovah’s Witness- es, or the “Theology Proper” section of a good Systematic Theology, such as Chafer’s or Geisler’s.)

God’s Attributes

Regarding God’s attributes, according to the Bible, God was, is and forever will be holy, “Above him stood the seraphim: each one had six wings; with twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly. And one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is Jehovah of hosts: the whole earth is full of his glory” (Isa. 6:2–3). “I charge you in the presence of God, who gives life to all things, and of Christ Jesus, who testified the good confession before Pontius Pilate, that you keep the commandment without stain or reproach until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ, which He will bring about at the proper time — He who is the blessed and only Sovereign, the King of kings and Lord of lords; who alone possesses immortality and dwells in unapproachable light; whom no man has seen or can see. To Him be honor and eternal dominion! Amen” (1 Tim. 6:13–16). “And the four living creatures, each one of them having six wings, are full of eyes around and within; and day and night they do not cease to say, ‘HOLY, HOLY, HOLY, IS THE LORD GOD, THE ALMIGHTY, WHO WAS AND WHO IS AND WHO IS TO COME’” (Rev. 4:8). righteous, “The Rock, his work is perfect; For all his ways are justice: A God of faithfulness and without iniquity, Just and right is he” (Deut. 32:4). “Gracious is Jehovah, and righteous; Yea, our God is merciful” (Ps. 116:5). “And they sang the song of Moses the bond-servant of God and the song of the Lamb, saying, ‘Great and marvelous are Thy works, O Lord God, the Almighty; Righteous and true are Thy ways, Thou King of the nations’” (Rev. 15:3). loving, “Nevertheless Jehovah thy God would not hearken unto Balaam; but Jehovah thy God turned the curse into a blessing unto thee, because Jehovah thy God loved thee [Israel]” (Deut. 23:5). “For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whoever believes in Him should not perish, but have eternal life” (John 3:16). “Husbands, love your wives, just as Christ also loved the church and gave Himself up for her” (Eph. 5:25) “The one who does not love does not know God, for God is love” (1 John. 4:8). just, “The Rock! His work is perfect, For all His ways are just; A God of faithfulness and without injustice, Righteous and upright is He” (Deut. 32:4). “Righteousness and justice are the foundation of thy throne: Lovingkindness and truth go before thy face” (Ps. 89:14). “What shall we say then? There is no injustice with God, is there? May it never be” (Rom. 9:14)! omnipresent, “For the eyes of Jehovah run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to show himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward him” (2 Chron. 16:9). “Whither shall I go from thy Spirit? Or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: If I make my bed in Sheol, behold, thou art there” (Ps. 139:7–8). “And I saw between the throne (with the four living creatures) and the elders a Lamb standing, as if slain, having seven horns and seven eyes, which are the seven Spirits of God, sent out into all the earth” (Rev. 5:6). omniscient, “then hear thou in heaven thy dwelling-place, and forgive, and do, and render unto every man according to all his ways, whose heart thou knowest; for thou, even thou only, knowest the hearts of all the children of men” (1 Kings. 8:39) “And there is no creature hidden from His sight, but all things are open and laid bare to the eyes of Him with whom we have to do” (Heb. 4:13). “in whatever our heart condemns us; for God is greater than our heart, and knows all things” (1 John. 3:20). omnipotent, “And looking upon them Jesus said to them, ‘With men this is impossible, but with God all things are possible’” (Matt. 19:26). “And He was saying, ‘Abba! Father! All things are possible for Thee; remove this cup from Me; yet not what I will, but what Thou wilt” (Mark 14:36). “‘I am the Alpha and the Omega,’ says the Lord God, who is and who was and who is to come, the Almighty” (Rev. 1:8). eternal, “The eternal God is thy dwelling-place, And underneath are the everlasting arms” (Deut. 33:27). “but now is manifested, and by the Scriptures of the prophets, according to the commandment of the eternal God, has been made known to all the nations, leading to obedience of faith” (Rom. 16:26) “And one of the four living creatures gave to the seven angels seven golden bowls full of the wrath of God, who lives forever and ever” (Rev. 15:7). and immutable. “For I, Jehovah, change not; therefore ye, O sons of Jacob, are not consumed” (Mal. 3:6). “Jesus Christ is the same yesterday and today, yes and forever” (Heb. 13:8). “Every good thing bestowed and every perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father of lights, with whom there is no variation, or shifting shadow” (James 1:17).

Creation

Knowing God’s nature and attributes helps us understand what motivated Him to create anything, and more specifically, what motivated Him to create this particular world.

Why Create Anything?

Why create anything? Is it not true that a holy and loving God, subsisting in three perfect Persons, must have been self-sufficient and self-satisfied from all eternity? Yes, this is true. However, because true love is giving love (Acts 20:35), it seems reasonable that a loving God might desire to give to someone or something beyond Himself, if that be possible. But in order to do that, He would have to first create that someone or something else. Then He would be able to give to that someone or something else many good things: life, love, joy, goodness, peace, etc.

God's Vision

Because Christians were chosen before the foundation of the world (Eph. 1:4), it is evident that before God actually created anything, He must have first envisioned what He was going to create. It is evident now that His vision included both animate and inanimate things: angels, the cosmos, and man, at least. And if the animate things (angels and man) were to love God in return for His love, they must be given the capability for doing so via free will, true love requiring the ability to freely choose whether to love or not to love.

Since saved persons' names have been "written from the foundation of the world in the book of life of the Lamb" (Rev. 13:8, 17:8), before anything had even been created, we know that this vision included the salvation of men, which necessitates there being something to be saved from, namely sin and death. So, God's vision must have included sin and death, and sin's accompanying judgments and punishments.

As sin and death were envisioned by God before the foundation of the world, so must He have envisioned His ways of dealing with them. Therefore, it is not surprising that God's Kingdom program, through which He would deal with the issues of sin, death, redemption, judgment and punishment, was also envisioned before anything was actually created. "Then the King will say to those on His right, 'Come, you who are blessed of My Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world'" (Matt. 25:34). This would be the same Kingdom program that would in due time sum up all things in Christ, things in the heavens and things upon the earth. "He made known to us the mystery of His will, according to His kind intention which He purposed in Him with a view to an administration suitable to the fulness of the times, that is, the summing up of all things in Christ, things in the heavens and things upon the earth" (Eph. 1:9–10).

God's envisioned Kingdom program also included the saved persons of this (church) age. Paul wrote of God's pre-creation vision and plan in Ephesians and in Second Timothy: "just as He chose us in Him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and blameless before Him" (Eph. 1:4). "For this reason I, Paul, the prisoner of Christ Jesus for the sake of you Gentiles — if indeed you have heard of the stewardship of God's grace which was given to me for you; that by revelation there was made known to me the mystery, as I wrote before in brief. And by referring to this, when you read you can understand my insight into the mystery of Christ, which in other generations was not made known to the sons of men, as it has now been revealed to His holy apostles and prophets in the Spirit; to be specific, that the Gentiles are fellow heirs and fellow members of the body, and fellow partakers of the promise in Christ Jesus through the gospel, of which I was made a minister, according to the gift of God's grace which was given to me according to the working of His power. To me, the very least of all saints, this grace was given, to preach to the Gentiles the unfathomable riches of Christ, and to bring to light what is the administration of the mystery which for ages has been hidden in God, who created all things; in order that the manifold wisdom of God might now be made known through the church to the rulers and the authorities in the heavenly places. This was in accordance with the eternal purpose which He carried out in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Eph. 3:1–11) "Therefore do not be ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, or of me His prisoner; but join with me in suffering for the gospel according to the power of God, who has saved us, and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace which was granted us in Christ Jesus from all eternity" (2 Tim. 1:8–9)

Why Create This World?

Now, the question arises, if God had the ability to create any kind of world that He desired, why then did He create this world? Why create this world, which is now suffering under the burdens of sin, death and deterioration, when He could have created one that would have remained entirely devoid of these things?

Above, we touched briefly on the fact that if God had desired to have creatures who were genuinely capable of loving Him (and therefore also capable of not loving Him), then He would have had to have created them with free will. And, it may well be that it would have been impossible for God to have created truly free creatures without some of them choosing to rebel. If that be the case, then the rebels may simply be an unavoidable byproduct of free will. In that case, God obviously foresaw that some of His creatures would rebel, and chose to create free creatures anyway, because the net result would still be better than had He not chosen to create free creatures at all.

On another track, we know the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness and self-control (Gal. 5:22-23). But how could God demonstrate patience without first having wayward creatures with whom He could be patient? Or, for that matter, in a world without sin, how could God demonstrate grace, mercy, forgiveness, wrath or justice? May it not be the case that God desires to exercise and demonstrate all these attributes, including those that can only be exercised and demonstrated in a world that contains sin? If that be the case, then our world just might be the ideal world, at least for that purpose. Opportunities for God to be glorified for His patience, grace, mercy, forgiveness, wrath and justice would have been missed had our world never fallen into sin. We'll have more to say on this subject in the section Why Evil is Allowed By God of our chapter The Fall.

Creation

God's creation includes the cosmos, angels and man. He created the heavens and the earth, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth" (Gen. 1:1). "The heavens declare the glory of God; And the firmament showeth his handiwork" (Ps. 19:1). "Thus saith God Jehovah, he that created the heavens, and stretched them forth; he that spread abroad the earth and that which cometh out of it; he that giveth breath unto the people upon it, and spirit to them that walk therein" (Isa. 42:5) "and swore by Him who lives forever and ever, WHO CREATED HEAVEN AND THE THINGS IN IT, AND THE EARTH AND THE THINGS IN IT, AND THE SEA AND THE THINGS IN IT, that there shall be delay no longer" (Rev. 10:6) angels, "Thou wast the anointed cherub that covereth: and I set thee, so that thou wast upon the holy mountain of God; thou hast walked up and down in the midst of the stones of fire. Thou wast perfect in thy ways from the day that thou wast created, till unrighteousness was found in thee" (Ezek. 28:14–15). "For by Him all things were created, both in the heavens and on earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones or dominions or rulers or authorities — all things have been created by Him and for Him. And He is before all things, and in Him all things hold together" (Col. 1:16–17). "And of the angels He says, 'WHO MAKES HIS AN-

GELS WINDS, AND HIS MINISTERS A FLAME OF FIRE” (Heb. 1:7). and man. “And Jehovah God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul” (Gen. 2:7). “Indeed, ask now concerning the former days which were before you, since the day that God created man on the earth, and inquire from one end of the heavens to the other. Has anything been done like this great thing, or has anything been heard like it” (Deut. 4:32)? “But from the beginning of creation, God MADE THEM MALE AND FEMALE” (Mark 10:6) Indeed, God created all things. “Worthy art Thou, our Lord and our God, to receive glory and honor and power; for Thou didst create all things, and because of Thy will they existed, and were created” (Rev. 4:11).

After creating all things, God pronounced His entire creation good. “And God saw everything that he had made, and, behold, it was very good. And there was evening and there was morning, the sixth day” (Gen. 1:31). Dr. McClain comments, “We should also observe that in the record of the creation of the physical environment placed under man’s dominion, the Creator six times pronounces it ‘good’ (Gen. 1:4, 10, 12, 18, 21, 25); and in the final summary we are told that God saw ‘everything that He had made, and it was very good’ (vs. 31). Thus, at the very beginning of man’s physical existence on earth, the Word of God declares it to be something eminently worth-while, not something evil per se after the platonic tradition. This is an important point... modern theories which decry as ‘carnal’ any doctrine of a genuine Kingdom of God on earth short of the eternal state” (GK, p. 44).

The Age of Innocence

Upon creation’s completion, man was given dominion over all earthly things. This dominion was actually earth’s first theocratic Kingdom, having been formally covenanted to Adam by God.

Man’s Original Kingdom

As part of the creation program, a well-defined dominion was given to man by God. “And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the birds of the heavens, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. And God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them. And God blessed them: and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and mul- tiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it; and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the birds of the heavens, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth. And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb yielding seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for food: and to every beast of the earth, and to every bird of the heavens, and to everything that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life, I have given every green herb for food: and it was so” (Gen. 1:26-30).

This dominion was in fact a theocratic Kingdom over all God’s earthly creation. “What is man, that thou art mindful of him? And the son of man, that thou visitest him? For thou hast made him but little lower than God, And crownest him with glory and honor. Thou makest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; Thou hast put all things under his feet: All sheep and oxen, Yea, and the beasts of the field, The birds of the heavens, and the fish of the sea, Whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas” (Ps. 8:4-8). “But one has testified somewhere, saying, ‘What is man, that Thou rememberest him? Or the son of man, that Thou art concerned about him? Thou hast made him for a little while lower than the angels; Thou hast crowned him with glory and honor, And hast appointed him over the works of Thy hands; Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet.’ For in subjecting all things to him, He left nothing that is not subject to him. But now we do not yet see all things subjected to him” (Heb. 2:6-8). “As God’s son, Adam inherited God’s earth” (Showers, M, p. 83). “The concept of dominion is inherent in the image or likeness given to man. God is sovereign, and man was to exercise delegated authority and thus reflect the authority that belongs to the Creator. In exercising dominion, man would subjugate all creation to the Creator. He would establish a kingdom in this sphere, one in which the God of heaven ruled and demonstrated His right to rule. This purpose for man is reaffirmed in Psalm 8:5-8 and again in Hebrews 2:6-8, and even though this purpose has not yet been realized, it ultimately will be—through the reign of the Son of Man at His second advent” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 32). “In the Genesis account of the creation of man, the very first of the divine injunctions laid upon him was regal in character: ‘Let them have dominion,’ says the Creator, ‘over all the earth’ and every created thing upon it (Gen. 1:26). The Hebrew word here is radah; the same term was used later significantly of the reign of Messiah Himself in His Kingdom: ‘Rule thou in the midst of thine enemies’ (Ps. 110:2). Thus, among other important likenesses to his Creator, man was given a limited sovereignty in relation to the earth. To borrow the fine words of Franz Delitzsch [Com- mentary on the Psalms, on 8:7-9] concerning man's original position: 'Man is a king, and not a king without a domain; the world around, with all the works of creative wisdom, is his kingdom'" (McClain, GK, p. 42).

This Kingdom was God's original purpose for mankind, a purpose that has never been rescinded. "...looking back to see what He Himself intended this race of man to become, we find in His expressed intention the Divine Will in the matter" (Peters, TTK, 2:536) "God's purpose for Creation had been accomplished with the establishment of a miniature theocracy in Eden in which He ruled as sovereign through man as His delegated representative. This was God's unchanging purpose for man and for the earth, as clearly seen in Psalm 8" (Pentecost, TKC, p. 33). "Our sovereign God, in every period of theocratic administration, has ruled through those to whom He assigned His authority. In the garden, Adam was the appointed theocratic administrator whose responsibility it was to subject all creation to himself, so that through him creation might be subject to the authority of God" (ibid., p. 292).

This Kingdom extended also over the race of men. This concept is known in theological circles as federal or Adamic headship. That Adam's headship had profound implications for all of future mankind, whether for good or for bad, is made evident in several New Testament passages: "Therefore, just as through one man sin entered into the world, and death through sin, and so death spread to all men, because all sinned — for until the Law sin was in the world; but sin is not imputed when there is no law. Nevertheless death reigned from Adam until Moses, even over those who had not sinned in the likeness of the offense of Adam, who is a type of Him who was to come. But the free gift is not like the transgression. For if by the transgression of the one the many died, much more did the grace of God and the gift by the grace of the one Man, Jesus Christ, abound to the many. And the gift is not like that which came through the one who sinned; for on the one hand the judgment arose from one transgression resulting in condemnation, but on the other hand the free gift arose from many transgressions resulting in justification. For if by the transgression of the one, death reigned through the one, much more those who receive the abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness will reign in life through the One, Jesus Christ. So then as through one transgression there resulted condemnation to all men, even so through one act of righteousness there resulted justification of life to all men. For as through the one man's disobedience the many were made sinners, even so through the obedience of the One the many will be made righteous. And the Law came in that the transgression might increase; but where sin increased, grace abounded all the more, that, as sin reigned in death, even so grace might reign through righteousness to eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord” (Rom. 5:12–21). “For since by a man came death, by a man also came the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, so also in Christ all shall be made alive” (1 Cor. 15:21–22). “So also it is written, ‘The first MAN, Adam, BECAME A LIVING SOUL.’ The last Adam became a life-giving spirit. However, the spiritual is not first, but the natural; then the spiritual. The first man is from the earth, earthy; the second man is from heaven. As is the earthy, so also are those who are earthy; and as is the heavenly, so also are those who are heavenly. And just as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly” (1 Cor. 15:45–49). “For He did not subject to angels the world to come, concerning which we are speaking. But one has testified somewhere, saying, ‘WHAT IS MAN, THAT THOU REMEMBEREST HIM? OR THE SON OF MAN, THAT THOU ART CONCERNED ABOUT HIM? THOU HAST MADE HIM FOR A LITTLE WHILE LOWER THAN THE ANGELS; THOU HAST CROWNED HIM WITH GLORY AND HONOR, AND HAST APPOINTED HIM OVER THE WORKS OF THY HANDS; THOU HAST PUT ALL THINGS IN SUBJECTION UNDER HIS FEET.’ For in subjecting all things to him, He left nothing that is not subject to him. But now we do not yet see all things subjected to him. But we do see Him who has been made for a little while lower than the angels, namely, Jesus, because of the suffering of death crowned with glory and honor, that by the grace of God He might taste death for everyone” (Heb. 2:5–9). McClain comments, “This original dominion over the earth and the animal creation was undoubtedly bestowed on man regarded generically as a race, not merely upon the first man Adam. However, if due consideration be given to the New Testament typical comparison between Adam and Christ as the respective heads of the old and new creations, there must have been some sense in which the first Adam was given dominion not only over the animal world but also over the race of men which would in the process of time issue from him by natural generation. This view of the matter harmonizes with the doctrine of Adamic headship as set forth in the Word of God. (cf. Rom. 5:12-21; 1 Cor. 15:21-28, 45-49; Heb. 2:5-9). The plural ‘let them have dominion,’ on this view, could have some reference to Adam and his wife Eve; for in the antitype the Last Adam also has a ‘wife’ who, though subject to her divine Head, will nevertheless sit regally with Him in His Mediatorial Kingdom (Rev. 19:7; 20:6)” (GK, p. 43).

Covenant #1: The Edenic Covenant

God's Kingdom covenant or contract with man in the garden of Eden can be appropriately called the Edenic Covenant. "And God blessed them: and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it; and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the birds of the heavens, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth. And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb yielding seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for food: and to every beast of the earth, and to every bird of the heavens, and to everything that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life, I have given every green herb for food: and it was so" (Gen. 1:28-30). "And Jehovah God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it. And Jehovah God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die" (Gen. 2:15-17). This is the first of eight covenants that God has made with mankind. We'll point out the other seven covenants as they appear throughout history, as we progress in our study of the biblical Kingdom, and we'll also review them all in our chapter Covenants of the Kingdom. Regarding the Edenic Covenant, Dr. Fruchtenbaum summarizes, "The Edenic Covenant was made between God and Adam in which Adam stood as the representative head of the human race. Thus, the actions of Adam are attributed to the whole of humanity" (EC, p. 7). "The sixth provision was that man was forbidden to eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil (Gen. 2:17a). This was the only negative commandment in the entire Edenic Covenant and was the one point that would test man's obedience. He was free to eat of all the other trees of the garden but was to refrain from eating of that one. This was the one test to see how man would respond to the will of God; it was a test of the recognition of and the submission to the will of God. Man was not to assume that, because he was given authority over the earth and the animal kingdom, he himself was independent of God and exempt from God's law. The question that raises is, 'Will man, like Satan before him, reject God's right to rule and declare himself independent of God'" (ibid., p. 8)?

Chapter 7: The Fall

As we saw in our previous chapter, man was given, via the Edenic Covenant, a Kingdom over all the earth and over all its creatures. However, sin soon entered the world, and the Edenic Covenant was broken. As Dr. Pentecost summarizes, “God prepared a new sphere in which He would develop a kingdom, and He populated it with creatures made like Himself so that they might know Him, love Him, and submit themselves to Him because He is worthy. Satan, however, entered into that sphere and enticed those who were in subjection to God into submission to himself. He usurped God’s right to rule, suggesting that he, Satan, possesses the right to rule, and that he—not God—is worthy to be obeyed. God demonstrated His authority by passing judgment on the earth, its creatures, on Satan, and on mankind—and He promised a coming One through whom this judgment would be executed and by whom subjection would be restored” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 39).

Philosophical Concepts Related to Evil

Before continuing our biblical narrative, we’ll now take a short detour to explore some foundational ideas related to evil and sin.

Definition of Evil

First, we’ll define and describe evil, and its manifestation, sin.

Evil is the corruption of good. It is a parasite, and has no substance in itself. Without a good host, it cannot exist. Chafer says, “Good has no need of evil for its self-realization; love would be eternally the same, and ever conscious of its own nature, though there were no hatred. Evil, on the other hand, is so far dependent upon good that it comes into existence only as a contrast thereto. As opposition implies something which is opposed, evil presupposes good, and is conceivable only as a departure or fall therefrom. If evil be regarded as wholly primary and original, it cannot in any true sense be called evil or ‘that which ought not to be’” (ST, 2:238). “Evil has in itself no uniting or concentrating power; it can only produce an inwardly hollow semblance of unity, an ever vanishing appearance of fellowship” (ibid.). “Evil in our earthly life is obliged to submit to some extent to the law of good, if it is not to destroy its own subjects and instruments” (ibid., p. 239). “Evil, I say, has in itself no productive or formative power; it cannot give itself any complete or historical reality in forms and arrangements of human life peculiar to itself; it cannot attain supremacy in any sphere or society, save by resorting to principles which have their origin in good” (ibid.). “Evil has no original substance in itself” (ibid., p. 242).

Sin is lawlessness. “Everyone who practices sin also practices lawlessness; and sin is lawlessness” (1 John. 3:4). “The very essence of sin, the Apostle John tells us, is ‘lawlessness,’ and ‘the devil sinneth from the beginning’ (1 John 3:4, 8, ASV). Thus Satan is described as the primal and original rebel against the control of God’s Universal Kingdom; and with him are the ‘angels that sinned’ (2 Pet. 2:4)” (McClain, GK, p. 31).

Sin is unbelief. “But he who doubts is condemned if he eats, because his eating is not from faith; and whatever is not from faith is sin” (Rom. 14:23). “Distrust was the turning point in the creature’s fall, for the overt act of sin was but the fruit of unbelief. How natural, then, that trust should be the turning point in his recovery” (Anderson, SOG, p. 104)! “Even our spiritual blindness is a result of the choice not to believe” (Chafer, ST, 3:129).

Sin is also pride. “At the root of all sin is pride, which was the evil that prompted Lucifer’s rebellion against God” (Geisler, ST, 3:104).

Sin is rebellion against and independence from God. “The creature—angel or man—is designed to be guided by God alone” (Chafer, ST, 2:66). “The lamentable sins which follow the repudiation of God are but the innumerable lies which are the legitimate offspring of the first lie” (ibid., p. 67). “The root evil in the cosmos is that in it there is an all-comprehensive order or system which is methodized on a basis of complete independence of God” (ibid., p. 84). “As before demonstrated, there is but one way in which any creature—angel or man—may attempt to be like God, and that is to seek to be independent as God is independent” (ibid., p. 93). “...the one original idea which characterizes it all, namely, independence of God” (ibid., p. 101). “Man’s actions are right when conformed to the character of God, and wrong when not conformed to the character of God. No other basis for a distinction between good and evil exists” (ibid., p. 131). “The holy character of God is the final and only standard by which moral values may be accurately judged” (ibid., p. 227). “The Scriptures indicate the extensive and complex character of sin’s expression, but in every case, whether it be doctrine or human experience, the one original evil is found to be in the sphere of the creature’s relation to the Creator” (ibid., p. 251). “While there is always a very wide field open for the multiplied manifestations of sin, sin is, in its essential nature, twofold: repudiation of God and promotion of self” (ibid., p. 259). “To say that sin is lawlessness assigns a very wide field of application to it if all forms of law are considered, yet it is more extensive and complete to assert that sin is any want of conformity to the character of God” (ibid., p. 267).

Sin is self-centered, “The creature—whether angel or human—is created to be God-centered. To become self-centered is a contradiction of the basic law of creature existence” (Chafer, ST, 2:31). “The self-centered nature of all sin” (ibid., p. 43) “It may be concluded that, in its ultimate form, untruth is a substitution of self for God and the assumption of a self-designed plan of life for that purposed by the Creator” (ibid., p. 67). and it is self-willed. “Satan’s doctrine exalts self and directs in the way of Cain, or self-promoted righteousness. It is a way of life wholly independent of God whatever elements of truth it may borrow or incorporate” (ibid., p. 73). “They [Satan and his fallen angels] can suggest evil, but cannot coerce the will of another creature. They may spread snares and devices to ruin the children of God, but they cannot compel any other being to comply with their designs” (ibid., p. 75).

Sin is irrational, “Sin, being a contradiction of reason and irrational in itself, is not subject to reason” (Chafer, ST, 2:30). “A cause may be assigned for sin, but it is never rational” (ibid., p. 212). “It is spiritual insanity” (ibid., p. 242). and it is always destructive. “Sin always carries within itself the seeds of its own destruction, and it will destroy the one performing this sin unless there is repentance and confession” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 554).

Sin is not personally satisfying. “Passion strives with passion, one affection counteracts another; man, while slavishly dependent on the various objects of desire, never finds that rest and satisfaction which he seeks in the service of sin. He cannot attain these even by a total surrender to any one passion; for—it can never attain sufficient strength perfectly to free him from the calls of other impulses striving after unbridled freedom” (Chafer, ST, 2:240). “Evil is at variance not only with good but with itself; good has but one enemy, evil; but evil has two enemies, good and evil” (ibid., p. 241).

And, sin is total. “A partial or compromising departure from God is impossible” (Chafer, ST, 2:67). “Total depravity means the entire absence of holiness, not the highest intensity of sin” (ibid., p. 219). “Since God is infinite and His goodness unbounded, sin is infinite and its evil character is beyond all human computation. Sin inflicts not only an immeasurable injury upon the one who sins, but is more specifically characterized by the injury it inflicts upon God, the Creator’s rights being disregarded, His holy law broken, and His property being damaged through sin” (ibid., p. 249). “Depravity is the inability to do good in the manner which is pleasing to God” (ibid., p. 284). “The doctrine of depravity is often rejected through misunderstanding. This doctrine does not imply that there is no good to be seen in men as men observe each other; it rather asserts that, because of the fallen nature, God sees nothing in them which commends them to Himself” (ibid., p. 293).

Evil is Not Caused by God

Next, it is important to recognize that evil is not caused by God. “God is not responsible for the ugliness in the world, only the beauty” (Geisler, ST, 2:245). “Unsolvable as the dilemma seems, Christian theism gives a forthright answer. God did create every thing (substance), but sin is not a thing or substance: Sin is a privation or lack in a good substance, a distortion of something pure. Evil is an ontological parasite—it exists only in something good, as a corruption of its goodness. For example, evil is like rot to a tree or rust to a car; both rot and rust corrupt the good substance (tree or car), but neither rot nor rust exists in and of itself” (ibid., 3:106).

Why Evil is Allowed by God

And finally, why is evil allowed by God? We cannot completely fathom all the reasons why God allows evil, but we do have hints. “The divine purpose relative to sin has not been revealed, and, doubtless, the human mind could not comprehend all that is involved” (Chafer, ST, 2:229). “Though it is impossible for a creature to understand how a holy God could permit sin, either in heaven or on earth, it is evident that the realization of His greatest purposes necessitates its permission. The entire problem is illustrated to a limited extent in the experience of a Christian who has sinned. He first admits that God, who could have hindered the sin, did nevertheless permit it, He likewise recognizes that he has profited in the ways of understanding and experience by the sin; and, finally, he admits that God, through permitting the sin, is in no way complicated with its guilt and wickedness” (ibid., p. 233). This is undoubtedly a case in which the end justifies the means. “It may be concluded, then, that sin is in the universe by the permission of God who hates it perfectly and who, being sovereign, had power to keep it from manifestation, had He chosen to do so. That He did not hinder the manifestation of sin, demonstrates that He, being what He is, must have a purpose in view other than the averting of sin. Here as nowhere else in the affairs of the universe, the end justifies the means” (ibid., 1:238). Summarizing, Dr. Geisler suggests, “In the end, God will have used human history, with its varied conditions and administrations (dispensations), to show in eternity that (1) sin is always wrong, (2) God is always right, and (3) evil is justly put away forever” (ST, 3:163).

We suggest that evil is allowed by God in order to produce the best possible world. Dr. Geisler reasons, “An all-wise God knows the best way to the best world. So God must have permitted this world (which is not the best world) in order to produce the best world possible. Therefore, this present world is the best way to the best possible world” (Geisler, ST, 2:222). “The odds are that it is not God’s intelligence that is lacking in making the design, but rather ours in understanding it” (ibid., p. 224). “The omniscience of God is His unerring ability to choose the best means to the best ends. This attribute is rooted in several others: omniscience, omnibenevolence, and omnipotence. As omniscient, God knows all ends and all means. Further, He knows which of these means are the most effective to achieve these ends. What is more, His omnibenevolence assures that He will choose the best means to the best ends. Finally, His omnipotence enables Him to achieve His ends by the means He chooses” (ibid.). “The best possible world is the one that achieves the greatest good—which, as Scripture makes clear, is achieved by allowing first-order (lower) evils in order to achieve second-order (higher) goods. For example, patience is not achievable without tribulation, nor forgiveness without sin, nor courage without fear, nor mercy without tragedy. All of these greater goods are dependent on permitting the precondition of evil. If, then, the greater good cannot be achieved without allowing evil, and if God must achieve the greatest good (because He is the greatest Good), then it seems to follow that it would not have been best for God to have chosen to create a free world where sin would not occur (even if it were actually possible)” (ibid., 3:157). “It has not been demonstrated that any theorized world-variant is morally better than the one we have. As a result, opponents have failed to show that God did less than His best in creating our world. This, of course, does not mean we are committed to the belief that this present world is the best world achievable. God is not yet finished: This world is only the best way possible to the best world achievable” (ibid., p. 158). “By His omniscience God knows the end of all things; by His omniscience He knows the best means to this end” (ibid., 4:34).

Specifically, evil is allowed by God in order to allow truly free will, “While a free world where no one ever sins is logically possible, it may not be actually possible. Hence, it is possible that God could not have created only those who wouldn’t sin, since he knew with certainty that in any group He made some would choose evil” (Geisler, ST, 3:157). to manifest divine grace, “He predestined us to adoption as sons through Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the kind intention of His will, to the praise of the glory of His grace, which He freely bestowed on us in the Beloved. In Him we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of our trespasses, according to the riches of His grace, which He lavished upon us. In all wisdom and insight He made known to us the mystery of His will, according to His kind intention which He purposed in Him” (Eph. 1:5-9) “But God, being rich in mercy, because of His great love with which He loved us, even when we were dead in our transgressions, made us alive together with Christ (by grace you have been saved), and raised us up with Him, and seated us with Him in the heavenly places, in Christ Jesus, in order that in the ages to come He might show the surpassing riches of His grace in kindness toward us in Christ Jesus” (Eph. 2:4-7). “There was that in God which no created being had ever seen. The angelic hosts had seen His wisdom, His power, and His glory, but they had never seen His grace. They had no conception of the goodness of God to the undeserving. They may have seen something of His love, but love and grace are not the same” (Chafer, ST, 2:232). “There is no way for us to experience the joy of being forgiven without God’s allowance for our fall into sin (e.g. Luke 7:36-48)” (Geisler, 3:158). (We’ll have more to say regarding God’s purpose of showing the riches of His grace in the church in the ages to come in our chapter The Mystery Kingdom (The Church).) to enable creation of the church, “Much suffering and sorrow might have been averted had sin been wholly crushed at its beginning, but again we must believe that much more has been gained by the long delayed termination of evil. From the above passage [2 Thess. 2:3-10, concerning the ‘restrainer’] it would seem that evil would have long concluded its own course in the lawlessness of fallen hearts had its natural energy not been restrained. It has been restrained, we are led to believe by the evidence, that the body and bride of Christ may be made complete” (Chafer, KHP, 61%). to demonstrate that sin doesn’t work, Chafer suggests, “Again, it seems the course of Divine wisdom to make a sufficient and final trial of every claim of His adversaries; and when this age, with all its developments, shall have passed by, every mouth will be stopped, and the whole world and Satan will know their own failure and sin before God. They will stand self-condemned; and nothing could accomplish this but the testing, by actual trial, of all the self-sufficient claims of Satan and man” (S, C1:26/34). “It may also be concluded from the study of the ages that God has not been pleased to meet the presumptuous claims of Satan or of man by a simple denial of those claims; He has chosen, rather, to bring everything to an experimental test. One advantage of this method is obvious: every mouth will be stopped, and the entire universe of beings will see clearly the utter folly of that which might have been arbitrarily denied” (ibid., C4:1/31). “Evil must run its course and make its full demonstration that it may be judged, not as a theory, but as a concrete reality” (Chafer, ST, 2:32). “The cosmos is not a battleground whereon God is contending with Satan for supremacy; it is a thing which God has permitted, that the lie may have its fullest unveiling” (ibid., p. 84). “Granting the truthfulness of the claim that God does put the creature’s assumptions to an experimental test, it becomes clear that Satan’s determination—which constituted his initial sin—to build a vast structure of independent relationships around himself as the center and wholly autonomous with respect to the Creator to whom all allegiance and obedience rightfully belong, was permitted of God to be tested experimentally to its bitter end” (ibid., p. 91). “When Satan and his theory come up for final judgment and execution, ‘every mouth will be stopped’ and all will be guilty—not alone in the light of God’s ideals, but as those who are absolutely guilty in the light of the colossal failure of the whole enterprise” (ibid., p. 92). “A guilty cosmos, proved to be such to the extent that every mouth is stopped—even that of Satan himself—is a stupendous achievement. What such a conclusion may contribute to the felicity of the universe in eternity to come, none would attempt to declare” (ibid.). And Geisler, “Untold throngs from all the ages will be able to testify from their experience, under a wide variety of conditions, that God is just, that sin is destructive, and that submitting freely to His will is the only way to obtain true and permanent blessedness. In effect, God will have defeated sin by permitting it in virtually every possible way” (ST, 3:164). to prove that man without God is always a failure, “Through the ages of God’s dealing with a fallen race, He has tested its members under many different conditions; and in every test, apart from the grace of God, man has always proven to be a failure” (McClain, GK, p. 482). to demonstrate God’s hatred of sin, “What if God, although willing to demonstrate His wrath and to make His power known, endured with much patience vessels of wrath prepared for destruction” (Rom. 9:22–23) “The Apostle declares that God was ‘willing to shew his wrath, and to make his power known’ (Rom 9:22); but no judgment, wrath, or power in relation to sin could be disclosed apart from the permitted presence of active sin in the world” (Chafer, ST, 2:232). and to enable God to defeat sin. “If evil is not permitted, it cannot be defeated. As with automobiles, a tested world is better than an untested one. Or to put it another way, no boxer can actually defeat an opponent unless he gets into the ring with him. God, then, may have permitted evil in order to defeat it (and thus achieve a greater good)” (Geisler, ST, 3:158). “Permitting Adam and Eve to sin was part of God’s plan to defeat evil” (ibid., p. 165).

The Fall of Satan

Who or what is Satan? Is he a real person, or merely a personification of evil? What is his origin, and how did he fall? What are his nature, attitude, purpose and works?

Satan's Identity

The Bible has much to say about Satan. “More Scripture is employed to elucidate the truth concerning Satan than is employed to elucidate the truth concerning all the fallen angels together” (Chafer, ST, 2:113). Regarding Satan’s reality, “Being uninformed and misinformed, people, to an appalling degree, become an easy prey to the power of the enemy of souls. Modern Sadducees seek to resolve this awful being into a ‘figure of speech,’ ‘a metaphorical personification of evil,’ or a ‘delusion of unsound minds.’ They deny his personality as they do that of the demons. Satan would encourage such impressions since they disarm prejudice and fear in relation to his infernal undertakings” (ibid., p. 34). And regarding his identity, “Lucifer... This, the most exalted one of the angels—both by creation and by appointment—occupies a place in the text of Scripture next to the Persons of the Godhead. By his sin—the first in the universe, so far as revelation discloses—he became Satan and appears in the Word of God under about forty different titles” (ibid., p. 19). As was Adam, Satan was created perfect; sin was only “found in” him later. Many scholars believe Ezekiel chapter 28 is referring to Satan when it says, “Thou wast the anointed cherub that covereth: and I set thee, so that thou wast upon the holy mountain of God; thou hast walked up and down in the midst of the stones of fire. Thou wast perfect in thy ways from the day that thou wast created, till unrighteousness was found in thee” (Ezek. 28:14-15).

Satan's Origin

Regarding Satan’s origin, Chafer summarizes, “Satan himself experienced a besotting of the mind which to some extent made his sinful course a possibility” (Chafer, ST, 2:63). “The all-important fruit of Satan’s pride is the fact that ‘he abode not in the truth [John 8:44].’” (ibid., p. 64) “His lawlessness was not a mere disregard for an existing code of regulations; it was a complete rejection of the Lawgiver and all His benevolent intentions for an endless life” (ibid., p. 67). “Satan’s sin was not merely negative in its rejection of God; it was positive also in that it constructed a philosophy of life, a line of action, which originated with Satan, was self-centered, and excluded God” (ibid.). “Against what inconceivable light these beings sinned is not revealed” (ibid., p. 227).

Satan's Fall

Regarding Satan's fall, "How art thou fallen from heaven, O day-star, son of the morning! how art thou cut down to the ground, that didst lay low the nations! And thou saidst in thy heart, I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God; and I will sit upon the mount of congregation, in the uttermost parts of the north; I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will make myself like the Most High" (Isa. 14:12–14). Dr. Fruchtenbaum observes, "Whenever the word 'stars' is used symbolically, it is always a symbol of angels with one possible exception. With the second I will, he declared his desire to become the sole authority over all the angels that God had created. By so doing, he intended to depose Michael from his position and become the Archangel all by himself" (FM, p. 551). "Whenever the word cloud is used symbolically, it is always a symbol of God's glory, that unique glory called the Shechinah Glory" (ibid.). Again, Ezekiel chapter 28: "Son of man, take up a lamentation over the king of Tyre, and say unto him, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Thou sealest up the sum, full of wisdom, and perfect in beauty. Thou wast in Eden, the garden of God; every precious stone was thy covering, the sardius, the topaz, and the diamond, the beryl, the onyx, and the jasper, the sapphire, the emerald, and the carbuncle, and gold: the workmanship of thy tabrets and of thy pipes was in thee; in the day that thou wast created they were prepared. Thou wast the anointed cherub that covereth: and I set thee, so that thou wast upon the holy mountain of God; thou hast walked up and down in the midst of the stones of fire. Thou wast perfect in thy ways from the day that thou wast created, till unrighteousness was found in thee. By the abundance of thy traffic they filled the midst of thee with violence, and thou hast sinned: therefore have I cast thee as profane out of the mountain of God; and I have destroyed thee, O covering cherub, from the midst of the stones of fire. Thy heart was lifted up because of thy beauty; thou hast corrupted thy wisdom by reason of thy brightness: I have cast thee to the ground; I have laid thee before kings, that they may behold thee. By the multitude of thine iniquities, in the unrighteousness of thy traffic, thou hast profaned thy sanctuaries; therefore have I brought forth a fire from the midst of thee; it hath devoured thee, and I have turned thee to ashes upon the earth in the sight of all them that behold thee. All they that know thee among the peoples shall be astonished at thee: thou art become a terror, and thou shalt nevermore have any being" (Ezek. 28:12–19) Dr. Fruchtenbaum continues, "The first sinner ever was Satan. The first sin ever was the sin of pride" (FM, p.

550). “Looking at his wisdom, beauty, power, and authority, and meditating upon these things, ultimately led to the rise of pride (your heart was lifted up), and thus Satan sinned. That it was pride that led to the fall of Satan is clearly stated in 1 Timothy 3:6 [and not a new convert, lest he become conceited and fall into the condemnation incurred by the devil.]” (ibid.) “...till unrighteousness was found in you. This is the closest the Bible comes to describing the origin of sin” (ibid., p. 552) “By the abundance of your traffic... going from angel to angel slandering God in order to win their allegiance. Eventually, he convinced one-third of all the angels that God was in the wrong (Rev. 12:4). In that way, Satan became the father of lies (Jn. 8:44), because he originated lying” (ibid.). “...a conflict between good angels and bad angels, an angelic conflict that continues to this day, and will continue until the middle of the Tribulation, at which point it will finally end (Rev. 12:7-12)” (ibid., p. 553). “...you have profaned your sanctuaries... The fact that it says your sanctuaries means ‘Satan’s sanctuaries,’ and this also shows that Satan did have a priestly function in Heaven... The word sanctuaries is in the plural because the heavenly Tabernacle had both a Holy Place and a Holy of Holies” (ibid.). “By performing sinful deeds in Heaven, he brought corruption to Heaven. This is the reason Hebrews 9:23-26 states that the heavens themselves needed cleansing by the blood of the Messiah. The heavens were corrupted and defiled by the fall of Satan. It took the blood of Jesus to cleanse the heavenly sanctuaries and that is why He had to take His blood into Heaven to cleanse the heavenly sanctuaries” (ibid., p. 554). “All they that know you among the peoples shall be astonished at you... angels... also includes... humanity. Those who knew him will some day be astonished at him because of his demise. They thought that he would be their leader, their savior, their victor over God Himself. He will prove to be a failure, and this will astonish them” (ibid., p. 555). Dr. Pentecost summarizes Satan’s fall, “The Bible reveals two kingdoms existing in the realm of the heavenlies. The first is the kingdom of the God of heaven, with the unfallen angels as its subjects, while the second is the kingdom of Satan, with the fallen angels as its subjects. The two are in absolute opposition to each other. At no point will there be any agreement between the two—they are diametrically opposed to one another. While God’s kingdom is as timeless as God Himself, Satan’s kingdom had its beginning with Satan’s rebellion. Thus the two kingdoms are not to be misconstrued as coexistent from eternity past. While good existed eternally because God is good, evil was introduced by Lucifer’s rebellion against the kingdom of God. Although God passed judgment on that false ruler and his false kingdom (Luke 10:18), and its ultimate subjugation to Himself is certain (Phil. 2:10), that subjugation has not yet been accomplished. Therefore two kingdoms coexist in the heavenly realm: the kingdom of God and the kingdom of Satan” (TKC, p. 26).

Satan’s Nature, Attitude, Purpose and Works

Regarding Satan’s nature, he is proud, “and not a new convert, lest he become conceited and fall into the condemnation incurred by the devil” (1 Tim. 3:6). “The evil character of Satan will be found embraced in the twofold wickedness—ambitious pride and untruth—which is charged against him” (Chafer, ST, 2:63). he is a liar, “You are of your father the devil, and you want to do the desires of your father. He was a murderer from the beginning, and does not stand in the truth, because there is no truth in him. Whenever he speaks a lie, he speaks from his own nature; for he is a liar, and the father of lies” (John 8:4). “Satan is a living personification of deception” (ibid., p. 35). he is vicious, “Be of sober spirit, be on the alert. Your adversary, the devil, prowls about like a roaring lion, seeking someone to devour” (1 Pet. 5:8). “That he was told by Jehovah not to destroy Job, is evidence that he both could have done so and would have done so had this restraint been lifted” (ibid., p. 84). he is wholly evil, “The fall of this mighty angel was not a compromise between good and evil. He became the embodiment of evil and wholly void of good” (ibid., p. 35). “You are of your father the devil, and you want to do the desires of your father. He was a murderer from the beginning, and does not stand in the truth, because there is no truth in him. Whenever he speaks a lie, he speaks from his own nature; for he is a liar, and the father of lies” (John 8:4). but he is finite and limited in power. “the one who practices sin is of the devil; for the devil has sinned from the beginning. The Son of God appeared for this purpose, that He might destroy the works of the devil” (1 John. 3:8). “And there was war in heaven, Michael and his angels waging war with the dragon. And the dragon and his angels waged war, and they were not strong enough, and there was no longer a place found for them in heaven. And the great dragon was thrown down, the serpent of old who is called the devil and Satan, who deceives the whole world; he was thrown down to the earth, and his angels were thrown down with him” (Rev. 12:7–9) “Submit therefore to God. Resist the devil and he will flee from you” (James 4:7). “The power of Satan and his fallen angels is limited. They are but finite creatures who can do nothing outside the permissive will of God” (ibid., p. 75). Chafer makes an interesting observation, namely, that he would likely be admired by today’s common man. “Doubtless, if called to face the truth of the precise nature of

Regarding Satan's attitude, He is arrogant. "How art thou fallen from heaven, O day-star, son of the morning! how art thou cut down to the ground, that didst lay low the nations! And thou saidst in thy heart, I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God; and I will sit upon the mount of congregation, in the uttermost parts of the north; I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will make myself like the Most High" (Isa. 14:12-14). "...Satan himself, who from the beginning has not hesitated to match his strength and ingenuity against the omnipotence of Deity (Isa. 14:12-14)" (McClain, GK, p. 480). "It would seem to be indicated that he does not lose faith in his enterprise until that yet future time when he is cast out of heaven" (Chafer, ST, 2:93). He is also likely jealous. "Satan may be offended that a plan of salvation has been put into action by which his victims can be rescued and lifted to heights of glory to which no angel will ever attain" (ibid., p. 97). "That otherwise doomed creatures may, by faith in a crucified and risen Savior, be constituted righteous to the degree of the perfect righteousness of God, which Christ is, must be most disconcerting and obnoxious to Satan" (ibid.).

Regarding Satan's purpose, his goal is to be like God. "How art thou fallen from heaven, O day-star, son of the morning! how art thou cut down to the ground, that didst lay low the nations! And thou saidst in thy heart, I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God; and I will sit upon the mount of congregation, in the uttermost parts of the north; I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will make myself like the Most High" (Isa. 14:12-14). "Satan's dominant purpose is not, as the popular impression supposes, one of attempting to be unlike God. Satan has explicitly asserted concerning himself, as recorded in Isaiah 14:14, that his transcendent objective is to be like the Most High" (Chafer, ST, 2:99). "Satan's sin may thus be summarized as a purpose to secure (1) the highest heavenly position; (2) regal rights both in heaven and on earth; (3) Messianic recognition; (4) glory which belongs to God alone; and (5) a likeness to the Most High, the 'possessor of heaven and earth'" (ibid., p. 50). "I will be like the Most High.' This... may be considered as a key to the understanding and tracing of his motives and methods. In spite of an almost universal impression that Satan's ideal for himself is to be unlike God, he is here revealed as being actuated with the purpose to be like God. However, this ambition is not to be like Jehovah, the self-existent One, which no created being could ever be; but to be like the Most High, which title signifies the 'possessor of heaven and earth' (Gen. 14:19, 22). Satan's purpose, then, is to gain authority over heaven and earth" [quoting Chafer, Systematic Theology, 7:223] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 431). He also aims to mar the lives and service of Christians. "Be of sober spirit, be on the alert. Your adversary, the devil, prowls about like a roaring lion, seeking someone to devour" (1 Pet. 5:8). "But whom you forgive anything, I forgive also; for indeed what I have forgiven, if I have forgiven anything, I did it for your sakes in the presence of Christ, in order that no advantage be taken of us by Satan; for we are not ignorant of his schemes" (2 Cor. 2:10–11). "Satan has no controversy or warfare with his own, unregenerate people, but there is abundant Scripture to prove that he makes unceasing effort to mar the life and service of the Christian" (Chafer, ST, 2:101)

Regarding Satan's works, he rules the world. "Now judgment is upon this world; now the ruler of this world shall be cast out" (John 12:31). "I will not speak much more with you, for the ruler of the world is coming, and he has nothing in Me" (John 14:30) "in whose case the god of this world has blinded the minds of the unbelieving, that they might not see the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God" (2 Cor. 4:4). We'll examine Satan's rulership of the world more fully in the section The Fall of Man below. He blinds the minds of the unbelieving. "in whose case the god of this world has blinded the minds of the unbelieving, that they might not see the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God" (2 Cor. 4:4). Chafer comments, "His ideal is ever reflected in his ministers who are said to be 'ministers of [personal] righteousness' (2 Cor 11:13-15). It is concerning this gospel of grace by which lost men may be saved, that Satan has cast a veil over the minds of all unregenerate human beings 'lest the light of the glorious gospel... should shine unto them' (2 Cor 4:4). Every observing soul-winner is sooner or later impressed with the more than natural inability of the unsaved to comprehend the offer of salvation apart from human merit by faith alone" (Chafer, ST, 2:97). "This blighting, satanic opposition may be detected in every effort for the salvation of the lost" (ibid., p. 103). He had the keys of death until the resurrection of Christ. "Since then the children share in flesh and blood, He Himself likewise also partook of the same, that through death He might render powerless him who had the power of death, that is, the devil" (Heb. 2:14) "and the living One; and I was dead, and behold, I am alive forevermore, and I [Jesus] have the keys of death and of Hades" (Rev. 1:18). "The keys of death apparently were in Satan's hands until the resurrection of Christ (cf. Heb. 2:14 with Rev. 1:18)" (ibid., 5:251).

The Fall of the Angels

Satan is not the only angel who fell; there were others who joined him in his enterprise. “Then He will also say to those on His left, ‘Depart from Me, accursed ones, into the eternal fire which has been prepared for the devil and his angels’” (Matt. 25:41) “For if God did not spare angels when they sinned, but cast them into hell and committed them to pits of darkness, reserved for judgment” (2 Pet. 2:4) “And another sign appeared in heaven: and behold, a great red dragon having seven heads and ten horns, and on his heads were seven diadems. And his tail swept away a third of the stars of heaven, and threw them to the earth. And the dragon stood before the woman who was about to give birth, so that when she gave birth he might devour her child” (Rev. 12:3–4) “And there was war in heaven, Michael and his angels waging war with the dragon. And the dragon and his angels waged war” (vs. 7) “And the great dragon was thrown down, the serpent of old who is called the devil and Satan, who deceives the whole world; he was thrown down to the earth, and his angels were thrown down with him” (vs. 9) Chafer comments regarding the possibility of salvation, the degrees of wickedness and the self-righteous façades of these fallen angels: “There is no basis for a belief that redemption through Christ’s death is extended to the fallen angels” (Chafer, ST, 2:25). “There seem to be degrees of wickedness represented by these spirits; for it is stated in Matthew 12:43-45 that the demon, returning to his house, ‘taketh with himself seven other spirits more wicked than himself’” (ibid., p. 120). “Demon possession in the present time is probably often unsuspected because of the generally unrecognized fact that demons are capable of inspiring a moral and exemplary life” (ibid.). “And no wonder, for even Satan disguises himself as an angel of light. Therefore it is not surprising if his servants also disguise themselves as servants of righteousness; whose end shall be according to their deeds” (2 Cor. 11:14–15).

The Fall of Man

What is meant by “the fall of man,” and what were its effects?

The Fact of Man’s Fall

It is a sad fact of history that our first parents Adam and Eve disobeyed the Edenic Covenant’s one prohibitive command, thereby plunging themselves and their progeny into sin and death. “Now the serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field which Jehovah God had made. And he said unto the woman, Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of any tree of the garden? And the woman said unto the serpent, Of the fruit of the trees of the garden we may eat: but of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die. And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die: for God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as God, knowing good and evil. And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was a delight to the eyes, and that the tree was to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat; and she gave also unto her husband with her, and he did eat. And the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked; and they sewed fig-leaves together, and made themselves aprons. And they heard the voice of Jehovah God walking in the garden in the cool of the day: and the man and his wife hid themselves from the presence of Jehovah God amongst the trees of the garden. And Jehovah God called unto the man, and said unto him, Where art thou? And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself. And he said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree, whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat? And the man said, The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat. And Jehovah God said unto the woman, What is this thou hast done? And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat. And Jehovah God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, cursed art thou above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life: and I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: he shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel. Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy pain and thy conception; in pain thou shalt bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee. And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in toil shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return. And the man called his wife's name Eve; because she was the mother of all living. And Jehovah God made for Adam and for his wife coats of skins, and clothed them. And Jehovah God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil; and now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live for ever: therefore Jehovah God sent him forth from the garden of

Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken. So he drove out the man; and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden the Cherubim, and the flame of a sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life” (Gen. 3:1-24). Chafer comments, “God knew that when placed under the circumstances which obtained, Adam would fall” (ST, 1:230). “The original sin with all its fruitage is never linked to God in any way” (ibid., p. 237). “Only in the one respect—independence—could either angel or man be as God” (ibid., p. 239). “So universal has this form of sin become that man thinks he has accomplished much when, if ever, he, through divine grace, reaches the place where his will is surrendered to God—the place, indeed, from which man should never have departed” (ibid., 2:49). “But the plan of becoming as Elohim by merely assuming independence of God originated with Satan, and its proposal to Adam marks the course of Satan’s unchanging purpose” (ibid., p. 95). “Sin did not begin with the body, but is rather a rebellion of the will against God, and it ever continues the same” (ibid., p. 157). “Satan is even bolder in his response when he asserts, ‘Ye shall not surely die,’ which is a flat contradiction of Jehovah’s decree. It is possible that, as Satan was seeking the allegiance of Adam and Eve in his own great cause which involved his independence of God, he was promising that by power which he would exercise they would be saved from this divine judgment” (ibid., p. 210). McClain adds, “The important point in this history of beginnings, however, is that man’s original dominion, being wholly derived and mediatorial in character, was to be exercised under the direction of God. It was just here that the first Adam dismally failed. Setting aside the ultimate sovereignty of his Creator, and arrogating to himself the perilous authority to decide what was good for him and his posterity, Adam lost his immediate contact with God, invalidated his mediatorial position, and brought down a whole train of disasters upon the realm where he might have brought unmeasured blessing. This failure of the first Adam, with reference to his mediatorial dominion, introduced into the stream of human history a hiatus which to the present hour has not at any time been wholly remedied. In the words of the Epistle to the Hebrews, written about A.D. 70, concerning our Lord as ‘Son of Man’ and His mediatorial dominion, ‘But now we see not yet all things put under him’ (2:8)” (GK, p. 43). Pentecost observes, “It is interesting to observe that when this sin is referred to throughout Scripture, it is not referred to as the sin of Eve—but rather as the sin of Adam! The phrase in [Gen. 3] verse 6, ‘with her,’ seems to suggest that Adam was at Eve’s side when she was tempted by Satan. As God’s theocratic administrator, and as the appointed head of the family, it was Adam’s responsibility to safeguard Eve and to assure that she remained in submission to the command of God. But Adam failed in his God-given responsibility and permitted Eve to eat of the forbidden fruit. While it was Eve's responsibility to obey, it was Adam's responsibility as theocratic administrator to see to it that subjects of the kingdom obeyed the law of the kingdom. Adam did not exercise this responsibility; therefore he was held responsible for the sin of Eve. Added to this was the fact that Adam did not resist the solicitation of Eve. By submitting to her he gave up his headship" (TKC, p. 37).

It is difficult to overstate the gravity of man's fall. He was tested, "It has been held by some that, had Adam stood the test, he would have become immortal in the absolute sense. He would have put on, it is claimed, a spiritual body; but there is no clear assurance of such a prospect. It is certain, however, that, had the test been withstood, it would not have returned again. Its pressure was not to have remained as a constant experience until the first parents were broken down" (Chafer, ST, 2:213). "These new impressions were but for the moment. Had they been resisted, the test would have passed forever. The experience of these two parents is not a norm or pattern of temptations which beset fallen humanity, whose experience is that of a ceaseless stress and trial with the depressing consciousness of many failures and defeats" (ibid.). he was tempted and failed to resist the temptation, "In the role of philanthropist he [Satan] appeared to our first parents, and sowed in their hearts the seeds of distrust" (Anderson, SOG, p. 119). so man became a fallen creature. "The unregenerate masses of humanity are said to be deceived by Satan. Their delusion is both tragic and pitiable. They are imposed upon by Satan's subterfuge, treachery, and fraud. There is no abiding substance in any objective upon which they set their hopes" (Chafer, ST, 2:99). "Both Lutherans and Calvinists subscribe to the highest view of man in his unfallen estate, and to the darkest picture of man in his fallen estate" (ibid., p. 169). "Depravity as a doctrine does not stand or fall on the ground of man's estimation of himself; it rather reflects God's estimation of man" (ibid., p. 218). "A child goes naturally in the ways of evil" (ibid., p. 221). "In the view of heaven all men are sinners" (ibid.). "Finally, the estate of unregenerate man may be summarized, (a) as being subject to death in all its forms, because of participation in Adam's sin; (b) as being born in depravity or spiritual death and forever separated from God unless regenerated by the saving power of God; (c) as guilty of personal sins, each one of which is as sinful in the sight of God as the first sin of Satan or the first sin of Adam; (d) as under sin, in which estate all—both Jew and Gentile—are now placed by divine decree and in which estate every human merit is disregarded to the end that uncompromised saving grace of God may be exercised toward those who believe; and (e) as under the influence of Satan who is in authority over them, who energizes them, who blinds them concerning the gospel, and who deceives them concerning their true relation to himself” (ibid., p. 324). The magnitude of the evil of the first sins was immense. “Adam’s guilt and Jewish sinfulness, which to unbelief seems to have been punished too severely, is seen to receive its merited punishment, not so much from the acts themselves committed (i.e. considered isolated) as from the effects which naturally resulted from them, viz., making them unworthy of being the representatives of God’s Theocratic rulership, and thus forcing God, in respect to His own honor and glory, to a personal withdrawal. The first sin is a blow at Theocracy” (Peters, TTK, 3:501). The entire human race was affected. “Therefore, just as through one man sin entered into the world, and death through sin, and so death spread to all men, because all sinned —” (Rom. 5:12) “Adam had the God-given power of attorney for the whole human race” (Geisler, ST, p. 124).

The results of man’s fall are deep and wide. They include:

The Edenic Covenant was broken and came to an end. “But they like Adam have transgressed the covenant: there have they dealt treacherously against me” (Hos. 6:7). “Eve gave in to the temptation and disobeyed the one negative commandment. Adam recognized what had happened, but he still chose to join his wife in disobedience. Their first reaction was an attempt to hide from the presence of God, which only illustrated the truth of Genesis 2:17 [but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die]. Man at that very moment died spiritually and could no longer share the same communion with God he had experienced before his disobedience. With that act, the Edenic Covenant, being conditional, came to an end” (Fruchtenbaum, EC, p. 9).

We died and became totally depraved. The fact that we, the members of the human race, died through Adam’s transgression is clear from Scripture. “but from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil you shall not eat, for in the day that you eat from it you shall surely die” (Gen. 2:17). “Therefore, just as through one man sin entered into the world, and death through sin, and so death spread to all men, because all sinned —” (Rom. 5:12) “Since then the children share in flesh and blood, He Himself likewise also partook of the same, that through death He might render powerless him who had the power of death, that is, the dev- il” (Heb. 2:14) “...death, in view of disobedience, is a penal entailment as the Bible represents” (Peters, TTK, 2:228) “The penalty threatened to fall upon Adam was death, and death in all its forms—spiritual, physical, and eternal. On the day they disobeyed God, the first parents died spiritually; they began to die physically having become mortal; and they were at once subject to eternal death unless redeemed from it” (Chafer, ST, p. 213). We died spiritually, “but from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil you shall not eat, for in the day that you eat from it you shall surely die” (Gen. 2:17). “And they heard the voice of Jehovah God walking in the garden in the cool of the day: and the man and his wife hid themselves from the presence of Jehovah God amongst the trees of the garden. And Jehovah God called unto the man, and said unto him, Where art thou? And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself” (Gen. 3:8–10). “Therefore, just as through one man sin entered into the world, and death through sin, and so death spread to all men, because all sinned... for on the one hand the judgment arose from one transgression resulting in condemnation, but on the other hand the free gift arose from many transgressions resulting in justification. For if by the transgression of the one, death reigned through the one, much more those who receive the abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness will reign in life through the One, Jesus Christ” (Rom. 5:12–17). “even when we were dead in our transgressions, made us alive together with Christ (by grace you have been saved)” (Eph. 2:5) “Death is separation, and spiritual death is spiritual separation from God” (Geisler, ST, 3:126). “The tempter won that battle—he brought death and its fear upon humankind (Heb. 2:14 [Since then the children share in flesh and blood, He Himself likewise also partook of the same, that through death He might render powerless him who had the power of death, that is, the devil])” (ibid., 4:565). we died physically, “Therefore, just as through one man sin entered into the world, and death through sin, and so death spread to all men, because all sinned — for until the Law sin was in the world; but sin is not imputed when there is no law. Nevertheless death reigned from Adam until Moses, even over those who had not sinned in the likeness of the offense of Adam, who is a type of Him who was to come. But the free gift is not like the transgression. For if by the transgression of the one the many died, much more did the grace of God and the gift by the grace of the one Man, Jesus Christ, abound to the many. And the gift is not like that which came through the one who sinned; for on the one hand the judgment arose from one transgression resulting in condemnation, but on the other hand the free gift arose from many transgressions resulting in justification. For if by the transgression of the one, death reigned through the one, much more those who receive the abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness will reign in life through the One, Jesus Christ” (Rom. 5:12–17). “...death as no Saviour but as the dire result of sin, a grievous portion of the curse” (Peters, TTK, 2:173). and we died (potentially) eternally. “And many of those who sleep in the dust of the ground will awake, these to everlasting life, but the others to disgrace and everlasting contempt” (Dan. 12:2). “Then He will also say to those on His left, “Depart from Me, accursed ones, into the eternal fire which has been prepared for the devil and his angels”” (Matt. 25:41) “And the devil who deceived them was thrown into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are also; and they will be tormented day and night forever and ever” (Rev. 20:10). “And death and Hades were thrown into the lake of fire. This is the second death, the lake of fire. And if anyone’s name was not found written in the book of life, he was thrown into the lake of fire” (Rev. 20:14–15). “But for the cowardly and unbelieving and abominable and murderers and immoral persons and sorcerers and idolaters and all liars, their part will be in the lake that burns with fire and brimstone, which is the second death” (Rev. 21:8). (We’ll explore this second, eternal death later in our chapter The Lake of Fire.) and we became totally depraved. “What then? Are we better than they? Not at all; for we have already charged that both Jews and Greeks are all under sin; as it is written, THERE IS NONE RIGHTEOUS, NOT EVEN ONE; THERE IS NONE WHO UNDERSTANDS, THERE IS NONE WHO SEEKS FOR GOD; ALL HAVE TURNED ASIDE, TOGETHER THEY HAVE BECOME USELESS; THERE IS NONE WHO DOES GOOD, THERE IS NOT EVEN ONE. THEIR THROAT IS AN OPEN GRAVE, WITH THEIR TONGUES THEY KEEP DECEIVING, THE POISON OF ASPS IS UNDER THEIR LIPS; WHOSE MOUTH IS FULL OF CURSING AND BITTERNESS; THEIR FEET ARE SWIFT TO SHED BLOOD, DESTRUCTION AND MISERY ARE IN THEIR PATHS, AND THE PATH OF PEACE HAVE THEY NOT KNOWN. THERE IS NO FEAR OF GOD BEFORE THEIR EYES” (Rom. 3:9–18). “Humans are born wholly, not partially, depraved; that is, every aspect of our being is affected by sin. No element of human nature is unaffected by inherited evil, even though no aspect is completely destroyed by it” (Geisler, ST, 3:146). “...the appalling wickedness of the unregenerated human heart” (McClain, GK, p. 508).

We became blind, lost and unable to seek God. We became spiritually blind. “Woe to you, blind guides, who say, “Whoever swears by the temple, that is nothing; but whoever swears by the gold of the temple, he is obligated.” You fools and blind men; which is more important, the gold, or the temple that sanctified the gold” (Matt. 23:16-17)? “And the light shines in the darkness, and the darkness did not comprehend it” (John 1:5). “And this is the judgment, that the light is come into the world, and men loved the darkness rather than the light; for their deeds were evil. For everyone who does evil hates the light, and does not come to the light, lest his deeds should be exposed. But he who practices the truth comes to the light, that his deeds may be manifested as having been wrought in God” (John 3:19-21). “I have come as light into the world, that everyone who believes in Me may not remain in darkness” (John 12:46). “to open their eyes so that they may turn from darkness to light and from the dominion of Satan to God, in order that they may receive forgiveness of sins and an inheritance among those who have been sanctified by faith in Me” (Acts 26:18). “and are confident that you yourself are a guide to the blind, a light to those who are in darkness” (Rom. 2:19) “in whose case the god of this world has blinded the minds of the unbelieving, that they might not see the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God” (2 Cor. 4:4). “being darkened in their understanding, excluded from the life of God, because of the ignorance that is in them, because of the hardness of their heart” (Eph. 4:18) “for you were formerly darkness, but now you are light in the Lord; walk as children of light” (Eph. 5:8) “And do not participate in the unfruitful deeds of darkness, but instead even expose them” (Eph. 5:11) “For our struggle is not against flesh and blood, but against the rulers, against the powers, against the world forces of this darkness, against the spiritual forces of wickedness in the heavenly places” (Eph. 6:12). “But you are a chosen race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people for God’s own possession, that you may proclaim the excellencies of Him who has called you out of darkness into His marvelous light” (1 Pet. 2:9) “Even the believer has no present power to discern his glorious position and security in the Father’s hand, apart from the assurance of the written Word. Much less, then, can the unbeliever come to realize his own position in the arms of Satan, when, under the direction of Satan, he gives no heed to the testimony of God” (Chafer, S, C3:25/29). “The unregenerate are, then, unconscious of their position in the arms of Satan, and blind in their thoughts toward the gospel of mercy and favor,—their only hope for time or eternity. Satan, like a fond mother, is bending over those in his arms, breathing into their minds the quieting balm of a ‘universal fatherhood of God’ and a ‘universal brotherhood of man;’ suggesting their worthiness before God on the ground of their own moral character and physical generation; feeding their tendency to imitate the true faith by great humanitarian undertakings and schemes for the reformation of individuals and the betterment of the social order. God’s necessary requirements of regeneration are carefully set aside, and the blinded souls go on without hope, ‘having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart’ (Eph. 4:18). How important, as a preparation for salvation, is the illuminating work of the Spirit in conviction, by which He lifts the veil and opens the mind to a new vision of the redemption and glory that is in Christ! Without this God-given vision there can be no understanding of the way of life, nor any intelligent decision for Christ” (ibid., 27/29). “Many are easily led to fix their attention upon the secondary things, and to neglect wholly the one primary thing; especially is this true since the secondary things are tangible and seen: while the one essential thing is spiritual and unseen; and Satan has blinded their eyes toward that which is of eternal value” (ibid., C10:9/36). “...scriptures indicate that the sphere of darkness is ruled by evil angelic beings (Eph. 6:12) and that, as a result of being in that sphere, the understanding of the unsaved is darkened (Eph. 4:18). They do not understand ultimate reality and the true purpose of life and history; therefore, they are oblivious to the judgment that is coming, and they practice the unfruitful works of darkness (Eph. 5:11)” (Showers, M, p. 200). We also became lost. ““But we had to be merry and rejoice, for this brother of yours was dead and has begun to live, and was lost and has been found”” (Luke 15:32). ““For the Son of Man has come to seek and to save that which was lost”” (Luke 19:10). “No more misleading or injurious word can be given the unsaved than to impress upon them that they are lost only on the ground of their personal sins. If this be true, they are lost only to the degree to which they have thus sinned. Men are lost by nature— ‘by nature the children of wrath’ (Eph 2:3)—and there is deep significance, reaching far beyond the realms of personal wrongdoing, in the words of Christ, ‘Ye are of your father the devil’ (John 8:44)” (Chafer, ST, 2:220). And, we became unable to seek God. “There is none who understands, There is none who seeks for God” (Rom. 3:11) “Human will cannot, unmoved by divine grace, seek God” (Geisler, ST, 3:147).

We became enemies of God. We became alienated from God. “but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die” (Gen. 2:17). “And the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked; and they sewed fig-leaves together, and made themselves aprons. And they heard the voice of Jehovah God walking in the garden in the cool of the day: and the man and his wife hid themselves from the presence of Jehovah God amongst the trees of the garden. And Jehovah God called unto the man, and said unto him, Where art thou? And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself. And he said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree, whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat” (Gen. 3:7-10)? “Thou that art of purer eyes than to behold evil, and that canst not look on perverseness, wherefore lookest thou upon them that deal treacherously, and holdest thy peace when the wicked swalloweth up the man that is more righteous than he” (Hab. 1:13) “remember that you were at that time separate from Christ, excluded from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers to the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world” (Eph. 2:12). God became our enemy. “The world cannot hate you; but it hates Me because I testify of it, that its deeds are evil” (John 7:7). “If I had not done among them the works which no one else did, they would not have sin; but now they have both seen and hated Me and My Father as well. But they have done this in order that the word may be fulfilled that is written in their Law, “THEY HATED ME WITHOUT A CAUSE”” (John 15:24–25). “And just as they did not see fit to acknowledge God any longer, God gave them over to a depraved mind, to do those things which are not proper, being filled with all unrighteousness, wickedness, greed, evil; full of envy, murder, strife, deceit, malice; they are gossips, slanderers, haters of God, insolent, arrogant, boastful, inventors of evil, disobedient to parents, without understanding, untrustworthy, unloving, unmerciful; and, although they know the ordinance of God, that those who practice such things are worthy of death, they not only do the same, but also give hearty approval to those who practice them” (Rom. 1:28-32). “as it is written, “There is none righteous, not even one; There is none who understands, There is none who seeks for God; All have turned aside, together they have become useless; There is none who does good, There is not even one. Their throat is an open grave, With their tongues they keep deceiving, The poison of asps is under their lips; Whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness; Their feet are swift to shed blood, Destruction and misery are in their paths, And the path of peace have they not known. There is no fear of God before their eyes” (Rom. 3:10-18). We became enemies of God. “And just as they did not see fit to acknowledge God any longer, God gave them over to a depraved mind, to do those things which are not proper, being filled with all unrighteousness, wickedness, greed, evil; full of envy, murder, strife, deceit, malice; they are gossips, slanderers, haters of God, insolent, arrogant, boastful, inventors of evil, disobedient to parents, without understanding, untrustworthy, unloving, unmerciful; and, although they know the ordinance of God, that those who practice such things are worthy of death, they not only do the same, but also give hearty approval to those who practice them” (Rom. 1:28-32). “For if while we were enemies, we were reconciled to God through the death of His Son, much more, having been reconciled, we shall be saved by His life. And not only this, but we also exult in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom we have now received the reconciliation” (Rom. 5:10-11). “Among them we too all formerly lived in the lusts of our flesh, indulging the desires of the flesh and of the mind, and were by nature children of wrath, even as the rest” (Eph. 2:3). “You adulteresses, do you not know that friendship with the world is hostility toward God? Therefore whoever wishes to be a friend of the world makes himself an enemy of God” (James 4:4). “Sin not merely alienated man from God, it alienated God from man. A just and holy God could not but regard him as an enemy. But ‘while we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son’” (Anderson, SOG, p. 112). In other words, the enmity is mutual. We became condemned by God. “He who believes in Him is not judged; he who does not believe has been judged already, because he has not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. And this is the judgment, that the light is come into the world, and men loved the darkness rather than the light; for their deeds were evil” (John 3:18–19). “He who believes in the Son has eternal life; but he who does not obey the Son will not see life, but the wrath of God abides on him” (John 3:36). “He who has believed and has been baptized shall be saved; but he who has disbelieved shall be condemned” (Mark 16:16) “So then as through one transgression there resulted condemnation to all men, even so through one act of righteousness there resulted justification of life to all men” (Rom. 5:18). “But when we are judged, we are disciplined by the Lord in order that we may not be condemned along with the world” (1 Cor. 11:32). “they are individually under condemnation before God (Jno. 3:18); their borrowed interest in morality and charity being a poor commendation, in view of their fallen and Christ-rejecting attitude before God” (Chafer, S, C4:14/31).

We lost our stature and inheritance. We lost our stature as the representatives of God on earth. “And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the birds of the heavens, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. And God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them. And God blessed them: and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it; and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the birds of the heavens, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth. And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb yielding seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for food: and to every beast of the earth, and to every bird of the heavens, and to everything that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life, I have given every green herb for food: and it was so” (Gen. 1:26-30). “therefore Jehovah God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken. So he drove out the man; and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden the Cherubim, and the flame of a sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life” (Gen. 3:23-24). “What is man, that thou art mindful of him? And the son of man, that thou visitest him? For thou hast made him but little lower than God, And crownest him with glory and honor. Thou makest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; Thou hast put all things under his feet: All sheep and oxen, Yea, and the beasts of the field, The birds of the heavens, and the fish of the sea, Whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas” (Ps. 8:4-8). “And he led Him up and showed Him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time. And the devil said to Him, ‘I will give You all this domain and its glory; for it has been handed over to me, and I give it to whomever I wish. Therefore if You worship before me, it shall all be Yours” (Luke 4:5-7). “But one has testified somewhere, saying, ‘What is man, that Thou rememberest him? Or the son of man, that Thou art concerned about him? Thou hast made him for a little while lower than the angels; Thou hast crowned him with glory and honor, And hast appointed him over the works of Thy hands; Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet.’ For in subjecting all things to him, He left nothing that is not subject to him. But now we do not yet see all things subjected to him” (Heb. 2:6-8). “This dominion was, in a great measure, lost, and that man, shorn of his power, could no longer act as the representation of God” (Peters, TTK, 1:572). We lost our inheritance of tenant possession of the earth to Satan. “And he led Him up and showed Him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time. And the devil said to Him, ‘I will give You all this domain and its glory; for it has been handed over to me, and I give it to whomever I wish. Therefore if You worship before me, it shall all be Yours” (Luke 4:5–7). “Now judgment is upon this world; now the ruler of this world shall be cast out” (John 12:31). “I will not speak much more with you, for the ruler of the world is coming, and he has nothing in Me” (John 14:30) “and concerning judgment, because the ruler of this world has been judged” (John 16:11). “And even if our gospel is veiled, it is veiled to those who are perishing, in whose case the god of this world has blinded the minds of the unbelieving, that they might not see the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God” (2 Cor. 4:3-4). “in which you formerly walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, of the spirit that is now working in the sons of disobedience” (Eph. 2:2). “For our struggle is not against flesh and blood, but against the rulers, against the powers, against the world forces of this darkness, against the spiritual forces of wickedness in the heavenly places” (Eph. 6:12). “We know that we are of God, and the whole world lies in the power of the evil one” (1 John. 5:19). “Adam’s scepter of authority and dominion (Gen. 1:26-28) was evidently surrendered to Satan to some extent and has been held by Satan by right of conquest” (Chafer, ST, 2:323). “Satan usurped the tenant possession of the earth and has continued to rule the world system ever since mankind’s fall” (Showers, M, p. 97). “Satan... As a result of Adam’s Fall, he is now the prince of this world (Jn. 12:31), the god of this age (2 Cor. 4:4), and the prince of the kingdom of this world and can offer them to whomever he wills (Lk. 4:5-7)” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 557). We’ll have more to say regarding mankind’s loss of his inheritance of tenant possession of the earth to Satan in our next chapter A Kingdom is Needed and in the Events of the First Half of the Tribulation section of our chapter The Great Tribulation.

The earth was cursed. “And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in toil shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life” (Gen. 3:17) “and he called his name Noah, saying, This same shall comfort us in our work and in the toil of our hands, which cometh because of the ground which Jehovah hath cursed” (Gen. 5:29). “For the creation was subjected to futility, not of its own will, but because of Him who subjected it, in hope that the creation itself also will be set free from its slavery to corruption into the freedom of the glory of the children of God” (Rom. 8:20–21).

God's purposes for human the race were delayed. "...the eternal purposes of God respecting the race, for a time ('a moment') delayed by the fall of man" (Peters, TTK, 2:544)

Chapter 8: A Kingdom Needed

In light of the things we discussed in the previous chapter, it should be evident that if humanity is ever to recover from the consequences of the Fall, it is going to take a major and multi-faceted operation. A comprehensive Kingdom program is needed.

A Kingdom is Needed To Do What Only God Can Do

The fall resulted in dire and far-reaching consequences, consequences involving such diverse and intractable things as sin and death, Satan, nature, and government of the world. If God's Kingdom is to comprehensively and effectively deal with all the problems existing in all these areas, it is obviously going to have to be a Kingdom whose objectives and abilities are far beyond those of mortal men. It is this writer's conviction that we are, both as individuals and as a race, doomed to failure, as Scripture plainly states (John 6:53, Matt. 24:22), without God's direct and supernatural intervention. For us to ignore and/or reject God's graciously revealed Plan, therefore, in favor of our own grossly inadequate personal, societal and global schemes, would reveal our blindness and foolishness in these matters. "...just as if man can be his own deliverer, while the Deliverer provided by a merciful God is studiously ignored" (Peters, TTK, 2:157). "No amount of enlightened sentiment can establish a kingdom without a king; and no universal blessedness can be experienced in this world until the enemy is dethroned and banished. Sadly has the world failed to include these two necessary Divine movements, in its vain dream and godless attempt at a perfected universe" (Chafer, S, C2:22/37)! "We need to be taught again and again that our fallen human nature deeply resents the truth that there are some things wholly beyond our power to do, and which only God can supernaturally accomplish. Men may indeed improve themselves and society in many ways; but just as the regeneration of the human soul is a miracle from above, so also is the regeneration of society" (McClain, GK, p. 505). Indeed, genuine regeneration of ourselves and society is beyond our abilities; a Kingdom is needed to do what only God can do.

A Kingdom is Needed To Accomplish God's Plan

The more we correctly identify and understand the purposes of the biblical Kingdom of God, the more apparent it becomes that this Kingdom must of necessity be God's undertaking, not man's. This will be seen as we outline in this chapter the major objectives of the Kingdom of God as they relate to sin, Satan, individuals, mankind as a group, creation, all created beings, and even God Himself. “The design of previous dispensations, the orderings of Providence, the probation of saints, the longsuffering and patience of God, the permission of evil—in brief, all that has preceded, will find their solution in the incoming Kingdom” (Peters, TTK, 1:144). “It is in this Kingdom that the Father’s eternal purpose in the incarnate Son shall be certainly and completely fulfilled” (McClain, GK, p. 5).

In Relation to Sin

In relation to sin, God’s Kingdom is needed to execute justice, defeat evil and right all wrongs.

The Kingdom is needed to execute justice. “Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of Jehovah of hosts will perform this” (Isaiah 9:7). “That there is present injustice does not mean that there will be ultimate injustice. The biblical theist notes that the story is not over yet; a day of ultimate justice is coming (Rev 20). If God is all-powerful, then He can overcome all injustice, and if He is all-just, He will overcome it. If He is all-perfect, God has the desire to overcome all evil, and if He is all-powerful, He can do it. One day He will” (Geisler, ST, 2:351).

The Kingdom is also needed to defeat evil (and its manifestation, sin). “Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, On earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven our debtors. And do not lead us into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever. Amen” (Matt. 6:10-13). “having canceled out the certificate of debt consisting of decrees against us and which was hostile to us; and He has taken it out of the way, having nailed it to the cross” (Col. 2:14). “Otherwise, He would have needed to suffer often since the foundation of the world; but now once at the consummation of the ages He has been manifested to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself” (Heb. 9:26). “...evil is temporary ...God will ultimately remove and destroy it” (Peters, TTK, 1:84). “The manifestation of a visible Theocratic ordering is alone capable of crushing sin and removing it from the world” (ibid., p. 107). “the transient nature of evil... sin, so far as the race is concerned, is only temporary, and that its dominion under the Theocratic rule will be forever crushed... sin itself will finally be put down by a terrible exhibition of supernatural power and vengeance” (ibid., 3:435). “This Kingdom teaches us in its astonishing Theocratic arrangements (e.g. in the gathering and association of the saints as joint rulers, etc.) that sin and its consequent evils in the world will only be endured until a sufficiency of moral and religious power (in the persons of the elect) is gathered out to insure an overwhelming, triumphant, and perpetual ascendancy of a pure Theocratic government over all the earth, and then sin and evil are doomed to descend from their ascendancy and forever perish. Looking at the world's history, not disconnectedly (as at the separate, detached parts of a machine), but connectively, and especially at the grand end to which it is destined under a pure, powerful, beneficent Theocratic rule by 'the man ordained' through 'the Father of mercies'—then instead of having a world like that described by Carlyle (Latter-Day Pamphlets) sinking to ruin and satisfied with the hopeless mockeries of government and religion; or, like that represented by Fronde (The English in Ireland, vol. 3, p. 1-4), constantly passing through 'the long toil of reconstruction,' ever repeated, we have a world redeemed, freed from the curse, and restored to more than its former Paradisaical state" (ibid.). "The problem of relief from the immeasurable tragedy of sin is never solved by minimizing any aspect of sin; it is solved by discovering a Savior whose salvation is equal to every need for time and eternity" (Chafer, ST, 2:324). "An all-good God will defeat evil, and an all-powerful God can defeat evil" (Geisler, p. 560). "God chose not to annihilate sin but rather to defeat it. He chose to defeat it progressively instead of instantaneously. There are many possible reasons for this, but two prominent ones involve (1) the freedom God gave to humans and (2) God's desire to produce a more godlike (godly) product in the process. Defeating evil without destroying freedom, while at the same time perfecting free creatures—this appears to be at the heart of God's plan" (ibid., 3:152). "God's great plan culminates in the total defeat of evil. Evil was vanquished officially at the Cross (Col. 2:14; Heb. 2:14) and will be defeated actually at Christ's return" (ibid., p. 172). "We see, then, that the official defeat of sin came at the First Advent; the actual defeat will be at the Second Coming... Justification (deliverance from the penalty of sin)... Sanctification (deliverance from the power of sin)... Glorification (deliverance from the presence of sin)" (ibid., p. 173) "We speak of the defeat, not the destruction, of sin, because sin, in the sinner, will continue forever in hell. Even so, God will defeat sin without destroying the sinner... It does not mean that God will annihilate sinners. This would be to attack His own immortal image, which all sinners, even those in hell, still bear... Further, the annihilation of all sinners would not be punishment, since those who do not exist cannot feel any pain... Finally, it is contrary to the nature of an all-loving God to snuff out people who do not love Him in return. Rather, in His infinite love, God will allow even those who hate Him to 'have it their way” (ibid.). We’ll have more to say on this subject in our chapter The Lake of Fire.

And, the Kingdom is needed to right all wrongs. “Celsus, Voltaire, and a host of unbelievers, with assumed righteous indignation, insist that David having alone sinned in numbering the people, it was unjust that the innocent people should have suffered the punishment due to him. So also it is said, that taking Uriah’s wife, the innocent husband perished, and David enjoyed his spoil. But let it be noticed: The end is not yet: the future destiny of those innocent ones will, in the coming Kingdom, make ample amends for their misfortune” (Peters, TTK, 1:235). “This life is only a preparation for the next, where all inequities here will be rectified” (Geisler, ST, 2:593).

In Relation to Satan

In relation to Satan, God’s Kingdom is needed to defeat Satan and to destroy his works.

The Kingdom is needed to defeat Satan. Satan (temporarily) defeated man; it is only appropriate that man (the Second Adam) should defeat Satan. “And I will put enmity Between you and the woman, And between your seed and her seed; He shall bruise you on the head, And you shall bruise him on the heel” (Gen. 3:15). “The Spirit of the Lord Jehovah is upon me; because Jehovah hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound” (Isa. 61:1) “Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so on earth. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven our debtors. And bring us not into temptation, but deliver us from the evil one” (Matt. 6:10–11, ASV) “Or how can anyone enter the strong man’s house and carry off his property, unless he first binds the strong man? And then he will plunder his house” (Matt. 12:29). “And He [Jesus] came to Nazareth, where He had been brought up; and as was His custom, He entered the synagogue on the Sabbath, and stood up to read. And the book of the prophet Isaiah was handed to Him. And He opened the book and found the place where it was written, ‘THE SPIRIT OF THE LORD IS UPON ME, BECAUSE HE ANOINTED ME TO PREACH THE GOSPEL TO THE POOR. HE HAS SENT ME TO PROCLAIM RELEASE TO THE CAPTIVES, AND RECOVERY OF SIGHT TO THE BLIND, TO SET FREE THOSE WHO ARE OPPRESSED, TO PROCLAIM THE FAVORABLE YEAR OF THE LORD.’ And He closed the book, gave it back to the attendant and sat down; and the eyes of all in the synagogue were fixed on Him” (Luke 4:16–21). “And the God of peace will soon crush Satan under your feet. The grace of our Lord Jesus be with you” (Rom. 16:20). “in which you formerly walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, of the spirit that is now working in the sons of disobedience” (Eph. 2:2). “Since then the children share in flesh and blood, He Himself likewise also partook of the same, that through death He might render powerless him who had the power of death, that is, the devil” (Heb. 2:14) “And there was war in heaven, Michael and his angels waging war with the dragon. The dragon and his angels waged war, and they were not strong enough, and there was no longer a place found for them in heaven. And the great dragon was thrown down, the serpent of old who is called the devil and Satan, who deceives the whole world; he was thrown down to the earth, and his angels were thrown down with him. Then I heard a loud voice in heaven, saying, ‘Now the salvation, and the power, and the kingdom of our God and the authority of His Christ have come, for the accuser of our brethren has been thrown down, he who accuses them before our God day and night. And they overcame him because of the blood of the Lamb and because of the word of their testimony, and they did not love their life even when faced with death. For this reason, rejoice, O heavens and you who dwell in them. Woe to the earth and the sea, because the devil has come down to you, having great wrath, knowing that he has only a short time” (Rev. 12:7-12). “Then I saw an angel coming down from heaven, holding the key of the abyss and a great chain in his hand. And he laid hold of the dragon, the serpent of old, who is the devil and Satan, and bound him for a thousand years; and he threw him into the abyss, and shut it and sealed it over him, so that he would not deceive the nations any longer, until the thousand years were completed; after these things he must be released for a short time” (Rev. 20:1-3). “And the devil who deceived them was thrown into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are also; and they will be tormented day and night forever and ever” (Rev. 20:10). “It would seem, therefore, that the basis of Satan’s dominion over humanity was largely the fact that they were not eligible to any higher relationship. On this basis, had God approached any fallen human beings, Satan would have pleaded God’s own holiness as the reason why God should not so act. Satan is committed to his infernal philosophy and to the defense of those who have embraced it. At least he will not surrender them apart from the most drastic resistance within his power. As long as man’s unholiness was not yet taken to the cross, the conflict was largely in Satan’s favor. In Isaiah 14:17 it is written of Satan that ‘he opened not the house of his prisoners.’ This statement is illuminating. However, when referring to what Christ would do by His sacrifice, the same prophet goes on to say that Christ would come ‘to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound (Isa. 61:1; cf. Luke 4:16-21)” (Chafer, ST, 2:56). “These prisoners are not only bondslaves to sin, but are in bondage to the evil one. He it is who energizes all the sons of disobedience (Eph 2:2 [in which you formerly walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, of the spirit that is now working in the sons of disobedience.])” (ibid., p. 57). “The ground upon which Satan has held his authority over fallen men was the fact that divine condemnation rests upon them because of sin” (ibid., 6:98). “‘Deliver us from the evil one’ (Matt. 6:10, 13, ASV). At the coming of our Lord these petitions will be answered, not only in part, but fully” (McClain, GK, p. 482). “It is quite significant that many of Christ’s miracles were performed in the demonic realm, proving His authority over Satan” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 203). “The Savior would be the Seed of the woman, and He would ultimately—fatally—crush the serpent’s head. This Christ did officially on the Cross (Col. 2:14) and will do actually when He returns (Rom. 16:20; Rev. 20:10)” (Geisler, ST, 3:165). “While the serpent bit the Savior’s heel, Christ crushed the devil’s head. The defeat of sin has not been swift and immediate, but it will be complete and final” (ibid., p. 178). “God’s infinite wisdom is so great that the devil was trapped by it” (ibid., 4:34).

And, the Kingdom is needed to destroy Satan’s works. “the one who practices sin is of the devil; for the devil has sinned from the beginning. The Son of God appeared for this purpose, that He might destroy the works of the devil” (1 John. 3:8). “We may urge even the eminent fitness of Christ, the Second Adam, manifesting Himself personally in the very place where Satan obtained his triumphs over the first Adam, at the very time that Satan is bound and his work of deception is stayed. Where man fell, there the triumph of man, the woman’s seed, is also to be exhibited; and if so, it involves a personal Coming at the period of the Millennium” (Peters, TTK, 2:182). “Man and his redemption, the restoration of the world to an Edenic condition, are in a remarkable manner the object of Satanic hate” (ibid., 3:188). “The work of Jesus, which is to ‘destroy the works of the devil’ (1 John 3:8), is only partially performed... the works of Satan still exist; and he is the god of this world; the saints even fall under the power of the enemy death and are not delivered from the grave” (ibid., p. 454)

In Relation to Individuals

In relation to individuals, the Kingdom is needed to reconcile men to God, save them from sin and death, and meet the deepest desires of their hearts.

The Kingdom is needed to reconcile men to God. “For if while we were enemies, we were reconciled to God through the death of His Son, much more, having been reconciled, we shall be saved by His life. And not only this, but we also exult in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom we have now received the reconciliation” (Rom. 5:10-11). “For if their rejection be the reconciliation of the world, what will their acceptance be but life from the dead” (Rom. 11:15)? “Now all these things are from God, who reconciled us to Himself through Christ, and gave us the ministry of reconciliation, namely, that God was in Christ reconciling the world to Himself, not counting their trespasses against them, and He has committed to us the word of reconciliation” (2 Cor. 5:18-20) “Therefore, we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God were entreating through us; we beg you on behalf of Christ, be reconciled to God” (2 Cor. 5:20). “For He Himself is our peace, who made both groups into one, and broke down the barrier of the dividing wall, by abolishing in His flesh the enmity, which is the Law of commandments contained in ordinances, that in Himself He might make the two into one new man, thus establishing peace, and might reconcile them both in one body to God through the cross, by it having put to death the enmity” (Eph. 2:14-16). “and through Him to reconcile all things to Himself, having made peace through the blood of His cross; through Him, I say, whether things on earth or things in heaven” (Col. 1:20). “yet He has now reconciled you in His fleshly body through death, in order to present you before Him holy and blameless and beyond reproach —” (Col. 1:22)

The Kingdom is needed to save men from sin and death. “And if any-one hears My sayings, and does not keep them, I do not judge him; for I did not come to judge the world, but to save the world” (John 12:47). “The last enemy that will be abolished is death” (1 Cor. 15:26). “It is a trustworthy statement, deserving full acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, among whom I am foremost of all” (1 Tim. 1:15). “and might deliver those who through fear of death were subject to slavery all their lives” (Heb. 2:15). “And when I saw Him, I fell at His feet as a dead man. And He laid His right hand upon me, saying, ‘Do not be afraid; I [Jesus] am the first and the last, and the living One; and I was dead, and behold, I am alive forevermore, and I have the keys of death and of Hades’” (Rev. 1:17-18).

And the Kingdom is needed to meet the deepest desires of men's hearts. Peters observes, "There is an undercurrent of sadness, of utter hopelessness, that appeals to our hearts in the writings of some unbelievers... Even such, however, endeavor (as e.g. Hennell in An inquiry concerning the Origin of Christianity) to comfort themselves by 'indulging the thought that a time is appointed when the cravings of the heart and of the intellect will be satisfied, and the enigma of our own and the world's existence be solved'... philosophy teaches the sad fact that existence is a curse; that man is deluded by false hopes to cling to that existence; that such hopes prompted by instincts are a blessing in that they finally, through progress, reveal the utter misery of his state; that the highest desire is to wish for the annihilation of self and others... the creation of the world and its races, its evils and antagonisms, its fearful experiences from nature and man, its repeated stages and changes involving terrible suffering, etc., would form an inexplicable mystery if it were not for the light of the Bible, presenting a connected and sustained redemptive scheme, holding forth a definite and magnificent end worthy of such a Creator and creation. Contemplating not merely the preparatory stages in their ascending scale, but the great End which brings praise, honor, and glory to God and His Christ, we find the key—which philosophy and reason outside of this can never obtain—to the world's sad history" (TTK, 3:441). "No man can read the descriptions pertaining to this Kingdom without, if honest, frankly admitting that there is no phase of imperfection, suffering, and evil which it does not propose to remove, and that there is no blessing which the heart of man has longed for both for himself and society which it does not intend to bestow" (ibid., p. 475).

In Relation to Mankind

In relation to mankind, the Kingdom is needed to judge, redeem, save, repair, restore, govern and bless mankind, in short, to accomplish God's original purpose in creating man.

The Kingdom is needed to judge the world. "because He has fixed a day in which He will judge the world in righteousness through a Man whom He has appointed, having furnished proof to all men by raising Him from the dead" (Acts 17:31). We'll have more to say regarding the various judgments of humanity in our chapters The Mystery Kingdom (The Church), Inauguration of the Kingdom and The Lake of Fire.

The Kingdom is needed to save mankind. God's purpose is to save this fallen world, not to abandon it. "And unless those days had been cut short, no life would have been saved; but for the sake of the elect those days shall be cut short” (Matt. 24:22). “Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who according to His great mercy has caused us to be born again to a living hope through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to obtain an inheritance which is imperishable and undefiled and will not fade away, reserved in heaven for you, who are protected by the power of God through faith for a salvation ready to be revealed in the last time. In this you greatly rejoice, even though now for a little while, if necessary, you have been distressed by various trials, that the proof of your faith, being more precious than gold which is perishable, even though tested by fire, may be found to result in praise and glory and honor at the revelation of Jesus Christ; and though you have not seen Him, you love Him, and though you do not see Him now, but believe in Him, you greatly rejoice with joy inexpressible and full of glory, obtaining as the outcome of your faith the salvation of your souls. As to this salvation, the prophets who prophesied of the grace that would come to you made careful search and inquiry, seeking to know what person or time the Spirit of Christ within them was indicating as He predicted the sufferings of Christ and the glories to follow. It was revealed to them that they were not serving themselves, but you, in these things which now have been announced to you through those who preached the gospel to you by the Holy Spirit sent from heaven—things into which angels long to look. Therefore, gird your minds for action, keep sober in spirit, fix your hope completely on the grace to be brought to you at the revelation of Jesus Christ” (1 Pet. 1:3–13). “Let us remind the reader how this doctrine of ours most effectively meets the objection urged against Christianity, that it has nothing to do with man as a race, but with man as an individual” (Peters, TTK, 2:536). “The Kingdom of the Messiah and salvation were in the Jewish mind convertible terms; and it needs no reflection to show how appropriate the term is, seeing that it was employed by the prophets to designate the deliverance from all evil and the bestowment of all blessings in this Kingdom. The term ‘salvation,’ correctly apprehended by the primitive Church, was from Origen’s time applied too much to the present life and to the intermediate state... this salvation the apostles declared—whatever the earnest might be in the present or intermediate—to be still future” (ibid., 3:449). “It is saddening to see the modern conceptions of ‘salvation,’ and to observe how intelligent men, in order to exalt them, decry the ancient views—although sustained by the plain grammatical sense—as ‘carnal.’ What a contrast exists between the present prevailing spiritualistic, indefinite belief and the one based on the oath-bound covenants! If we even venture to call attention to this antagonism, and to question the modern faith, multitudes are ready to designate our course as 'heretical,' if not something worse. Alas! What an astonishing change, when 'the Christ,' 'the Kingdom,' and even 'salvation' itself are transformed from their covenanted and predicted meaning. The most selfish and mystical conceptions are adopted in preference to the simple truth" (ibid., p. 450). "Whatever we now receive from 'the Gospel of salvation,' it is only 'the earnest' of the distinguishing salvation—the specific salvation—held forth by the covenant and promises... in this life, subject still to trial, suffering, death, etc., the saint is not delivered, and surely in the intermediate state, whatever it may be, with the body in the grave, the nonfulfillment of covenant promises, the postponement of the reign on earth, etc., the saint is not enjoying the predicted inheritance, crown, reward, etc., only to be given at the Sec. Advent... 'heirs of salvation.' The great, the emphatic salvation is then still future, and hence, the work of Christ, is not yet completed. The solid foundation is indeed laid, the preparatory work is progressing, but the time for the perfect realization of salvation has not yet arrived" (ibid.). "This most effectually sets aside those extravagant eulogies of the present and of the intermediate state, so loudly proclaimed by numerous writers. Whatever these may bestow upon us, they are only the earnest of the great salvation, and it is a disparagement of the Sec. Advent and its results to disconnect and transpose that which the Spirit has joined together. To elevate the preparatory to completion, to exalt the initiatory to consummation, to substitute human hopes and expectations for the express promises of the Scriptures is unwise and derogatory to the Word. Salvation includes far more than moral and bodily regeneration, for it embraces the covenanted Kingdom of God, the inheritance of David's Son, the joint-heirship and reign with the Christ, the restoration of the Jewish nation and its Theocratic exaltation, the willing subjection of the nations, the renewal of creation, the blessings, honor, and glory of the ages to come. This is a salvation indeed, far-reaching and wide-sweeping, commensurate with the necessities and happiness of the individual, the elect nation, the Gentile nations, the race and the world" (ibid., p. 451). "Peter (1 Pet. 1:3-13) declaring, that those who are saved 'are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time,' and after asserting that this salvation still future is identical with that prophesied by the prophets, in the most positive manner (vs. 7 and 13) teaches that it will only be realized 'at the appearing of Jesus Christ,' and 'at the revelation of Jesus Christ.' Surely this ought to be decisive of the matter" (ibid., p. 452). "Surely such plain and emphatic Scripture [1 Pet. 1:3-13] as has been thus presented ought to sweep out of existence that abundance of religious literature—so darkening to the truth and so deadly to a proper appreciation of ‘the blessed hope’—which makes ‘the salvation’ so complete in this life and after death that it practically reduces such passages to no special value and preciousness. To make the earnest equivalent to the glory, and to elevate death into the place of ‘the Christ’ coming unto salvation, renders its believer incapable of a correct apprehension of the Divine Purpose in ‘salvation,’ or to appreciate even what the Scriptures mean by ‘salvation’” (ibid.). “Taking even such a brief survey of the prophets, seeing how the apostles united their fulfillment with the future Advent of King Jesus, surely the early Church was consistent and logical when it thus received and understood ‘salvation,’ and looked for Jesus to come and finish the work so happily begun” (ibid., p. 453). “The Kingdom of the Son of Man is alone the hope of the world” (ibid., p. 549). We’ll have more to say on the eschatological aspects of salvation in our chapters The Rapture of the Church and The Second Coming of the King.

The Kingdom is needed to repair the damage done by Adam’s fall. “Nevertheless death reigned from Adam until Moses, even over those who had not sinned in the likeness of the offense of Adam, who is a type of Him who was to come” (Rom. 5:14). “For as in Adam all die, so also in Christ all shall be made alive” (1 Cor. 15:22). “So also it is written, ‘The first MAN, Adam, BECAME A LIVING SOUL.’ The last Adam became a life-giving spirit” (1 Cor. 15:45). “And there shall no longer be any curse; and the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it, and His bond-servants shall serve Him” (Rev. 22:3) “...become co-heirs with Jesus in the restoration of the forfeited dominion of Adam” (Peters, TTK, 1:368) “...the period when humanity... is fully restored to the blessings forfeited by the fall” (ibid., p. 572). “... ‘the renovated earth’ is ‘the ultimate inheritance of the heirs of salvation’” (ibid., p. 573) “This dominion, here on earth, will be exerted by Jesus, the Man, through the re-establishment of the Theocratic ordering... The saints, made like unto Christ and associated with Him in His power, largely participate in it, all nature being brought into subjection to them. Thus the Scriptures will be amply fulfilled” (ibid., p. 574). “...if the Millennial predictions lacked this materialistic feature, a very important and essential one would be missing in Redemption. Is it not true, that the materialistic Eden was forfeited by sin, that man, composed of soul, spirit, and body, is fallen under the curse, that a material creation groans under the same; and is it not also true that if there is no deliverance of this material portion, Redemption in so far is incomplete” (ibid., 2:145)? “Let us keep in view that there is a ‘restitution of all things’ promised, and that this embraces a restoration to all forfeited blessings” (ibid., p. 146). “The Bible... beginning with the fall of man and revealing the manner of man's recovery from the results of such a fall, it ends appropriately with a restoration of the forfeited blessings" (ibid., p. 150). "Brookes (Maranatha, p. 214) exhibits a cardinal doctrine of Millenarianism as follows: 'All the departments of nature, involved in the consequences of the first man's shameful defeat, must exhibit the fruits of the second man's magnificent victory'" (ibid., p. 488).

The Kingdom is also needed to repair the damage done by sin. "The entire removal of sin, of which an 'earnest' is given, may, and indeed does, include the destruction of the sad results of sin, but the latter is affected only at the Sec. Advent and not previously" (Peters, TTK, 3:459).

The Kingdom is needed to elevate man to his originally-intended dignity. "This dominion, promised, predicted and restored, is corroborative of the Biblical account of man's noble origin and high destiny, forming quite a contrast to the ignoble theories of recent scientists... efforts that are so persistently made by able men to degrade the origin of man to the lowest scale" (Peters, TTK, 1:575) "it is the design of Redemption to ennoble whatsoever it touches" (ibid., 2:470).

The Kingdom is needed to enable man to represent God, as originally intended. "This Second Adam thus stands forth in our system a revealed representative of God, such as the first Adam was designed to become had he not fallen" (Peters, TTK, 2:349).

The Kingdom is needed to restore man's dominion over the earth. "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the birds of the heavens, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. And God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them" (Gen. 1:26-27). "What is man, that thou art mindful of him? And the son of man, that thou visitest him? For thou hast made him but little lower than God, And crownest him with glory and honor. Thou makest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; Thou hast put all things under his feet: All sheep and oxen, Yea, and the beasts of the field, The birds of the heavens, and the fish of the sea, Whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas" (Ps. 8:4-8). "For He did not subject to angels the world to come, concerning which we are speaking. But one has testified somewhere, saying, 'WHAT IS MAN, THAT THOU REMEMBEREST HIM? OR THE SON OF MAN, THAT THOU ART CONCERNED ABOUT HIM? THOU HAST MADE HIM FOR A LITTLE WHILE LOWER THAN THE ANGELS; THOU HAST CROWNED HIM WITH GLORY AND HONOR,

AND HAST APPOINTED HIM OVER THE WORKS OF THY HANDS; THOU HAST PUT ALL THINGS IN SUBJECTION UNDER HIS FEET.’ For in subjecting all things to him, He left nothing that is not subject to him. But now we do not yet see all things subjected to him” (Heb. 2:5–8). “...an actual, real restoration of the dominion forfeited, through the Messiah, and not some other dominion in the third heaven or universe substituted in its place. The forfeiture and the restoration must, logically and Scripturally, refer to the same” (Peters, TTK, 1:573). “...a reign in the third heaven... religious literature is full of such erroneous conclusions” (ibid.). “Man, during the past ages, has sought to recover this dominion unaided and through his own power, and the Word represents it as a struggling of ‘beasts’ [i.e. in Daniel and Revelation—ed.] for sovereignty, resulting in a mutual rending and destruction” (ibid., p. 574). “Writers abundantly admit that this dominion would have been witnessed here on earth if Adam had not fallen, but somehow they overlook the fact, that as the Redeemer is given to recover us from all the effects of the fall, it must, under the auspices of the restoring Second Adam, again be witnessed on earth when Redemption is completed” (ibid., p. 575). “...when the Theocracy is restored under a people and power capable of sustaining it” (ibid., 2:453). “It was God’s intent from the beginning of the creation of man that the earth should be ruled over by man. Adam sacrificed his right to rule when sin entered the human race. God’s purpose, however, is fulfilled in Jesus Christ” (Walvoord, MK, p. 301). “‘You made him ruler over the works of Your hands.’ [Ps. 8:4–8, Heb. 2:5–8]... But this same writer knew he must also make the observation, ‘Yet at present we do not see everything subject to him.’ The earth and everything in it is not in subjection to man, nor by implication, in subjection to God Himself. This means God’s purpose for Creation has not yet been realized, and that the kingdom of the God of heaven has not yet been established on this earth as God intended it should be. However, even though that kingdom has not yet been realized, God’s purpose for the earth must come to its designated fulfillment. Otherwise Satan will have gained a permanent victory by dispossessing God of His authority, of His right to rule, and of His right to be worshiped” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 34). “God’s purpose for this earth is to subject all things to man (Gen. 1:26–27) and to bring all things into subjection to Himself through man. This ultimately will be realized as the Son of Man subjects all things to Himself and through Him to the authority of His Father” (ibid., p. 316).

The Kingdom is needed to govern the world perfectly. “When the righteous are increased, the people rejoice; But when a wicked man beareth rule, the people sigh” (Prov. 29:2). “For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of Jehovah of hosts will perform this” (Isa. 9:6–7). “And the seventh angel sounded; and there arose loud voices in heaven, saying, ‘The kingdom of the world has become the kingdom of our Lord, and of His Christ; and He will reign forever and ever’” (Rev. 11:15). “...the kingdom... its very design, which is the salvation of the race in bringing to it the government, etc., that it needs” (Peters, TTK, 2:535). “If the Kingdom of the Son of Man, as covenanted, is not established, then the earth will lack in its history the exhibition of a perfect government” (ibid., 3:548). “The reign of this Son of Man strictly in accordance with the covenant, and the union of the saints with Him in such a rule, will alone satisfy the cravings of humanity for a strong and most blessed government, which shall break down forever the opposing, clashing interests of nations, dispel their jealousies, and unite them, freed from evils, under one common, visible, and accessible Head. Then humanity, both in Christ and His saints, exalted and placed beyond the evils inherent in the present life, still sympathetic and desirous to bless, will proceed to the work of elevating man, not merely in his individual, but likewise in his social, national, and universal life” (ibid., p. 549). “How unreasonable it is to suppose, that he who made the world, should leave things in such confusion, and never take any care of the governing of his creatures, and that he should never judge his reasonable creatures” [quoting Jonathan Edwards, The Works of Jonathan Edwards, 2.884] (Geisler, ST, 4:356). We’ll have more to say on the governmental aspects of the Kingdom in our chapters The Second Coming of the King and The Millennial Kingdom.

The Kingdom is needed to bless and elevate mankind to an unprecedented extent. “While the view of restitution, embracing the restoration of the Theocracy and the return to the condition of things before the fall of Adam; is consoling and grand, yet even this would limit its meaning, for a more sublime and scriptural aspect of it is, that, while including those mentioned, it is a restoration to that very condition which Adam and his descendants would have attained to had they not fallen... blessings previously enjoyed, but that of others superadded to qualify those participating in it for the exercise of that government which the number, state, etc., of Adam’s descendants and God's purpose in creation makes important or even necessary. Hence in some of its aspects, transcending all experience and knowledge, it may be beyond our comprehension; at least, the Bible intimates in a number of places that it is scarcely possible for us now, situated as we are, to form adequate conceptions of its extent and glory" (Peters, TTK, 2:467). "When this Theocracy is realized we shall receive far higher blessings than we even forfeited at the fall" (ibid., 3:600).

The Kingdom is needed to accomplish God's original purpose in creating man. "Now let the reader consider: 1. What would this earth have become if Adam had not fallen? The answer, as given by Scripture and repeated in various theological systems, is this: it would have had no curse entailed, bringing in its train unfruitfulness, evils, sorrow, and death. It would have had the world under a Theocratic ordering, by which man would have been elevated and blessed, having direct nearness to his beneficent Ruler, etc. 2. Now look at the Millennial blessings enumerated, to be realized here on earth during the Messianic reign in the restored Theocratic Kingdom, and is there a single blessing that we can conceive of as intended for man unfallen, and which was forfeited by sin, that is not mentioned to be then realized? If the Millennium embraces 'Redemption,' 'Salvation,' and the Messiah is One that can perform His work perfectly, this is precisely the condition that we ought reasonably to anticipate. The very fact that the Millennium itself contains such inestimable blessings, honor, and glory, such a revelation of Divine majesty and goodness, such an ample deliverance from all evil and even death, such a restoration to God's favor and nearness in Theocratic ordering, is sufficient evidence that our doctrinal position is impregnable. The unity of the Word, running from the fall to the Sec. Advent, demands, prompted by covenants and promise, impelled by the plain grammatical and God-given sense, this belief, so dear to the hearts of the martyrs of the early Church" (Peters, TTK, 2:150). "...if the earth is destroyed, as many hold, soon after that Advent, there is no place for the fulfillment of covenant or covenant promises. More than this: it gives, so far as this earth is concerned, the victory to Satan; for, if the curse is not repealed; if evil is not extirpated; if the forfeited blessings are not restored; if man's long lost home is not given back to him in its Edenic loveliness; if the race is not brought back to its original condition and dwelling in a purified earth, then Satan triumphs in the ruin accomplished, just as he would triumph if the grave should evermore hold our bodies in confinement; just as he would gain the victory if our hearts would never more exultantly swell with love supreme to God" (ibid., p. 433). "The command of God given to Adam and Eve before the fall to fill the earth with a holy progeny, but sadly marred by the corruption entailed by sin, will yet be fulfilled in their descendants, since His Divine pleasure respecting the real status of the race is evidenced in the injunction, and his Divine purpose, thus indicated, cannot be frustrated by man's fall. The interrupted design of making the race itself holy God will yet carry out, and not leave Satan glory in a defeat" (ibid., p. 535). "One of the forfeited blessings, viz., the perpetuation of the race in a state of innocence, cannot possibly be carried out without such a restoration embracing also blessings to Gentile nations, to creation, etc." (ibid., 3:369). "we have man and the earth restored to the goal originally intended" (ibid., p. 555). "In spite of man's failure, God will accomplish His purpose in creating man" (Pentecost, TKC, p. 48).

In Relation to Creation

In relation to creation, the Kingdom is needed to restore creation and to make the world worth having been created.

The Kingdom is needed to restore harmony between God and creation. "Now the kingdom being designed to restore and manifest the original concord once existing between the natural and supernatural, the Bible closes with that kingdom in such accordance" (Peters, TTK, 1:80).

The Kingdom is needed to restore God's blessing on creation, this blessing entailing the removal of the curse. "And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in toil shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life" (Gen. 3:17) "For the creation was subjected to futility, not of its own will, but because of Him who subjected it, in hope that the creation itself also will be set free from its slavery to corruption into the freedom of the glory of the children of God" (Rom. 8:20–21). "And there shall no longer be any curse; and the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it, and His bond-servants shall serve Him" (Rev. 22:3) "The kingdom—the end—is designed to remove the curse from man and nature, and to impart the most extraordinary blessings to renewed man and nature" (Peters, TTK, 1:90) "Briefly, this world is under a curse—evil abounds with the good—it forms one vast cemetery with its crushed hopes, blasted life, dust-returned bodies, etc., and all this goes on under natural law instituted by God. The world needs restoration, and the Bible starts with this idea, a fallen world needing Redemption, and it ends with a fallen world Redeemed. The kingdom of God is designed to secure this deliverance, but to do this it must necessarily embrace a Supernatural interference, as predicted. It was God that entailed the curse, set its limits, enforced it by natural law, and it must be God again who removes the same; but when He does this we are told that He breaks down the barriers set up by Himself through natural law” (ibid., p. 95). “The natural man feels the sad pressure of the curse and looks around for redemption, and as he cannot have hope in nature, he grasps after the supernatural... The truth is, that there are times when all men feel the necessity of Divine interposition in behalf of the race” (ibid., 2:156). “Through Him [Christ], and subordinately through His associates (deriving their power from Him), this most blessed removal of the curse will at last be experienced” (ibid., p. 157). “The ‘no more curse,’ as all inspired men unitedly agree, refers to this earth, and to man upon it; and hence the singular beauty and consistency of the Bible beginning with the curse and forfeited blessings and ending with happy restitution” (ibid.). “...a curse, a bondage which man, with all the resources of nature, religion, etc., is utterly unable to remove... even the most pious and devoted servants of God experience, with tears and sorrow, its continued and prevailing force” (ibid., p. 493). “...the gradual removal of the curse from the earth” (ibid., 3:600) We’ll have more to say on the restoration of God’s blessing on creation in our chapter The Millennial Kingdom.

The Kingdom is needed to restore the earth and nature. “For the creation was subjected to futility, not of its own will, but because of Him who subjected it, in hope that the creation itself also will be set free from its slavery to corruption into the freedom of the glory of the children of God” (Rom. 8:20–21). “No system of Theology is completed, without, in one form or another, advocating a final restoration of nature” (Peters, TTK, 2:480). “If for man’s sake alone the earth was cursed, it cannot surprise us that it should share in his recovery” (ibid.). “...whether Paul’s declaration and the Mill. prophecies, etc., include the deliverance of the animal kingdom. This, as is well known, was the position of the early Church, as is evidenced by their writings, especially Tertullian, Lactantius, and the earlier Fathers Papias, Barnabas, and Justin” (ibid., p. 483). “If the Ark is to be taken as a type of Christ (which many theologians allow and assert), then as the animals were taken in it and preserved (as well as man), so likewise, in reference to perpetuity, will animals find deliverance through Christ, for otherwise the typical nature is not carried to its related extent in the anti-type” (ibid., p. 487). “A substitution of something else is not Paradise restored. Hence the Bible begins with an earthly Paradise lost, and ends with the same restored with added blessings” (ibid., 3:61). “In this reign we have the earthly brought up to the level of the heavenly, so that God’s will is done on earth as in heaven, and the world, redeemed from the torturing power of the curse, exults in more than Paradisaical blessings” (ibid., p.

555). We'll have more to say regarding the restoration of earth and nature in our chapter The Millennial Kingdom.

The Kingdom is needed to restore all that Adam forfeited. “It is eminently proper and requisite that in the person of Christ, through whom the race is to be redeemed, should be shown, as that Second Adam, the complete restoration of all that the first Adam forfeited; among others, including the restoration and retention of the forfeited inheritance (which led to those covenant promises that Christ should inherit the land, etc.), the restoration and retention of the dominion or kingly power, which was forfeited as well as moral rectitude, the immortality of man, and the perpetuation of the race in a state of innocency and purity” (Peters, TTK, 2:348). “We are sinners, the Plan makes us holy; we lose our bodies by death, the Plan recovers them again; we lost Eden, the Plan restores it again; we lost the personal Presence of God, this Plan recovers that soul-satisfying Presence when God again dwells with man; we lost the contemplated visible Theocratic rule of God, this Plan makes, in the sacred Person of Jesus Christ, the most ample amends in filling the earth with His sovereignty, etc. Thus, in brief, every blessing with the removal of every evil, is linked with the culmination of this Divine Plan” (ibid., p. 434). “In this dispensation, whatever the love and grace of God in the hearts of believers, etc., it cannot remove the curse, renovate the earth, or restore a single forfeited blessing; it cannot save from pain, sickness, or death, from trial, sorrow, or bereavements; it cannot deliver self or our neighbor from the troubles incident and allotted to the present life” (ibid., p. 468).

The Kingdom is needed to make the world worth having been created. “That evil existed in the foreknowledge of God is proved by those Scriptures which indicate that redemption was eternally in the mind and purpose of God, and none more forcibly than Revelation 13:8 wherein it is published that Christ was the Lamb slain from the foundation of the cosmos. Whenever the cosmos had its inception—even in the form of a divine anticipation—a redeeming Lamb was a major feature of the divine intention. May it not be better said that, apart from the achievements of the redeeming Lamb, no cosmos would have been permitted? Is it not true that this universe, so vast indeed, is redempto-centric” (Chafer, ST, 2:237)?

In Relation to All Created Beings

In relation to all created beings, the Kingdom is needed to demonstrate to everyone that sin is always wrong, (In our chapter A Final Rebellion, we'll review all seven dispensations and demonstrate from human history that at all times and in every conceivable way, sin is always wrong and that at all times man apart from God is a failure.) that man, apart from God, even in a perfect environment is a failure, “The complete immobilization of Satan for a thousand years, therefore, will lay the basis for God’s final argument against the popular doctrine of the inherent goodness of man when placed in the right kind of environment” (McClain, GK, p. 483). that God is always right, “By the establishment of the theocracy on earth for a thousand years, under the Messianic theocratic King, God has accomplished His purpose of demonstrating His rule in the sphere in which that authority was first challenged. By merging this earthly theocracy with the eternal kingdom God’s eternal sovereignty is established. Such was the purpose of God in planning the theocratic kingdom and developing it through successive stages throughout history until it reaches the climax of the program in the theocracy under the enthroned Christ in the millennium. That authority, which Satan first challenged, Christ has now demonstrated belongs solely to God. God’s right to rule is eternally vindicated” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 494). and that God is the rightful ruler of the world. “...a few thousand years’ experience showing that without God’s personal government, the race cannot be happy” (Peters, TTK, p. 106)

In Relation to God

In relation to God, the Kingdom will serve to glorify God. “Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee: The residue of wrath shalt thou gird upon thee” (Ps. 76:10). “Even His permission of evil will, like the wrath of man, be made to praise Him (Ps 76:10)” (Chafer, ST, 1:229). “God is spirit, and those who worship Him must worship in spirit and truth” (John 4:24). “For from Him and through Him and to Him are all things. To Him be the glory forever. Amen” (Rom. 11:36). “Whether, then, you eat or drink or whatever you do, do all to the glory of God” (1 Cor. 10:31). “to Him be the glory in the church and in Christ Jesus to all generations forever and ever. Amen” (Eph. 3:21). “The Lord will deliver me from every evil deed, and will bring me safely to His heavenly kingdom; to Him be the glory forever and ever. Amen” (2 Tim. 4:18). “Whoever speaks, let him speak, as it were, the utterances of God; whoever serves, let him do so as by the strength which God supplies; so that in all things God may be glorified through Jesus Christ, to whom belongs the glory and dominion forever and ever. Amen” (1 Pet. 4:11). “and He has made us to be a kingdom, priests to His God and Father; to Him be the glory and the dominion forever and ever. Amen” (Rev. 1:6). “And when He had taken the book, the four living creatures and the twenty-four elders fell down before the Lamb, having each one a harp, and golden bowls full of incense, which are the prayers of the saints. And they sang a new song, saying, ‘Worthy art Thou to take the book, and to break its seals; for Thou wast slain, and didst purchase for God with Thy blood men from every tribe and tongue and people and nation. And Thou hast made them to be a kingdom and priests to our God; and they will reign upon the earth.’ And I looked, and I heard the voice of many angels around the throne and the living creatures and the elders; and the number of them was myriads of myriads, and thousands of thousands, saying with a loud voice, ‘Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power and riches and wisdom and might and honor and glory and blessing.’ And every created thing which is in heaven and on the earth and under the earth and on the sea, and all things in them, I heard saying, ‘To Him who sits on the throne, and to the Lamb, be blessing and honor and glory and dominion forever and ever.’ And the four living creatures kept saying, ‘Amen.’ And the elders fell down and worshiped” (Rev. 5:8–14). “God has chosen his great end, the manifestation of his own glory, but in order to that end he has chosen innumerable subordinate ends” [quoting Dr. A. A. Hodge, Outlines of Theology, p. 262] (Chafer, ST, 1:255). “No redemption is in view which merely rescues for their own sake unfortunate beings fallen in sin. If that were all, the reason for their fall would be difficult to conceive. Their redemption is for His sake” (ibid., 2:237). “The chief end of man, we are told, is to glorify God. This every created being will do, for God has created no being who will not contribute to His eternal glory. Each and every one will either demonstrate His grace in all its perfections (Eph 2:7 [in order that in the ages to come He might show the surpassing riches of His grace in kindness toward us in Christ Jesus.’]), or display His wrath (Rom 9:22 [‘What if God, although willing to demonstrate His wrath and to make His power known, endured with much patience vessels of wrath prepared for destruction?’]) in all the ages to come” (ibid., p. 278). “To satisfy the love of God is a greater achievement than to bring measureless blessing to men. Thus the supreme objective in the death of Christ is discovered. Because of infinite love for lost men, the gratification of that holy desire to redeem—which is common to all three Persons of the blessed Trinity—constitutes the supreme reason for the divine sacrifice” (ibid., p. 319). “The highest divine motive in the salvation of men is that in the ages to come the grace of God may be demonstrated before all created beings. Were that salvation to incorporate any fraction of human merit, it would by so much be imperfect as a demonstration of God's grace" (ibid., p. 321). "The glory of God is [the kingdom of God's] chief and sole object. Christ's work in which He seeks only to glorify His Father is complete when God is glorified. This is the aim and purpose of the kingdom of God" [quoting Charles Feinberg, Premillennialism and Amillennialism, pp. 163-64] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 434). "In answer to the question 'What do you give to the person who has everything?' the most appropriate response is 'Admiration!' What can we give to the God who has everything? Worship! This is all we can give Him, and this is all He wants (John 4:24)" (Geisler, ST, 2:114). "The purpose of all creation is to bring glory to God" (ibid., 4:52). "Everything, including the church, is ordained for the glory of God" (ibid., p. 53). "Ultimately, everything is for God's glory (1 Cor. 10:31; cf. Ps. 76:10), and, as with New Testament believers, God's plan for Israel was to bring glory to Himself" (ibid., p. 537).

Chapter 9: Conscience, Government and Promise

In chapter six, God and Creation, we saw that the very first age or dispensation in mankind's history, the age of Innocence, began with a covenant or agreement between God and man, the Edenic Covenant. In this chapter we'll see that the next three clearly delineated ages or dispensations in human history, the ages of Conscience, [the institution of human] Government, and Promise were also introduced with dispensation-delineating covenants between God and men: the Adamic, Noahic and Abrahamic Covenants, respectively. These three covenants and their subsequent dispensations are the subject of this chapter.

The Age of Conscience

Upon Adam's breaking the Edenic Covenant, God inaugurated a new era in human history, the age of Conscience, via the Adamic Covenant.

Covenant #2: The Adamic Covenant

The Adamic Covenant is the second of the eight covenants that God made with mankind. It articulated God's immediate curses on Satan, man and the earth, but also promised eventual deliverance from these curses via "the seed of the woman." It is recorded in Genesis 3:14-19: "And Jehovah God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, cursed art thou above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life: and I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: he shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel. Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy pain and thy conception; in pain thou shalt bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee. And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in toil shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return" (Gen. 3:14-19).

Regarding the Adamic Covenant's provisions concerning Satan, there would be hatred between Satan and the woman culminating in the hatred between Satan's seed (Antichrist) and the woman's seed (Christ), the serpent would bruise the woman's seed's heel, and the woman's seed would crush Satan's head. Dr. Fruchtenbaum explains, "Four provisions are given in relationship to Satan. First: there would be perpetual hatred between Satan and the woman. Second: this hatred was to culminate between Satan's seed, the Antichrist, and the woman's Seed, the Messiah. Third: the serpent would bruise the heel of the woman's Seed; this happened at the Crucifixion. Fourth: this first prophecy of the Lord's victory over Satan goes on to say that the woman's Seed will crush Satan's head; this occurred initially with the Resurrection (Heb. 2:14-15 [Since then the children share in flesh and blood, He Himself likewise also partook of the same, that through death He might render powerless him who had the power of death, that is, the devil; and might deliver those who through fear of death were subject to slavery all their lives.]). But the final crushing of Satan was still future when Paul wrote Romans 16:20 [And the God of peace will soon crush Satan under your feet. The grace of our Lord Jesus be with you.]; it will come when Satan is cast into the Lake of fire (Rev. 20:10 [And the devil who deceived them was thrown into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are also; and they will be tormented day and night forever and ever.])" (Fruchtenbaum, EC, p. 10).

Regarding the Adamic Covenant's provisions concerning man, Adam's sin affected the entire human race, the earth was cursed, human diet was to remain vegetarian, work was to be toilsome, and man would die physically. Dr. Fruchtenbaum continues, "Adam and all men and the entire human race were subjected to five provisions in Genesis 3:17-19. First: since Adam stands as the representative head of the human race, the judgment on Adam is the judgment on the whole human race. It is Adam, not Eve, who is held responsible for the human condition. Second: the earth was cursed. Working was not something new with the Adamic Covenant, it had already been provided for in the Edenic Covenant. The difference was in the earth's response. Under the Edenic Covenant, the earth was to respond readily to man's working and tilling. But now the earth would not respond so easily; there would be thorns, thistles, and weeds. Third: human diet continues to be vegetarian as it was under the Edenic Covenant; it is not clear if the same was true for the animal kingdom. Animals were used for dairy products, wool for clothing, and sacrifices, but not for eating. Fourth: man's work was to be characterized by hard labor. Working conditions under the Edenic Covenant were easy, simple, and enjoyable. Now, sweat was to characterize the work of man and labor was hard and toilsome. Fifth: physical death was introduced. Whereas under the Edenic Covenant man died spiritually, under the Adamic Covenant man would ultimately die physically (Rom. 5:12-21). Thus far there have only been two exceptions to this rule: Enoch and Elijah. There will be others in the future at the time of the Rapture” (Fruchtenbaum, EC, p. 11).

So, in Genesis 3:15, the very first prophecy in the Bible, the future Mediatorial Kingdom is promised. In the meantime, two kingdoms would now develop side by side on earth: the [Spiritual] Kingdom of God and the rebel kingdom of Satan. The synoptic gospels illustrate the conflict between these two kingdoms: “He presented another parable to them, saying, ‘The kingdom of heaven may be compared to a man who sowed good seed in his field. But while men were sleeping, his enemy came and sowed tares also among the wheat, and went away. But when the wheat sprang up and bore grain, then the tares became evident also. And the slaves of the landowner came and said to him, ‘Sir, did you not sow good seed in your field? How then does it have tares?’ And he said to them, ‘An enemy has done this!’ And the slaves said to him, ‘Do you want us, then, to go and gather them up?’ But he said, ‘No; lest while you are gathering up the tares, you may root up the wheat with them. Allow both to grow together until the harvest; and in the time of the harvest I will say to the reapers, ‘First gather up the tares and bind them in bundles to burn them up; but gather the wheat into my barn’”” (Matt. 13:24–30). “And He was casting out a demon, and it was dumb; and it came about that when the demon had gone out, the dumb man spoke; and the multitudes marveled. But some of them said, ‘He casts out demons by Beelzebul, the ruler of the demons.’ And others, to test Him, were demanding of Him a sign from heaven. But He knew their thoughts, and said to them, ‘Any kingdom divided against itself is laid waste; and a house divided against itself falls. And if Satan also is divided against himself, how shall his kingdom stand? For you say that I cast out demons by Beelzebul. And if I by Beelzebul cast out demons, by whom do your sons cast them out? Consequently they shall be your judges. But if I cast out demons by the finger of God, then the kingdom of God has come upon you. When a strong man, fully armed, guards his own homestead, his possessions are undisturbed; but when someone stronger than he attacks him and overpowers him, he takes away from him all his armor on which he had relied, and distributes his plunder. He who is not with Me is against Me; and he who does not gather with Me, scatters” (Luke 11:14–23). Dr. Pentecost concurs, “As a result of this [Adam’s] sin, two kingdoms would develop side by side in this earthly realm. A recurring theme in the Scriptures, then, shows God developing His kingdom of heaven on earth, and Satan propagating his kingdom of lawlessness and darkness in the same realm” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 37).

Mankind’s History From Eden to the Flood

A few select passages will summarize mankind’s history from Eden to the Flood: “And Jehovah God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, cursed art thou above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life: and I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: he shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel. Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy pain and thy conception; in pain thou shalt bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee. And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in toil shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return. And the man called his wife’s name Eve; because she was the mother of all living. And Jehovah God made for Adam and for his wife coats of skins, and clothed them. And Jehovah God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil; and now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live for ever: therefore Jehovah God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken. So he drove out the man; and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden the Cherubim, and the flame of a sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life” (Gen. 3:14-24). “And Jehovah said unto Cain, Why art thou wroth? and why is thy countenance fallen? If thou doest well, shall it not be lifted up? and if thou doest not well, sin coucheth at the door: and unto thee shall be its desire, but do thou rule over it” (Gen. 4:6-7). “and he called his name Noah, saying, This same shall comfort us in our work and in the toil of our hands, which cometh because of the ground which Jehovah hath cursed” (Gen. 5:29). “And Jehovah said, My spirit shall not strive with man for ever, for that he also is flesh: yet shall his days be a hundred and twenty years” (Gen. 6:3). “And Jehovah saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually”

(Gen. 6:5). “And the earth was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence” (Gen. 6:11).

Dr. McClain recounts this period of history, “The sin of Adam and the loss of his proper dominion not only set the stage for the brutal murder of Abel but also left the race without any external divinely mediated controls. And God, for a time, determined to leave the situation so. Only twice in the long period from Eden to the Flood is there any record of divine intervention in human affairs. In the one, Enoch was translated from the earth to be forever in the presence of God (Gen. 5:24 [and Enoch walked with God: and he was not; for God took him.]). In the other, Cain was shut out of the ‘presence of the LORD’ as manifested upon the earth (Gen. 4:14, 16 [Behold, thou hast driven me out this day from the face of the ground; and from thy face shall I be hid; and I shall be a fugitive and a wanderer in the earth... And Cain went out from the presence of Jehovah, and dwelt in the land of Nod, on the east of Eden.]”) (McClain, GK, p. 44). “The rather brief record of this era seems to indicate a condition of individual and irresponsible lawlessness so far as any external restraints were concerned. For example, in the case of Cain, strangely enough, instead of leaving this fratricidal killer to the ancient lex talionis of a life for a life, God actually protected him from being brought before the bar of any possible human judgment or punishment. And although the Cainite civilization, with its building of a city and development of the arts and crafts, must have led to some degree of voluntary social organization, nevertheless the arrogant and boastful poem of Lamech, probably composed to celebrate the successful outcome of a personal vendetta, suggests a period in history when men largely followed their own violent impulses without any fear of immediate judicial retribution (Gen. 4:19-24 [And Lamech took unto him two wives... And Lamech said unto his wives: Adah and Zillah, hear my voice; Ye wives of Lamech, hearken unto my speech: For I have slain a man for wounding me, And a young man for bruising me: If Cain shall be avenged sevenfold, Truly Lamech seventy and sevenfold.]). The period ends, as we might expect, with almost total moral corruption and the earth ‘filled with violence’ (Gen. 6:11 [And the earth was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence.])” (ibid.). “The words of Genesis 6:3 imply that whatever the restraint upon human conduct may have been during this period, it was inward rather than external in nature. ‘My spirit shall not always strive with man,’ God says, in pronouncing His verdict upon the entire age. The verb here means to ‘rule’ or ‘sit in judgment,’ and this judgment must have been spiritual and moral. Certainly, considering the utter wickedness of that antediluvian world, we cannot think of God's Spirit dwelling within or upon men in any New Testament sense. Some have suggested that the Spirit was striving with these ungodly men through the faithful preaching of Noah; and this may have been true in a limited degree. It would be more in accord with the historical context, however, to regard this work of the Spirit as something wrought through man's moral nature or conscience, that inward voice which had been implanted within him by original creation (Rom. 2:14, 15 [For when Gentiles who do not have the Law do instinctively the things of the Law, these, not having the Law, are a law to themselves, in that they show the work of the Law written in their hearts, their conscience bearing witness, and their thoughts alternately accusing or else defending them]). This is the sole avenue of sinful man's immediate contact with his Creator. The conscience may indeed be disobeyed, quenched, wrongly educated, or even seared as with a hot iron; but it remains the voice of God in the soul, telling men that they ought to do right and not do wrong" (ibid., p. 45). "It is not without some justification, therefore, that by some the period before the Flood has been named the 'Age of Conscience.' Not that the rule of conscience began and ended with this particular era of human history; but that throughout the period, conscience stood alone as the method of the divine Spirit in judging and restraining the actions of wicked men. The ultimatum of God, 'My spirit shall not always strive with man,' did not forecast any end of the judging function of conscience, but rather an end of man's probation under its rule as an exclusive method of divine restraint. The divine warning is certainly clear: yet 'an hundred and twenty years' and judgment will fall; this time not merely the inner judgment of the Spirit's voice in the conscience of man, but a judgment which would be external, visible and supernatural, putting an end to that generation of men which had rejected the moral sovereignty of God (Gen. 6:3-13 [And Jehovah said, My spirit shall not strive with man for ever, for that he also is flesh: yet shall his days be a hundred and twenty years. The Nephilim were in the earth in those days, and also after that, when the sons of God came unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them: the same were the mighty men that were of old, the men of renown. And Jehovah saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. And it repented Jehovah that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart. And Jehovah said, I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the ground; both man, and beast, and creeping things, and birds of the heavens; for it repenteth me that I have made them. But Noah found favor in the eyes of Jehovah. These are the generations of Noah. Noah was a righteous man, and perfect in his generations: Noah walked with God. And Noah begat three sons, Shem, Ham, and Japheth. And the earth was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence. And God saw the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted their way upon the earth. And God said unto Noah, The end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence through them; and, behold, I will destroy them with the earth.]. The complete failure of mankind under this test should be a sufficient answer to the notion that sinful man needs on earth a kingdom of God which is only spiritual and moral in nature” (ibid.).

Dr. Pentecost summarizes, “After the Fall, God placed man under the law of conscience. In submitting themselves to the law men were submitting themselves to God and showing themselves to be in the kingdom of the God of heaven. The false kingdom of Satan soon manifested itself in the activities of Cain, who became the progenitor of many who were in Satan’s kingdom. God demonstrated His right to rule by bringing about a catastrophic judgment on all who were in the kingdom of Satan, and began a new form of theocratic administration through Noah” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 45). “God’s kingdom through conscience... men were total failures under this form of theocratic administration” (ibid., p. 46) “...as men subjected themselves to the rule of conscience, they were in subjection to the authority of God” (ibid., p. 292).

The Age (Institution) of Human Government

After the age of Conscience was brought to an end by the Flood, God authorized, via the Noahic Covenant, the State to punish sin, thereby inaugurating the age of Human Government. Dr. Pentecost summarizes, “God entrusted theocratic administration to appointed administrators in the political realm, who were responsible to enforce law and punish lawless men and so curb the development of the kingdom of darkness. However, men rebelled against this form of administration, the administrators failed to discharge their responsibilities, and lawlessness reigned. God responded to this rebellion by scattering men abroad so they were no longer united in their rebellion against Him. He then instituted a new form of theocratic administration” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 50). “Obviously a governmental authority is not a minister of the Gospel; he is, however, an administrator of the theocracy in that portion of the kingdom to which he has been assigned” (ibid., p. 294).

Covenant #3: The Noahic Covenant

The Noahic Covenant is the third of the eight covenants that God made with mankind. Among other provisions, it gave human government authority to punish serious sin. The Noahic Covenant is recorded in Genesis 9:1-17: “And God blessed Noah and his sons, and said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth. And the fear of you and the dread of you shall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon every bird of the heavens. With all wherewith the ground teemeth, and all the fishes of the sea, into your hand are they delivered. Every moving thing that liveth shall be food for you. As the green herb have I given you all. But flesh with the life thereof, which is the blood thereof, shall ye not eat. And surely your blood, the blood of your lives, will I require. At the hand of every beast will I require it. And at the hand of man, even at the hand of every man’s brother, will I require the life of man. Whoso sheddeth man’s blood, by man shall his blood be shed. For in the image of God made he man. And you, be ye fruitful, and multiply. Bring forth abundantly in the earth, and multiply therein. And God spake unto Noah, and to his sons with him, saying, And I, behold, I establish my covenant with you, and with your seed after you. And with every living creature that is with you, the birds, the cattle, and every beast of the earth with you. Of all that go out of the ark, even every beast of the earth. And I will establish my covenant with you. Neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of the flood. Neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the earth. And God said, This is the token of the covenant which I make between me and you and every living creature that is with you, for perpetual generations. I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth. And it shall come to pass, when I bring a cloud over the earth, that the bow shall be seen in the cloud, And I will remember my covenant, which is between me and you and every living creature of all flesh. And the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh. And the bow shall be in the cloud. And I will look upon it, that I may remember the everlasting covenant between God and every living creature of all flesh that is upon the earth. And God said unto Noah, This is the token of the covenant which I have established between me and all flesh that is upon the earth” (Gen. 9:1-17). Dr. Fruchtenbaum explains, “The provisions of the covenant: First: man was to repopulate the earth (vv. 1, 7). With the exception of eight people, the entire human race was destroyed by the Flood. Man had vastly increased in numbers, but the wickedness of man was great in the earth (Gen.

6:5).. Thus God brought universal judgment upon the earth. After the Flood, the earth was essentially empty again. Only eight people remained to re-populate the the entire earth. Just as with the Edenic Covenant, man was again commissioned to repopulate the earth, but the command to subdue the earth is not repeated. With man's fall, he lost his authority and Satan usurped it. Thus Satan is the prince of this world (Jh. 12:31) and the god of this world (II Cor. 4:4). Satan has authority over all the kingdoms of this world and can offer them to whomsoever he will (Lk. 4:6). He made that offer to the Seed of the woman, Yeshua (Jesus), who turned it down. He will offer it some day to the seed of Satan, the Antichrist, who will accept it (Rev. 13:1-3)" (Fruchtenbaum, EC, p. 12). "God's promise that humanity will not be destroyed by a flood again should come to remembrance every time a rainbow is seen" (ibid., p. 13). "The unconditional Noahic Covenant is still very much in effect" (ibid.). That the State still has authority to punish wrongdoing is stated in Romans 13:1-6: "Let every person be in subjection to the governing authorities. For there is no authority except from God, and those which exist are established by God. Therefore he who resists authority has opposed the ordinance of God; and they who have opposed will receive condemnation upon themselves. For rulers are not a cause of fear for good behavior, but for evil. Do you want to have no fear of authority? Do what is good, and you will have praise from the same; for it is a minister of God to you for good. But if you do what is evil, be afraid; for it does not bear the sword for nothing; for it is a minister of God, an avenger who brings wrath upon the one who practices evil. Wherefore it is necessary to be in subjection, not only because of wrath, but also for conscience' sake. For because of this you also pay taxes, for rulers are servants of God, devoting themselves to this very thing" (Rom. 13:1-6).

Mankind's History From the Flood to Babel

Dr. McClain explains the Noahic Covenant and summarizes mankind's history from the Flood to Babel: "Following the judgment of the Flood, two events took place which were of great importance in the divine government in relation to the human race. The first of these was a promise on the part of God to the effect that, although recognizing the continuance of man's evil nature and propensities, He never again would smite 'every living thing' (Gen. 9:11). And as a solemn pledge that the covenant thus made would be kept, the 'bow in the cloud' was made a token between God and man (Gen. 9:12-17)" (McClain, GK, p. 46). "The second important event was the divine authorization for the institution of human government. Such authorization was a logical sequence of the covenant which God had made with Noah and his family. Since in this covenant God had promised not again to destroy the sinful race by a watery judgment, thereby taking away man's fear of a repetition of such judgment, it became necessary to set up some other form of control upon the lawless impulses of men. It was for this purpose that human government was instituted by divine decree" (ibid.). "Here again the Genesis record is very brief, but the decree laid down very simply and clearly the basic principle of all human law and government: 'Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed; for in the image of God made he man' (Gen. 9:6). In this historic text several things should be noted: First, the decree recognizes that fallen man at his best, here exemplified by righteous Noah and his family, still has within his heart unmeasured potentialities for evil which must be curbed. Second, these evil inclinations are now to be restrained by the fear of governmental punishment; and in the case of murder the punishment would be capital. Third, the penalty upon evildoers would be inflicted by 'man' in the collective or governmental sense; not according to the principle of personal vengeance, as some have supposed. Fourth, the moral justification for the institution of human government, and also its power of capital punishment, is based squarely upon the very argument often used against the latter, namely, the sacredness of human life in God's sight— 'for in the image of God made he man'" (ibid.). "What we call civil or organized government, whether simple or highly complex, exists for only one reason—the protection, conservation, fostering, and improvement of human life. Genesis 9:6, therefore, becomes one of the most important landmarks in all of human history, for here God not only decrees the beginning of human government in a sinful world but also lays down the moral and social foundation of all such government. As Luther has well said of the text, 'This was the first command having reference to the temporal sword. By these words temporal government was established, and the sword placed in its hand by God'" (ibid.). "What we have here, then, is something wholly new upon earth; an institution by which God will now mediate His government over the nations through human rulers who, whether they acknowledge Him or not, are nevertheless 'ordained of God' as 'ministers' of His; and therefore will be held responsible before God for the manner in which they discharge their duties 'for good' to mankind in general and to 'execute wrath' upon those who do evil (Rom. 13:1-6)" (ibid., p. 47). Dr. Pentecost adds, "Since God's kingdom is to be characterized by righteousness and peace, it must be seen that human government was given authority by God to provide an atmosphere in which righteous men may live in peace without fear" (Pentecost, TKC, p.

47). “Men failed under the administration of human government as they failed under the administration of conscience” (ibid., p. 49).

The Confusion of Languages at Babel

At Babel, God confused the languages of the people, in order to scatter them throughout the earth. “Therefore was the name of it called Babel. Because Jehovah did there confound the language of all the earth. And from thence did Jehovah scatter them abroad upon the face of all the earth” (Gen. 11:9). Dr. McClain explains, “Following the institution of human government, therefore, it should not be surprising to find next in the order of the Genesis account what has been called ‘The Table of Nations’ in chapter 10. In this remarkable document from the past we are given a glimpse of the birth of nations, the building of cities, and the founding of empires—all of which implies the existence and development of social and governmental organization. The story of the Tower of Babel with its confusion of tongues, which follows in chapter 11, seems to have been introduced at this particular point in the record for the purpose of explaining the existence and wide dispersal of the nations named in the previous chapter” (McClain, GK, p. 47). “The implications of the Babel story point to the plurality of nations, in opposition to any central world government, as something definitely in harmony with the purpose of God. The intentions of the builders at Babel are stated in Genesis 11:4 as follows: ‘Let us build us a city and a tower... and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth.’ Apparently the city was to provide a world center for the human race, and the monumental tower was to serve as a physical and spectacular symbol of world unification. Having lost in the Fall that inward and spiritual unity of the race which was centered in God, men now resort to the establishment of an external unity. We have here the first recorded urge of sinful men toward the ‘one world’ idea of social and governmental organization” (ibid.). “In this connection a question naturally arises: Why would not such a world organization have been a good thing? Would this not, as it is still being argued today, preserve the unity of mankind and thus avoid the confusion and strife which has been historically associated with a multiplicity of nations and governments? Ideally, of course, one world government would seem to furnish the answer to many difficult problems, provided the world was made up of only the right kind of people. But the trouble has been that, ever since the fall of Adam, the world has had the wrong kind of people—‘For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God’ (Rom. 3:23). And in such a world there is mortal danger in a single and total world government. As someone has acutely observed, political power always corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely”

(ibid., p. 48). “The judgment of God upon this first attempt at one world government was not only a clear warning against all such schemes but also an endorsement of what is called ‘nationalism.’ Although not the ideal form of human organization, nationalism has proven the safest for the preservation of personal liberty in a sinful world. In the world market of political ideas and forms, there will be competition and experiment just as long as there are many nations. And, in the end, such competition and experiment always work out for individual liberty and the development of distinctive cultural values which then may be mutually shared between nations. In a sinful race left to its own devices, one monolithic world state might conceivably put an end to all further political experiment and result in an irreversible totalitarianism” (ibid.). “The nature of the divine judgment upon this first try at a World State is deeply interesting. It is generally conceded that the cement which holds men together in groups and nations is what we call a common culture, and the very core of such a culture is found in language, man’s marvelous ability to communicate ideas. It was exactly at this point that the judgment of God struck: the common bond of ‘one language’ was supernaturally destroyed, and the multiplication of tongues led to the formation of different groups and, ultimately, nations. For the chief obstacle to the achievement of the one world state of ‘Internationalism,’ it has often been recognized, is the barrier of language. The very headphones worn by the delegates of the various member nations at meetings of the United Nations’ organization are a witness to the divinely imposed safeguard against the menace of one total world government established by sinful men” (ibid.). “It is true that the kingdom of Babylon became the golden head of an empire which held authority ‘wheresoever the children of men dwell’ (Dan. 2:38). However, it must not be overlooked that this was an empire established by divine sanction, as indicated clearly by the address of Daniel to Nebuchadnezzar: ‘Thou, O king, art a king of kings; for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory. And wheresoever the children of men dwell hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all’ (Dan. 2:37-38). Furthermore, it is open to serious question whether this universal authority, although conferred by God Himself, was ever actually exercised by Nebuchadnezzar over all peoples in all places. Certainly, the three so-called world empires which followed never completely succeeded in subduing all the different nations on earth; nor were they able to perpetuate their comparatively brief existence without unceasing struggles; and in the end they fell before attacks by peoples of other language areas. In the long history of sinful humanity there will be only one truly universal world empire (called ‘the kingdom of the world' in Rev. 11:15, ASV), and that will be achieved by superhuman means at the hand of Satan's own ruler, the antichrist, whose brief span of world dominion will be definitely limited by God to exactly 1260 days. Even here, however, this final empire will not be achieved without divine sanction; for his universal authority will be 'given unto him' from above (Rev. 13:7)" (ibid., p. 49).

The Age of Patriarchs and Promises

After the nations were scattered at Babel, God chose one man named Abram, from the land of Ur, and made a covenant with him for the blessing of all mankind. This covenant, the Abrahamic Covenant, ushered in the age of Promise or Patriarchs. It is difficult to overstate the importance of the Abrahamic Covenant in the outworking of God's Kingdom program.

Covenant #4: The Abrahamic Covenant

The Abrahamic Covenant is the fourth of the eight covenants that God made with mankind, and is the first of five covenants that He made with Israel. It is a foundational covenant in God's Kingdom program. It promised to Abram (later named Abraham) a great name, and to him and to his descendants the land of Palestine forever, national identity, great blessing, and blessing or cursing on other peoples, depending on whether they chose to bless or curse Abram and his descendants. Dr. Fruchtenbaum summarizes, "Chafer discusses the Abrahamic Covenant in his section on Eschatology [Systematic Theology, 4:313-315]. Concerning the Abrahamic Covenant, Chafer points out that it is an unconditional covenant 'being that alone which Jehovah declares He will do for and through Abraham.' It was not sustained through all of Abraham's descendants, but only through Isaac and Jacob and Jacob's descendants. Furthermore, it is an everlasting covenant which contains seven features, found in Genesis 12:1-3. First, I will make of thee a great nation which was fulfilled 'in the posterity of Ishmael, of Isaac, and in Abraham's spiritual seed.' Second, I will bless thee; and Abraham received 'both earthly and heavenly riches.' Third, and make thy name great and 'no name is more honored, outside of Christ's, than Abraham's.' Fourth, and be thou a blessing and this blessing 'extends to Abraham's physical seed through Isaac and Jacob and to the Gentiles.' Fifth, I will bless them that bless thee, and him that curseth thee will I curse, which is 'the divine principle in connection with Israel upon which God deals with the Gentile nations.' Sixth, in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed, which is a reference to Gentile blessings through 'the Seed, Christ.' Seventh, unto thy seed will I give this land, which includes territory that ‘far exceeds that occupied by Israel when they came up out of Egypt (Gen. 15:18)’” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 334). “Reducing the Abrahamic Covenant to its very basics, it contains three aspects: the land, the seed, and the blessing. The land aspect is developed in the Palestinian Covenant; the seed aspect is covered in the Davidic Covenant; and the blessing aspect is presented in the New Covenant” (ibid., p. 575). Pentecost adds, “The Abrahamic Covenant becomes the foundation of the message of the Old Testament writers and prophets delivered to the nation Israel. It gave hope to the persecuted and the dispersed. Reference to it in the New Testament reveals that it continues as the basis for the development of God’s plan to establish on earth the kingdom of the God of heaven” (TKC, p. 81). And Geisler, “The first of Israel’s covenants (Abrahamic) is an unconditional agreement God made with Abraham and his descendants that has never been fulfilled at any time in history, either prior to or after the Advent. Because Israel rejected their Messiah-King who is to rule in Jerusalem (Matt. 19:28) over the whole land God gave Abraham, and since this reign is to be forever, the event is yet future; it will not be fulfilled until Christ returns (24:30; 25:31-34). At this time Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, David, and all other Old Testament saints will be raised and literally will reign over the whole earth in physical, resurrected bodies” (ST, 4:511).

Statement of the Abrahamic Covenant

The Abrahamic Covenant was first made with Abraham, then confirmed with his son Isaac, then with Isaac’s son Jacob (Israel). “The original covenant is given in Genesis 12:1-3, and there are three confirmations and amplifications as recorded in Genesis 13:14-17; 15:1-7; and 17:1-18. Some of the promises are given to Abraham personally, some to Abraham’s seed, and some to Gentiles, or ‘all families of the earth’ (Gen. 12:3)” [quoting John F. Walvoord, ‘Millennial Series,’ Bibliotheca Sacra, 108:415-17, October, 1951] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 73). “Genesis 1-11 records the history of the nations; Genesis 12 begins the history of the chosen nation, starting with the Abrahamic covenant” (Geisler, ST, 4:501).

The Abrahamic Covenant was first made with Abraham, “Now Jehovah said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father’s house, unto the land that I will show thee. And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great. And be thou a blessing. And I will bless them that bless thee, and him that curseth thee will I curse. And in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed” (Gen. 12:1-3). “Abram dwelt in the land of Canaan, and Lot dwelt in the cities of the Plain, and moved his tent as far as Sodom. Now the men of Sodom were wicked and sinners against Jehovah exceedingly. And Jehovah said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward and southward and eastward and westward. For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever. And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth. So that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then may thy seed also be numbered. Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it. For unto thee will I give it" (Gen. 13:12-17). "After these things the word of Jehovah came unto Abram in a vision, saying, Fear not, Abram. I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward. And Abram said, O Lord Jehovah, what wilt thou give me, seeing I go childless, and he that shall be possessor of my house is Eliezer of Damascus? And Abram said, Behold, to me thou hast given no seed. And, lo, one born in my house is mine heir. And, behold, the word of Jehovah came unto him, saying, This man shall not be thine heir. But he that shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall be thine heir. And he brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and number the stars, if thou be able to number them. And he said unto him, So shall thy seed be. And he believed in Jehovah. And he reckoned it to him for righteousness. And he said unto him, I am Jehovah that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees, to give thee this land to inherit it. And he said, O Lord Jehovah, whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it? And he said unto him, Take me a heifer three years old, and a she-goat three years old, and a ram three years old, and a turtle-dove, and a young pigeon. And he took him all these, and divided them in the midst, and laid each half over against the other. But the birds divided he not. And the birds of prey came down upon the carcasses, and Abram drove them away. And when the sun was going down, a deep sleep fell upon Abram. And, lo, a horror of great darkness fell upon him. And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety that thy seed shall be sojourners in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them. And they shall afflict them four hundred years. And also that nation, whom they shall serve, will I judge. And afterward shall they come out with great substance. But thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace. Thou shalt be buried in a good old age. And in the fourth generation they shall come hither again. For the iniquity of the Amorite is not yet full. And it came to pass, that, when the sun went down, and it was dark, behold, a smoking furnace, and a flaming torch that passed between these pieces. In that day Jehovah made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates. The Kenite, and the Kenizzite, and the Kadmonite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, and the Rephaim, and the Amorite, and the Canaanite, and the Girgashite, and the Jebusite” (Gen. 15:1-21). “And when Abram was ninety years old and nine, Jehovah appeared to Abram, and said unto him, I am God Almighty. Walk before me, and be thou perfect. And I will make my covenant between me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly. And Abram fell on his face. And God talked with him, saying; As for me, behold, my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be the father of a multitude of nations. Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham. For the father of a multitude of nations have I made thee. And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee. And I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee, throughout their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee and to thy seed after thee. And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land of thy sojournings, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession. And I will be their God. And God said unto Abraham, And as for thee, thou shalt keep my covenant, thou, and thy seed after thee throughout their generations. This is my covenant, which ye shall keep, between me and you and thy seed after thee. Every male among you shall be circumcised. And ye shall be circumcised in the flesh of your foreskin. And it shall be a token of a covenant betwixt me and you. And he that is eight days old shall be circumcised among you, every male throughout your generations, he that is born in the house, or bought with money of any foreigner that is not of thy seed. He that is born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised. And my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant. And the uncircumcised male who is not circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin, that soul shall be cut off from his people. He hath broken my covenant. And God said unto Abraham, as for Sarai thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sarai, but Sarah shall her name be. And I will bless her, and moreover I will give thee a son of her. Yea, I will bless her, and she shall be a mother of nations. Kings of peoples shall be of her. Then Abraham fell upon his face, and laughed, and said in his heart, Shall a child be born unto him that is a hundred years old? And shall Sarah, that is ninety years old, bear? And Abraham said unto God, Oh that Ishmael might live before thee! And God said,

Nay, but Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son. And thou shalt call his name Isaac. And I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant for his seed after him. And as for Ishmael, I have heard thee. Behold, I have blessed him, and will make him fruitful, and will multiply him exceedingly. Twelve princes shall he beget, and I will make him a great nation. But my covenant will I establish with Isaac, whom Sarah shall bear unto thee at this set time in the next year. And he left off talking with him, and God went up from Abraham” (Gen. 17:1-22). “And Jehovah said, Shall I hide from Abraham that which I do. Seeing that Abraham had surely become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him” (Gen. 18:17-18)? “And the angel of Jehovah called unto Abraham a second time out of heaven, and said, By myself have I sworn, saith Jehovah, because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heavens, and as the sand which is upon the seashore. And thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies. And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. Because thou hast obeyed my voice” (Gen. 22:15–18). it was confirmed with Abraham’s son Isaac, “And God said unto Abraham, Let it not be grievous in thy sight because of the lad, and because of thy handmaid. In all that Sarah saith unto thee, hearken unto her voice. For in Isaac shall thy seed be called” (Gen. 21:12). “And they sent away Rebekah their sister, and her nurse, and Abraham’s servant, and his men. And they blessed Rebekah, and said unto her, Our sister, be thou the mother of thousands of ten thousands, and let thy seed possess the gate of those that hate them” (Gen. 24:59-60). “And Abraham gave all that he had unto Isaac” (Gen. 25:5-6). “And it came to pass after the death of Abraham, that God blessed Isaac his son. And Isaac dwelt by Beer-lahairoi” (Gen. 25:11). “And there was a famine in the land, besides the first famine that was in the days of Abraham. And Isaac went unto Abimelech king of the Philistines, unto Gerar. And Jehovah appeared unto him, and said, Go not down into Egypt. Dwell in the land which I shall tell thee of. Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee. For unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these lands, and I will establish the oath which I swear unto Abraham thy father. And I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these lands. And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. Because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws” (Gen. 26:1-5). “And Jehovah appeared unto him [Isaac, vs. 18] the same night, and said, I am the God of Abraham thy father. Fear not, for I am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed for my servant Abraham’s sake” (Gen. 26:24). and it was confirmed with Isaac’s son (Abraham’s grandson) Jacob. “And Isaac entreated Jehovah for his wife, because she was barren. And Jehovah was entreated of him, and Rebekah his wife conceived. And the children struggled together within her. And she said, If it be so, wherefore do I live? And she went to inquire of Jehovah. And Jehovah said unto her, Two nations are in thy womb, And two peoples shall be separated from thy bowels. And the one people shall be stronger than the other people. And the elder shall serve the younger. And when her days to be delivered were fulfilled, behold, there were twins in her womb. And the first came forth red, all over like a hairy garment. And they called his name Esau. And after that came forth his brother, and his hand had hold on Esau’s heel. And his name was called Jacob. And Isaac was threescore years old when she bare them. And the boys grew. And Esau was a skilful hunter, a man of the field. And Jacob was a quiet man, dwelling in tents. Now Isaac loved Esau, because he did eat of his venison. And Rebekah loved Jacob. And Jacob boiled pottage. And Esau came in from the field, and he was faint. And Esau said to Jacob, Feed me, I pray thee, with that same red pottage. For I am faint. Therefore was his name called Edom. And Jacob said, Sell me first thy birthright. And Esau said, Behold, I am about to die. And what profit shall the birthright do to me? And Jacob said, Swear to me first. And he sware unto him. And he sold his birthright unto Jacob. And Jacob gave Esau bread and pottage of lentils. And he did eat and drink, and rose up, and went his way. So Esau despised his birthright” (Gen. 25:21-34). “Let peoples serve thee, And nations bow down to thee. Be lord over thy brethren, And let thy mother’s sons bow down to thee. Cursed be every one that curseth thee, And blessed be every one that blesseth thee. And it came to pass, as soon as Isaac had made an end of blessing Jacob, and Jacob was yet scarce gone out from the presence of Isaac his father, that Esau his brother came in from his hunting” (Gen. 27:29-30). “And Isaac called Jacob, and blessed him, and charged him, and said unto him, Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan. Arise, go to Paddan-aram, to the house of Bethuel thy mother’s father. And take thee a wife from thence of the daughters of Laban thy mother’s brother. And God Almighty bless thee, and make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, that thou mayest be a company of peoples. And give thee the blessing of Abraham, to thee, and to thy seed with thee. That thou mayest inherit the land of thy sojournings, which God gave unto Abraham” (Gen. 28:1-4). “And Jacob went out from Beer-sheba, and went toward Haran. And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set. And he took one of the stones of the place, and put it under his head, and lay down in that place to sleep. And he dreamed. And behold, a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven. And behold, the angels of God ascending and descending on it. And, behold, Jehovah stood above it, and said, I am Jehovah, the God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac. The land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed. And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south. And in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. And, behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee, whithersoever thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land. For I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of” (Gen. 28:10-15). “And God appeared unto Jacob again, when he came from Paddan-aram, and blessed him. And God said unto him, Thy name is Jacob: thy name shall not be called any more Jacob, but Israel shall be thy name: and he called his name Israel. And God said unto him, I am God Almighty: be fruitful and multiply; a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins; and the land which I gave unto Abraham and Isaac, to thee I will give it, and to thy seed after thee will I give the land” (Gen. 35:9-12).

The Abrahamic Covenant was promised to have fulfillment in Abraham, Isaac and Jacob personally, not just in their descendants. “And Jehovah said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward and southward and eastward and westward. For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever” (Gen. 13:14-15). “And there was a famine in the land, besides the first famine that was in the days of Abraham. And Isaac went unto Abimelech king of the Philistines, unto Gerar. And Jehovah appeared unto him, and said, Go not down into Egypt. Dwell in the land which I shall tell thee of. Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee. For unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these lands, and I will establish the oath which I swear unto Abraham thy father” (Gen. 26:1-3). “And Jacob went out from Beer-sheba, and went toward Haran. And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set. And he took one of the stones of the place, and put it under his head, and lay down in that place to sleep. And he dreamed. And behold, a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven. And behold, the angels of God ascending and descending on it. And, behold, Jehovah stood above it, and said, I am Jehovah, the God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac. The land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed" (Gen. 28:10-13). "Both settlement and ownership of the land was not limited to the descendants of the Patriarchs only but promised to them personally. God promised ownership of the land to Abraham (Gen. 13:15), to Isaac (Gen. 26:3) and to Jacob (Gen. 28:13)" (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 208). "Pentecost [in Things to Come, p. 73] points out that the Abrahamic Covenant 'entitled certain basic promises,' and these included 'individual promises' for Abraham, 'national promises' for Israel and 'universal blessings' that were to extend to the Gentiles. Pentecost states that 'it is of utmost importance to keep the different areas in which promise was made' distinct because 'if the things covenanted in one area are transferred to another area only confusion will result in the subsequent interpretation.' Personal promises made to Abraham should not be transferred to the nation of Israel as a whole, nor should the national promises made to Israel be transferred to the Gentiles" (ibid., p. 341).

Features of the Abrahamic Covenant

The Abrahamic Covenant promised to Abraham and to his descendants the land of Palestine, national identity, blessing, a great name, and potential blessing and cursing on other peoples. George Peters summarizes, "The covenant... made with Abraham... The things promised by God are the following: 1. That Abraham's name shall be great. 2. That a great nation should come from him. 3. He should be a blessing so great that in him shall all families of the earth be blessed. 4. To him personally ("to thee") and to his seed should be given Palestine forever to inherit. 5. The multitude of his seed should be as the dust of the earth. 6. That whoever blessed him should be blessed, and whosoever cursed him should be cursed. 7. He should be the father of many nations. 8. Kings should proceed from him. 9. The covenant shall be perpetual, 'an everlasting covenant.' 10. The land of Canaan shall be 'an everlasting possession.' 11. God will be a God to him and to his seed. 12. His seed shall possess the gate of his enemies. 13. In his seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed" (TTK, 1:293).

The Abrahamic Covenant promised the land of Palestine to Abraham and his descendants forever. "Abram dwelt in the land of Canaan, and Lot dwelt in the cities of the Plain, and moved his tent as far as Sodom. Now the men of Sodom were wicked and sinners against Jehovah exceedingly. And Jehovah said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward and southward and eastward and westward. For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever. And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth. So that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then may thy seed also be numbered. Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it. For unto thee will I give it” (Gen. 13:12-17). “In that day Jehovah made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates” (Gen. 15:18). “And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land of thy sojournings, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession. And I will be their God” (Gen. 17:8-9). “And ye shall not wrong one another; but thou shalt fear thy God: for I am Jehovah your God... And the land shall not be sold in perpetuity; for the land is mine: for ye are strangers and sojourners with me” (Lev. 25:17-24) “Jehovah will command the blessing upon thee... in the land which Jehovah sware unto thy fathers to give thee. Jehovah will open unto thee his good treasure the heavens, to give the rain of thy land in its season, and to bless all the work of thy hand: and thou shalt lend unto many nations, and thou shalt not borrow. And Jehovah will make thee the head, and not the tail; and thou shalt be above only, and thou shalt not be beneath; if thou shalt hearken unto the commandments of Jehovah thy God, which I command thee this day, to observe and to do them” (Deut. 28:8-13) “Moses my servant is dead; now therefore arise, go over this Jordan, thou, and all this people, unto the land which I do give to them, even to the children of Israel. Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, to you have I given it, as I spake unto Moses. From the wilderness, and this Lebanon, even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun, shall be your border. There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life. as I was with Moses, so I will be with thee; I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee. Be strong and of good courage; for thou shalt cause this people to inherit the land which I sware unto their fathers to give them” (Josh. 1:2-6). “Rejoice not, O Israel, for joy, like the peoples; for thou hast played the harlot, departing from thy God; thou hast loved hire upon every grain-floor. The threshing-floor and the winepress shall not feed them, and the new wine shall fail her. They shall not dwell in Jehovah’s land; but Ephraim shall return to Egypt, and they shall eat unclean food in Assyria” (Hos. 9:1-3). “Has God failed in His foreknowledge, wisdom, and power? To evade this, by making the land typical of heaven, is sheer faithlessness, seeing that the very land ‘laid waste’ and ‘made desolate’ (which the third heaven never was), is the land spoken of—the same land whereon Jacob reclined and which Abraham was requested to survey” (Peters, TTK, 1:307). “‘I will give unto thee the land...’ which territory far exceeds that occupied by Israel when they came out of Egypt. The extent of the land is ‘from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates’ (Gen 15:18)” (Chafer, ST, 4:314). “As for the Abrahamic Covenant, the ‘promise of the land was integral in the original covenant with Abraham’ and if not understood literally, then the covenant becomes totally meaningless” [quoting Walvoord, Israel in Prophecy, pp. 61-62] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 525). “Just as ‘the prophecy concerning Israel has always had its fulfillment in the past, so it will also in the future.’ Just as the believer today is sure of the promise of heaven, ‘Israel’s promise of the land is just as sure’” [quoting Walvoord, Israel in Prophecy, pp. 78-79] (ibid.). “Though renamed ‘Palestine’ by Hadrian, there never was a Palestinian state with a Palestinian government or a Palestinian flag. The first time an independent government was set up in the land since A.D. 70 was in 1948 with the State of Israel. The history of the land also shows that the Abrahamic Covenant continues to be fulfilled with the people of Israel” (ibid., p. 630). “Israel’s title to the Land is based on the Abrahamic Covenant” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 125). “In the final restoration of the Land, Israel will possess all the way south to the River of Egypt and will control down to the area of the modern Suez Canal. But as far as where the Jews will be living, the actual boundary of this settlement will only extend as far south as the Brook of Egypt or the modern Wadi-el-Arish” (ibid., p. 423). “Genesis 13:14-17... ‘All the land that you see I will give to you and your offspring forever’... There are three important elements in the emphasized section: (1) God gave the land to Abraham (2) for his natural descendants (3) forever” (Geisler, ST, 4:502) “The dimensions of the land given to Abraham were spelled out, and they include all of modern Israel, the territory of the Palestinians, Jordan, Lebanon, Syria, and all the way to Northern Iraq. Even under Joshua’s conquests they did not occupy all this land, and at no time in Israel’s history did they ever occupy it all for any prolonged period of time, let alone ‘forever.’ So to date, the Abrahamic covenant remains yet to be fulfilled” (ibid.). “Deuteronomy 28:8-13... ‘the land he swore to your forefathers to give you.’... Even amid the conditional Mosaic blessings, God reminds them, through Moses, of the unconditional promise made to the patriarchs, that He had given them the Holy Land. In accordance with the Mosaic covenant, their blessings in this land, as described in this passage, would depend on their obedience to God” (ibid., p. 505). “Joshua 21:43-45... ‘The LORD gave Israel all the land he had sworn to give their forefathers... Not one of all the LORD’s good promises to the house of Israel failed; every one was fulfilled.’... the extent of the land as outlined in the Mosaic covenant (Num. 34), which was not the full extent God had promised to Abraham (cf. Gen. 15:18-21; Josh. 1:2-6)” (ibid.).

The Abrahamic Covenant promised Abraham to be a great nation. “Now Jehovah said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father’s house, unto the land that I will show thee. And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great. And be thou a blessing. And I will bless them that bless thee, and him that curseth thee will I curse. And in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed” (Gen. 12:1-3). “...the selection of a nation was made to be the nucleus of the Messianic Kingdom” (Peters, TTK, 1:393) “It is extremely satisfactory to find that nowhere in the Scriptures does the now prevailing view, that the Gentile nations, as nations, are called, find the least support. This is precisely what the covenanted Word requires” (ibid., p. 394). “For the previous two thousand years ‘there was but one division of the human family on the earth,’ which were the Gentiles. With the call of Abraham came a second period of human history extending from Abraham through Isaac and Jacob. At this point ‘there are two divisions of humanity on the earth,’ which are Jews and Gentiles. Israel was ‘set apart as an elect nation’ with ‘specific divine favors’” [quoting Chafer, Systematic Theology, 7:206] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 333). “The Abrahamic Covenant promised a seed, land, and blessings among its many provisions. The seed was to develop into a nation, and so it did at the foot of Mount Sinai. Today, Israel is a scattered nation but still a nation. Just as Israel remained distinct in Egypt, the Jewish people have remained distinct throughout the Church Age. No other nation that lost its national homeland and was dispersed for centuries survived as a distinct entity” (ibid., p. 629).

The Abrahamic Covenant promised blessing to Abraham. “Now Jehovah said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father’s house, unto the land that I will show thee. And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great. And be thou a blessing. And I will bless them that bless thee, and him that curseth thee will I curse. And in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed” (Gen. 12:1-3). “‘I will bless thee,’ which is fulfilled in both earthly and heavenly riches” (Chafer, ST, 4:313). “The Abrahamic Covenant—not the Mosaic Covenant—was the source of blessings” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 86).

The Abrahamic Covenant promised Abraham a great name. “Now Jehovah said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father’s house, unto the land that I will show thee. And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great. And be thou a blessing. And I will bless them that bless thee, and him that curseth thee will I curse. And in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed” (Gen. 12:1-3). “I will make thy name great,’ and no name is more honored, outside that of Christ’s, than Abraham’s” (Chafer, ST, 4:313). “Abraham... his name was to become great—and so it is among Jews, Moslems, and Christians” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 575).

The Abrahamic Covenant promised Abraham to be a blessing. “Now Jehovah said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father’s house, unto the land that I will show thee. And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great. And be thou a blessing. And I will bless them that bless thee, and him that curseth thee will I curse. And in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed” (Gen. 12:1-3). “Christ redeemed us from the curse of the Law, having become a curse for us — for it is written, ‘CURSED IS EVERYONE WHO HANGS ON A TREE’ — in order that in Christ Jesus the blessing of Abraham might come to the Gentiles, so that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith” (Gal. 3:13–14). This blessing would be through Isaac and Jacob. (See the Scripture quotations in the section Statement of the Abrahamic Covenant above.) “‘Thou shalt be a blessing.’ This blessing extends to Abraham’s physical seed through Isaac and Jacob and to the Gentiles (Gal 3:13-14)” (Chafer, ST, 4:324) Ultimately, this blessing would be through Abraham’s ‘seed,’ Christ. “And the angel of Jehovah called unto Abraham a second time out of heaven, and said, By myself have I sworn, saith Jehovah, because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heavens, and as the sand which is upon the seashore. And thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies. And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. Because thou hast obeyed my voice” (Gen. 22:15–18). “Now the promises were spoken to Abraham and to his seed. He does not say, ‘And to seeds,’ as referring to many, but rather to one, ‘And to your seed,’ that is, Christ” (Gal. 3:16). “In thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed,’ which promise looks on to the Seed, Christ, and contemplates all that Christ is or ever will be to the whole earth” (Chafer, ST, 4:314). “As Ryrie states, the Hebrew word ‘seed’ is singular, but it could be ‘both collective and individual.’ As a collective word, it refers to Israel; and as an individual word, it refers to the Messiah. It is through the latter ‘seed’ that the Gentiles were to receive their blessings” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 336). The blessing extends to Gentiles. “And I will bless those who bless you, And the one who curses you I will curse. And in you all the families of the earth shall be blessed” (Gen. 12:3). “And Jehovah said, Shall I hide from Abraham that which I do. Seeing that Abraham had surely become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him” (Gen. 18:17-18)? “And the angel of Jehovah called unto Abraham a second time out of heaven, and said, By myself have I sworn, saith Jehovah, because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heavens, and as the sand which is upon the seashore. And thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies. And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. Because thou hast obeyed my voice” (Gen. 22:15–18). “Christ redeemed us from the curse of the Law, having become a curse for us — for it is written, ‘Cursed is everyone who hangs on a tree’ — in order that in Christ Jesus the blessing of Abraham might come to the Gentiles, so that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith” (Gal. 3:13-14). “Though the Davidic sonship is restricted to David’s house and David’s people, the Abrahamic sonship extends to ‘all families of the earth,’ in whose redemption they are blessed (Gen 12:3)” (Chafer, ST, 3:33). “The physical promises were limited to the physical descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. The spiritual promises were to extend to all believers, both Jews and Gentiles alike” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 144). “The Abrahamic Covenant included both physical and spiritual promises. The physical promises were limited to the Jewish people, but the spiritual promises were predicted to extend to the Gentiles (Gen 12:3). In the New Testament, those Gentiles who believe in Jesus become the recipients of these spiritual promises” (ibid., p. 158).

The Abrahamic Covenant promised blessing to those who bless Abraham and cursing to those who curse him. “Now Jehovah said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father’s house, unto the land that I will show thee. And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great. And be thou a blessing. And I will bless them that bless thee, and him that curseth thee will I curse. And in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed” (Gen. 12:1–3). “Let peoples serve thee, And nations bow down to thee. Be lord over thy brethren, And let thy mother’s sons bow down to thee.

Cursed be every one that curseth thee, And blessed be every one that blesseth thee. And it came to pass, as soon as Isaac had made an end of blessing Jacob, and Jacob was yet scarce gone out from the presence of Isaac his father, that Esau his brother came in from his hunting” (Gen. 27:29-30). “And Jehovah thy God will put all these curses upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, that persecuted thee” (Deut. 30:7). “For Jehovah will have compassion on Jacob, and will yet choose Israel, and set them in their own land: and the sojourner shall join himself with them, and they shall cleave to the house of Jacob. And the peoples shall take them, and bring them to their place; and the house of Israel shall possess them in the land of Jehovah for servants and for handmaids: and they shall take them captive whose captives they were; and they shall rule over their oppressors” (Isa. 14:1-2). “Behold, a day of Jehovah cometh, when thy spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee. For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city. Then shall Jehovah go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle” (Zech. 14:1-3). “But when the Son of Man comes in His glory, and all the angels with Him, then He will sit on His glorious throne. And all the nations will be gathered before Him; and He will separate them from one another, as the shepherd separates the sheep from the goats; and He will put the sheep on His right, and the goats on the left. Then the King will say to those on His right, “Come, you who are blessed of My Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. For I was hungry, and you gave Me something to eat; I was thirsty, and you gave Me drink; I was a stranger, and you invited Me in; naked, and you clothed Me; I was sick, and you visited Me; I was in prison, and you came to Me.” Then the righteous will answer Him, saying, “Lord, when did we see You hungry, and feed You, or thirsty, and give You drink? And when did we see You a stranger, and invite You in, or naked, and clothe You? And when did we see You sick, or in prison, and come to You?” And the King will answer and say to them, “Truly I say to you, to the extent that you did it to one of these brothers of Mine, even the least of them, you did it to Me.” Then He will also say to those on His left, “Depart from Me, accursed ones, into the eternal fire which has been prepared for the devil and his angels; for I was hungry, and you gave Me nothing to eat; I was thirsty, and you gave Me nothing to drink; I was a stranger, and you did not invite Me in; naked, and you did not clothe Me; sick, and in prison, and you did not visit Me.” Then they themselves also will answer, saying, “Lord, when did we see You hungry, or thirsty, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not take care of You?” Then He will answer them, saying, “Truly I say to you, to the extent that you did not do it to one of the least of these, you did not do it to Me.” And these will go away into eternal punishment, but the righteous into eternal life” (Matt. 25:31-46). “I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee,” which, as before observed, is the abiding divine principle in connection with Israel upon which God deals with Gentile nations as such (Deut 30:7; Isa. 14:1-2; Zech. 14:1-3; Matt. 25:31-46)” (Chafer, ST, 4:314) “Walvoord [in The Millennial Kingdom, p. 142] observes that throughout history right ‘to modern times, the nation that has persecuted the Jew has paid dearly for it’ (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 340). “Promises made to the Gentiles included: (1) Blessings for blessing Israel; (2) cursings for cursing Israel...” (ibid., p. 575) “Whoever blessed Abram or his seed would be blessed and whoever cursed them would be cursed” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 52).

Characteristics of the Abrahamic Covenant

The Abrahamic Covenant continued through Isaac, Jacob and the 12 tribes of Israel. “And there was a famine in the land, besides the first famine that was in the days of Abraham. And Isaac went unto Abimelech king of the Philistines, unto Gerar. And Jehovah appeared unto him, and said, Go not down into Egypt. Dwell in the land which I shall tell thee of. Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee. For unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these lands, and I will establish the oath which I swear unto Abraham thy father. And I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these lands. And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. Because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws” (Gen. 26:1–5). “And Jehovah appeared unto him [Isaac, vs. 19] the same night, and said, I am the God of Abraham thy father. Fear not, for I am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed for my servant Abraham’s sake” (Gen. 26:24). “And Jacob went near unto Isaac his father... he blessed him. And he said... Let peoples serve thee, And nations bow down to thee. Be lord over thy brethren, And let thy mother’s sons bow down to thee. Cursed be every one that curseth thee, And blessed be every one that blesseth thee” (Gen. 27:22–30) “And Jacob went out from Beer-sheba, and went toward Haran. And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set. And he took one of the stones of the place, and put it under his head, and lay down in that place to sleep. And he dreamed. And behold, a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven. And behold, the angels of God ascending and descending on it. And, behold, Jehovah stood above it, and said, I am Jehovah, the God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac. The land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed. And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south. And in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. And, behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee, whithersoever thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land. For I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of” (Gen. 28:10-15). “And Joseph said unto his brethren, I die; but God will surely visit you, and bring you up out of this land unto the land which he sware to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob” (Gen. 50:24). “And it came to pass in the course of those many days, that the king of Egypt died: and the children of Israel sighed by reason of the bondage, and they cried, and their cry came up unto God by reason of the bondage. And God heard their groaning, and God remembered his covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob. And God saw the children of Israel, and God took knowledge of them” (Ex. 2:23-25). “And Hazael king of Syria oppressed Israel all the days of Jehoahaz. But Jehovah was gracious unto them, and had compassion on them, and had respect unto them, because of his covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and would not destroy them, neither cast he them from his presence as yet” (2 Kings. 13:22-23). “While God used the Syrians to punish Israel, Syrian damage could only go so far because of this covenant” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 579). “I have loved you, saith Jehovah. Yet ye say, Wherein hast thou loved us? Was not Esau Jacob’s brother, saith Jehovah: yet I loved Jacob” (Mal. 1:2) “By faith Abraham, when he was called, obeyed by going out to a place which he was to receive for an inheritance; and he went out, not knowing where he was going. By faith he lived as an alien in the land of promise, as in a foreign land, dwelling in tents with Isaac and Jacob, fellow heirs of the same promise; for he was looking for the city which has foundations, whose architect and builder is God” (Heb. 11:8-10). “By faith Abraham, when he was tested, offered up Isaac; and he who had received the promises was offering up his only begotten son; it was he to whom it was said, ‘In Isaac your descendants shall be called’” (Heb. 11:17-18). “The reason why the covenant was repeated to Isaac and Jacob was owing to the fact that they formed the chosen posterity to the exclusion of others in the Abrahamic line, and with Jacob that exclusion ceased, for as Dr. Kurtz (His. Old Cov., vol. 2, p. 33) aptly expresses it: ‘Now at length the way of grace entirely coincided with that of nature.’ In other words, all the seed of Jacob were called, and the blessing offered to each one of them” (Peters, TTK, 1:294). “Some of the children of Abraham were not identified with the covenanted relationship, viz.: Esau and his descendants; these are the children of the flesh purely, but some of the children were thus under covenant, viz.: Jacob and his descendants, and these of the flesh were not of the flesh only, but the children of promise” (ibid., p. 358). “The Abrahamic Covenant was not made with all of Abraham’s seed, but only with the seed that was to come through only one of Abraham’s eight sons: Isaac. Furthermore, the covenant was sustained through only one of Isaac’s sons: Jacob” (Fruchtbaum, I, p. 146). “Jews are Jews ‘because of the fact that they were born into covenant relations with God by a physical birth’” [quoting Chafer, Systematic Theology, 7:206] (ibid., p. 333). “Thus the Abrahamic Covenant provides the biblical definition of Jewishness: a descendant of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob” (ibid., p. 577).

The Abrahamic Covenant was confirmed by Moses, Joshua, David and Asaph. It was confirmed to Moses just prior to Israel’s entering the land of Canaan. “then will I remember my covenant with Jacob; and also my covenant with Isaac, and also my covenant with Abraham will I remember; and I will remember the land” (Lev. 26:42). “to love Jehovah thy God, to obey his voice, and to cleave unto him; for he is thy life, and the length of thy days; that thou mayest dwell in the land which Jehovah sware unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give them” (Deut. 30:20). It was also confirmed to Joshua just prior to Israel’s entering the land of Canaan. “Moses my servant is dead; now therefore arise, go over this Jordan, thou, and all this people, unto the land which I do give to them, even to the children of Israel. Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, to you have I given it, as I spake unto Moses. From the wilderness, and this Lebanon, even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun, shall be your border. There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life. As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee; I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee. Be strong and of good courage; for thou shalt cause this people to inherit the land which I sware unto their fathers to give them” (Josh. 1:2-6). It was also confirmed by David and Asaph. “Then on that day did David first ordain to give thanks unto Jehovah, by the hand of Asaph and his brethren... O ye seed of Israel his servant, Ye children of Ja- cob, his chosen ones. He is Jehovah our God; His judgments are in all the earth. Remember his covenant for ever, The word which he commanded to a thousand generations, The covenant which he made with Abraham, And his oath unto Isaac, And confirmed the same unto Jacob for a statute, To Israel for an everlasting covenant, Saying, Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, The lot of your inheritance" (1 Chron. 16:7-18)

The Abrahamic Covenant was developed in the three later unconditional covenants. "The land promises of the Abrahamic covenant are developed in the Palestinian covenant, the seed promises are developed in the Davidic covenant, and the blessing promises are developed in the new covenant" (Pentecost, TTC, p. 72). We'll have more to say regarding the Palestinian, Davidic and New Covenants in our chapters The Theocratic Kingdom and Covenants of the Kingdom.

The Abrahamic Covenant was confirmed by the Hebrew prophets. "He hath remembered his covenant for ever, The word which he commanded to a thousand generations, The covenant which he made with Abraham, And his oath unto Isaac, And confirmed the same unto Jacob for a statute, To Israel for an everlasting covenant" (Ps. 105:8-10) "As I live, saith the Lord Jehovah, surely with a mighty hand, and with an outstretched arm, and with wrath poured out, will I be king over you: and I will bring you out from the peoples, and will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with an outstretched arm, and with wrath poured out; and I will bring you into the wilderness of the peoples, and there will I enter into judgment with you face to face. Like as I entered into judgment with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so will I enter into judgment with you, saith the Lord Jehovah. And I will cause you to pass under the rod, and I will bring you into the bond of the [Abrahamic, Palestinian and New—ed.] covenant; and I will purge out from among you the rebels, and them that transgress against me; I will bring them forth out of the land where they sojourn, but they shall not enter into the land of Israel: and ye shall know that I am Jehovah. As for you, O house of Israel, thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Go ye, serve every one his idols, and hereafter also, if ye will not hearken unto me; but my holy name shall ye no more profane with your gifts, and with your idols. For in my holy mountain, in the mountain of the height of Israel, saith the Lord Jehovah, there shall all the house of Israel, all of them, serve me in the land: there will I accept them, and there will I require your offerings, and the first-fruits of your oblations, with all your holy things. As a sweet savor will I accept you, when I bring you out from the peoples, and gather you out of the countries wherein ye have been scattered; and I will be sanctified in you in the sight of the nations. And ye shall know that I am Jehovah, when I shall bring you into the land of Israel, into the country which I swear to give unto your fathers. And there shall ye remember your ways, and all your doings, wherein ye have polluted yourselves; and ye shall loathe yourselves in your own sight for all your evils that ye have committed” (Ezek. 20:33-43). “Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: I do not this for your sake, O house of Israel, but for my holy name, which ye have profaned among the nations, whither ye went. And I will sanctify my great name, which hath been profaned among the nations, which ye have profaned in the midst of them; and the nations shall know that I am Jehovah, saith the Lord Jehovah, when I shall be sanctified in you before their eyes. For I will take you from among the nations, and gather you out of all the countries, and will bring you into your own land. And I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you a heart of flesh. And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep mine ordinances, and do them. And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God. And I will save you from all your uncleannesses: and I will call for the grain, and will multiply it, and lay no famine upon you. And I will multiply the fruit of the tree, and the increase of the field, that ye may receive no more the reproach of famine among the nations. Then shall ye remember your evil ways, and your doings that were not good; and ye shall loathe yourselves in your own sight for your iniquities and for your abominations. Nor for your sake do I this, saith the Lord Jehovah, be it known unto you: be ashamed and confounded for your ways, O house of Israel” (Ezek. 36:21–32). “And my servant David shall be king over them; and they all shall have one shepherd: they shall also walk in mine ordinances, and observe my statutes, and do them. And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers dwelt; and they shall dwell therein, they, and their children, and their children’s children, for ever: and David my servant shall be their prince for ever. Moreover I will make a [New, developed from the Abrahamic—ed.] covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them; and I will place them, and multiply them, and will set my sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore. My tabernacle also shall be with them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. And the nations shall know that I am Jehovah that sanctifieth Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for evermore” (Ezek. 37:24–28). “As in the days of thy coming forth out of the land of Egypt will I show unto them marvellous things. The nations shall see and be ashamed of all their might; they shall lay their hand upon their mouth; their ears shall be deaf. They shall lick the dust like a serpent; like crawling things of the earth they shall come trembling out of their close places; they shall come with fear unto Jehovah our God, and shall be afraid because of thee. Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity, and passeth over the transgression of the remnant of his heritage? he retaineth not his anger for ever, because he delighteth in lovingkindness. He will again have compassion upon us; he will tread our iniquities under foot; and thou wilt cast all their sins into the depths of the sea. Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob, and the lovingkindness to Abraham, which thou hast sworn unto our fathers from the days of old” (Mic. 7:15-20). “I have loved you, saith Jehovah. Yet ye say, Wherein hast thou loved us? Was not Esau Jacob’s brother, saith Jehovah: yet I loved Jacob” (Mal. 1:2) “Have we not all one father? hath not one God created us? why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother, profaning the covenant of our fathers” (Mal. 2:10)? “Behold, I send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me: and the Lord, whom ye seek, will suddenly come to his temple; and the messenger of the covenant, whom ye desire, behold, he cometh, saith Jehovah of hosts. But who can abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner’s fire, and like fuller’s soap: and he will sit as a refiner and purifier of silver, and he will purify the sons of Levi, and refine them as gold and silver; and they shall offer unto Jehovah offerings in righteousness. Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto Jehovah, as in the days of old, and as in ancient years. And I will come near to you to judgment; and I will be a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against the false swearers, and against those that oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and that turn aside the sojourner from his right, and fear not me, saith Jehovah of hosts. For I, Jehovah, change not; therefore ye, O sons of Jacob, are not consumed” (Mal. 3:1-6). “Hundreds of years after Solomon’s time the Scriptures still abound in promises concerning future possession of the land. This must prove that God and His prophets realized, whether the amillennialist does nor not, that Solomon had not fulfilled the Abrahamic covenant” [quoting Charles C. Ryrie, The Basis of the Premillennial Faith, pp. 60-61] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 113). We’ll have more to say regarding the prophecies of the Hebrew prophets in our chapter The Kingdom in Hebrew Prophecy.

The Abrahamic Covenant is confirmed in the New Testament. “The book of the genealogy of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham” (Matt. 1:1). “And Mary said: ‘My soul exalts the Lord, And my spirit has rejoiced in God my Savior. For He has had regard for the humble state of His bonds slave; For behold, from this time on all generations will count me blessed. For the Mighty One has done great things for me; And holy is His name. AND HIS MERCY IS UPON GENERATION AFTER GENERATION TOWARD THOSE WHO FEAR HIM. He has done mighty deeds with His arm; He has scattered those who were proud in the thoughts of their heart. He has brought down rulers from their thrones, And has exalted those who were humble. HE HAS FILLED THE HUNGRY WITH GOOD THINGS; And sent away the rich empty-handed. He has given help to Israel His servant, In remembrance of His mercy, As He spoke to our fathers, To Abraham and his offspring forever” (Luke 1:46–55). “Therefore bring forth fruits in keeping with repentance, and do not begin to say to yourselves, ‘We have Abraham for our father,’ for I say to you that God is able from these stones to raise up children to Abraham” (Luke 3:8). “the son of Jacob, the son of Isaac, the son of Abraham, the son of Terah, the son of Nahor” (Luke 3:34) “And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Spirit, and prophesied, saying: ‘Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, For He has visited us and accomplished redemption for His people, And has raised up a horn of salvation for us In the house of David His servant — As He spoke by the mouth of His holy prophets from of old — Salvation FROM OUR ENEMIES, And FROM THE HAND OF ALL WHO HATE US; To show mercy toward our fathers, And to remember His holy covenant, The oath which He swore to Abraham our father, To grant us that we, being delivered from the hand of our enemies, Might serve Him without fear, In holiness and righteousness before Him all our days. And you, child, will be called the prophet of the Most High; For you will go on BEFORE THE LORD TO PREPARE HIS WAYS; To give to His people the knowledge of salvation By the forgiveness of their sins, Because of the tender mercy of our God, With which the Sunrise from on high shall visit us, TO SHINE UPON THOSE WHO SIT IN DARKNESS AND THE SHADOW OF DEATH, To guide our feet into the way of peace” (Luke 1:67–79). “And this woman, a daughter of Abraham as she is, whom Satan has bound for eighteen long years, should she not have been released from this bond on the Sabbath day” (Luke 13:16)? “There will be weeping and gnashing of teeth there when you see Abraham and Isaac and Jacob and all the prophets in the kingdom of God, but yourselves being cast out” (Luke 13:28). “And Jesus said to him, ‘Today salvation has come to this house, because he, too, is a son of Abraham’” (Luke 19:9). “Your father Abraham rejoiced to see My day, and he saw it and was glad.’ The Jews therefore said to Him, ‘You are not yet fifty years old, and have You seen Abraham?’ Jesus said to them, ‘Truly, truly, I say to you, before Abraham was born, I am’ (John 8:56–58). “The God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the God of our fathers, has glorified His servant Jesus, the one whom you delivered up, and disowned in the presence of Pilate, when he had decided to release Him” (Acts 3:13). “It is you [Men of Israel, vs. 12] who are the sons of the prophets, and of the covenant which God made with your fathers, saying to Abraham, ‘And in your seed all the families of the earth shall be blessed.’ For you first, God raised up His Servant, and sent Him to bless you by turning every one of you from your wicked ways” (Acts 3:25-26). “And now I [Paul] am standing trial for the hope of the promise made by God to our fathers; the promise to which our twelve tribes hope to attain, as they earnestly serve God night and day. And for this hope, O King, I am being accused by Jews. Why is it considered incredible among you people if God does raise the dead” (Acts 26:6-8)? “and the father of circumcision to those who not only are of the circumcision, but who also follow in the steps of the faith of our father Abraham which he had while uncircumcised. For the promise to Abraham or to his descendants that he would be heir of the world was not through the Law, but through the righteousness of faith” (Rom. 4:12–13). “For this reason it is by faith, that it might be in accordance with grace, in order that the promise may be certain to all the descendants, not only to those who are of the Law, but also to those who are of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all” (Rom. 4:16) “I say then, God has not rejected His people, has He? May it never be! For I too am an Israelite, a descendant of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin” (Rom. 11:1). “For I say that Christ has become a servant to the circumcision on behalf of the truth of God to confirm the promises given to the fathers” (Rom. 15:8) “Are they Hebrews? So am I. Are they Israelites? So am I. Are they descendants of Abraham? So am I” (2 Cor. 11:22). “Now the promises were spoken to Abraham and to his seed. He does not say, ‘And to seeds,’ as referring to many, but rather to one, ‘And to your seed,’ that is, Christ. What I am saying is this: the Law, which came four hundred and thirty years later, does not invalidate a covenant previously ratified by God, so as to nullify the promise. For if the inheritance is based on law, it is no longer based on a promise; but God has granted it to Abraham by means of a promise” (Gal. 3:16-18). “For assuredly He does not give help to angels, but He gives help to the descendant of Abraham” (Heb. 2:16). “For when God made the promise to Abraham, since He could swear by no one greater, He swore by Himself” (Heb. 6:13) “By faith Abraham, when he was called, obeyed by going out to a place which he was to receive for an inheritance; and he went out, not knowing where he was going. By faith he lived as an alien in the land of promise, as in a foreign land, dwelling in tents with Isaac and Jacob, fellow heirs of the same promise; for he was looking for the city which has foundations, whose architect and builder is God” (Heb. 11:8-10). “If Jesus confirmed the Abrahamic Covenant, not by a spiritual coming and a spiritual shedding of blood, but by a literal coming and shedding of blood, so to realize the promises of the same Covenant, He again comes, not spiritually, but literally, in order e.g. that Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob may inherit” (Peters, TTK, 2:171).

The Abrahamic Covenant is unconditional. “After these things the word of Jehovah came unto Abram in a vision, saying, Fear not, Abram. I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward. And Abram said, O Lord Jehovah, what wilt thou give me, seeing I go childless, and he that shall be possessor of my house is Eliezer of Damascus? And Abram said, Behold, to me thou hast given no seed. And, lo, one born in my house is mine heir. And, behold, the word of Jehovah came unto him, saying, This man shall not be thine heir. But he that shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall be thine heir. And he brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and number the stars, if thou be able to number them. And he said unto him, So shall thy seed be. And he believed in Jehovah. And he reckoned it to him for righteousness. And he said unto him, I am Jehovah that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees, to give thee this land to inherit it. And he said, O Lord Jehovah, whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it? And he said unto him, Take me a heifer three years old, and a she-goat three years old, and a ram three years old, and a turtle-dove, and a young pigeon. And he took him all these, and divided them in the midst, and laid each half over against the other. But the birds divided he not. And the birds of prey came down upon the carcasses, and Abram drove them away. And when the sun was going down, a deep sleep fell upon Abram. And, lo, a horror of great darkness fell upon him. And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety that thy seed shall be sojourners in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them. And they shall afflict them four hundred years. And also that nation, whom they shall serve, will I judge. And afterward shall they come out with great substance. But thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace. Thou shalt be buried in a good old age. And in the fourth generation they shall come hither again. For the iniquity of the Amorite is not yet full. And it came to pass, that, when the sun went down, and it was dark, behold, a smoking furnace, and a flaming torch that passed between these pieces. In that day Jehovah made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates. The Kenite, and the Kenizzite, and the Kadmonite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, and the Rephaim, and the Amorite, and the Canaanite, and the Girgashite, and the Jebusite” (Gen. 15:1-21). “The promise to the Patriarchs is unconditional, and confirmed by oath and abundant reiterated promises” (Peters, TTK, 1:298) “In its entirety, the Abrahamic covenant includes various features and is unconditional in every part of it, being that alone which Jehovah declares He will do for and through Abraham. Being unconditional, it cannot be broken by man” (Chafer, ST, 4:313). “That everlasting love will yet prevail and this unworthy people will inherit all that Jehovah has determined” (ibid., p. 317). “Whether there would be a covenant program with Abraham depended upon Abraham’s act of obedience. When once he obeyed, the covenant that was instituted depended, not upon Abraham’s continued obedience, but upon the promise of the One who instituted it. The fact of the covenant depended upon obedience; the kind of covenant inaugurated was totally unrelated to the continuing obedience of either Abraham or his seed” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 75). “The covenant was not based on obedience, nor was the perpetuity of the covenant based on obedience—but rather the reception of covenant blessings was conditioned on obedience. Remember, an unconditional covenant may have conditional blessings” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 66). “Though a lack of faith resulting in disobedience would not nullify the Abrahamic Covenant, the covenanted blessings would not be extended to those who lacked faith in the unconditional covenant” (ibid., p. 86). “This Abrahamic covenant was unconditional in character” (McClain, GK, p. 155). “Amillenarians believe that the Abrahamic covenant is based on certain conditions, and its fulfillment hinges on these conditions being met. Premillenarians hold that the Abrahamic covenant is a declaration of God's intention which is not conditional upon the obedience of individuals or nations for its fulfillment—an unconditional plan of God" (Walvoord, MK, p. 149). "Except for the original condition of leaving his homeland and going to the promised land, the covenant is made with no conditions whatever. It is rather a prophetic declaration of God of what will certainly come to pass, and is no more conditional than any other announced plan of God which depends upon God's sovereignty for its fulfillment" (ibid., p. 150). "The latter discussion of the Davidic covenant and the New covenant constitutes a further indication of the unconditional character of God's promises to Abraham's seed" (ibid., p. 152). "Pentecost [in Things to Come, p. 78] next presents some 'arguments to support the unconditional character of the covenant.' In the interactions between Dispensationalism and Covenant Theology, this issue is 'the crux of the whole discussion of the problem relating to the fulfillment of the Abrahamic covenant.' Pentecost proceeds to quote the evidences given by Walvoord, discussed previously. Pentecost's own contribution centers on the sealing of the covenant as recorded in Genesis 15. What God affirms in this chapter is that Abraham would have a son and reaffirms to Abraham what He said earlier 'concerning the seed and the land.' In keeping with the way covenants were made in that day, animal blood was shed and the bodies cut in half and lined up in two rows. The normal 'custom demanded that the two who entered into a blood covenant should walk together between the parts of the sacrifice.' This would make the covenant binding on both parties. However, if one party became guilty of violating any single term of the covenant, it would free the other party from the necessity of fulfilling his own promises contained in the covenant. In the case of Genesis 15, Abraham and God did not walk together between the pieces of the animals. God put Abraham to sleep and God alone walked between the pieces of the animals. This made the covenant binding on God alone. As for Abraham, this means that 'he could not be a participant in the covenant, but could only be a recipient of a covenant to which he brought nothing in the way of obligations.' What God did on that day was to bind Himself 'by a most solemn blood covenant to fulfill to Abraham, unconditionally, the promises concerning the seed and the land which were given to him.' Pentecost concludes that it was impossible 'for God to make it any clearer that what was promised to Abraham was given him without any conditions, to be fulfilled by the integrity of God alone'" (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 343). "In this case, however, it was not God and Abraham who walked between the pieces of the animals, but God alone, binding only Himself to the terms of the covenant. This rendered the Covenant unconditional. Its fulfillment is based purely on God's grace regardless of how often Abraham or his seed may fail" (ibid., p. 573).

The Abrahamic Covenant is immutable, irrevocable and eternal. It is immutable, "And he said, O Lord Jehovah, whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it? And he said unto him, Take me a heifer three years old... And it came to pass, that, when the sun went down, and it was dark, behold, a smoking furnace, and a flaming torch that passed between these pieces. In that day Jehovah made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates. The Kenite, and the Kenizzite, and the Kadmonite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, and the Rephaim, and the Amorite, and the Canaanite, and the Girgashite, and the Jebusite" (Gen. 15:8-21). "For when God made the promise to Abraham, since He could swear by no one greater, He swore by Himself, saying, 'I WILL SURELY BLESS YOU, AND I WILL SURELY MULTIPLY YOU.' And thus, having patiently waited, he obtained the promise. For men swear by one greater than themselves, and with them an oath given as confirmation is an end of every dispute. In the same way God, desiring even more to show to the heirs of the promise the unchangeableness of His purpose, interposed with an oath, in order that by two unchangeable things, in which it is impossible for God to lie, we may have strong encouragement, we who have fled for refuge in laying hold of the hope set before us" (Heb. 6:13-18). "The covenant declared immutable. The New Testament declares the Abrahamic covenant immutable (Heb. 6:13-18; cf. Gen. 15:8-21). It was not only promised but solemnly confirmed by the oath of God" (Walvoord, MK, p. 152). irrevocable, "For I do not want you, brethren, to be uninformed of this mystery, lest you be wise in your own estimation, that a partial hardening has happened to Israel until the fulness of the Gentiles has come in; and thus all Israel will be saved; just as it is written, 'THE DELIVERER WILL COME FROM ZION, HE WILL REMOVE UNGODLINESS FROM JACOB. AND THIS IS MY COVENANT WITH THEM, WHEN I TAKE AWAY THEIR SINS.' From the standpoint of the gospel they are enemies for your sake, but from the standpoint of God's choice they are beloved for the sake of the fathers; for the gifts and the calling of God are irrevocable" (Rom. 11:25-29). "...the Abrahamic covenant... was irrevocable" (Geisler, ST, 4:467) and eternal. "He hath remembered his covenant for ever, The word which he commanded to a thousand generations, The covenant which he made with Abraham, And his oath unto Isaac, And confirmed the same unto Jacob for a statute, To Israel for an everlasting covenant” (Ps. 105:8–10) “This [Abrahamic] covenant reaches on to eternity, being everlasting in its duration” (Chafer, ST, p. 313). “The original covenant established with Abraham cannot be abrogated or fail” (McClain, GK, p. 89).

The Abrahamic Covenant is yet to be fulfilled. It is still in effect, “Christ redeemed us from the curse of the Law, having become a curse for us — for it is written, ‘CURSED IS EVERYONE WHO HANGS ON A TREE’ — in order that in Christ Jesus the blessing of Abraham might come to the Gentiles, so that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith. Brethren, I speak in terms of human relations: even though it is only a man’s covenant, yet when it has been ratified, no one sets it aside or adds conditions to it. Now the promises were spoken to Abraham and to his seed. He does not say, ‘And to seeds,’ as referring to many, but rather to one, ‘And to your seed,’ that is, Christ. What I am saying is this: the Law, which came four hundred and thirty years later, does not invalidate a covenant previously ratified by God, so as to nullify the promise. For if the inheritance is based on law, it is no longer based on a promise; but God has granted it to Abraham by means of a promise” (Gal. 3:13–18). “The original Abrahamic covenant, from which the others spring, in consequence alone remains in complete force. The covenant of this dispensation, called the New Testament, or the New Covenant, is none other than the Abrahamic renewed or confirmed by Jesus the Christ” (Peters, TTK, 1:320). “By the death of the Seed provision is made so ‘that ([Galatians 3] v. 13, 14) the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith,’—i.e. the promise contained in the Abrahamic covenant” (ibid., p. 321). “We are living under the precious Abrahamic covenant, which is renewed or confirmed in Christ; and if we desire to inherit with Abraham and Christ, we must, by faith, become the seed of Abraham, and thus come into proper covenant relationship” (ibid.). “The very engrafting or adoption of Gentile believers into the covenanted, elect nation [place of Abrahamic blessing—ed.], is itself evidence that we live under the reconfirmed Abrahamic covenant” (ibid., p. 324). “The Abrahamic covenant is an existing one, made sure by the death of Christ, under which we have the hope of inheritance, and which shall finally be realized” (ibid., p. 325). “Under what covenant do we now live? ...the church now lived under the Abrahamic covenant and that it would ultimately reap the promises of that covenant and that the new covenant was the Abrahamic renewed or confirmed by the death of Christ, so that we had the strongest possible assurance in its realization” (ibid., p. 326). “Clarke (Ten Religions, p. 403), who regards Abraham’s life and influence alone from a historic point, remarks: ‘the most curious fact about this Jewish people is, that every one of them is a child of Abraham’ which ‘ancestral pride’ ‘has never been the case with any other nation.’ The reason is evident: the covenant relationship demanded such a descent, for it is only the children of Abraham, natural and adopted, that can obtain the promises. This was felt and acknowledged from the express terms of the covenant; and that covenant instead of being rescinded, annulled, or altered remains to-day in full force” (ibid., p. 400). “...the ever-continued, because covenanted, preeminence of the Jewish nation” (ibid.). “Because the Abrahamic Covenant is unconditional, it is still very much in effect though it has remained largely unfulfilled. The ultimate fulfillment will come during the Kingdom Age” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 577). and has not yet been entirely fulfilled. “the descendants never possessed the land promised to Abraham from the Nile to the Euphrates” (Peters, TTK, 1:297) “The past non-fulfillment insures the future fulfillment, as God is faithful in all His promises” (ibid., p. 298). “...that Christ is ‘the highest and last representative of the Abrahamic covenant.’ No! Never! For the covenant comprehends immensely more than the incarnation of the Messiah; it embraces His inheritance and future glory; it is world-embracing, for, as will be shown hereafter, in its brief but pregnant sentences, it includes the resurrection, restoration, and inheriting of the Patriarchs and of their believing descendants and of the adopted seed,—the Kingdom under the reign of that pre-eminent Seed, the ultimate salvation of the race as a race, the final removal of the curse, and the perfected Redemption of man and the creation” (ibid., p. 328). “Christ Himself is the subject of covenanted promise not yet fulfilled, and therefore the covenant is not superseded in Christ, for that would destroy promises pertaining to Him” (ibid., p. 329). “Let a peculiarity, attached to the fulfillment of this covenant, be deeply pondered, viz.: that in the history of a partial fulfillment in the past, it has never yet been so realized as to meet the natural wisdom of man, or to answer to the general anticipations of the period when thus fulfilled. Observe this procedure in the very beginning, when Abraham, contrary to all human expectations, raised up Seed in the covenanted line against the course of nature. And down to the miraculous birth of Abraham’s pre-eminent Seed, all things were so ordered that they did not meet the expectations of the mass of the nation. The Advent itself, a strictly literal fulfillment, did not meet the hopes entertained by the Jews. The calling of the Gentiles, to raise up a seed unto Abraham, was a thing unanticipated. Judging from the writings of the Church, its expectations have been repeatedly disappointed, so much so that now men deliberately and unhesitatingly deny some of the most precious promises of the covenants, both relating to the Christ and His co-heirs, as e.g. the restoration of the Davidic throne and Kingdom and the inheriting of the land. Analogy teaches us what prophecy distinctly announces, that at the period when this covenant is to be most amply fulfilled by the Christ who confirmed it, the multitude including the kings and nations of the earth, will be arrayed against it, will have no faith in its realization. This, alone, should make us thoughtful and careful” (ibid., p. 335). Regarding the timing of the fulfillment of the provisions of the covenant, “...the Epistle of Barnabas, who (Sec. 14 and 15) positively argues that God has not yet fulfilled the Abrahamic covenant, excepting in sending the Seed, Christ, who is the covenanted pledge that the remainder will be realized at the Sec. Advent, at ‘the day of restitution,’ at ‘the renewal of all things’” (Peters, TTK, 1:324). “As stated earlier, while a covenant may be signed and sealed at a specific point of time, this does not mean that every provision goes immediately into effect. Three things happen. Some go into effect immediately, such as the changing of Abram’s and Sarai’s names and circumcision. Some go into effect in the near future, such as the birth of Isaac (25 years) and the Egyptian sojourn, enslavement, and the Exodus (400 years). Some go into effect in the distant future, such as the possession of all of the Promised Land by the patriarchs and their descendants” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 581). It is not to be fulfilled entirely by the Church. “...the exalting of means to accomplish the covenant into the covenant itself; the elevation of this dispensation, which is only preparatory, into the covenant; the making the Gospel, which gives the glad tidings how the covenant is to be realized and that we are invited to participate in its realization, the covenant, etc.” (Peters, TTK, 1:330). “No land is promised to the Church” [quoting Chafer, Systematic Theology, 4:310-311] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 519). It is to be fulfilled literally. “Was not Christ Abraham’s natural seed, and if so, did ‘seed’ stand for a type? Certainly not, for there is a literal fulfillment of promise” (Peters, TTK, 1:291). “How the Patriarchs understood this is evident by referring to what Isaac said to Jacob when he sent him away to Laban (Gen. 28:1-4): ‘God Almighty bless thee, and make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, that thou mayest be a multitude of people; and give thee the blessing of Abraham, to thee and to thy seed with thee, that thou mayest inherit the land, wherein thou art a stranger, which God gave unto Abraham.’ Can language be more definite? Does God so carefully reiterate the personal inheriting (and as carefully discriminate from such inheriting a present temporary sojourn in the land), of the land by the Patriarchs, and yet mean something very different from what the words properly denote? Many, alas, tell us yes! But we respond, No! Never” (ibid., p. 294)! “Evidently that which misleads the multitude in this matter is the statement of the apostle (Heb. 11:16 [‘But as it is, they desire a better country, that is a heavenly one. Therefore God is not ashamed to be called their God; for He has prepared a city for them.’]), that ‘they desire a better country, that is, a heavenly.’ Commentators, as Barnes, Bloomfield, etc., overlooking entirely the Theocratic relationship that this country (i.e. Palestine) is to occupy in the Kingdom of God, at once conclude that this ‘heavenly’ country is the third heaven. They forget that this phraseology would not mislead a Hebrew, who was accustomed to designate the restored Davidic Kingdom a heavenly Kingdom, and the country enjoying its restoration and Theocratic blessings, a heavenly country. The expression does not mean ‘the third heaven,’ but something that pertains to, or partakes of, the heavenly, as heavenly vision, body, calling, etc.” (ibid., p. 295). “The express language, as e.g. ‘the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it and to thy seed,’ precludes the typical theory” (ibid., p. 299). “Multitudes allow themselves to be influenced in spiritualizing these promises because ‘a city’ is promised to Abraham, which is taken for granted to be the third heaven, etc. But the churches established by the apostles had no such idea... the future city of God is represented (Rev. 21:2, 10) as coming out of heaven upon this earth and remaining here” (ibid., p. 300). “How often is the heart pained at the exceeding rashness of many, who either reject the language as ‘grossly carnal,’ or make it typical of something else, or spiritualize it into another meaning to suit a theory” (ibid., p. 303). “The very coming of the Seed covenanted to Abraham, insures the fulfillment of the covenant as written... Literally He came, vindicating the truthfulness of the covenant given many centuries before, and teaching us, if we will but receive it, that every promise will be literally verified” (ibid., p. 331). “[The] Abrahamic Covenant... The partial fulfillment recorded to the present has confirmed the intent of God to give literal fulfillment to the promises” (Walvoord, MK, 2:192). “‘Much of the covenant has already been fulfilled and fulfilled literally; therefore, what remains to be fulfilled will also be fulfilled literally’” [quoting Ryrie, Basic Theology, p. 457] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 336). It is to be fulfilled by Abraham, Isaac and Jacob personally (as well as by Israel nationally). “God gives us His ‘Memorial,’ which was to be ‘unto all generations’ (Ex. 3:15), ‘Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel: The Lord God of your Fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, the God of Jacob hath sent me unto you; this is my name forever, and this is my memorial unto all generations.’... Jesus, well knowing how the Jews held that the Patriarchs would be raised from the dead to inherit the land, told them that Moses taught a resurrection when ‘he called the Lord, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.’ This Memorial was then given as proof (Luke 20:37) ‘that the dead are raised,’ and not, as many would teach us, of the immortality of the Patriarchs and their condition in the intermediate state. Neither immortality, nor the intermediate state, was the subject of dispute; the resurrection of the dead was denied, and the resurrection of the dead was defended... the covenant necessitates a resurrection... they themselves, personally, shall inherit the land” (Peters, TTK, 1:296). “Mede (Works, B. 4, Ep. 43), Brooks (El. Proph. Interp., p. 33), and others tell us how Rabbi Gamaliel, the Preceptor of Paul, silenced the Sadducees by bringing against them Deut. 11:21, ‘which land the Lord swore that He would give to your fathers,’ arguing ‘that as Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob had it not, and God cannot lie, therefore they must be raised from the dead to inherit it’” (ibid., p. 297). “Owing to the intervention of death, the temporary sojourn in the land is not recognized as the one that the covenant contemplates, for the latter presents it as ‘an everlasting possession.’ Hence... the [Mosaic/Davidic/Solomonic–ed.] Theocracy even was only an earnest of the Theocracy reestablished in power and glory, with its promised perpetuity, etc.” (ibid., p. 301). “It is simply folly to say that God promises certain things to the Patriarchs personally, and then tells them that they must experience death before they are realized, and leave the matter in this condition” (ibid.). “Since God had revealed Himself as the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob (Ex. 3:15), with whom He had entered into covenant relationships; since these men had died without receiving the fulfillment of the promises (Heb. 11:13); and since the covenants could not be broken, it was necessary for God to raise these men from the dead in order to fulfill His word” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 81). “In order for God to fulfill His promise to Abram, two things have to occur. Abram must be resurrected, and the Land must be restored to Israel” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 421). It is to be fulfilled by Christ. “And the land shall not be sold in perpetuity; for the land is mine [Jehovah’s, vs. 1]: for ye are strangers and sojourners with me” (Lev. 25:23). “and it shall sweep onward into Judah; it shall overflow and pass through; it shall reach even to the neck; and the stretching out of its wings shall fill the breadth of thy land, O Immanuel” (Isa. 8:8). “Therefore, son of man, prophesy, and say unto Gog, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: In that day when my people Israel dwelleth securely, shalt thou not know it? And thou shalt come from thy place out of the uttermost parts of the north, thou, and many peoples with thee, all of them riding upon horses, a great company and a mighty army; and thou shalt come up against my people Israel, as a cloud to cover the land: it shall come to pass in the latter days, that I will bring thee against my land, that the nations may know me, when I shall be sanctified in thee, O Gog, before their eyes” (Ezek. 38:14-16). “Then was Jehovah jealous for his land, and had pity on his people” (Joel 2:18). “Now the promises were spoken to Abraham and to his seed. He does not say, ‘And to seeds,’ as referring to many, but rather to one, ‘And to your seed,’ that is, Christ. What I am saying is this: the Law, which came four hundred and thirty years later, does not invalidate a covenant previously ratified by God, so as to nullify the promise” (Gal. 3:16-17). “and to Jesus, the mediator of a new covenant, and to the sprinkled blood, which speaks better than the blood of Abel” (Heb. 12:24). “Now (Gal. 3:16) to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, “And to seeds” as of many, but as of one, “And to thy seed,” which is Christ.’... the Seed, which is Christ, is to inherit the land... proprietorship in the land of Canaan is expressly reserved to God Himself (Lev. 25:23): “The land shall not be sold forever; for the land is mine”... This land is called ‘His land’ (Joel 2:18, ‘My land’ (Ezek. 38:16), ‘Immanuel’s land’ (Isa. 8:8); and being a covenanted inheritance of Abraham’s and David’s Seed, it is called ‘Thine inheritance’” (Peters, TTK, 1:302). “The promise specifically is to the one Seed, and through Him to others” (ibid., p. 303). “Jesus becomes, by virtue of His being the Seed of Abraham and because of His death (which provides the way of ultimate fulfillment through resurrection power, etc.), ‘the surety’ of its final realization” (ibid., p. 322). “Now, instead of having the eye of faith solely directed to the future for the Seed as it once was, it is directed to the Seed as He came at the First Advent, and, hopeful at what it sees thus far, it looks onward to the Seed, glorified, as He shall come again” (ibid., p. 334).

The Abrahamic Covenant is to be received by us by faith. “This Abrahamic covenant was always received by faith, simple faith. Thus the Patriarchs, the ancient worthies, the Apostolic Fathers, and many others, have received it. It demands to-day the same simple, confiding faith exercised by Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, only that, in view of what God has done to verify it through Christ, we are less excusable if we do not entertain such faith” (Peters, TTK, 1:334).

The Patriarchs’ History From Abraham to the Exodus

In the Bible, the entire history of the world up until Abraham is covered in just eleven chapters, in Genesis chapters one through eleven. Then the pace of the narrative slows dramatically. The story of Abraham alone takes up the next fourteen chapters of Genesis, through chapter twenty-five, then the stories of Isaac and Jacob fill the remaining twenty-five chapters of the book. This God-ordained allocation of textual real estate should give us a hint as to the relative importance of Abraham and his immediate descendants Isaac and Jacob (Israel) to the overall Kingdom program. “The more particular, detailed history of the world rightly begins with the history of Abraham (which alone occupies far more space than the whole antediluvian period) owing to its important covenanted relationship” (Peters, TTK, 3:492).

Summarizing the history of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in Genesis, particularly as it relates to the Kingdom, “Now Jehovah said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father’s house, unto the land that I will show thee. And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great. And be thou a blessing. And I will bless them that bless thee, and him that curseth thee will I curse. And in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed. So Abram went, as Jehovah had spoken unto him. And Lot went with him. And Abram was seventy and five years old when he departed out of Haran. And Abram took Sarai his wife, and Lot his brother’s son, and all their substance that they had gathered, and the souls that they had gotten in Haran. And they went forth to go into the land of Canaan. And into the land of Canaan they came. And Abram passed through the land unto the place of Shechem, unto the oak of Moreh. And the Canaanite was then in the land. And Jehovah appeared unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land. And there builded he an altar unto Jehovah, who appeared unto him” (Gen. 12:1-7). “And the king of Sodom went out to meet him, after his return from the slaughter of Chedorlaomer and the kings that were with him, at the vale of Shaveh the same is the King’s Vale. And Melchizedek king of Salem brought forth bread and wine. And he was priest of God Most High. And he blessed him, and said, Blessed be Abram of God Most High, possessor of heaven and earth. And blessed be God Most High, who hath delivered thine enemies into thy hand. And he gave him a tenth of all. And the king of Sodom said unto Abram, Give me the persons, and take the goods to thyself. And Abram said to the king of Sodom, I have lifted up my hand unto Jehovah, God Most High, possessor of heaven and earth, that I will not take a thread nor a shoe-latchet nor aught that is thine, lest thou shouldest say, I have made Abram rich. Save only that which the young men have eaten, and the portion of the men that went with me, Aner, Eshcol, and Mamre. Let them taken their portion” (Gen. 14:17–24). “And Jehovah visited Sarah as he had said, and Jehovah did unto Sarah as he had spoken. And Sarah conceived, and bare Abraham a son in his old age, at the set time of which God had spoken to him. And Abraham called the name of his son that was born unto him, whom Sarah bare to him, Isaac” (Gen. 21:1-3). “And God said unto Abraham, Let it not be grievous in thy sight because of the lad, and because of thy handmaid. In all that Sarah saith unto thee, hearken unto her voice. For in Isaac shall thy seed be called” (Gen. 21:12). “and said, By myself have I sworn, saith Jehovah, because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heavens, and as the sand which is upon the seashore. And thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies. And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. Because thou hast obeyed my voice” (Gen. 22:16-18). “And Abraham gave all that he had unto Isaac” (Gen. 25:5-6). “And it came to pass after the death of Abraham, that God blessed Isaac his son. And Isaac dwelt by Beer-lahairoi” (Gen. 25:11). “And Isaac entreated Jehovah for his wife, because she was barren. And Jehovah was entreated of him, and Rebekah his wife conceived. And the children struggled together within her. And she said, If it be so, wherefore do I live? And she went to inquire of Jehovah. And Jehovah said unto her, Two nations are in thy womb, And two peoples shall be separated from thy bowels. And the one people shall be stronger than the other people. And the elder shall serve the younger. And when her days to be delivered were fulfilled, behold, there were twins in her womb. And the first came forth red, all over like a hairy garment. And they called his name Esau. And after that came forth his brother, and his hand had hold on Esau’s heel. And his name was called Jacob. And Isaac was threescore years old when she bare them. And the boys grew. And Esau was a skilful hunter, a man of the field. And Jacob was a quiet man, dwelling in tents. Now Isaac loved Esau, because he did eat of his venison. And Rebekah loved Jacob. And Jacob boiled pottage. And Esau came in from the field, and he was faint. And Esau said to Jacob, Feed me, I pray thee, with that same red pottage. For I am faint. Therefore was his name called Edom. And Jacob said, Sell me first thy birthright. And Esau said, Behold, I am about to die. And what profit shall the birthright do to me? And Jacob said, Swear to me first. And he sware unto him. And he sold his birthright unto Jacob. And Jacob gave Esau bread and pottage of lentils. And he did eat and drink, and rose up, and went his way. So Esau despised his birthright” (Gen. 25:21-34). “And Jehovah appeared unto him [Isaac, vs. 18] the same night, and said, I am the God of Abraham thy father. Fear not, for I am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed for my servant Abraham's sake” (Gen. 26:24). “And Isaac called Jacob, and blessed him, and charged him, and said unto him, Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan. Arise, go to Paddan-aram, to the house of Bethuel thy mother's father. And take thee a wife from thence of the daughters of Laban thy mother's brother. And God Almighty bless thee, and make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, that thou mayest be a company of peoples. And give thee the blessing of Abraham, to thee, and to thy seed with thee. That thou mayest inherit the land of thy sojournings, which God gave unto Abraham” (Gen. 28:1-4). “And God appeared unto Jacob again, when he came from Paddan-aram, and blessed him. And God said unto him, Thy name is Jacob: thy name shall not be called any more Jacob, but Israel shall be thy name: and he called his name Israel. And God said unto him, I am God Almighty: be fruitful and multiply; a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins; and the land which I gave unto Abraham and Isaac, to thee I will give it, and to thy seed after thee will I give the land” (Gen. 35:9-12). “Judah, thee shall thy brethren praise: Thy hand shall be on the neck of thine enemies; Thy father's sons shall bow down before thee. Judah is a lion's whelp; From the prey, my son, thou art gone up: He stooped down, he couched as a lion, And as a lioness; who shall rouse him up? The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, Nor the ruler's staff from between his feet, Until Shiloh come: And unto him shall the obedience of the peoples be. Binding his foal unto the vine, And his ass's colt unto the choice vine; He hath washed his garments in wine, And his vesture in the blood of grapes: His eyes shall be red with wine, And his teeth white with milk” (Gen. 49:8-12). “The word ‘sceptre’ indicates Kingly power, and the word ‘Shiloh’ is a name for the Messiah” (Larkin, DT, p. 82). “and one of the elders said to me, ‘Stop weeping; behold, the Lion that is from the tribe of Judah, the Root of David, has overcome so as to open the book and its seven seals” (Rev. 5:5). “And Joseph said unto his brethren, I die; but God will surely visit you, and bring you up out of this land unto the land which he sware to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob” (Gen. 50:24). (See also Genesis 13:12-17, 15:1-21, 17:1-22, 18:11-14, 24:59-60, 26:1-5, 27:18-30 and 28:10-15.)

Dr. McClain reviews Abraham's history: “Following the frustration of man's first attempt to establish a world state, and the resultant rise of nationalism through the confusion of language, God turned away from ‘man’ in the collective sense and called out one particular man through whom the divine regal will is to be accomplished on earth (Gen. 12:1-4)” (GK, p. 49). “The covenant with Abraham, of course, is essentially prophetic in nature and therefore will be discussed later... But this covenant is also a matter of history, and its fulfillment began incipiently at once to run its course. In Abraham, and later in both Isaac and Jacob, the mediatorial idea began to take concrete form historically in miniature. For Jehovah spoke immediately to these patriarchs, and they in turn mediated the divine will, although often very imperfectly” (ibid., p. 50). “The Genesis record indicates that, within the scope of their own families, these great Hebrew men were genuine mediators through whom God ruled in the chosen line of humanity. They were almost absolute rulers in their own household, or clan, which included not only their own progeny but also servants, retainers, and even fighting men (Gen. 14:14). In their hands rested the power of life and death, as may be seen in the seeming callous exposure of Hagar and her child (Gen. 21:9-21), and in the freedom with which Abraham moved to offer up his son (Gen. 22). Furthermore, in his successful military expedition against the allied kings who had ravaged the Jordan Valley and carried away Lot, Abraham unquestionably regarded his slaughter of the kings as an act in harmony with the will of God (Gen. 14). It must not be overlooked, however, that in the exercise of their regal authority, the patriarchs are always held immediately responsible to God for their acts” (ibid.). “It is significantly in connection with Abraham that the strange and interesting figure of Melchizedek appears with tantalizing brevity in the inspired historical record (Gen. 14:17-24). The important point to be noticed is that he is named in Scripture ‘king of Salem’ and ‘priest of the most high God,’ and also that Abraham recognized him as a true regal representative of the true God by giving to him a tithe of all the booty taken in the battle. Whether or not Melchizedek stood alone in this capacity outside the Abrahamic line, the record does not state. It is possible that in the era before Abraham there were other kings who held a similar mediatorial authority between their subjects and the true God. At any rate, this one historical example is ample proof that the mediatorial idea was not totally unknown in the period before the call of Abraham. And the citation of this case in the inspired record may be intended to remind us that the God of the Bible is the God of both Jews and Gentiles (Rom. 3:29), and also to point typically to the future Mediatorial Kingdom when ‘the one mediator between God and men’ (1 Tim. 2:5) will reign over all nations, both Jew and Gentile” (ibid.). “The appearance of Melchizedek at this precise point in Biblical history has significance dispensationally. The meeting of these two great figures, Abraham and Melchizedek, marks the end of an era and the beginning of a new order of things. As Westcott has said of the latter, ‘The lessons of his appearance lie in the appearance itself. Abraham marks a new departure... But before the fresh order is established we have a vision of the old in its superior majesty; and this, on the eve of disappearance, gives its blessing to the new.’ The ‘superior majesty’ of which Westcott speaks is, of course, a typical superiority” (ibid., p. 51). Pentecost adds, “Abram had been brought up in a pagan household (Josh. 24:2 [And Joshua said unto all the people, Thus saith Jehovah, the God of Israel, Your fathers dwelt of old time beyond the River, even Terah, the father of Abraham, and the father of Nahor: and they served other gods.]), in a pagan culture, and was dedicated to the worship of pagan gods. Indeed, at the time God appeared to him Abram lived in spiritual darkness” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 51). “The experience of the fullness of God’s blessings depended on the fullness of Abram’s obedience” (ibid., p. 54).

The Sojourn in Egypt

In Exodus we have the story of the Israelites’ exodus from Egypt, in which it is made evident that Israel as a nation was to play a unique and important role in Jehovah’s Kingdom program. “But against any of the children of Israel shall not a dog move his tongue, against man or beast: that ye may know how that Jehovah doth make a distinction between the Egyptians and Israel” (Exodus 11:7). “Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be mine own possession from among all peoples: for all the earth is mine: and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and a holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel” (Exodus 19:5-6). “But as the time of the promise was approaching which God had assured to Abraham, the people increased and multiplied in Egypt” (Acts 7:17)

Dr. McClain summarizes, “The departure of Israel from the promised land to go down into Egypt, apparently with divine approval (Gen. 46:1-4 [And Israel took his journey with all that he had, and came to Beer-sheba, and offered sacrifices unto the God of his father Isaac. And God spake unto Israel in the visions of the night, and said, Jacob, Jacob. And he said, Here am I. And he said, I am God, the God of thy father: fear not to go down into Egypt; for I will there make of thee a great nation: I will go down with thee into Egypt; and I will also surely bring thee up again: and Joseph shall put his hand upon thine eyes.]), raises the ancient theological problem of the relation between human freedom and divine sovereignty. It will help us here to remember that divine precept and prophecy are two wholly different matters. The former tells man what he ought to do (Gen. 12:1 [Now Jehovah said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto the land that I will show thee.]), while the latter foretells what man actually will do (Gen. 15:13 [And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety that thy seed shall be sojourners in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them. And they shall afflict them four hundred years.]). In the case of Jacob, once the fateful decision had been made, with all its complicated background of wrongdoing, then God graciously came to the patriarch with a reassurance that the promises will hold good in spite of human failure. Israel was responsible for his choices and would certainly suffer for his waywardness, but through all the tangled web of circumstances the providential purpose of God would be carried out” (GK, p. 51). “Thus the sojourn in Egypt, under God, became a providential means of disciplinary training. There the chosen people were brought in contact with a high and well-organized civilization; a great leader was raised up who was learned in all the wisdom of Egypt; yet a sufficient measure of oppression was permitted to weld the tribes into a nation in preparation for the theocratic kingdom soon to be established” (ibid.). Pentecost adds, “God brought the people into bondage in order that they might experience the redemption that He would provide” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 70).

Chapter 10: The Theocratic Kingdom

Upon the Israelites' exodus from Egypt, Jehovah God established the descendants of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob as the world's first, and one and only theocratic, or God-ruled nation. The legal bases of the Theocratic Kingdom of Israel were the Abrahamic, Mosaic and Palestinian Covenants. Following its establishment at Mt. Sinai, the Kingdom developed via the Israelites' occupation of Palestine and its subsequent theocratic governance by Israel's judges, eventually reaching its heights in the Davidic and Solomonic monarchies.

Basis of the Jewish Theocracy

The bases or legal foundations of the Theocratic Kingdom of Israel were the Abrahamic, Mosaic and Palestinian Covenants. We covered the Abrahamic Covenant in our previous chapter; we'll cover the Mosaic and Palestinian Covenants in this chapter.

Covenant #5: The Mosaic Covenant

The Mosaic Covenant was the second covenant that Jehovah made with Israel, the first one being the Abrahamic Covenant. It was made and ratified with the Israelites at Mt. Sinai, immediately after their exodus from Egypt and before their forty-year wilderness wandering.

Purposes of the Mosaic Covenant

The primary purposes of the Mosaic Covenant were to sanctify or set Israel apart from all other nations as Jehovah's one and only theocratic nation, and to provide the people of Israel with a rule of life that would be befitting their unique identity. "Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be mine own possession from among all peoples: for all the earth is mine: and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and a holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel" (Ex. 19:5-6). "The law covenant came by Moses (John 1:17; Ex 20:1-31:18), and was given by Jehovah as a conditional blessing to those who kept the Mosaic Law. It was made at Sinai where Jehovah said, 'Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for all the earth is mine: and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation' (Ex. 19:5-6). Both the blessings and curses related to this covenant are stated in detail in Deuteronomy 28:1-68. This covenant is a rule of life addressed to a people who are in covenant relation to God by physical birth" (Chafer, ST, 4:314). "The Mosaic covenant... According to the terms of this covenant, the nation of Israel would be established in the promised land, and her regal rights under the Abrahamic covenant would be exercised there as long as the nation obeyed the voice of God as expressed in the Mosaic Code of laws (Exod. 19:5-6 ff.)” (McClain, GK, p. 156). “The Mosaic covenant dealt not with the blessings of being given the land, but with the conditions of living in the land” (Geisler, ST, 4:513). “Israel became the people of God through its Mosaic Covenant relationship with Him” (Showers, M, p. 230) “The unsaved members of Israel were as much the Mosaic Covenant people of God as were the saved members” (ibid., p. 231)

Statement of the Mosaic Covenant

The Mosaic Covenant is stated in Exodus 20:1-31:18, filling twelve chapters of the Bible, so we won't be quoting it all here. It begins with the Ten Commandments, and consists of a total of six hundred thirteen laws, designed to govern the religious, moral and civil aspects of Jewish life. It also includes seven national feasts or festivals that are described in Leviticus 23:1-44. “...three definite elements: religious, moral, and civil... All the various aspects of the Mosaic Code fall within these three general realms” (McClain, GK, p. 65)

Characteristics of the Mosaic Covenant

The Mosaic Covenant was given to Israel only. “Jehovah made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day” (Deut. 5:3). “Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was a husband unto them, saith Jehovah. But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith Jehovah: I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write it; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people: and they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know Jehovah; for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith Jehovah: for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin will I remember no more” (Jer. 31:31-34). “The command to observe the Sabbath was given to Israel EXCLUSIVELY... The Sabbath Day then belongs to the Jews alone and is not binding on the Gentiles (the world), or on the Church (Christians)” (Larkin, DT, p. 31). “It is a noteworthy fact that the whole of the ‘Ten Commandments’ (Ex. 20:1-17) are reaffirmed in the New Testament, except the ‘Fourth Commandment’ regarding the Sabbath” (ibid.). However, provision was made within it for individual Gentiles. “The Mosaic Law was never addressed to Gentiles ‘except for those Gentiles who become proselytes to Mosaic Judaism’” [quoting Chafer, ST, 4:159-162] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 376). “The conditional Mosaic Covenant... This was the middle wall of partition. Essentially, it kept the Gentiles from enjoying the spiritual blessings of the four unconditional covenants. For a Gentile to receive the blessings of the unconditional covenants, he had to totally submit to the Mosaic Law, take upon himself the obligations of the law and, for all practical purposes, live as a son of Abraham” (ibid., p. 635).

The Mosaic Law was not salvific, but rather was merely a rule of life for the Jewish People, who were already in covenant relationship with God. “It is extremely important to remember that the Law of Moses was given to a redeemed people, not to redeem a people” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 87). “Because of immaturity Israel needed the Law, and because God is gracious, He provided it” (ibid., p. 88). “The Law was designed to be a schoolmaster for Israel to control every area of the people’s lives. They as God’s children were not responsible to make decisions—their decisions were made for them by the Law. Their only responsibility then was to put themselves under its authority as a schoolmaster and to obey” (ibid., p. 94). “Now, had it been designed as a means of salvation, the Law would have been a total failure and never could have been called good” (ibid.). “Paul did not give up what he considered to be bad for what was good, but he gave up what was good for that which was better; namely the superior worth there is in knowing Christ Jesus as Lord (Phil. 3:8 [More than that, I count all things to be loss in view of the surpassing value of knowing Christ Jesus my Lord, for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and count them but rubbish in order that I may gain Christ])” (ibid.). “The Mosaic law under the dispensational approach, while a way of life, is not considered a way of salvation. Heaven was not among its rewards nor was hell among its punishments” (Walvoord, MK, p. 80). “That the law was not a means of redemption is evident in that it was given to Israel only after the redemption from Egypt” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 379). “As with the Law of Moses, instructions and commandments of the New Testament are not the means of salvation but they are a ‘heavenly rule of life’ for those who are heavenly citizens through the power of God.” [quoting Chafer, Systematic Theology, 4:159-162] (ibid.). “Covenant Theologians need to stop ignoring such clear statements by Dispensationalists who have always rejected the teaching that the Law of Moses was a means of salvation” (ibid., p. 437).

The Mosaic Covenant was a conditional covenant. “An he cried unto Jehovah; And Jehovah showed him a tree, and he cast it into the waters, and the waters were made sweet. There he made for them a statute and an ordinance, and there he proved them; and he said, If thou wilt diligently hearken to the voice of Jehovah thy God, and wilt do that which is right in his eyes, and wilt give ear to his commandments, and keep all his statutes, I will put none of the diseases upon thee, which I have put upon the Egyptians: for I am Jehovah that healeth thee” (Ex. 15:25-26). “Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bare you on eagles’ wings, and brought you unto myself. Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be mine own possession from among all peoples: for all the earth is mine” (Ex. 19:4-5) “The Sinaitic Covenant... its conditional nature” (Peters, TTK, 1:311) “This life-governing covenant, being conditional, has been broken by men and will be superseded by the new covenant” (Chafer, ST, 4:314). “A sixth, and very crucial, feature of the kingdom-covenant with Israel was its conditional nature. The introductory clause lays down the divine condition: ‘If ye will obey my voice indeed’ (Exod. 19:5). And the central thing thus qualified is stated in the words which follow: ‘Ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests’ (vs. 6). In this conditional feature we have one great difference between the initial covenant with Abraham and the kingdom-covenant at Sinai, for they are not the same (Deut. 5:3 [Jehovah made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day.]). The latter was made dependent on obedience; and on this ground its continuity could be interrupted, and was historically, by the failure of the people. But the terms of the Abrahamic covenant, being wholly sovereign and unconditioned, hold good in every age. As to the conditionality of the kingdom-covenant at Sinai, it is important to remember that this had to do only with the regal and mediatorial activity of Israel in her own land in relation to Jehovah and the nations. There is no question here of the position of Israel as the elect nation of God. Neither is there here any proposal of an individual salvation based on legal obedience. Although the Law was given to Israel upon this occasion, the covenant does not set forth a way of salvation by means of law-keeping. The conditional clause qualifies the continuance of the nation of Israel in her favored position in the mediatorial kingdom of Old Testament history, functioning as God’s ‘kingdom of priests’ among the nations on earth” (McClain, GK, p. 62). “Thus it is clear that we have here a covenant which is conditional, that is, dependent for its fulfillment upon the actions of the people. In this respect, the Mosaic covenant is radically different from both the Abrahamic covenant which preceded it and the Davidic covenant which followed it. The terrible curses of divine judgment attached to the Mosaic covenant are wholly absent from the other two” (ibid., p. 156). “It was precisely this conditional nature of the Mosaic covenant that led to its failure. Since its fulfillment depended on man’s complete obedience (Deut. 27:26), it could not succeed... For this reason there had to be a ‘new covenant’ to replace it” (ibid., p. 157). “In contrast to the Abrahamic Covenant, which was unconditional, the Mosaic Covenant was conditional ([Ex.] 15:25-26; 19:4-5; 26:3-46[?—ed.])” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 85). “A conditional covenant... the Mosaic Covenant is such a covenant” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 335). “Of the five Jewish covenants, the Mosaic was the only conditional one” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 404). “Unlike the unconditional Abrahamic covenant, the Mosaic covenant was conditional” (Geisler, ST, 4:511).

The Mosaic Covenant was temporary. “Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was a husband unto them, saith Jehovah. But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith Jehovah: I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write it; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people: and they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know Jehovah; for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith Jehovah: for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin will I remember no more” (Jer. 31:31-34). “Or do you not know, brethren (for I am speaking to those who know the law), that the law has jurisdiction over a person as long as he lives? For the married woman is bound by law to her husband while he is living; but if her husband dies, she is released from the law concerning the husband... But now we have been released from the Law, having died to that by which we were bound, so that we serve in newness of the Spirit and not in oldness of the letter” (Rom. 7:1-6). “You are our letter, written in our hearts, known and read by all men; being manifested that you are a letter of Christ, cared for by us, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God, not on tablets of stone, but on tablets of human hearts. And such confidence we have through Christ toward God. Not that we are adequate in ourselves to consider anything as coming from ourselves, but our adequacy is from God, who also made us adequate as servants of a new covenant, not of the letter, but of the Spirit; for the letter kills, but the Spirit gives life. But if the ministry of death, in letters engraved on stones, came with glory, so that the sons of Israel could not look intently at the face of Moses because of the glory of his face, fading as it was, how shall the ministry of the Spirit fail to be even more with glory? For if the ministry of condemnation has glory, much more does the ministry of righteousness abound in glory. For indeed what had glory, in this case has no glory on account of the glory that surpasses it. For if that which fades away was with glory, much more that which remains is in glory” (2 Cor. 3:2-11). “For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to everyone who believes” (Rom. 10:4). “Now if perfection was through the Levitical priesthood (for on the basis of it the people received the Law), what further need was there for another priest to arise according to the order of Melchizedek, and not be designated according to the order of Aaron” (Heb. 7:11)? “For if that first covenant had been faultless, there would have been no occasion sought for a second. For finding fault with them, He says, ‘Behold, days are coming, says the Lord, When I will effect a new covenant With the house of Israel and with the house of Judah; Not like the covenant which I made with their fathers On the day when I took them by the hand To lead them out of the land of Egypt; For they did not continue in My covenant, And I did not care for them, says the Lord. For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel After those days, says the Lord: I will put My laws into their minds, And I will write them upon their hearts. And I will be their God, And they shall be My people. And they shall not teach everyone his fellow citizen, And everyone his brother, saying, ‘Know the Lord,’ For all shall know Me, From the least to the greatest of them. For I will be merciful to their iniquities, And I will remember their sins no more.’ When He said, ‘A new covenant,’ He has made the first obsolete. But whatever is becoming obsolete and growing old is ready to disappear” (Heb. 8:7-13). “This life-governing covenant, being conditional, has been broken by men and will be superseded by the new covenant” (Chafer, ST, 4:314). “All of Israel’s covenants are called eternal except the Mosaic covenant which is declared to be temporal, i.e., it was to continue only until the coming of the promised Seed” [quoting Charles Fred Lincoln, The Covenants, p. 26] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 69). “...there was in the Law that which is revelatory of the holiness of God... This revelatory aspect of the Law is permanent” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 93). “It is this regulatory aspect of the Law that was temporary and that has since been done away with” (ibid.). “The writer to the Hebrews does make specific reference to the New Covenant in [chapter 8] verses 7-13... quoting Jeremiah 31:31-34, to show that when God served notice that He would take away the Mosaic Covenant and institute a New Covenant with the house of Israel and of Judah, He was serving notice that the Mosaic Covenant was a temporary and transitory covenant” (ibid., p. 288). “As a rule of life, the Law of Moses was temporary, ‘which ran its course for 1500 years,’ but came to an end with the death of the Messiah.” [quoting Chafer, Systematic Theology, 4:18] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 374). “Jews continue to keep the law because of unbelief” (ibid., p. 477). “The law has come to an end in Christ and cannot function in justification or sanctification. For the believer especially it has been rendered inoperative” (ibid., p. 644). “The Law of Moses provided the basis for the Levitical priesthood and there was an inseparable connection between the Law of Moses and the Levitical priesthood... If the Mosaic Law was still in effect, Jesus could not function as a priest. Because the Mosaic Law is no longer in effect, Jesus can be a priest after the Order of Melchizedek” (ibid., p. 645). “II Corinthians 3:2-11... In verses three and seven the spotlight is on the Ten Commandments since it is these which were engraven on stones. The main point then is that the Law of Moses, especially as represented by the Ten Commandments, is a ‘ministration of death’ and a ‘ministration of condemnation.’ If the Ten Commandments were still in force today, this would still be true. However, they are no longer in force, for it states in verses seven and eleven that the law has ‘passed away.’ The Greek word used is katargeo, which means ‘to render inoperative.’ Since the emphasis in this passage is on the Ten Commandments, this means that the Ten Commandments have passed away. The thrust is very clear. The Law of Moses, and especially the Ten Commandments, is no longer in effect. In fact, the superiority of the Law of Christ is seen by the fact that it will never be rendered inoperative. Unlike Covenant Theology, Dispensationalism does not insist that the Ten Commandments are still in force and do exegetical gymnastics to avoid observing the Sabbath, the very way the Ten Commandments actually require” (ibid., p. 646). “True, Jesus did come to fulfill the law; but the Law of Moses did not end with the coming of the Messiah, or by His life, but by His death” (ibid., p. 648). “Whereas the Abrahamic covenant is everlasting (Gen. 17:19), the Mosaic covenant was temporal and would be replaced” (Geisler, ST, 4:511). “While the basic moral principles, reflective of God’s moral nature, embedded in the theocratic construct of old Testament Israel, are the same immutable principles expressed in the context of grace for the New Testament church, nevertheless, church-age believers are not under Mosaic Law, which has been fulfilled and passed away” (ibid., p. 517).

The Mosaic Law was fulfilled by Christ, Who was the individual “Israel.” “Listen, O isles, unto me; and hearken, ye peoples, from far: Jehovah hath called me from the womb; from the bowels of my mother hath he made mention of my name: and he hath made my mouth like a sharp sword; in the shadow of his hand hath he hid me: and he hath made me a polished shaft; in his quiver hath he kept me close: and he said unto me, Thou art my servant; Israel, in whom I will be glorified” (Isa. 49:1-3). “Do not think that I came to abolish the Law or the Prophets; I did not come to abolish, but to fulfill” (Matt. 5:17). “For not knowing about God’s righteousness, and seeking to establish their own, they did not subject themselves to the righteousness of God. For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to everyone who believes” (Rom. 10:3-4). “The law was done away with not by destruction but by fulfillment: Jesus said, ‘Do not think that I have come to abolish the Law or the Prophets; I have not come to abolish them but to fulfill them’ (Matt. 5:17)” (Geisler, ST, 4:516).

The Mosaic Law was superseded by the Law of Christ. “to those who are without law, as without law, though not being without the law of God but under the law of Christ, that I might win those who are without law” (1 Cor. 9:21). “Bear one another’s burdens, and thus fulfill the law of Christ” (Gal. 6:2). “For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus has set you free from the law of sin and of death” (Rom. 8:2). “The Law of Moses has been disannulled and we are now under a new law. This new law is called the Law of Christ in Galatians 6:2 and the Law of the Spirit of Life in Romans 8:2. This is a brand new law, totally separate from the Law of Moses. The Law of Christ contains all the individual commandments from Christ and the Apostles applicable to a New Testament believer” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 650). “Many commandments are the same as those of the Law of Moses. For example, nine of the Ten Commandments are also in the Law of Christ. But... there is no Sabbath law now (Rom. 14:5; Col. 2:16) and no dietary code (Mark 7:19; Rom. 14:20)” (ibid.). “One man regards one day above another, another regards every day alike. Let each man be fully convinced in his own mind” (Rom. 14:5). “Therefore let no one act as your judge in regard to food or drink or in respect to a festival or a new moon or a Sabbath day — things which are a mere shadow of what is to come; but the substance belongs to Christ” (Col. 2:16-17). “‘because it does not go into his heart, but into his stomach, and is eliminated?’ (Thus He declared all foods clean.)” (Mark 7:19) “Do not tear down the work of God for the sake of food. All things indeed are clean, but they are evil for the man who eats and gives offense” (Rom. 14:20). “The reason there is so much confusion over the relationship of the Law of Moses and the Law of Christ is that many commandments are similar to those found in the Mosaic Law, and many have concluded that certain sections of the law have, therefore, been retained” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 651). “Jewish believers have the freedom to observe the law, but this is far from saying that they are required to keep the law. It allows for voluntary Sabbath-keeping, but not for mandatory Sabbath-keeping” (ibid., p. 668).

Regarding the relationship of the Mosaic Covenant to the Abrahamic Covenant, “The relationship between the unconditional Abrahamic and conditional Mosaic covenants can be summarized thus: (1) The Abrahamic covenant takes precedence over the Mosaic covenant... The Mosaic covenant was (1) initiated after the Abrahamic covenant and (2) had an ending point (2) The Mosaic covenant did not void the Abrahamic covenant (cf. Gal. 3:17 [What I am saying is this: the Law, which came four hundred and thirty years later, does not invalidate a covenant previously ratified by God, so as to nullify the promise.]) (3) The Abrahamic covenant is unconditional, while the Mosaic covenant was conditional (v. 12) (4) The Mosaic covenant was instituted because of human sinfulness (v. 19), whereas the Abrahamic covenant was given because of God’s graciousness (5) The Mosaic covenant was temporary (v. 19); the Abrahamic covenant is forever” (Geisler, ST, 4:517)

The Mosaic Covenant did not supersede the Abrahamic Covenant. “What I am saying is this: the Law, which came four hundred and thirty years later, does not invalidate a covenant previously ratified by God, so as to nullify the promise. For if the inheritance is based on law, it is no longer based on a promise; but God has granted it to Abraham by means of a promise. Why the Law then? It was added because of transgressions, having been ordained through angels by the agency of a mediator, until the seed should come to whom the promise had been made. Now a mediator is not for one party only; whereas God is only one. Is the Law then contrary to the promises of God? May it never be! For if a law had been given which was able to impart life, then righteousness would indeed have been based on law. But the Scripture has shut up all men under sin, that the promise by faith in Jesus Christ might be given to those who believe. But before faith came, we were kept in custody under the law, being shut up to the faith which was later to be revealed. Therefore the Law has become our tutor to lead us to Christ, that we may be justified by faith. But now that faith has come, we are no longer under a tutor” (Gal. 3:17-25). “Galatians 3:17-25... The law [the time-bound Mosaic Covenant], introduced 430 years later [than the timeless Abrahamic Covenant], does not set aside the [Abrahamic] covenant previously established by God and thus do away with the promise” (Geisler, ST, 4:515).

Covenant #6: The Palestinian Covenant

The Palestinian Covenant was the third covenant that Jehovah made with Israel, after the Abrahamic and Mosaic Covenants. It was made by God with the generation of Israelites that was about to enter and possess the Promised Land.

Purpose of the Palestinian Covenant

The purpose of the Palestinian Covenant was to answer the question of Israel's ongoing relation to the land promises of the Abrahamic Covenant, in light of the (recently inaugurated) Mosaic Covenant. "Pentecost's [Things to Come, p. 95] introduction spells out the questions that this covenant was intended to answer: Is the land of Palestine still their possession? Did the inauguration of the Mosaic covenant, which all agree was conditional, set aside the unconditional Abrahamic covenant? Could Israel hope to enter into permanent possession of their land in the face of such opposition? To answer these important questions God stated again His covenant promise concerning Israel's possession of and inheritance in the land in Deuteronomy 30:1-10, which statement we call the Palestinian covenant, because it answers the question of Israel's relation to the land promises of the Abrahamic covenant" (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 344). "God made it very clear to the new generation about to enter the Promised Land that He would deal with the covenant nation on the basis of the principle that obedience would bring blessing and disobedience would bring discipline and possibly even disaster. If the nation did disobey, the people would not experience the covenanted blessings apart from repentance which produced obedience" (Pentecost, TKC, p. 108). "It is impossible to understand the recorded history of the covenant nation as found in the Scriptures apart from an understanding of the principle laid down in the Palestinian Covenant, nor to understand the emphasis on repentance in the message of the Old Testament prophets or in the messages of John the Baptist and Christ Himself, apart from that covenant. That covenant is a key that unlocks the mystery of God's dealing with His people" (ibid., p. 123).

Name of the Palestinian Covenant

The Palestinian Covenant is named as such because the land of Palestine is its major subject. "For lack of a better name, the second covenant is known as the Palestinian Covenant for it largely concerns the land known for centuries as Palestine. This is now an unfortunate term for two reasons. First, it was a name given to the land by the Roman Emperor Hadrian after the second Jewish revolt under Bar Cochba (A.D. 132-135) for the purpose of erasing any Jewish remembrance of the land as part of his policy to 'dejudaize' the land. Second, due to the historical events in the Middle East in this century, the name is associated more with Arabs than with Jews. Perhaps a better title would have been 'the Land Covenant' since 'Palestine' is not a biblical designation anyway. However, since most are familiar with the above title, it will be so used in this work, but with reservation" (Frucht-enbaum, I, p. 581).

Statement of the Palestinian Covenant

The Palestinian Covenant is found in Deuteronomy 30:1-10: "And it shall come to pass, when all these things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations, whither Jehovah thy God hath driven thee, and shalt return unto Jehovah thy God, and shalt obey his voice according to all that I command thee this day, thou and thy children, with all thy heart, and with all thy soul; that then Jehovah thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from all the peoples, whither Jehovah thy God hath scattered thee. If any of thine outcasts be in the uttermost parts of heaven, from thence will Jehovah thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee: and Jehovah thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it; and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers. And Jehovah thy God will circumcise thy heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love Jehovah thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live. And Jehovah thy God will put all these curses upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, that persecuted thee. And thou shalt return and obey the voice of Jehovah, and do all his commandments which I command thee this day. And Jehovah thy God will make thee plenteous in all the work of thy hand, in the fruit of thy body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy ground, for good: for Jehovah will again rejoice over thee for good, as he rejoiced over thy fathers; if thou shalt obey the voice of Jehovah thy God, to keep his commandments and his statutes which are written in this book of the law; if thou turn unto Jehovah thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul" (Deut. 30:1-10).

Features of the Palestinian Covenant

The two main features of the Palestinian Covenant concern Israel's ownership of the land and her world-wide dispersion and regathering.

Regarding Israel's ownership of the land, "And it shall come to pass, when all these things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations, whither Jehovah thy God hath driven thee, and shalt return unto Jehovah thy God, and shalt obey his voice... Jehovah thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it; and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers” (Deut. 30:1-5). “The Palestinian Covenant ‘made possession and occupancy of the land, the right of ownership to which was included in the Abrahamic Covenant, contingent upon obedience to God while in the land.’ This means that Israel can ‘still have right of title to Palestine and yet not occupy it’” [quoting Feinberg, Israel, pp. 117-126] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 506). “The general dispensational view is that the Palestinian Covenant is unconditional and guaranteed Israel’s ownership of the land in spite of disobedience. While the enjoyment of the land is conditioned on obedience, as brought out by the Mosaic Covenant, ownership of the land is not, as brought out by the Abrahamic Covenant” (ibid.). “The special importance of the Palestinian Covenant is that it reaffirmed Israel’s title deed to the land. Although she would prove unfaithful and disobedient, the right to the land would never be taken from her. While her enjoyment of the land is conditioned on obedience, ownership of the land is unconditional. Furthermore, it shows that the conditional Mosaic Covenant did not lay aside the unconditional Abrahamic Covenant” (ibid., p. 583). “The failure of all other occupiers of the land to set up an independent government again shows that this covenant continues to operate” (ibid., p. 631). “Never in Old Testament history did Israel possess, dwell, and settle in all of the Promised Land. Nor did it ever happen in Jewish history since. However, the Palestinian Covenant guarantees that some day it will” (ibid., p. 632). “The land promises of the Abrahamic Covenant were further enlarged and confirmed through the Palestinian Covenant” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 140). We’ll discuss Israel’s possession of the land further in our chapter Inauguration of the Kingdom.

Regarding Israel’s world-wide dispersion and regathering, “And it shall come to pass, when all these things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations, whither Jehovah thy God hath driven thee, and shalt return unto Jehovah thy God, and shalt obey his voice according to all that I command thee this day, thou and thy children, with all thy heart, and with all thy soul; that then Jehovah thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from all the peoples, whither Jehovah thy God hath scattered thee. If any of thine outcasts be in the uttermost parts of heaven, from thence will Jehovah thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee: and Jehovah thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it; and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers” (Deut. 30:1-5). “The Palestinian Covenant promised a final world-wide regathering following a world-wide dispersion” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 631).

Characteristics of the Palestinian Covenant

The Palestinian Covenant was given to and was to be fulfilled literally by Israel. “At least one provision of the covenant has already been fulfilled: the world-wide scattering of the Jewish people. This ‘partial fulfillment’ was literally fulfilled and this ‘indicates a future literal fulfillment of the unfulfilled portions” [quoting Pentecost, Things to Come, p. 98] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 345).

The Palestinian Covenant is unconditional. “And it shall come to pass, when all these things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations, whither Jehovah thy God hath driven thee, and shalt return unto Jehovah thy God, and shalt obey his voice... Jehovah thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it; and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers” (Deut. 30:1-5). “While the enjoyment of the land may be conditioned by obedience, the ownership of the land is not” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 344). “Because the covenant is unconditional, the ‘program is certain’; but ‘the time when this program will be fulfilled depends upon the conversion of Israel.’ Although the time element is conditional, this does ‘not make the whole program conditional” [quoting Pentecost, Things to Come, p. 98] (ibid., p. 345).

The Palestinian Covenant is still in effect. “The Palestinian Covenant, being an unconditional covenant, is still very much in effect” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 583).

The Palestinian Covenant is eternal. “The Ezekiel reconfirmation (16:60) called it ‘an eternal covenant” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 345). “Nevertheless I will remember my covenant with thee in the days of thy youth, and I will establish unto thee an everlasting covenant” (Ezek. 16:60).

Development of the Jewish Theocracy

The Theocratic Kingdom of Israel was established for a number of clearly-defined purposes and with a God-ordained structure. It was established miraculously by God, and it passed through several developmental stages before reaching its zenith of glory in the Davidic/Solomonic monarchy.

Definition of Theocracy

A theocracy is a nation ruled by God. “For Jehovah is our judge, Jehovah is our lawgiver, Jehovah is our king; he will save us” (Isa. 33:22). “The theocracy is not to be mistaken for a hierarchy, nor can it be strictly identified with any existent form of political organization” (McClain, GK, p. 66).

Purposes of the Theocracy

The purposes of the Theocratic Kingdom were to commence God’s earthly rule, to reveal God to all of humanity, to judge Israel, to bless all of humanity and to glorify God.

The theocracy was purposed to commence God’s earthly rule. “The Theocracy did not adumbrate something else, but was itself the Kingdom of God in its initiatory form—a commencement of that rule of God’s as earthly King, which, if the Jews had rendered the obedience required, would have extended and widened itself until all nations had been brought under its influence and subjection” [quoting Peters, The Theocratic Kingdom, 1:218] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 440). “If God is not again to be manifested in union with an earthly Ruler—yea, as Kurtz and others, is not to stoop to become an earthly Ruler Himself—what avails, and how are we to understand, the interest that God has once taken in earthly government” (Peters, TTK, 3:549).

The theocracy was to reveal God to all of humanity. “Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be mine own possession from among all peoples: for all the earth is mine: and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and a holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel” (Ex. 19:5-6). “Ye [Israel, vs. 1] are my witnesses, saith Jehovah, and my servant whom I have chosen; that ye may know and believe me, and understand that I am he: before me there was no God formed, neither shall there be after me. I, even I, am Jehovah; and besides me there is no saviour. I have declared, and I have saved, and I have showed; and there was no strange god among you: therefore ye are my witnesses, saith Jehovah, and I am God” (Isa. 43:10-12). “The Tribe of Levi represented Israel before God; and Israel was to represent the Gentile nations before God. This was perhaps the primary purpose of Israel’s national election and all other reasons are subservient to this one” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 570). “In this passage [Isaiah 43:10-12], Israel was chosen to proclaim to the Gentile nations two things: first, that Jehovah, the God of Israel, is the only God; and, second, He is the only Savior and all who seek salvation must find it in Him” (ibid.). “Israel was sanctified or set apart, according to Exodus 19:5-6, to become a kingdom of priests, that is, a nation that mediated the truth of God to the other nations of the earth” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 91). “In the Old Testament, Israel was designed to be God’s light to the Gentile world” (ibid., p. 258).

The theocracy was to judge Israel. “...judgment is a chief function of God ruling as King” (McClain, GK, p. 53)

The theocracy was to bless all of humanity. “Now Jehovah said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father’s house, unto the land that I will show thee. And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great. And be thou a blessing. And I will bless them that bless thee, and him that curseth thee will I curse. And in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed” (Gen. 12:1–3). “since Abraham will surely become a great and mighty nation, and in him all the nations of the earth will be blessed” (Gen. 18:18)? “Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be mine own possession from among all peoples: for all the earth is mine: and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and a holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel” (Ex. 19:5-6). “yea, he saith, It is too light a thing that thou [specifically, the Messiah, vss. 1-7—ed.] shouldest be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel: I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth” (Isa. 49:6). “Those who are inclined to find fault with the concept of a ‘chosen nation’ in the Kingdom of God sometimes forget that this concept was never intended as an end in itself, but rather a means to a vastly greater end which envisioned the good of all nations of men” (McClain, GK, p. 72). “Isaiah 49:6... Israel was not designed to be a mere receptacle of God’s blessing—Israel would channel it to the whole world (cf. Isa. 55:3-4)” (Geisler, ST, 4:506). “Incline your ear, and come unto me; hear, and your soul shall live: and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David. Behold, I have given him for a witness to the peoples, a leader and commander to the peoples” (Isa. 55:3–4).

The theocracy was to glorify God. “Thou hast increased the nation, O Jehovah, thou hast increased the nation; thou art glorified; thou hast enlarged all the borders of the land” (Isa. 26:15). “I bring near my righteousness, it shall not be far off, and my salvation shall not tarry; and I will place salvation in Zion for Israel my glory" (Isa. 46:13). "Listen, O isles, unto me; and hearken, ye peoples, from far: Jehovah hath called me from the womb; from the bowels of my mother hath he made mention of my name: and he hath made my mouth like a sharp sword; in the shadow of his hand hath he hid me: and he hath made me a polished shaft; in his quiver hath he kept me close: and he said unto me, Thou art my servant; Israel, in whom I will be glorified" (Isa. 49:1-3). "Thy people also shall be all righteous; they shall inherit the land for ever, the branch of my planting, the work of my hands, that I may be glorified" (Isa. 60:21).

Structure of the Theocracy

As to its structure, the Theocratic Kingdom had Jehovah as its invisible King, was a Jewish nation, was mediated by Moses, was the Kingdom of God, and had the civil and priestly functions separated.

The theocracy had Jehovah as its invisible King. "The Theocracy was a monarchy, but God was the monarch" (Peters, TTK, 1:227). "...sovereignty... This is the essential attribute of God in His regal activity" (McClain, GK, p. 53). "...the children of Israel as they stood victoriously on the shore of the Red Sea and shouted, 'The LORD shall reign for ever and ever' (Exod. 15:18)" (ibid., p. 56). "Moses... He was strictly limited to executive and judicial functions. As a mediatorial ruler, he had no legislative rights whatsoever (Deut. 17:18-20)" (ibid., p. 68). "And it shall be, when he sitteth upon the throne of his kingdom, that he shall write him a copy of this law in a book, out of that which is before the priests the Levites: and it shall be with him, and he shall read therein all the days of his life; that he may learn to fear Jehovah his God, to keep all the words of this law and these statutes, to do them; that his heart be not lifted up above his brethren, and that he turn not aside from the commandment, to the right hand, or to the left: to the end that he may prolong his days in his kingdom, he and his children, in the midst of Israel" (Deut. 17:18-20).

The theocracy was a Jewish nation. "For thou art a holy people unto Jehovah thy God, and Jehovah hath chosen thee to be a people for his own possession, above all peoples that are upon the face of the earth" (Deut. 14:2). "He showeth his word unto Jacob, His statutes and his ordinances unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation; And as for his ordinances, they have not known them. Praise ye Jehovah" (Ps. 147:19-20). "...position of the Jewish nation, etc., which find their true intent brought out in relationship with this Theocratic Kingdom” (Peters, TTK, 3:504).

The theocracy was mediated by Moses. “This Moses whom they disowned, saying, “Who made you a ruler and a judge?” is the one whom God sent to be both a ruler and a deliverer with the help of the angel who appeared to him in the thorn bush” (Acts 7:35). “Why the Law then? It was added because of transgressions, having been ordained through angels by the agency of a mediator, until the seed should come to whom the promise had been made. Now a mediator is not for one party only; whereas God is only one” (Gal. 3:19–20). “But now He has obtained a more excellent ministry, by as much as He is also the mediator of a better covenant, which has been enacted on better promises” (Heb. 8:6). “But although the ministry of Moses in mediatorial intercession for Israel continued faithfully without interruption through all their terrible lapses into such sins as idolatry and degrading lust, it is a striking fact that when open rebellion breaks out against Moses as the divinely authorized mediatorial ruler, there is no record of intercession on behalf of the rebels. Korah and his followers perished without mercy under the immediate judgment of God, an event pointing unmistakably to the great antitypical Prophet like unto Moses whose blessed intercession is for only those who accept Him as the one mediator between God and men. ‘I pray for them,’ He says, ‘I pray not for the world’ (John 17:9)” (McClain, GK, p. 58). “It is altogether fitting, therefore, that in his official capacity as the first mediatorial ruler in the theocratic kingdom of history, Moses is presented in Scripture as a type of Christ, who will be the perfect embodiment of God’s mediatorial ruler in the final phase of the mediatorial kingdom on earth. It is true that this future ruler is named a prophet, as Moses himself predicted. ‘The LORD thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me’ (Deut. 18:15). But the Coming One will be more than a prophet; like Moses He will also be a ruler over His people, and His regal authority will be absolute: ‘It shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name,’ God declares, ‘I will require it of him’ (Deut. 18:19). The Apostle Peter applies this very passage to our Lord in the New Testament, connecting its fulfillment with His Second Advent, and emphasizing the absolute nature of His rule: ‘It shall come to pass, that every soul, which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people’ (Acts 3:19-23). By no device of exegesis can the force of this great prophecy, considered in relation to its original context and sense, be watered down to fit the theory of a ‘kingdom of grace’ existing only in the hearts of men. On this point the terrible fate of Korah and his followers, as a swift judgment upon the rebellion against Moses, stands as a clear testimony as to the meaning of the prophecy concerning the regal authority of that coming prophet who will be a greater than Moses. And the writer of Hebrews repeats the warning in unmistakable words: ‘For if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven’ (Heb. 12:25). The verses following indicate: first, that it was the voice of God that shook the earth in the days of Moses; second, that the same voice will in the future shake both earth and the heavens; and third, that the coming judgment will be connected with a ‘kingdom which cannot be shaken’ (Heb. 12:28, ASV), out of which, we are assured elsewhere, all forms of rebellion shall be purged by the coming prophet who is also called ‘the Son of man’ (Matt. 13:41-43 [‘The Son of Man will send forth His angels, and they will gather out of His kingdom all stumbling blocks, and those who commit lawlessness, and will cast them into the furnace of fire; in that place there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. Then the righteous will shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. He who has ears, let him hear.’])” (ibid., p. 59). “...Moses, first of Israel’s mediatorial rulers” (ibid., p. 167) “Moses was the first and the greatest of all the mediatorial rulers in the historical Theocratic Kingdom of Israel” (ibid., p. 356). “Among all the prophets of Old Testament history, Moses occupied an absolutely unique position. He was the first mediatorial ruler in the historical Kingdom of God on earth” (ibid., p. 405).

The theocracy was the Kingdom of God. “The Theocracy did not adumbrate something else, but was itself the Kingdom of God in its initiatory form—a commencement of that rule of God’s as earthly King, which, if the Jews had rendered the obedience required, would have extended and widened itself until all nations had been brought under its influence and subjection” (Peters, TTK, 1:218). “In the Theocracy, which gave outward form and prominence to the Kingdom, the religious and political commonwealth, the church and the state were, by Divine constitution, identical, one... just so soon as the separation was effected by the overthrow of the Jewish state, the distinctive idea of a Kingdom then existing, also, as the nature of the case demanded in consistency, vanished. This arrangement, this fundamental union we have already proven was God’s own expressed definition of a Kingdom, and when this was lacking all the holy men deplored the overthrow of the Kingdom and predicted its restoration” (ibid., p. 663). “...the only kingdom ever established by God Himself on earth over a single nation in human history” (McClain, GK, p. 53). “Since a kingdom of God was about to be established in history, it was essential that sinful men should be given historic evidence that Jehovah is the true God and sovereign over the nations" (ibid., p. 55).

In the theocracy, the civil and priestly functions were separated. "The union of civil and priestly functions in one person, as in the case of Melchizedek, seems to have been unauthorized by the legal constitution of Israel. It evidently was regarded as a dangerous system as long as the rule of God is mediated through sinful men. It will become the ideal system, however, in the future millennial reign of the sinless Son of God who is both God and Man" (McClain, GK, p. 74).

Establishment of the Theocracy

The Theocratic Kingdom of Israel was established by God's choice, miraculously.

The theocracy was established by God's choice. "And I will establish my covenant between me and thee [Abraham] and thy seed after thee, throughout their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee and to thy seed after thee" (Gen. 17:7). "And I have also established my covenant with them, to give them the land of Canaan, the land of their sojournings, wherein they sojourned" (Ex. 6:4). "Only Jehovah had a delight in thy fathers to love them, and he chose their seed after them, even you above all peoples, as at this day" (Deut. 10:15). "For thou art a holy people unto Jehovah thy God, and Jehovah hath chosen thee to be a people for his own possession, above all peoples that are upon the face of the earth" (Deut. 14:2). "Israel's original election was according to the purest grace, and so will be the climactic salvation of national Israel unto holiness as God's people" (Horner, FI, p. 321).

The theocracy was established miraculously. The miraculous nature of Israel's establishment can be seen in Israel's very existence, "And God said unto Abraham, as for Sarai thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sarai, but Sarah shall her name be. And I will bless her, and moreover I will give thee a son of her. Yea, I will bless her, and she shall be a mother of nations. Kings of peoples shall be of her. Then Abraham fell upon his face, and laughed, and said in his heart, Shall a child be born unto him that is a hundred years old? And shall Sarah, that is ninety years old, bear? And Abraham said unto God, Oh that Ishmael might live before thee! And God said, Nay, but Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son. And thou shalt call his name Isaac. And I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant for his seed after him" (Gen. 17:15–19). "And Jehovah visited Sarah as he had said, and Jehovah did unto Sarah as he had spoken. And Sarah conceived, and bare Abraham a son in his old age, at the set time of which God had spoken to him. And Abraham called the name of his son that was born unto him, whom Sarah bare to him, Isaac. And Abraham circumcised his son Isaac when he was eight days old, as God had commanded him. And Abraham was a hundred years old, when his son Isaac was born unto him. And Sarah said, God hath made me to laugh. Every one that heareth will laugh with me. And she said, Who would have said unto Abraham, that Sarah should give children suck? For I have borne him a son in his old age" (Gen. 21:1–7). "Kurtz (Sac. His., p. 71) has aptly said, in view of children being raised up to Abraham against the course of nature: 'He, therefore, chose in Abraham a people which was called into existence only by his almighty creative power'" (Peters, TTK, p. 207). in Israel's deliverance from Egypt, "For ask now of the days that are past, which were before thee, since the day that God created man upon the earth, and from the one end of heaven unto the other, whether there hath been any such thing as this great thing is, or hath been heard like it? Did ever a people hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as thou hast heard, and live? Or hath God assayed to go and take him a nation from the midst of another nation, by trials, by signs, and by wonders, and by war, and by a mighty hand, and by an outstretched arm, and by great terrors, according to all that Jehovah your God did for you in Egypt before your eyes" (Deut. 4:32-34)? "Hear this word that Jehovah hath spoken against you, O children of Israel, against the whole family which I brought up out of the land of Egypt, saying, You only have I known of all the families of the earth: therefore I will visit upon you all your iniquities" (Amos 3:1-2). "The miracles at the deliverance of the Jewish nation are also thus found to be only indicative of a still greater exertion of Supernatural power at the deliverance of that nation still future" (Peters, TTK, 3:472). "There is a definite parallel between the supernatural preparation for the kingdom in history under Moses and the supernatural judgments which shall be poured out upon a rebellious world in preparation for the future millennial kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ at His second advent. There is the same insolent challenge to the true God on the part of the Gentile powers (Ps. 2:1-3 [Why do the nations rage, And the peoples meditate a vain thing? The kings of the earth set themselves, And the rulers take counsel together, Against Jehovah, and against his anointed, saying, Let us break their bonds asunder, And cast away their cords from us.]). There will be a similar gracious but infinitely greater preliminary miracle—the Rapture of the Church—warning men of the supremacy of Jehovah and the ultimate defeat of all who rebel against Him. There will be the same swift progression in the severity of the divine judgments which follow, and even a striking parallel in the nature of the judgments (cf. Rev. 6 through 18). There will be the same victorious outcome, the destruction of the antichrist and his armies in the judgment of Armageddon, and the deliverance of the people of Israel (Rev. 19). There will be another song of victory, significantly referred to as ‘the song of Moses... and the song of the Lamb’ (Rev. 15:1-3 [And I saw another sign in heaven, great and marvellous, seven angels having seven plagues, which are the last, for in them is finished the wrath of God. And I saw as it were a sea of glass mingled with fire; and them that come off victorious from the beast, and from his image, and from the number of his name, standing by the sea of glass, having harps of God. And they sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying, Great and marvellous are thy works, O Lord God, the Almighty; righteous and true are thy ways, thou King of the ages.]”) (McClain, GK, p. 56). “The historical theocratic kingdom is replete with similar intrusions of supernatural power. The ancient kings of Egypt and Assyria could bear no uncertain testimony as to the reality and effectiveness of the heavy hand of God in the ‘power politics’ of their day. Let the reader recall what happened to Pharaoh and his armies in the Red Sea—‘there remained not so much as one of them... and Israel saw the Egyptians dead upon the sea shore. Thus the LORD saved Israel that day’ (Exod. 14:28-30). Or consider the fate of the arrogant Assyrians at a later date—‘The angel of the LORD went out, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians an hundred fourscore and five thousand: ...behold, they were all dead corpses’ (2 Kings 19:35). In the clear light of history, why should it seem incredible and unworthy for God to do once more—this time universally and permanently—what He has so often done in the past” (ibid., p. 153)? and in Israel’s initiation at Sinai. “For ask now of the days that are past, which were before thee, since the day that God created man upon the earth, and from the one end of heaven unto the other, whether there hath been any such thing as this great thing is, or hath been heard like it? Did ever a people hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as thou hast heard, and live? Or hath God assayed to go and take him a nation from the midst of another nation, by trials, by signs, and by wonders, and by war, and by a mighty hand, and by an outstretched arm, and by great terrors, according to all that Jehovah your God did for you in Egypt before your eyes” (Deut. 4:32-34)? “The manifestation of God at Sinai was something uniquely different from all previous appearances. There had been other theophanies: when God had come down to commune with Adam in the Garden; to visit Abraham in his pilgrim tent; to confirm later the divine covenant with the patriarch; and to call Moses to lead the tribes out of the land of Egypt. In these appearances there was a note of gracious and personal intimacy. But at Sinai we have a theophany of unprecedented majesty and grandeur; its attendant phenomena visible to an entire nation; and evidently designed to reveal unforgettably the sovereign character of Jehovah, who is superlatively holy and the King Eternal, now ready to establish a kingdom of His own on earth among men. According to the divine instructions given to Moses, the people must be sanctified for two days and thus be prepared for the third day when the LORD would 'come down in the sight of all the people upon mount Sinai' (Exod. 19:10-11). There were thunderings and lightnings, a thick cloud, the smoke of a furnace, a mighty shaking of the mountain, and the increasing tempo of a great trumpet sound. 'And the sight of the glory of the LORD was like devouring fire on the top of the mount in the eyes of the children of Israel' (Exod. 24:17). Out of this impressive setting came the voice of Jehovah to Moses who in turn mediated the divine revelation to the people" (McClain, GK, p. 60). "The revelation began with the proffer of a covenant which is recorded as follows: 'Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bare you on eagles' wings, and brought you unto myself. Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people; for all the earth is mine: And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel' (Exod. 19:4-6). With reference to this covenant several points should be noted" (ibid., p. 61). "First, we have here the first occurrence of the word 'kingdom' in the Bible, where the idea is directly associated with the rule of God. This is to be no ordinary kingdom where men will rule upon earth in their own right, but rather a kingdom 'unto me,' that is, unto Jehovah. In other words, whatever else its characteristics may be, it is to be, first of all, God's kingdom" (ibid.). "Second, in this proposed covenant the kingdom is to be given to one nation, which is to be lifted up above all other nations in this relationship; and this nation is named 'the children of Israel' (vs. 6). There can be no esoteric interpretation of the words used upon this historic occasion. The people here were the descendants of Abraham by natural generation, a literal people standing at that very moment before the literal mountain of Sinai. These facts point to something altogether different from that general rule of God over all the nations which is exercised providentially without interruption" (ibid.). "Third, in the setting up of this new kingdom, which has a definite beginning in the process of history, the other nations of the earth are not ignored. Although Israel is indeed to be set above all other peoples as the LORD's 'peculiar treasure' or 'possession' (ASV), they are not to forget that the other nations are claimed by Jehovah; for, as He declares, 'All the earth is mine' (vs. 5). These words shut out of court the notion advanced by some critical scholars that Jehovah in early Biblical records is conceived of merely as a national or tribal God; and the same words should have guarded the Israelites from the unwarranted and selfish exclusiveness which developed in later history. The Apostle Paul saw this truth clearly as he wrote in the book of Romans that the God of the Scriptures is not the God of the Jews only, but the God 'of the Gentiles also' (3:29)" (ibid.). "Fourth, it is only in the light of this universal relation of Jehovah to all nations that a unique feature of the historical kingdom can be properly understood, namely, that the nation of Israel is to be a 'kingdom of priests' (vs. 6). Now it is the main function of priests to mediate between God and men. Therefore, since all nations on earth are within the purview of the covenant, in the sense that they are to share somehow as beneficiaries of the act, the divine call of Israel must have had as one of its purposes the idea of one nation acting mediatorially in religious matters between the true God and the nations of the earth. Thus the mediatorial nature of the historical kingdom is broadened: it is not only that God will reign over one nation through a mediatorial ruler, but that through the nation thus ruled there will be mediated the blessings of God to all other nations" (ibid., p. 62). "Fifth, because of Israel's favored relation to God, and also because of her exalted regal position as the accredited representative of God to all other nations, Israel must be an 'holy nation' (vs. 6). The basic idea of Biblical holiness is separation; first, unto God as His own possession; and second, from all that is morally impure. The latter arises out of the first. Thus high privileges and responsibilities carry with them high moral and spiritual requirements. To all in every age who are made the objects of a special divine favor, the same word of God must come, 'Ye shall be holy; for I am holy' (Lev. 11:44)" (ibid.). Israel's miraculous establishment is proof of Israel's theocratic nature. "Unless the Supernatural shine forth in some way before the nation, it could not fairly be evidenced that a Theocracy existed... if the Supernatural in direct aid, etc., were lacking, infidelity would appeal to this as positive proof that a pure Theocracy never existed" (Peters, TTK, 3:474)

Development of the Theocracy

The Theocratic Kingdom developed through Moses' administration and through Israel's occupation of Palestine, and it continued to develop through the period of the Judges and the Davidic Monarchy.

Moses' Administration

The theocracy developed through Moses' administration. "Throughout the length of Moses' theocratic administration two kingdoms were developing side by side. There was on the one hand a small remnant who believed God and demonstrated their faith through their obedience, thus revealing that they were subjects of the kingdom of the God of heaven on earth. Over against that is an almost unbroken line of unbelief, lawlessness, and rebellion. Those who rebelled lost the covenanted blessings. They came into judgment because of their rebellion, though God always provided a way of escape from judgment. That way of escape always involved faith that would demonstrate itself in obedience. Thus throughout Moses' long reign as a theocratic administrator it is seen that God dealt with Israel as His covenant people. Blessings would come on the obedient and discipline would fall on the disobedient. The standard for obedience or disobedience would be the Law that [God] gave to Israel through Moses. A kingdom program was being developed which included in it those who believed and validated their faith by obedience. But this kingdom was constantly being attacked by rebels whose real citizenship was in the kingdom of darkness" (Pentecost, TKC, p. 99).

Israel's Occupation of Palestine

The theocracy developed through Israel's occupation of Palestine. "Now it came to pass after the death of Moses the servant of Jehovah, that Jehovah spake unto Joshua the son of Nun, Moses' minister, saying, Moses my servant is dead; now therefore arise, go over this Jordan, thou, and all this people, unto the land which I do give to them, even to the children of Israel. Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, to you have I given it, as I spake unto Moses. From the wilderness, and this Lebanon, even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun, shall be your border. There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life. As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee; I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee... possess the land, which Jehovah your God giveth you to possess it. And to the Reubenites, and to the Gadites, and to the half-tribe of Manasseh, spake Joshua, saying,

Remember the word which Moses the servant of Jehovah commanded you, saying, Jehovah your God giveth you rest, and will give you this land. Your wives, your little ones, and your cattle, shall abide in the land which Moses gave you beyond the Jordan; but ye shall pass over before your brethren armed, all the mighty men of valor, and shall help them; until Jehovah have given your brethren rest, as he hath given you, and they also have possessed the land which Jehovah your God giveth them: then ye shall return unto the land of your possession, and possess it, which Moses the servant of Jehovah gave you beyond the Jordan toward the sun-rising” (Josh. 1:1–15). “Canaanitic nations... These nations were to be utterly destroyed (Deut. 20:16-18 [But of the cities of these peoples, that Jehovah thy God giveth thee for an inheritance, thou shalt save alive nothing that breatheth; but thou shalt utterly destroy them: the Hittite, and the Amorite, the Canaanite, and the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite; as Jehovah thy God hath commanded thee; that they teach you not to do after all their abominations, which they have done unto their gods; so would ye sin against Jehovah your God.]). If this course of action seems unduly harsh, its justification may be found in the unspeakably degraded practices which are described in horrible detail in the 18th chapter of Leviticus, a chapter to be read and pondered by those who are troubled with the alleged ‘moral’ problem in relation to the character of God. There was indeed a moral problem in the land of Palestine, and it seemed to require what might be called a ‘surgical operation’ on the human race for the sake of its own preservation. And if the nation of Israel was made the divinely chosen instrument in the operation, it should not be forgotten that the same nation was thus preserved from fatal contamination in order to fulfill her destiny as the channel of divine salvation on behalf of all nations” (McClain, GK, p. 70). “And Jehovah spake unto Moses, saying, Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, I am Jehovah your God. After the doings of the land of Egypt, wherein ye dwelt, shall ye not do: and after the doings of the land of Canaan, whither I bring you, shall ye not do... None of you shall approach to any that are near of kin to him, to uncover their nakedness... And thou shalt not give any of thy seed to make them pass through the fire to Molech; neither shalt thou profane the name of thy God: I am Jehovah. Thou shalt not lie with mankind, as with womankind: it is abomination. And thou shalt not lie with any beast to defile thyself therewith; neither shall any woman stand before a beast, to lie down thereto: it is confusion. Defile not ye yourselves in any of these things: for in all these the nations are defiled which I cast out from before you... For whosoever shall do any of these abominations, even the souls that do them shall be cut off from among their people. Therefore shall ye keep my charge, that ye practise not any of these abominable customs, which were practised before you, and that ye defile not yourselves therein: I am Jehovah your God” (Lev. 18:1–30). “Thus the general rule seems to have been that the non-Palestinian nations were to be left alone unless they initiated hostile action; in which case Israel was to begin with an offer of peace; and open warfare could not be pressed until the peace offer had been rejected” (McClain, GK, p. 70). “The conquest of Canaan is too often treated as an enterprise of the Israelites, carried out with great cruelties, for which they claimed divine sanction. The Old Testament presents the matter in an entirely different light. The war is a Divine enterprise, in which human instruments are employed, but so as to be entirely subordinate to the Divine will” (ibid.).

The Period of the Judges

Development of the theocracy continued through the period of the Judges. During this period the judges ruled the theocracy much like a king would have. “...judicial, legislative, and executive action, a supreme power, Kingly rule? If we take the Bible idea of Judge, instead of the restricted, more modern sense engrafted upon it, there is no difficulty in replying that the latter is intended... the Judges that God raised up to ‘judge Israel’ (such as Gideon, Samson, Jephthah, Eli, Samuel, etc.)... their office consisted in enforcing the Theocratic rule, in executing the laws, subduing enemies, punishing evildoers, and promoting the prosperity of the nation” (Peters, TTK, 2:353). “When Moses judged the people he acted as a Ruler, making known and executing the laws of God; and when he followed Jethro’s advice to make other Judges, it is expressly said that he ‘made them heads over the people, rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens, and they judged the people,’ etc. (Ex. 18:14-26)... Horne (Introd., vol. 2, p. 42) says: ‘The authority of the Judges was not inferior to that which was afterward exercised by the Kings...’ when the Jews requested a King, they called his ruling a judging. In 1 Sam. 8:5, 6, 20, ‘all the elders of Israel’ said ‘make us a King to judge us.’... In other words, the Judgeship is identical with the predicted reign of Christ, commencing with the Millennial era—an age inaugurated and carried on by the most astonishing manifestations of Sovereign power, judicial, legislative, and executive” (ibid., p. 354). “...the Jewish idea of a Judge (i.e. a Ruler)” (ibid., p. 583) “The authority of the Judges was not inferior to that which was afterward exercised by the Kings; it extended to peace and war. They decided cases without appeal, but they had no power to enact new laws or to impose new burdens upon the people. They were the protectors of the laws, defenders of religion, and avengers of crimes” [quoting T. H. Horne, Introduction to the Critical Study and Knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, Vol. II, p. 42] (McClain, GK, p. 91). “Because of the literary divisions in the Old Testament, it has been customary to think of the period of the twelve ‘Judges’ separately from the respective periods of Joshua and Samuel. However, although the latter two men were incomparably greater than the other twelve, all alike served in the capacity of leader-judges of Israel between Moses and the establishment of the monarchial form of the historical kingdom (Judg. 2:16 [And Jehovah raised up judges, who saved them out of the hand of those that despoiled them.]). Therefore, it will be helpful to regard the entire time as one period exhibiting certain general characteristics throughout. The chronology is admittedly difficult, but its exact duration is not essential to this discussion” (ibid.). “It was His purpose to bring the nation into subjection to Himself so that He could bless them” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 127). “A survey of the entire Book of Judges leads us to the conclusion that God is presented as Israel’s King, and that He ruled indirectly through judges. The judges had a twofold responsibility. First, they were to administer the Law and keep the people in subjection to God. Secondly, they were to deliver a repentant people from the discipline that their unbelief had incurred” (ibid., p. 131). “Samuel played an important part in the development of the theocracy. As God’s prophet he was the instrument God used to set Saul apart as king. Later Samuel would pronounce judgment on Saul because of his failure to fulfill the functions of the delegated administrator in God’s kingdom, and anoint David, through whom God’s covenanted program would come to its fulfillment” (ibid., p. 136).

Characteristics of the Judges

The judges were directly chosen by God. “And Jehovah raised up judges, who saved them out of the hand of those that despoiled them” (Judges 2:16). “With reference to Joshua, as the life of Moses drew to its close, God said, ‘Behold, thy days approach that thou must die: call Joshua, and present yourselves in the tabernacle of the congregation, that I may give him a charge’ (Deut. 31:14). And the divine charge follows: ‘Be strong and of a good courage: for thou shalt bring the children of Israel into the land which I sware unto them: and I will be with thee’ (vs. 23). Later, after the death of Moses, the charge was renewed and prefaced with divine reassurance: ‘As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee: I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee’ (Josh. 1:5)” (McClain, GK, p. 91). “Of the leaders who came after Joshua the Word of God declares, ‘The LORD raised up judges’ (Judg.

2:16). The Hebrew term is Shophetim which, according to Cassell, is here used for the first time in the special sense which it bears in this period of Israel's history. The ordinary Shophetim were nothing new; they existed everywhere in the nation. But these special Shophetim of the Book of Judges were different because of 'the source, purpose, and extent of their power... They were not regular but extraordinary authorities. Hence, they were not, like the (Punic) suffetes, chosen by the people. God Himself appointed them'" [quoting Paulus Cassell, Lange's Commentary on Judges, pp. 61-62] (ibid.). "In the case of Samuel, last of the special judges and also the connecting link between them and the period of the kings, both his birth and his commission appear as miracles of divine power. Geden speaks of him as the 'greatest of the judges' and 'the first of the prophets... occupying the position of a second Moses in relation to the people... like Moses, he closes the old order, and establishes the people with brighter prospects upon more assured foundations of national prosperity and greatness'" [quoting "Samuel," International Standard Bible Encyclopedia, Vol. IV, p. 2678] (ibid., p. 92).

The judges were invested with regal functions. "And when Jehovah raised them up judges, then Jehovah was with the judge, and saved them out of the hand of their enemies all the days of the judge: for it repented Jehovah because of their groaning by reason of them that oppressed them and vexed them" (Judges 2:18). "On this point, the cases of Joshua and Samuel are beyond dispute. To Joshua the divine promise was, 'As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee' (Joshua 1:5). Of Samuel it is written, 'The LORD was with him, and did let none of his words fall to the ground... And the word of Samuel came to all Israel' (1 Sam. 3:19-4:1)" (McClain, GK, p. 92). "But the Shophetim of the Book of Judges are not always regarded as belonging in the same general category. Therefore, the fine words of Cassell as to their regal authority are of interest: 'Judicial authority is the chief attribute of the royal dignity. Hence God, the highest King, is also "the Judge of all the earth" (Gen. 18:25). He judges concerning right and wrong, and makes His awards accordingly. When law and sin ceased to be distinguished in Israel, compassion induced Him to appoint judges again. If these are gifted with heroic qualities, to vanquish the oppressors of Israel, it is nevertheless not this heroism that forms their principal characteristic. That consists in "judging." They restore... the authority of law... For this reason, God raises up Shophetim, judges, not princes. The title sets forth both their work and the occasion of their appointment. Israel is free and powerful when its law is observed throughout the land. Henceforth, (as appears from Deut. 17:14) except Shophetim, only kings, Melakim, can rule in Israel. The difference between them lies chiefly in the hereditariness of the royal office” [quoting Paulus Cassell, Lange’s Commentary on Judges, pp. 61-62] (ibid.). “Throughout the record in the Book of Judges, this divinely bestowed judicial authority of the Shophetim is underscored by the inexorable catastrophes which always overtook the nation when the people ‘would not hearken unto their judges’ (Judg. 2:16-20)” (ibid., p. 93).

The judges were given a special enduement of the Spirit. “And when the children of Israel cried unto Jehovah, Jehovah raised up a saviour to the children of Israel, who saved them, even Othniel the son of Kenaz, Caleb’s younger brother. And the Spirit of Jehovah came upon him, and he judged Israel; and he went out to war, and Jehovah delivered Cushan-rishathaim king of Mesopotamia into his hand: and his hand prevailed against Cushan-rishathaim” (Judges 3:9-10). “We are told that Joshua was ‘full of the spirit of wisdom’ (Deut. 34:9), an expression used by Isaiah as a title for the Spirit of God (11:2 [And the Spirit of Jehovah shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of Jehovah.])” (McClain, GK, p. 93). “Of Othniel, first of the twelve ‘judges,’ we read that ‘The Spirit of the LORD came upon him, and he judged Israel’ (Judg. 3:10). Later we find the same general assertion concerning Gideon, ‘But the Spirit of the LORD came upon Gideon’ (6:34). Although the character of Jephthah has been questioned, he apparently enjoyed the same enduement, ‘Then the Spirit of the LORD came upon Jephthah’ (11:29). Of Samson, apparently the last of the twelve ‘judges,’ the Word of God four times speaks concerning his spiritual enduement, ranging in force from 13:25, ‘The Spirit of the LORD began to move him at times,’ to 15:14, ‘the Spirit of the LORD came mightily upon him.’ This special enduement of the Spirit of God continued into the initial period of the kings of Israel (cf. 1 Sam. 10:1, 6; 16:13)” (ibid.). “Then Samuel took the vial of oil, and poured it upon his [Saul’s] head, and kissed him, and said, Is it not that Jehovah hath anointed thee to be prince over his inheritance” (1 Sam. 10:1)? “and the Spirit of Jehovah will come mightily upon thee [Saul], and thou shalt prophesy with them, and shalt be turned into another man” (1 Sam. 10:6). “Then Samuel took the horn of oil, and anointed him in the midst of his brethren: and the Spirit of Jehovah came mightily upon David from that day forward. So Samuel rose up, and went to Ramah” (1 Sam. 16:13). “Three things should be noted about this coming of the Spirit upon the great leaders of the historical kingdom: first, it was not always related to high moral character; second, in certain cases its outstanding effects were seen chiefly in the realm of the purely physical; third, and most important of all, it had to do primarily with the regal functions of those who stood as mediators of the divine government of Israel” (McClain, GK, p. 93). “Bright speaks of this spiritual enduement as a ‘charisma,’ and rightly asserts that it ‘well represented the primitive theocracy of Israel; it was the direct rule of God over his people through his designated representative” [quoting John Bright, The Kingdom of God, p. 32] (ibid.).

The judges possessed no dynastic rights. “Thus God requited the wickedness of Abimelech, which he did unto his father, in slaying his seventy brethren” (Judges 9:56) “The only attempt to establish a dynastic succession during this period came at the hand of one of the many sons of Gideon, Abimelech by name, whose bloody usurpation, lasting only three years, was brought to an ignominious end by the judgment of God through a woman who dropped a millstone upon his head (Judg. 9:1-57)” (McClain, GK, p. 94). “Commenting on this absence of dynastic succession among the Judges, Cassel says, ‘The Judge has only a personal commission. His work is to reinspire Israel with divine enthusiasm, and thus make it victorious. He restores things to the condition in which they were on the death of Joshua. No successors were necessary; if without a judge, the nation itself maintained the law, and resisted temptation. Israel has enough in its divinely given law. Rallying about this and the priesthood, it could be free; for God is its King. But it is weak. The Judge is scarcely dead, before the authority of law is shaken. Unity is lost, and the enemy takes advantage of the masterless disorder. Therefore, Judges, raised up by God, and girded with fresh strength succeed each other...’” [quoting Paulus Cassell, Lange’s Commentary on Judges, p. 62] (ibid.)

The judges were genuine mediators of the divine rule. “And Gideon said unto them, I will not rule over you, neither shall my son rule over you: Jehovah shall rule over you” (Judges 8:23). “And when ye saw that Nahash the king of the children of Ammon came against you, ye said unto me, Nay, but a king shall reign over us; when Jehovah your God was your king” (1 Sam. 12:12). “Here again it must be emphasized that throughout this period there was an established Kingdom of God on earth. Crude as were some of his ideas, Gideon was right in his estimate of the historical situation: ‘I will not rule over you,’ he protests to the nation of Israel, ‘The LORD shall rule over you’ (Judg. 8:23). And Samuel, speaking to Israel of that long and remarkable period extending from Moses to Saul, characterizes it as an era ‘When the LORD your God was your king’ (1 Sam. 12:12). Therefore, the primary function of the judges was that of mediatorial rulers” (McClain, GK, p. 94).

Conditions under the judges were not ideal. “In those days there was no king in Israel: every man did that which was right in his own eyes” (Judges 21:25). “It is surely true that conditions under the judges were far from ideal. Yet certain things would not be forgotten. In spite of six major military invasions of the land, long oppressions at the hand of victorious enemies, struggles between the individual tribes, and serious civil war, the nation of Israel came through all these terrible dangers with a vigor and a consciousness of divinely ordained destiny unparalleled in recorded history. To those familiar with the international situation of those years, the wonder is that no one of the great world powers reduced the land of Canaan to total subjection, with a consequent destruction of the tiny nation which had as yet no strong centrally organized government. These facts alone point to something above and beyond the ordinary providential control of God; namely, to the existence of a supernaturally ordained and sustained Kingdom of God on earth, in which Israel was the favored nation” (McClain, GK, p. 94). “The rather lamentable summary which closes the Book of Judges—‘In those days there was no king in Israel: every man did that which was right in his own eyes’—does not necessarily indicate a condition of complete civil and moral anarchy. Such an interpretation would conflict with much contained in the inspired record of those days. The thought connection between the two clauses of this final verse, for one thing, may point to the large measure of individual and local self-government which was exercised in the absence of any strongly centralized government such as would come later under the kings. Furthermore, careful Bible students will always remember that the very beautiful and idyllic story of Ruth and Boaz is located historically ‘in the days when the judges ruled’ (Ruth 1:1). The political situation was not ideal, but it could not have been totally bad” (ibid., p. 95).

The Davidic Monarchy

Development of the theocracy continued through the Davidic Monarchy. “According to Samuel’s statement, God pardons the nation on the conditions that it still, with the king included, acknowledges him as the continuous Supreme Monarch, and that the king chosen shall enforce the laws given by his superior in authority. In this entire transaction God’s theocratic rule is preserved intact. The earthly king was under certain imposed restrictions, and was threatened, in case of disobedience, with the displeasure of, and punishment from, the still recognized Civil Head of the nation. This was felt and freely confessed by Saul (1 Sam. 13:12, and 28:15), David (1 Sam. 6:20 [?—ed.], and [2 Sam.] 7:23-26, etc.), Solomon (1 Kings 3:8, 9, and 6:12-14, also ch. 8, etc.), and others” (Peters, TTK, 1:228). “therefore said I, Now will the Philistines come down upon me to Gilgal, and I [Saul] have not entreated the favor of Jehovah: I forced myself therefore, and offered the burnt-offering” (1 Sam. 13:12). “And Samuel said to Saul, Why hast thou disquieted me, to bring me up? And Saul answered, I am sore distressed; for the Philistines make war against me, and God is departed from me, and answereth me no more, neither by prophets, nor by dreams: therefore I have called thee, that thou mayest make known unto me what I shall do” (1 Sam. 28:15). “And what one nation in the earth is like thy people, even like Israel... And let thy name be magnified for ever, saying, Jehovah of hosts is God over Israel; and the house of thy servant David shall be established before thee” (2 Sam. 7:23–26). “And David built there an altar unto Jehovah, and offered burnt offerings and peace offerings. So Jehovah was entreated for the land, and the plague was stayed from Israel” (2 Sam. 24:25). “And thy servant [Solomon] is in the midst of thy people which thou hast chosen, a great people, that cannot be numbered nor counted for multitude. Give thy servant therefore an understanding heart to judge thy people, that I may discern between good and evil; for who is able to judge this thy great people” (1 Kings. 3:8–9)? “Concerning this house which thou art building, if thou wilt walk in my statutes, and execute mine ordinances, and keep all my commandments to walk in them; then will I establish my word with thee, which I spake unto David thy father. And I will dwell among the children of Israel, and will not forsake my people Israel. So Solomon built the house, and finished it” (1 Kings. 6:12–14). “This submission is indicated, e.g. by building ‘a house unto the Lord,’ in and through which the Will of the great Ruler might be obtained and confirmed” (Peters, TTK, 1:228). “The King, however, was only empowered to administer the Theocratic government as a Viceroy of Jehovah, the heavenly Sovereign, and was bound to this law as the highest authority, so as to exclude the idea of an independent and absolute monarch” (ibid.). “The nation was not to appoint any one as king who was not chosen of God; and the law, and not the king’s own will and pleasure, was to be the rule of his administration” (ibid.). “It follows, therefore, that Josephus (Ant. 6:3 §§ 2, 3), and those who receive his view, are mistaken when they end the Theocracy with the Judges” (ibid.). “The King over this people must not be an autocrat, but rather a theocrat, par excellence, a viceroy and minister of God. We may add, as a hint, that this very Theocratic feeling and submission, so characteristic of David, is what pre-eminently constituted him a man after God’s heart, notwithstanding his lapses” (ibid.). “...a prophetic dispensation, which ran parallel with the monarchy from the first to the last King...

the prophet was the purest revealer of the King's will and pleasure" (ibid., p. 229). "The Theocracy and Davidic kingdom, in virtue of a special and peculiar covenant relationship between the two, were regarded as one, and in the future so identical in destiny that they are inseparably linked together" (ibid., p. 234). "The numbering of the people (2 Sam. 24 and 1 Chron. 21) by David without divine permission, being an infringement of Theocratic order, an act of insubordination to his Superior, was correspondingly severely punished" (ibid., p. 235). "The earthly kingdom was not opposed to the theocracy, i.e., to the rule of Jehovah as King over the people of His possession, provided no one was made king but the person whom Jehovah should choose" [quoting Keil and Delitzsch, Commentary on the Pentateuch, Vol. III, p. 384] (McClain, GK, p. 96). "It has been suggested that the setting up of 'kings' over the nation of Israel meant not only a popular rejection of the theocratic idea but also its end in Old Testament history. This view has been based on a superficial interpretation of God's words to Samuel when the people asked for a king. 'They have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not reign over them' (1 Sam. 8:7). Such a view cannot be fairly maintained by any careful study of the Biblical records" (ibid.). "After the failure of Saul to fulfill the responsibilities of theocratic administrator, God appointed David from the tribe of Judah to that significant role. God later entered into an eternal, unconditional covenant with David, establishing the Davidic dynasty as the sole rightful occupant of His earthly throne. Through David a kingdom of peace and righteousness would be established over the covenant people in the land that God had previously promised to them. This covenant will have its eventual literal fulfillment here on earth at the second advent of Christ as King of kings and Lord of lords. This covenant was made through David with the nation Israel, and must be fulfilled by Israel. Thus the present session of Christ at the right hand of His Father in heaven and His rule over the church cannot be a fulfillment of the Davidic Covenant" (Pentecost, TKC, p. 155). We'll discuss the Davidic Covenant in detail in our chapter Covenants of the Kingdom.

This monarchial form of the Kingdom was foreseen in the plan of God. "And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee [Abraham]" (Gen. 17:6). "And God said unto him, I am God Almighty: be fruitful and multiply; a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee [Jacob], and kings shall come out of thy loins" (Gen. 35:11) "When thou art come unto the land which Jehovah thy God giveth thee, and shalt possess it, and shalt dwell therein, and shalt say, I will set a king over me, like all the na- tions that are round about me; thou shalt surely set him king over thee, whom Jehovah thy God shall choose... when he sitteth upon the throne of his kingdom... to the end that he may prolong his days in his kingdom, he and his children, in the midst of Israel” (Deut. 17:14–20). “but I will settle him [David’s seed] in my house and in my kingdom for ever; and his throne shall be established for ever” (1 Chron. 17:14). “In the earliest records of the Abrahamic covenant Jehovah had promised to Abraham that ‘a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins’ (Gen. 35:11). And in Deuteronomy there is the clearest kind of a prediction that when Israel has come into the land of promise, the nation would be ruled by kings (17:14-20). This passage even lays down the guiding rules in the selection of such kings, and also the principles which should characterize their regal conduct, politically, socially, morally, and spiritually” (McClain, GK, p. 96). “There are three rules for the selection of any future king: First, he must be an Israelite who is a ‘brother.’ Second, the king must not be a ‘stranger,’ that is, neither an outsider nor merely a proselyte member of the nation. Third, he must be selected according to God’s choosing: ‘Thou shalt... set him king over thee, whom the LORD thy God shall choose’ (Deut. 17:15). The historical application of this third rule is seen in the cases of Saul and David, who were chosen of God, and the choice was then ratified by the people” (ibid.). “The fourth command regarding the conduct of future kings reads as follows: ‘And it shall be, when he sitteth upon the throne of his kingdom, that he shall write him a copy of this law in a book out of that which is before the priests the Levites: And it shall be with him, and he shall read therein all the days of his life: that he may learn to fear the LORD his God, to keep all the words of this law and these statutes, to do them: That his heart be not lifted up above his brethren, and that he turn not aside from the commandment, to the right hand, or to the left: to the end that he may prolong his days in his kingdom, he, and his children, in the midst of Israel’ (Deut. 17:18-20). Thus, the king must be God’s chosen man, sitting on the earthly throne of God’s Kingdom, with God’s book constantly before his eyes and in his heart, and ever mindful that as regards the written Word of God he is not above the humblest subject of the realm. It was a government of law, rather than of men” (ibid., p. 97). “That the establishment of kings over Israel did not in any sense mean the end of the theocratic rule, is made perfectly clear by the prophet Nathan. Speaking to David concerning Solomon’s succession, the word of Jehovah declares, ‘I will settle him in mine house and in my kingdom for ever’ (1 Chron. 17:14). Thus the existing

The errancy of Samuel's sons encouraged the request by the elders of Israel for a king. "And it came to pass, when Samuel was old, that he made his sons judges over Israel. Now the name of his first-born was Joel; and the name of his second, Abijah: they were judges in Beer-sheba. And his sons walked not in his ways, but turned aside after lucre, and took bribes, and perverted justice. Then all the elders of Israel gathered themselves together, and came to Samuel unto Ramah; and they said unto him, Behold, thou art old, and thy sons walk not in thy ways: now make us a king to judge us like all the nations" (1 Sam. 8:1-5). "In the background of this historical change, some of the conditions may be listed as follows: lack of political unity and stability; recurring defeats by surrounding foes; the moral corruption of the sons of the priest Eli (1 Sam. 2:22-25); disappointment in the sons of Samuel because of their perversion of justice (8:1-3); and a strong feeling that only in a powerful monarch could the hopes of the nation be realized. This feeling was not altogether new, for earlier the people had been ready to make Gideon a king with dynastic rights (Judg. 8:22-23). But now the official 'elders of Israel' come together to ask Samuel to give them a king: 'Behold, thou art old, and thy sons walk not in thy ways; now make us a king to judge us' (1 Sam. 8:4-5)" (McClain, GK, p. 98). "That this demand was regarded with displeasure by Samuel is not too surprising. Even apart from the elders' blunt condemnation of the prophet's own sons, he probably understood that the motives behind the elders' demand were political rather than moral. Instead of recognizing that they themselves were responsible for past failures, they supposed that a change in the external form of government would cure all their troubles. This is the manner of sinful men in all ages, who must learn by bitter experience that 'political action' cannot solve problems which are basically moral and spiritual" (ibid.). "In the face of the elders' demand, Samuel resorted to prayer for guidance and the answer of God was, 'Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee' (1 Sam. 8:6-7). But at the same time Samuel was told to 'protest solemnly' as to what this demand would bring upon the nation (vs. 9). Furthermore, in harmony with the directions already laid down in the Mosaic Law (Deut. 17), God Himself would choose the king, which He proceeded to do: first, by having Samuel anoint Saul with oil (1 Sam. 10:1); second, by a public confirmation of the divine choice through the ancient casting of the lot (vss. 17-21); and third, by the presentation of Saul to the people for popular ratification (vs. 24)" (ibid.). "Later, in an address to all Israel (1 Sam.

12), Samuel puts his finger unerringly upon the moral and spiritual root of all their troubles. From Moses to the present moment they had suffered when they forsook Jehovah, and had prospered when they repented and acknowledged their sin (vss. 6-11). Now they have a king, according to their own request, but a man nevertheless chosen of the Lord (vs. 13). They must realize, however, that the mere political change from 'judges' to a 'king' cannot change the moral conditions of divine blessing. Both the nation and its king must obey the LORD; if not, 'ye shall be consumed, both ye and your king' (vs. 25)" (ibid., p. 99).

The main defect with the monarchial idea was that Israel wanted to be "like all the nations." "and they said unto him, Behold, thou art old, and thy sons walk not in thy ways: now make us a king to judge us like all the nations" (1 Sam. 8:5). "Some readers have been disturbed by the apparent problem connected with the inspired record of the change from 'judges' to 'kings' in the historical kingdom. The elders and the people had asked for a king. Samuel the prophet was greatly displeased with their attitude, speaking of it as 'wickedness... which ye have done in the sight of the LORD, in asking you a king' (1 Sam. 12:17). And Jehovah Himself had characterized their demand as something highly reprehensible, saying, 'They have rejected me, that I should not reign over them' (1 Sam. 8:7). Moreover, He had warned the nation of the troubles which would come upon them because of the king they wanted (1 Sam. 8:10-18). Yet when the people refused to heed His warning, God said to Samuel, 'Hearken unto their voice, and make them a king' (1 Sam. 8:22). Furthermore, the establishment of kings was quite evidently within the plan of God for the nation of Israel (Gen. 17:6; Deut. 17). Now the problem posed is simply this: If the request for a king was right, why was it called 'wickedness'? On the other hand, if the request was wicked, why did God grant it? The answer to this question is twofold" (McClain, GK, p. 99). "First, God did not give to the people of Israel exactly what they had asked. For one thing, they were not given the right to set up a king of their own choosing, as in the case of other nations. And this brings us, in the second place, to the real key to the problem, which is found in the terms of the original request for a king: 'Make us a king to judge us like all the nations' (1 Sam. 8:5). The repugnant thing about this demand lies in the qualifying clause, 'like all the nations.' As a matter of fact, the setting up of kings 'like all the nations' was wholly unnecessary from the divine standpoint. The rule of God up until this time had been mediated through leaders, judges, and prophets. Even David, the king after God's own heart, could thus have served as head of the state without having all the worldly trappings and material splendor of an Oriental court. Up to this time Israel had had a very simple and unique government, uncomplicated in organization and function. Problems were dealt with as they arose. In wanting a king 'like all the nations,' Israel would be exchanging the simple theocratic form of government, based on moral principles and dedicated to the general welfare, for something which could become an unwieldy and monstrous governmental structure dedicated mainly to its own perpetuation. Such an arrangement was not only unnecessary but could only add to the burdens of the people and increase the restrictions upon their personal liberties. Therefore, although God assented in part to the nation's request, He rebuked them for making it, and at the same time solemnly warned of the perils they were getting into (1 Sam. 8:4-18)" (ibid.). "The words of Keil are very much to the point here: "The appointment of a king is not commanded, like the institution of judges (Deut. 16:18), because Israel could exist under the government of Jehovah, even without an earthly king; it is simply permitted, in case the need should arise for a regal government" [quoting Keil and Delitzsch, Commentary on the Pentateuch, Vol. III, p. 384] (ibid., p. 100).

The period of greatest monarchial glory was under the kingships of David and his son Solomon. "Then the cloud covered the tent of meeting, and the glory of Jehovah filled the tabernacle" (Ex. 40:34). "Now when Solomon had made an end of praying, the fire came down from heaven, and consumed the burnt-offering and the sacrifices; and the glory of Jehovah filled the house" (2 Chron. 7:1). "So king Solomon exceeded all the kings of the earth in riches and wisdom" (2 Chron. 9:22). "The mediatorial kingdom of Old Testament history reached the pinnacle of its power and glory under its first three kings, each of whom held his throne by the decree and direct appointment of Jehovah. The entire monarchial career of Saul is summarized by the prophet Samuel in two brief statements: first, 'the LORD anointed thee king over Israel'; and second, 'the LORD hath rejected thee from being king over Israel' (1 Sam. 15:17, 26). After the failure and rejection of Saul, it is Jehovah again who exercises His right of sovereign choice in the case of David (1 Sam. 16:1, 13). And as his life on earth drew to its close, speaking as a prophet to whom the Word of the LORD had come, David thus indicates the divine choice of succession: 'Of all my sons (for the LORD hath given me many sons), he hath chosen Solomon my son to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the LORD over Israel' (1 Chron. 28:5). It is not without significance that Solomon, last of the kings directly chosen of God, is also the last king of the united kingdom of Israel" (McClain, GK, p. 100). "From Saul to Solomon there was an almost incredible expansion and transformation of the nation of Israel. In the words of Bright, ‘In one brief generation she had been transformed from a loose, disjointed tribal league, fighting for its life, into a united, self-conscious nation of some importance in the world... Most of the land thought of as “promised” was now... In Israelite hands—a fact she never forgot. Literature and culture flourished as never before, and there was unexampled material prosperity. It was a proud thing to be an Israelite in the tenth century B.C.’” [quoting Dr. John Bright, Kingdom of God, pp. 35-49] (ibid., p. 101) “With military security now assured, Solomon proceeded to expand the scope and activities of his kingdom. Certain strategic points were strongly fortified; the cost being defrayed by means of special levies (1 Kings 9:15-19). The nation’s military forces were increased and a ‘navy’ established (1 Kings 9:22, 26). Alliances with foreign nations were made, sometimes apparently sealed by diplomatic marriages (1 Kings 9:16; 11:1). A special alliance with the king of Tyre brought skillful artisans into the land (1 Kings 5:1-18); and also led to a wide expansion of foreign trade (1 Kings 9:26-28; 10:22). Recent archaeological discoveries of great and ingeniously constructed copper smelters at Ezion-geber, although not specifically mentioned in the Bible, account for the profusion of this metal and its alloys (1 Kings 7:47). The wealth of the nation increased beyond comprehension—‘The king made silver to be in Jerusalem as stones’ (1 Kings 10:27). Gold flowed into the kingdom in great quantity (1 Kings 9:27-28; 10:2, 14)” (ibid.). “The inspired record of these glories of the historical kingdom is couched in the language of superlatives: ‘So king Solomon exceeded all the kings of the earth for riches and for wisdom. And all the earth sought to Solomon, to hear his wisdom, which God had put in his heart’ (1 Kings 10:23-24). Giving all due consideration to the purely natural factors, no one can successfully explain this glorious era apart from the providential and also supernatural workings of God, as some modern critics have sought to do. The testimony of the contemporary queen of Sheba reveals a keener discernment: ‘The half was not told me... Blessed be the LORD thy God, which delighted in thee, to set thee on the throne of Israel: because the LORD loved Israel for ever, therefore made he thee king, to do judgment and justice’ (1 Kings 10:7-9)” (ibid., p. 102). “In concluding on this point, it must be noted that under Solomon we have only a continuation of the same divine kingdom which had been established historically at Sinai with Moses as the mediatorial ruler. There was no change in its original constitution and laws. This is clearly affirmed in David’s final charge to his son Solomon: ‘I go the way of all the earth: be thou strong therefore, and shew thyself a man; and keep the charge of the LORD thy God, to walk in his ways, to keep his statutes, and his commandments, and his judgments, and his testimonies, as it is written in the law of Moses, that thou mayest prosper in all that thou doest, and whithersoever thou turnest thyself' (1 Kings 2:2-3, italics added). The kingdom under Solomon must continue to operate in conformity with this original constitution and laws, as laid down in the Mosaic code. Furthermore, the identification of Solomon's kingdom as God's own kingdom was confirmed in no uncertain fashion when, at the dedication of Solomon's temple, 'the fire came down from heaven... and the glory of the LORD filled the house' (2 Chron. 7:1); a striking reminder of what had taken place when this kingdom had originally been established at Sinai (Exod. 40:34). The conventional division between the period of the 'judges' and the period of the 'kingdom,' if not carefully explained, can only be the source of confusion. Viewed from the Biblical standpoint, the one divine kingdom of Old Testament history began with Moses, not with Saul" (ibid.).

Looking forward now eschatologically, it is important to realize that the ancient Davidic monarchy was not merely typical of the future Millennial Kingdom, but was the actual Theocratic Kingdom itself. It is this very Davidic throne/Davidic Kingdom that is to be restored in the millennium. "In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof; and I will raise up its ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old; that they may possess the remnant of Edom, and all the nations that are called by my name, saith Jehovah that doeth this. Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt. And I will bring back the captivity of my people Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them. And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be plucked up out of their land which I have given them, saith Jehovah thy God" (Amos 9:11-15). "The Theocracy is no type but a reality; its restoration is not an ideal matter, but one of actual occurrence" (Peters, TTK, 2:535).

Chapter 11: The Decline and Fall of the Theocratic Kingdom

As we saw in our previous chapter, the Theocratic Kingdom of Israel attained its greatest monarchical glory under the kingships of David and Solomon. But alas, that glory was not to last.

The Decline of the Kingdom

The decline of the Kingdom began with Solomon's personal failures, and continued as the Kingdom split into two parts. "Without attempting to subtract from David and Solomon any of their excellencies, which were many, it is a striking commentary on the quality of sinful men that in the very period of the historical kingdom's greatest success, there were already present the seeds of political catastrophe. Thus, if we are wise we shall not misunderstand that with reference to salvation, whether spiritual or political, 'With men this is impossible' (Matt. 19:26). In such matters there are always things to be done which only God can do" (McClain, GK, p. 104). "Because of the excesses of Solomon the kingdom was divided. Ten tribes followed a Benjamite king to form the northern kingdom of Israel and two tribes remained under the administration of a Davidic descendant to form the southern kingdom of Judah. This division generated continued conflict between the two kingdoms, disrupting the peace brought about through David and Solomon. This conflict continued until the northern kingdom fell to Assyria and the southern kingdom fell to Babylon as divine discipline in keeping with Deuteronomy 28. The covenant people came under the rule of Gentiles, which would continue until there was national repentance, at which time a Davidic king would assume the throne again" (Pentecost, TKC, p. 163).

The decline of the Kingdom began with Solomon's failures. "I will be his father, and he shall be my son: if he [David's seed, v. 12] commit iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men" (2 Sam. 7:14) Dr. McClain explains, "Here it must be recorded to the shame of Solomon, this favored king of Israel, that at last he had settled down in open violation of the first three divine rules which had been given by Jehovah to govern the conduct of kings under the constitution of the kingdom (cf. Deut. 17:14-17). First, he multiplied military forces of a kind specifically forbidden in the law of God, gathering together 'chariots and horsemen' and 'horses brought out of Egypt' (1 Kings 10:26, 28). Second, Solomon 'loved many foreign women,' and he had 'seven hundred wives, princesses, and three hundred concubines' (1 Kings 11:1, 3-4, ASV). Third, he piled up silver and gold, until the silver became common as stones in Jerusalem and even the vessels of his own house of Lebanon were ordered made of pure gold (1 Kings 10:21, 27). And so, along with all this great worldly power and wealth, there came moral deterioration and finally religious apostasy—"his wives turned away his heart after other gods; and his heart was not perfect with the LORD his God, as was the heart of David his father' (1 Kings 11:4)" (GK, p. 104). "But this was not all; economic problems arose. Building projects, military fortifications, ship construction, foreign trade—all these required the labor of men. One source of manpower was found, of course, in the non-Israelites still living in the land and who were pressed into continual bond-service (1 Kings 9:15-21). Military service was apparently restricted to Israelites (1 Kings 9:22-23), which was doubtless the intent of David in numbering the people (2 Sam. 24:1-9); and Solomon may have used this original census for his purposes. But now in addition to this type of service, Solomon proceeded to raise a 'levy out of all Israel,' amounting to thirty thousand men who were forced to labor in Lebanon one month out of every three (1 Kings 5:13-14). This was a revival of the hated corvee system remembered by the nation as an intolerable experience in the land of Egypt. It has been estimated that thirty thousand men under forced labor in Israel, compared in terms of the present population of the United States, would equal no less than five million men" (ibid.)! "Furthermore, to maintain his far-flung government and the luxury of his own court and household, Solomon required more and more wealth. His father David had been able to enrich the national treasury by means of the spoil taken in his unbroken succession of military victories (2 Sam. 8:1-11). But the era of peace under Solomon made it essential to find internal sources of income. This meant taxation, which free men from time immemorial have hated and resisted. The king's plan was thoroughly organized under twelve chief officers whose duty was to see that the court of Solomon was provided for, month by month (1 Kings 4:6-19). At the end of twenty years of building, more money had to be raised. And in some kind of a deal made with King Hiram of Tyre, Solomon must have either given away or mortgaged 'twenty cities in the land of Galilee' (1 Kings 9:10-14). One wonders just how such a business deal appeared in the eyes of the tribes which owned the territory thus handed over cavalierly to an outsider—who was a Canaanite! Grateful as England might feel toward our own country for aid in two world wars, it takes no special imagination to picture what would happen to the current English government if its prime minister would hand over to us twenty cities of the British Isles; even if these cities were not much to look at, as Hiram seemed to have regarded Solomon's gift" (ibid., p. 105)! "With all this constant drain upon the economic resources and manpower of Israel, which must have stirred up irritation and discontent, it is little wonder that when Solomon's son came to the throne, the first word of the people was, 'Thy father made our yoke grievous: now therefore make thou the grievous service of thy father, and his heavy yoke which he put upon us, lighter, and we will serve thee' (1 Kings 12:4). But the reply of Rehoboam was a contemptuous 'No,' an ominous harbinger of worse things yet to come" (ibid., p. 106). "Ford C. Ottoman has well said, 'A king never came to a mighty throne with greater promise than Solomon... Yet Solomon failed. Ascending the throne girded by omnipotence itself, he ended his career shorn of his strength, bereft of his glory, with his heart turned away from Jehovah, and the anger of God kindled against him'" [quoting Ford C. Ottoman, God's Oath, p. 27] (ibid.). Dr. Pentecost adds, "Solomon multiplied military forces and fortified cities so that Israel's confidence was in their horses and military establishment, not in God. This was disobedience" (TKC, p. 158).

Soon, under the leadership of Solomon's son Rehoboam, Israel ruptured into two separate kingdoms. "Therefore Jehovah was very angry with Israel, and removed them out of his sight: there was none left but the tribe of Judah only" (2 Kings. 17:18). "Even before the death of Solomon the sickness of the state was clearly evident. The tribes had always been jealous of their independency and rights. And both David and his son had worked for a genuine political unification of the nation. The undertaking of the magnificent temple at Jerusalem had given definite impetus to a greater centralization of the national worship of Jehovah. Actually, of course, only the true religion of Israel could forge a bond capable of holding the tribes together; and the apostasy of Solomon severed this bond (1 Kings 11:1-10). Adversaries began to stir up trouble in various places (1 Kings 11:14, 23, 26-28). The final result was the secession of ten tribes under the leadership of Jeroboam, whose outstanding ability had already been recognized by Solomon (1 Kings 11:29-43). Since it had been authorized directly by Jehovah through the prophet Ahijah, the secession must be regarded as a divine judgment upon the chosen nation and its mediatorial king, for both had grievously sinned" (McClain, GK, p. 106). "Viewed from the standpoint of Solomon's immediate successor, Rehoboam, the loss of the ten tribes was a perfectly senseless thing. At the death of Solomon, we are told, 'all Israel were come to Shechem' to make Rehoboam king; even his rival Jeroboam was among them (1 Kings 12:1-3). They offered to serve the heir of Solomon if he would only lighten the heavy burdens which had been imposed by his father. But Rehoboam, impatient with the sage advice of his older counselors, chose to follow the reckless course suggested by his 'playboy' associates. To the very moderate and reasonable plea of his people, the king replied roughly, 'My father made your yoke heavy, and I will add to your yoke; my father also chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions' (1 Kings 12:4-14). The hostile reaction of the people was thus made inevitable: 'What portion have we in David?' they cried, 'to your tents, O Israel.' The northern tribes turned to Jeroboam and 'there was none that followed the house of David, but the tribe of Judah only' (1 Kings 12:16-20). The tribe of Benjamin was probably divided in its allegiance, for we read in the next verse (21) that when Rehoboam assembled his military expedition to force a reunion of the tribes, the 'tribe of Benjamin' was represented in the army" (ibid., p. 107). "But above and beyond all the political intrigues and the force of armies there was a divine providence which had the last word in this secessionist movement. The prophet Shemaiah was sent of God to Rehoboam to say, 'Thus saith the LORD, Ye shall not go up, nor fight against your brethren the children of Israel: return every man to his house; for this thing is from me' (1 Kings 12:22-25, italics added). This injunction was obeyed for the time being, but evidently the season of peace was very brief, for the Word of God declares that 'there was war between Rehoboam and Jeroboam all their day' (1 Kings 14:30). But the sword of man could not undo what the judgment of God had decreed, and there was no healing of the rupture of the kingdom" (ibid.). "The catastrophic division of the tribes, however, did not bring an end to the mediatorial kingdom in Old Testament history. Solomon had indeed been fully warned of the impending judgment; but he had also been promised by Jehovah that his kingdom would be perpetuated. 'Howbeit I will not rend away all the kingdom,' God had said, 'but will give one tribe to thy son for David my servant's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake which I have chosen' (1 Kings 11:11-13). Hence, Orelli is correct in observing that 'The smaller and often overpowered Kingdom of Judah, which faithfully adhered to the royal line of David, passed through many crises and had many unworthy rulers. But the legitimate royal house, which had been selected by Jehovah, constituted spiritually a firm bond which kept the people united, as is seen, e.g., by a glance at the addresses of Isaiah, who is thoroughly filled with the conviction of the importance of the House of David, no matter how unworthy the king who happened to rule appeared to him' As the dying patriarch Jacob had said prophetically, 'The sceptre shall not depart from Judah' (Gen. 49:10)" (ibid.).

The Kingdom's decline fulfilled Samuel's predictions. “And ye shall cry out in that day because of your king whom ye shall have chosen you; and Jehovah will not answer you in that day” (1 Sam. 8:18). “It is easy to forget that ‘we the people’ in the long run must always pay for whatever the government does for us. Only fools suppose that by committing a matter to the government, they can get it done for nothing. Still worse, human government not only makes the people pay for everything done for them, but it always makes them pay more than it should cost. For only a part of the wealth taken by the government ever comes back to the people in services. No lesson in human history is taught more clearly than this, yet the lesson apparently is never learned. When, in the days of Samuel, the Jewish people became dissatisfied with the simple and direct rule of Jehovah and demanded a king ‘like all the nations,’ they had been plainly warned of the high cost they would pay for being thus governed (1 Sam. 8:7-20). The passage reads as follows: ‘And Jehovah said unto Samuel, Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee; for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not be king over them. According to all the works which they have done since the day that I brought them up out of Egypt even unto this day, in that they have forsaken me, and served other gods, so do they also unto thee. Now therefore hearken unto their voice: howbeit thou shalt protest solemnly unto them, and shalt show them the manner of the king that shall reign over them. And Samuel told all the words of Jehovah unto the people that asked of him a king. And he said, This will be the manner of the king that shall reign over you: he will take your sons, and appoint them unto him, for his chariots, and to be his horsemen; and they shall run before his chariots; and he will appoint them unto him for captains of thousands, and captains of fifties; and he will set some to plow his ground, and to reap his harvest, and to make his instruments of war, and the instruments of his chariots. And he will take your daughters to be perfumers, and to be cooks, and to be bakers. And he will take your fields, and your vineyards, and your oliveyards, even the best of them, and give them to his servants. And he will take the tenth of your seed, and of your vineyards, and give to his officers, and to his servants. And he will take your men-servants, and your maid-servants, and your goodliest young men, and your asses, and put them to his work. He will take the tenth of your flocks: and ye shall be his servants. And ye shall cry out in that day because of your king whom ye shall have chosen you; and Jehovah will not answer you in that day. But the people refused to hearken unto the voice of Samuel; and they said, Nay: but we will have a king over us, that we also may be like all the nations, and that our king may judge us, and go out before us, and fight our battles.’ (1 Sam. 8:7-20) This remarkable passage deserves to be studied, not only by theologians and preachers, but also by political scientists and economists. It shows that the needs and problems of human government do not change much from generation to generation. The student will find here, not only an accurate prediction of the trends of government in the historical kingdom of Israel, but also many items which are currently trying the souls of thoughtful men in the field of government. Actually there is not much difference between the various types of political government, as regards their avowed purposes and general tendencies. For all alike start out with the best of professed intentions to give the governed something better than they have had” (McClain, GK, p. 109). “In the days of Samuel, Israel had wanted a king to ‘judge’ them and to lead them in their ‘battles’ (vs. 20). We have here a recognition of the two problems of order and power; the one internal, and the other external. These two have been called ‘the original and... fundamental values of government.’ [quoting Ralph Barton Perry, The Moral Economy p. 157]. It is an axiom of history that no government has ever succeeded, even temporarily, without offering to the people these two values. No dictator or tyrant ever ruled who did not, to some extent, provide for order within the state and protection against external enemies. This, then, is the fundamental good supplied by all government in some measure, regardless of its character or motives” (ibid.). “The real difference between the various kinds of government is found in the price people have had to pay for these benefits of internal order and external safety. And the stability of government will vary according to the cost of being governed. This is why a dictatorship in the long run is the most unstable of all governments, because it greatly overestimates the price men will be willing to pay for its benefits” (ibid.). “We may say, therefore, that Israel was right in her desire for the benefits of order and power. Her mistake is found in the kind of government she asked for. Not that there is anything fundamentally wrong with the monarchial form; for the final and perfect government on earth will be centralized in a ‘King.’ But Israel asked for a king like all the nations (1 Sam. 8:19-20). And that kind of a government would cost the people dearly in the long run, as Samuel warned the nation. For, no matter how low the cost at the beginning, the inevitable trend is upward; and the rise is often swift. Compare, for example, the simple requirements of the government under Saul with the gigantic and costly machine under Solomon—all within the brief span of one generation” (ibid.). “Let us now, in the prophecy of First Samuel 8:7-20, observe the tendencies which would arise to plague Israel, and which are inherent in all government under sinful men, i.e., government

'like all the nations.' a. Government service. Under the contemplated king the government will bring the people into its service: first, into military service for 'chariots' and 'horsemen' (vs. 11); and second, into civil service of various kinds—agricultural, manufacturing, and food processing (vss. 12-13). Here we have a beginning of governmental bureaucracy, the growth of which in all recorded history of the nations has never been voluntarily halted. b. Job-making. This will begin in the military department of government where there will be not only 'captains over thousands' but also 'captains over fifties' (vs. 12). Speaking in modern terms, they make the units smaller so as to create and use more generals! Some men will be employed to 'run before' the king's chariots (vs. 11)—a perfectly useless procedure, except for creating public attention. Once launched, men have generally found it impossible to control or dislodge any department of government service. On the contrary, each one invariably tries to expand in scope and numbers. c. Labor scarcity. The Word of God through Samuel warns Israel that the government will take 'your sons' and 'daughters,' 'your menservants' and 'maidservants' (vss. 11, 13, 16). Thus the unwarranted expansion of the governmental service will take many people out of normally productive pursuits. Sons and daughters who ought to be helping in family activities, as well as other workers needed on farms and in factories, are drawn into the service of the government. The result is labor shortages and serious economic maladjustment. d. Government for its own sake. The state now comes first. As the Bible puts the matter, the ruler sets his employees to doing 'his work' (vs. 16), 'for himself' (vs. 11), for 'his harvest' (vs. 12), and for 'his chariots' (vs. 11). Thus the energies of the state are now primarily devoted to the maintenance of the government. For, no matter how idealistically political officials may talk about serving 'the people,' the ugly fact remains that a government is interested first and last in its own support and perpetuation. Therefore, the average employee must render his first loyalty to the government, which generally means to the 'party' or cabal that controls it. In this way the labors of men tend to become nonproductive; personal incentive is diminished; and the vested interests of government operate for their own sake. e. Burdensome taxation. To support all its army of employees and officials takes money. Hence, the state must always be increasing the taxes to keep up with the growth of the bureaucracy. And so, in the words of Samuel, the government will take 'a tenth of your seed... of your vineyards... of your sheep' (vss. 15, 17). Gloomy as the picture seems, it should be noted that this predicted tax would be only one-tenth of one thing, namely, the food production of the governed. In our more enlightened modern times, the cost of government actually exceeds the value of all our expenditure for food! Today a mere ten per cent on all production would be hailed as an approach to the Millennium. The curse of heavy taxation has been thus described by a noted modern economist: 'For every additional dollar that the government spends, the taxpayers have one dollar less to spend. The situation is worse than this. Taxation erodes the incentives to produce and earn. It penalizes success, and the production of marketable products, often in order to subsidize continued production of unmarketable products. It sets up an army of taxgatherers. In the end it meets fewer real needs than before. People spend the money they themselves earn on what they themselves really want. The government spends money, not on what the rest of us want, but on what the bureaucrats think is good for us.' [quoting Henry Hazlitt, 'The Fourth Dimension,' Newsweek, Nov. 28, 1955, p. 94] f. Property confiscation. This is the next logical move of the state. Hence, we read in this eighth chapter of First Samuel that the government, no longer satisfied with a tax on production, begins to take over the basic sources of wealth; i.e., 'your fields... your oliveyards, even the best of them' (vs. 14). Respect for private property diminishes in proportion to the expansion of government and its vast monetary requirements. The devices of confiscation today are various and often disguised by high-sounding terms—controlled currency, social legislation, income taxation, the public good—but underneath them all, the relentless search goes on to find more sources of income for the state. And once started on this road, there is humanly speaking no point of return. g. Political corruption. The ancient prophecy of Samuel warns further that the government will take the wealth, acquired by taxation and confiscation, and 'give to his officers, and to his servants' (vs. 15). It is an unpleasant fact that a large share of government income always finds its way into the hands of the partisans of the ruling party. Of course, politicians will talk grandly about devoting the 'public wealth' to the 'common good,' but this is never wholly the case. Often it is taken away from those who produced it and given to the undeserving. In fact, some modern economists and state officials have frankly asserted the desirability of thus redistributing the wealth of society. But to carry out these 'benevolent' purposes, the rulers must keep themselves in power. And once a government gets enough people working for it, the problem is solved. The formula is simple—spend, tax, elect—as one cynical official tersely put the matter. h. Totalitarian control. The final word of Samuel's prophecy, concerning the Gargantuan growth of human government when left to itself, is addressed to the whole nation of Israel, 'Ye shall be his servants' (vs. 17). Thus the end of the vicious circle is reached when all the people exist and work only for the State, which swallows up the very citizens who created it. It is to the lasting credit of the founding fathers of our own American system that they regarded all highly centralized government with a deep and cold suspicion, holding that the less we had of it, the better off we would be. But strangely enough today, for every failure of highly centralized government, its supporters have no remedy except a larger dose of the same thing—‘the hair of the dog that bit them.’ i. Intolerable oppression. The overall result of the above tendencies is deep distress for all the subjects of the State. In the words of Scripture, ‘Ye shall cry out in that day because of your king which ye shall have chosen you’ (vs. 18). And we must not fail to note that this oppression has been caused, not by some foreign power, but by the very government that the people had chosen. Human government is necessary, but people who are wise never let it get too big or powerful. Unless strictly limited, the end is the loss of liberty, economic distress, and political despair” (ibid., pp. 110-112).

The desire to be like the surrounding nations was a major cause of the decline. “that we also may be like all the nations, and that our king may judge us, and go out before us, and fight our battles” (1 Sam. 8:20). “The root of all the political problems of Israel, as listed above, was not the king demanded by the nation. There is nothing inherently evil about the office of a king. In the Word of God, even the eternal and perfect state of mankind is not described as a soviet, or a republic, or a democracy, but a kingdom. The notion that monarchical forms of government are somehow responsible for the world’s political ills is a total myth which should have been destroyed by two world wars. In 1917, when America entered the first conflict, it was widely supposed that once we had abolished the kings and emperors, all would be well. So we witnessed the dethronement of the Russian Tzar and the German Kaiser, to say nothing of some lesser breeds. And in their stead we got Stalin and Hitler! Today we look back nostalgically, not too sure that the abolishing of the kings has improved the world political situation over the days prior to 1914” (McClain, GK, p. 113). “Actually, basic to Israel’s troubles in the historical kingdom was her desire for a government like all the nations (1 Sam. 8:20). The mention of a ‘king’ in the Biblical context has served to confuse the real issue. But the important point is that Israel was determined to have a government which would be similar to the other nations of the ancient world. She was not satisfied to continue under the system set up at Sinai, uniquely distinct from all other political forms, ancient or modern. She wanted to be in fashion politically. The Constitution of the State, shall we say, must be ‘reinterpreted’ to meet the problems and conditions of the ‘new day.’ Instead of seeing that what they already had was infinitely superior to any existing political system, the nation wanted to move with the world. This is a kind of ‘bastard’ internationalism which is recognizable in America today. Instead of seeing that God in His good Providence has given to us a unique system which with all its imperfections has provided a refuge for political liberty unparalleled in the world, there are some voices which call upon the nation to merge its interests in a world organization where all distinct values are likely to be submerged. And we need to be reminded that, as in the case of Israel, there are some political values which can not be preserved, except by what is often scornfully called ‘isolationism’” (ibid.). “It cannot be said too often that the theocratic and mediatorial kingdom of Israel was divinely intended to be different, not like the other political systems of the world. Here the reader is referred back to the discussion of the Constitution and Laws of the Kingdom established at Sinai. What a contrast between the early and later history of that kingdom! Think of the ten plagues which brought the proud Egyptian Pharaoh to his knees; or the supernatural passage through the Red Sea; or the bread from heaven and the water from the rock in the wilderness; or the solemn procession of the Israelites around the city of Jericho, its massive walls falling at the blast of trumpets. Recall the simple and unpretentious circumstances of the rule of Moses, Joshua, the Judges, and Samuel; with no worldly pomp or palaces. And then, over against this, consider the proud legions of Solomon with the horsemen and flashing chariots; his royal palace thirteen years in building, his summer house in the forest of Lebanon, the house for Pharaoh’s daughter (1 Kings 7:1-8), and his great throne of ivory and gold (1 Kings 10:18); his stables with 40,000 stalls for the chariot horses alone (1 Kings 4:26); his enormous harem of a thousand women (1 Kings 4:22-24). Even if it be argued that all these riches had been given by Jehovah (1 Kings 3:13), certainly the responsibility for their proper use rested upon Solomon who also had been granted divine wisdom above all other rulers (1 Kings 3:12). Yet his use of these riches reveals no great quality of superior wisdom. In this respect, he became at last like the kings of ‘all the nations.’ And Israel had asked for that kind of a king! It was only the mercy of God that Israel was not given all that she had asked for, for then her historical situation would have become still more desperate” (ibid., p. 114).

The Hebrew prophets prophesied during the decline. “Yet many years didst thou bear with them, and testifiedst against them by thy Spirit through thy prophets: yet would they not give ear: therefore gavest thou them into the hand of the peoples of the lands” (Neh. 9:30). “It is a marvelous fact that it was not because Israel was succeeding in fulfilling its mission, but because it was failing in it, that the spirit of prophecy wrought so powerfully...” [quoting James Orr, “Kingdom of God,” Dictionary of the Bible, vol. II, p. 847] (McClain, GK, p. 104) “A detailed discussion of the years following the secession of the ten tribes is not essential... It will be enough to say in general that, the seeds of disaster having been sown by Solomon, the political decline of both divisions of the nation became both swift and certain. To be sure, the reigns of Jeroboam II in the north and Uzziah and Josiah at Jerusalem seemed for a time to revive the former glories of the kingdom; but these proved to be only the final rays of a setting sun. After Solomon the kings are no longer chosen directly by Jehovah, but take the throne either by inheritance or force. Finally the tide of Jerusalem’s fortune fell so low that foreign powers decided who would occupy the throne (2 Kings 23:34; 24:17). And, with a few notable exceptions, the line of rulers degenerates. The period is characterized in general by a more indirect rule of God. Prophets become the immediate spokesmen of God, conveying the knowledge of His will to the kings, who sometimes obey, and at other times reject the prophetic counsel” (ibid., p. 114). “It is a striking fact that this period of human failure in the historical kingdom is also the period when divine prophecy reaches its greatest volume and highest brilliance. But the prophets of Israel were more than predictors of the things to come... These prophets were also men of their own times, in the sense that they spoke a message which was immediately relevant to the things present in the historical kingdom” (ibid., p. 115). “It should also be noted here that the period of the writing prophets parallels the period of the decline and end of the historical kingdom. There had been prophets in Israel before this. But formerly the chief function of the prophet had been to speak the word of the ever-present divine King for the immediate guidance of the nation in its conduct and affairs. For the most part such prophetic utterances were not recorded. But now the historical kingdom is drawing to a close, when the immediate presence of Jehovah will be withdrawn. Thus the need arises for a written body of divine prophecy for the guidance and encouragement of Israel during the ‘many days’ the nation will abide ‘without a king’ and ‘without an ephod’ (Hos. 3:4). As S. J. Andrews has well said: ‘The transition, therefore, from spoken to written prophecy marks an epoch in the history of the elect people’” [quoting S. J. Andrews, God’s Revelations of Himself to Men, Chap. XII] (ibid.). “The ministry of the prophets in the period of the decline of the historical kingdom was at least fivefold: a. The Prophets Probed the Sickness of the Kingdom. Isaiah, first in the canonical order, thus begins his oracle: ‘The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master’s crib; but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider... the whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint. From the sole of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness in it; but wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores: they have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment' (1:3-6). There was moral sickness: 'Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter' (Isa. 5:20). There was social and economic sickness: 'Hear this, O ye that swallow up the needy, even to make the poor of the land to fail, Saying, When will the new moon be gone, that we may sell corn? and the sabbath, that we may set forth wheat, making the ephah small, and the shekel great, and falsifying the balances by deceit? That we may buy the poor for silver, and the needy for a pair of shoes; yea, and sell the refuse of the wheat?' (Amos 8:4-6). There was degeneration among the rulers: 'Thy princes are rebellious, and companions of thieves; every one loveth gifts, and followeth after rewards; they judge not the fatherless, neither doth the cause of the widow come unto them' (Isa. 1:23). 'As for my people, children are their oppressors, and women rule over them' (Isa. 3:12). There was evil among the spiritual leaders: 'The priest and the prophet have erred through strong drink, they are swallowed up of wine... they err in vision, they stumble in judgment' (Isa. 28:7). 'Woe be to the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves! Should not the shepherds feed the flocks?' (Ezek. 34:2). 'Woe be unto the pastors that destroy and scatter the sheep of my pasture, saith the LORD... they speak a vision of their own heart, and not out of the mouth of the LORD... I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran; I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied... I have heard what the prophets said, that prophesy lies in my name, saying, I have dreamed, I have dreamed... Yea, they are prophets of the deceit of their own heart' (Jer. 23:1, 16, 21, 25, 26).

b. The Prophets Called the Nation Back to Its Original Constitution and Laws. In the face of the desperate sickness of the nation, the first concern of the prophets was not to establish something new in a political way, but rather to call for a return to the ancient Mosaic Code. The prophet Amos set the pattern in his demand for the restoration of the old theocratic ideal. He 'was no revolutionary summoning the downtrodden masses to the barricades. He was no humanitarian, moved by the plight of the poor, who advanced a program of social reform designed to cure the national malady. He was—let us not mistake it—no teacher of a new ethic which would ultimately, so the handbooks used to tell us, tame the rough-and-ready morality of the people and lift them to the heights of ethical monotheism. Amos was no innovator, but a man of the ancient ways. His ethical protest was drawn from a well five hundred years deep. His were the ethics of the Decalogue... He advanced no cure for the schism of society save a restoration of the covenant brotherhood which had created Israelite society in the first place.’ [quoting John Bright, The Kingdom of God, p. 65] Isaiah speaks in the same vein, ‘To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them’ (8:20). Jeremiah has no other remedy for the sickness of the state: ‘Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls’ (6:16). And the final word in the Hebrew canon of the prophets only repeats the well-known formula: ‘Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments’ (Mal. 4:4). These are words which cannot be misunderstood; and although in the case of Malachi they were uttered after the close of the mediatorial kingdom in history, they nevertheless call the people back to the ancient ideal revealed in the original constitution and laws given from heaven when the kingdom was established at Sinai. Every revival in Israel was the result of a return to the Law of Moses (cf. 2 Chron. chaps. 29-31). c. The Prophets Warn of Divine Judgment. The nation of Israel was the elect nation in the Kingdom of God; and the people knew this, as they had a right to know, even in the darkest days of the decline of the kingdom. But, as is always the case, there was a very present danger that the people would fall into the terrible sin of presumption. Some would say, as they said many times in history, ‘We be Abraham’s seed’ (John 8:33); therefore, nothing can happen to us. Now to their major premise the prophet Amos fully assents, as he speaks the Word of Jehovah to Israel, ‘You only have I known of all the families of the earth’ (3:2). But the prophet’s conclusion is something else: ‘therefore, I will punish you for all your iniquities’ (3:2). The nation must learn that election means not only a place of divine favor, but also a place of divine punishment when favor is presumptuously abused. The nation of Israel has priority with God—no question about that—but this is a priority in divine judgment as well as divine favor (Rom. 1:16; 2:9). The moral and spiritual responsibility of Israel, the prophets argue, cannot be abrogated but only heightened by the divine election. And for a people that forgets this, the longed-for day of Jehovah can bring no blessing, but only judgment: ‘Woe unto you that desire the day of the LORD! to what end is it for you? the day of the LORD is darkness, and not light. As if a man did flee from a lion, and a bear met him; or went into the house, and leaned his hand on the wall and a serpent bit him’ (Amos 5:18-19). No mere forms of religion can help: neither their ‘feast days,’ nor their ‘solemn assemblies,’ nor their ‘burnt offerings,’ nor the ‘noise’ of their songs. The time has come to ‘let judgment run down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream' (Amos 5:21-24). The judgment of the seventy years' captivity in Babylon should have taught the chosen nation the lesson that divine election does not abolish human responsibility. Yet in the days of the Return, Malachi found many who had forgotten this lesson. While living in open sin and rebellion against Jehovah, they were nevertheless longing for the coming of the Messiah—"the LORD, whom ye seek... whom ye delight in' (3:1). But here again the prophet warns that Messiah's coming would bring judgment as well as blessing: 'Who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire, and like fullers' soap... And I will come near to you to judgment; and I will be a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against false swearers, and against those that oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and that turn aside the stranger from his right, and fear not me, saith the LORD of hosts' (Mal. 3:2-5). But to the voice of the prophets the answer of a rebellious nation was too often: 'Prophecy not unto us right things, speak unto us smooth things, prophecy deceits' (Isa. 30:10). d. The Prophets Reassert the Inviolability of God's Kingdom-Covenant. Through all the bitter prophecies of judgment uttered against Israel, there is never the slightest intimation that God's covenant with Israel can be broken or ultimately fail. Men may fail, but Jehovah never fails in His purposes: 'For I am the LORD,' He says, 'I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed' (Mal. 3:6). Concerning the covenant of the kingdom, Jeremiah writes: 'For thus saith the LORD; David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel... If ye can break my covenant of the day, and my covenant of the night, and that there should not be day and night in their season; then may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, that he should not have a son to reign upon his throne' (Jer. 33:17, 20-21). e. The Prophets Promise a Future and Better Kingdom. It is the shame of man to bring darkness upon the world by reason of his oft-recurring failure. It is the glory of God to bring light in the midst of the gross darkness. Beyond the night of man's sin there is always the glorious day of God's unfailing grace. To the anxious question of the longing souls in Israel, 'Watchman, what of the night?' the answer of the prophet comes back in comforting assurance, 'The morning cometh' (Isa. 21:11-12). This note of divine encouragement is never wholly absent from Old Testament prophecy, regardless of its severity. First, the darkness; but afterward there will be light: 'It shall come to pass, that at evening time it shall be light... And the LORD shall be king over all the earth; in that day there shall be one LORD, and his name one' (Zech. 14:7, 9)" (ibid., pp. 115-119).

The Fall of the Kingdom

The Fall Had Been Prophesied

Long before its actual occurrence, the theocracy's downfall had been prophesied. "And it shall come to pass, when all these things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations, whither Jehovah thy God hath driven thee, and shalt return unto Jehovah thy God, and shalt obey his voice according to all that I command thee this day, thou and thy children, with all thy heart, and with all thy soul; that then Jehovah thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from all the peoples, whither Jehovah thy God hath scattered thee" (Deut. 30:1-3). "For the children of Israel shall abide many days without king, and without prince, and without sacrifice, and without pillar, and without ephod or teraphim" (Hos. 3:4) "And thou, O deadly wounded wicked one, the prince of Israel, whose day is come, in the time of the iniquity of the end, thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Remove the mitre, and take off the crown; this shall be no more the same; exalt that which is low, and abase that which is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it: this also shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him" (Ezek. 21:25-27). "The Prophets, some even before the Captivity, foreseeing the overthrow of the Kingdom, both foretell its downfall and its final restoration" (Peters, TTK, 1:240). "Thus, e.g., Isaiah, Hosea, Joel, Amos, and Micah deliberately predict the withdrawal of God's protection as Ruler on account of the rebellious spirit of the nation, the abolishment of the Kingdom, and the destruction of the very place of the Ruler's special manifestation. But they also announce, just as distinctly, that at some period in the future there shall be a complete restoration of the same Kingdom under David's son, and a restoration, too, pre-eminently glorious" (ibid.).

The Fall of the Theocracy

Soon after Ezekiel was shown Israel's apostasy and the Shekinah glory departing the temple, the Kingdom fell to the Babylonians. "Tragically, the early kingdom, set up as a vehicle through which Messiah could reign, was destroyed by the Babylonians" (Geisler, ST, 4:469).

In stark detail, Ezekiel was shown the nation's apostasy. "And he said unto me, Son of man, seest thou what they do? even the great abominations that the house of Israel do commit here, that I should go far off from my sanctuary? but thou shalt again see yet other great abominations” (Ezek. 8:6). “Then he said unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? Is it a light thing to the house of Judah that they commit the abominations which they commit here? for they have filled the land with violence, and have turned again to provoke me to anger: and, lo, they put the branch to their nose” (Ezek. 8:17). “His vision of the departure of the ‘glory of Jehovah’ is carefully dated by Ezekiel in ‘the sixth year’ (8:1), a reference to the time of the captivity of King Jehoiachin (1:2). The prophet had been carried away to Babylon and was sitting in his own house there with the elders of Israel assembled before him, when he was suddenly caught up by the hand of God and brought in his ‘visions’ back to the city of Jerusalem (8:1-3). Whether he was actually transported to Jerusalem bodily, or whether, like John in the isle of Patmos, the events at the city were caused supernaturally to pass before his vision, is a question which need not detain us here. The last sentence of 11:24 seems to indicate that Ezekiel remained in Babylon during the vision. But the important point is that the prophet not only saw the vision in the ‘sixth year’ of the captivity, but also that he saw the actual situation there at that particular time. Furthermore, what he saw of the spiritual and moral conditions there fits the historical situation as revealed briefly in other Biblical records (2 Kings 24:17-20; Jer. 52:1-3). Following his vision of the events transpiring at Jerusalem, Ezekiel is brought back in his visions to Babylon where he reported to the captives all that the LORD had showed him (11:24-25)” (McClain, GK, p. 121). “And the king of Babylon made Mattaniah, Jehoiachin’s father’s brother, king in his stead, and changed his name to Zedekiah. Zedekiah was twenty and one years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: and his mother’s name was Hamutal the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. And he did that which was evil in the sight of Jehovah, according to all that Jehoiakim had done. For through the anger of Jehovah did it come to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, until he had cast them out from his presence. And Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon” (2 Kings. 24:17-20). “It should be recalled that when the king of Babylon had come against Jerusalem, he had with deliberate astuteness taken back to Babylon King Jehoiachin, his family, his treasures, and also all the people of any consequence, leaving in Jerusalem only ‘the poorest sort of the people of the land,’ and setting up Zedekiah as a vassal ruler there (2 Kings 24:11-16). Now it might be supposed that such a disaster would have provided an unforgettable lesson to the people left in the land. On the contrary, ‘they acted like men intoxicated with new power; their accession to property and un-wonted position turned their heads.’ [quoting J. F. Genung, ‘Zedekiah,’ I.S.B.E., Vol. V, p. 3141] False prophets arose predicting a speedy restoration of what had been lost to Nebuchadnezzar, contrary to the word of Jeremiah (27:14-22). Furthermore, there was an attempt to secure help against Babylon by diplomatic approaches to surrounding nations (Jer. 27:1-7). The consequence was only a deeper plunge into the ways and idolatries of those nations whose friendship was being cultivated. To view this tragic situation, Ezekiel was brought in vision to Jerusalem, and there the unmistakable warning of Jehovah is sounded: ‘Son of man, seest thou what they do? even the great abominations that the house of Israel committeth here, that I should go far off from my sanctuary?’ (8:6). The implication is clear: In the face of the intolerable situation already existing there, God is still in His sanctuary at Jerusalem; but He may depart” (McClain, GK, p. 122). “Then the prophet, doubtless with an aching heart, was given to see the evidence of Israel’s dreadful apostasy as it unfolded in the vision before him. Seventy of the elders of Israel stood in the attitude of worship before the creature-idols, even ‘creeping things and abominable beasts,’ which had been painted on the wall of the LORD’s temple (8:10). At the north gate of the house Ezekiel saw the ‘women weeping for Tammuz’ (8:14), a heathen god corresponding to the Greek Adonis whose worship was attended by such licentious orgies that the cult was finally suppressed by Constantine the Great. Then the prophet was brought into the ‘inner court,’ the court of the priests, where he saw ‘five and twenty men’ with their backs toward the temple of the LORD and facing toward the east while they worshipped the rising sun (8:16). And who were these men? They were the priesthood of the nation, represented here by the presidents of the twenty-four courses with the high priest at their head” (ibid.)! “In the record of this shocking vision there seems to have been a definitely designed contrast between this situation at the approaching end of the historical kingdom and the situation at its beginning at Sinai. The people of Israel were far from perfect back there. But at Sinai ‘all the people’ had together united in a solemn pledge: ‘All that the LORD hath spoken we will do’ (Exod. 19:8). There also we saw the ‘women’ of Israel giving freely of their skill and possessions in the preparation of the tabernacle for Jehovah’s dwelling place (Exod. 35:25-26; 38:8). But most impressive of all, at Sinai ‘seventy of the elders of Israel’ with ‘Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu’ of the priesthood actually went up with Moses into the Mount, and there they ‘saw God, and did eat and drink’ in His presence (Exod. 24:9-11). But now in Ezekiel’s day the entire picture was changed; the apostasy of Israel had become total in Jerusalem; and it involved the people, the elders, the women, and the priesthood (Ezek. 8:6, 11, 14, 16). And the verdict of Jehovah is rendered in verse 18: ‘Therefore will I also deal in fury: mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity: and though they cry in mine ears with a loud voice, yet will I not hear them.’ The end had come” (ibid.).

The Shekinah glory departed the temple. Its departure was significant, slow and permanent.

The departing of the Shekinah glory from the temple was a significant event. “The ‘glory of Jehovah,’ often referred to in the Old Testament and named the ‘shekinah’ in non-Biblical Jewish writings, was more than a mere symbol of God’s presence. It was indeed a ‘sign and manifestation of his presence,’ but it also described the ‘form’ in which the God of Israel revealed Himself. Doubtless it is correct to find manifestations of this ‘glory’ in such Old Testament phenomena as the Burning Bush and the Pillar of Cloud and Fire, but there can be no question as to its identification on the mount of Sinai where, we are told, ‘The LORD descended upon it in fire’ (Exod. 19:18). And when Moses went up by divine command the inspired record declares that ‘the glory of the LORD abode upon mount Sinai’ (Exod. 24:15, 16). It was here that, as we have already noted, the historical kingdom received its constitution and laws; and when the tabernacle had been completed according to all the divine specifications, we read that ‘the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle’ (Exod. 40:34). Later in the history of the kingdom, when King Solomon had finished his dedicatory prayer in the magnificent temple he had built, the Word of God records once again that ‘the fire came down from heaven... and the glory of the LORD filled the house’ (2 Chron. 7:1). Thus the Shekinah-Glory was the visible evidence of Jehovah’s personal presence and rule in the Mediatorial Kingdom of Israel throughout its history” (McClain, GK, p. 120).

The Shekinah glory departed slowly, in four stages, as though reluctant to leave. “And the glory of the God of Israel was gone up from the cherub, whereupon it was, to the threshold of the house: and he called to the man clothed in linen, who had the writer’s inkhorn by his side” (Ezek. 9:3). “And the glory of Jehovah mounted up from the cherub, and stood over the threshold of the house; and the house was filled with the cloud, and the court was full of the brightness of Jehovah’s glory” (Ezek. 10:4). “And the glory of Jehovah went forth from over the threshold of the house, and stood over the cherubim. And the cherubim lifted up their wings, and mounted up from the earth in my sight when they went forth, and the wheels beside them: and they stood at the door of the east gate of Jehovah’s house; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above” (Ezek. 10:18–19). “Then did the cherubim lift up their wings, and the wheels were beside them; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above. And the glory of Jehovah went up from the midst of the city, and stood upon the mountain which is on the east side of the city" (Ezek. 11:22–23). "I will go and return to my place, till they acknowledge their offence, and seek my face: in their affliction they will seek me earnestly" (Hos. 5:15). "The total vision of the departure of the Glory must be constructed from references found in chapters 8 through 11. First, the prophet saw the Glory still in the city of David in its proper place in the temple: 'Behold, the glory of the God of Israel was there' (8:4, italics added). A little later in the vision he notes that 'the glory of the God of Israel was gone up... to the threshold of the house' (9:3, italics added). Then Ezekiel writes, 'The glory of the LORD... stood over the threshold' for a moment, illuminating the inner court with the ineffable 'brightness' of Deity (10:4, italics added). Finally, the cherubim lifted up their wings, and the prophet records the tragic end: 'The glory of the LORD went up from the midst of the city, and stood upon the mountain which is on the east side of the city' (11:23, italics added). Later, following its destruction by the Babylonian armies, the city was rebuilt and within its walls successively two temples were erected; but we read of no Glory therein. Even Josephus admits the regal absence. (The Jewish War, V, v. 5.) The immediate and personal presence of Israel's divine King was departed" (McClain, GK, p. 123). "In this connection, we cannot fail to be impressed with the gracious circumstances of the LORD's withdrawal: not suddenly, but slowly and gradually by stages, with seeming tender reluctance; as if He were actually yearning to remain in the place He had chosen for His dwelling place. But there is no evidence of entreaty or repentance on the part of the nation. The elders bow down to the idols, the women weep for the god Tammuz, the priests turn their backs on the Temple and worship the eastern sun. The God of Israel is forgotten. Although Jehovah had not yet forsaken the nation, the people in their wishful thinking said, 'Jehovah hath forsaken the land' (8:12, ASV). And so at last they got what they wanted: as God had warned in the days of Hosea, 'I will go and return to my place, till they acknowledge their offence, and seek my face' (Hos. 5:15)" (ibid., p. 124). "Samuel J. Andrews has a fine paragraph on the significance of the departure of the visible Glory: 'This departure of Jehovah from His temple and land... marked a change in His theocratic relation to His people—a change that continues even to this day. They did not cease to be His covenant people (Lev. 26:44 [And yet for all that, when they are in the land of their enemies, I will not reject them, neither will I abhor them, to destroy them utterly, and to break my covenant with them; for I am Jehovah their God]). His purpose in them was still unfulfilled, His promises respecting the Messiah and His kingdom were not withdrawn, and He continued to accept their worship. But He Himself was no more reigning at Jerusalem; the Visible Glory no more dwelt between the cherubim; the Ark was not in the Most Holy Place; the holy fire no longer burned upon the brazen altar; there was no response by Urim and Thummim. The people might return, as they did from Babylon, the temple be rebuilt, the worship again set up; yet there was a change. They came back from their first exile and dispersion, but no more to be an independent nation. To their original standing as the theocratic people under His immediate rule, they were not restored... This cannot be till the Lord their God again dwells among them, and rules them through His King of the House of David, in truth and righteousness” [quoting Samuel J. Andrews, God's Revelations of Himself to Men, pp. 112-113] (ibid.). Dr. Fruchtenbaum summarizes, “The Book of Ezekiel relates the departure of the Shechinah Glory. The Shechinah Glory left Israel reluctantly in four stages” (FM, p. 605). “The first stage of the departure was from the Holy of Holies (first position) to the threshold of the door of the Temple (second position). This is described in Ezekiel 9:3a... and again in 10:4” (ibid.). “The second stage of the departure of the Shechinah Glory occurred with the movement of the Shechinah from the threshold of the door of the Temple to the eastern gate (third position), in Ezekiel 10:18-19” (ibid., p. 606). “In the third stage, the Shechinah Glory departed from the eastern gate and moved over to the Mount of Olives (fourth position) in Ezekiel 11:22-23” (ibid.). “Finally, in the fourth stage of departure, the Shechinah Glory left Israel and disappeared from Jewish history. It is only here that we truly see ichabod, the glory had departed. In rabbinic tradition, the Shechinah Glory remained on the Mount of Olives for three and a half years, waiting for Israel to repent. When Israel failed to do so, it departed from the Mount of Olives” (ibid.). “After the return of the Jews from Babylon, the Second Temple was built. But the Shechinah Glory was not in the Second Temple” (ibid.)

The departure was permanent; the Shekinah glory was not to be restored in the second temple. “The second Temple, among other deficiencies, possessed not the manifestation of the Divine Presence of the great King in the Holy of Holies, and gave not forth, as the first Temple, the responses of an earthly Ruler” (Peters, TTK, 1:238). “There was no Shekinah-Glory in the second and third temples” (McClain, GK, p. 248).

Finally, the theocracy was removed. “And thou, O deadly wounded wicked one, the prince of Israel, whose day is come, in the time of the iniquity of the end, thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Remove the mitre, and take off the crown; this shall be no more the same; exalt that which is low, and abase that which is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it: this also shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him" (Ezek. 21:25-27). "In brief, all the circumstances indicated, that the distinctive features which manifested a Theocracy, were withdrawn, and the religious, the ceremonial, indispensably necessary for the moral preparation and culture of man, was alone continued. The nation was undergoing divine punishment for its non-appreciation of Theocratic privileges" (Peters, TTK, 1:237). "The writer has often been pained at the recklessness of statement on this subject. Many excellent authors, not distinguishing what really constitutes a Theocracy (viz.: God's condescending to act in the capacity of an earthly Ruler, etc.), make the Theocracy or Kingdom existing down to the fall of Jerusalem, and then coolly transfer it over to the Christian Church. No solid advancement can be made in Theology until such utterly unfounded positions are relinquished" (ibid., p. 251). "Furthermore, it was the end not only of Israel's political supremacy but also of her religious supremacy. For just as the historical kingdom had begun at Sinai with a vital union between the political and religious areas of Israel's national life, so now both were involved in the end, symbolized by the 'mitre' of the high priest and the 'crown' of the king. Both are mentioned by Ezekiel in his utterance of divine judgment upon the mediatorial nation in the days of Zedekiah: 'Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Remove the mitre, and take off the crown... until he comes whose right it is' (21:26-27, ASV)" (McClain, GK, p. 123).

Causes of the Theocracy's Fall

The causes of the theocracy's fall were the imperfection of its people and the imperfection of its leaders. "In closing this discussion, the question might properly be raised: Why did the Mediatorial Kingdom of history deteriorate and apparently fail? Space will not permit any venture to answer this question fully, but at least two factors can be mentioned" (McClain, GK, p. 128)

Regarding the imperfection of its people, "First, there was a lack of spiritual preparation on the part of the people. No government can wholly succeed unless there exists a sufficiently large body of its citizens who are in inward harmony with its constitution and laws. Men are constantly in danger of forgetting the importance of this political principle. To cite a rather recent instance: Many of the American people who helped to pass the 18th Amendment, because they felt sincerely that such a law would be beneficial to the nation, were nevertheless not personally in favor of it for themselves.

And so the inevitable result was dismal failure and repeal. Certainly, I am not suggesting any possibility of an ultimate failure of the government of God. But even in the Kingdom of God, the citizens are not all robots to be controlled mechanically and externally by irresistible divine power. There is a better way” (McClain, GK, p. 128). “Old Testament history is the history of Israel breaking the Mosaic covenant” (Geisler, ST, 4:516).

Regarding the imperfection of its leaders, “A second defect in the Old Testament Kingdom was the imperfection of the rulers through whom the government of God was mediated. It is an axiom of political science that no government in the long run can be more perfect than its rulers. Certainly, it should not be necessary here to review the sorry record of even the best of Israel’s rulers: Moses who spoke intemperately and unadvisedly at the waters of Meribah; David with his appalling double crime against society and God; Solomon with his final violation of the most important regulations for the king under the mediatorial economy. And, apart from violent revolution, any lasting reform in government must always start at the top. That is doubtless one reason why the prophet Daniel, who knew a thing or two about government and rulers, thus made his confession for his nation: ‘O LORD, to us belongeth confusion of face, to our kings, to our princes, and to our fathers, because we have sinned against thee’ ([Dan.] 9:8)” (McClain, GK, p. 128).

The Times of the Gentiles

Once the theocracy fell, the world no longer had a theocratic nation. Instead, the world, including Israel, would now be dominated by Gentile (non-Jewish) powers, until a future time at which the Kingdom would again be restored to Israel.

The Hebrew prophets and Jesus Himself spoke of a limited period of time during which Israel would not have a king and the world would be ruled by Gentile nations. Jesus spoke of this period as the “times of the Gentiles.” “And thou, O deadly wounded wicked one, the prince of Israel, whose day is come, in the time of the iniquity of the end, thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Remove the mitre, and take off the crown; this shall be no more the same; exalt that which is low, and abase that which is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it: this also shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him” (Ezek. 21:25-27). “For the children of Israel shall abide many days without king, and without prince, and without sacrifice, and without pillar, and without ephod or teraphim” (Hos. 3:4) “and they will fall by the edge of the sword, and will be led captive into all the nations; and

Jerusalem will be trampled under foot by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled” (Luke 21:24). “And so when they had come together, they were asking Him, saying, ‘Lord, is it at this time You are restoring the kingdom to Israel?’ He said to them, ‘It is not for you to know times or epochs which the Father has fixed by His own authority’” (Acts 1:6–7)

The times of the Gentiles were seen by the prophet Daniel in considerable detail. “By three major visions, which were amplified by lesser visions, Daniel foresaw the times of the Gentiles, which had already begun and which, apart from revelation, must perplex the Jew who had before his eyes the covenants and promises to Israel. Naturally the question arises, in view of the setting aside of Israel’s program and the intrusion of Gentile domination, What has become of that unchangeable, eternal, divine favor upon Israel? In all three major visions, Daniel saw the Gentile times through to their consummation and the final realization of Messiah’s kingdom and the fulfillment of every promise to Israel” (Chafer, ST, 4:331). “Daniel... What he misunderstood about the prophecies of Jeremiah, Isaiah, and perhaps others was that he thought the Messianic or Millennial Kingdom would be set up following the seventy years of captivity... In a play upon words, he informed Daniel that it was not going to be seventy years, but seventy sevens of years before the kingdom would be established” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 187).

Definition of the Times of the Gentiles

As to definition, the times of the Gentiles is a temporary period of time ordained by God during which Jerusalem, Israel and the world are to be dominated not by a Jewish Kingdom, but rather by a succession of Gentile powers. “This being ‘the times of the Gentiles’ (i.e. the period in which Gentile nations shall rule over the world and no visible Theocratic Kingship shall exist)” (Peters, TTK, 2:774) “The Kingdom was expressly withdrawn and postponed during a period called ‘the times of the Gentiles’” (ibid., 3:242). “The period between the captivity and the second advent of Christ is named by Him ‘the times of the Gentiles,’ and its peculiar identification is the fact that, throughout its duration, Jerusalem will be trodden down of the Gentiles” (Chafer, ST, 4:330). “The time of the Gentiles, then, is that extended period in which Jerusalem is occupied by Gentiles and the seed of Abraham is ruled over by Gentiles. Today Israel has no Davidic king and God is working through Gentile nations rather than through Israel. And while Israel will some day be the theocratic kingdom again, during the present ‘times of the Gentiles,’ it is under Gentile domination” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 163). “...the southern kingdom of Judah was exiled in 589 B.C...

From that point on, God administered His kingdom through the Gentile nations. It was revealed to Nebuchadnezzar in Daniel 2, and to Daniel in Daniel 7, that four Gentile empires in succession would be the instruments God would use not only to discipline His covenant people, but also to be the channel through which He would administer the affairs of His kingdom here on the earth. That is why Nebuchadnezzar and Cyrus could be called God's servants or God's anointed ones (Isa. 45:1)" (ibid., p. 293). "The Times of the Gentiles can best be defined as that long period of time from the Babylonian Empire to the Second Coming of the Messiah during which time the Gentiles have dominance over the City of Jerusalem... Any Jewish takeover of the City of Jerusalem before the Second Coming must therefore be viewed as a temporary one and does not mean that the Times of the Gentiles have ended" (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 21).

The Theocratic Kingdom does not exist during these times. "Since the 'Captivity' but one King of the Davidic family has been crowned and He with 'thorns' (Matt. 27:29)" (Larkin, DT, p. 151) "The simple fact is, that since the overthrow of the Hebrew Theocracy, God has not acted in the capacity of earthly Ruler, with a set form of government, for any nation or people on earth; and the application of the word to any nation or people, or organization since then, is a perversion, and prostitution of its plain meaning" (Peters, TTK, 1:217). "So long as 'the city of the great King,' and so long as His land, His by inheritance, as David's Son, is under Gentile dominion, it is simply impossible for the Kingdom to exist" (ibid., p. 419). "The Kingdom being one with the Davidic throne and kingdom, it was impossible because of the rejection and punishment of the nation for a certain time, to establish it" (ibid., p. 421). "If the covenants teach any truth clearly, it is this: that the Jewish nation and the Kingdom are inseparably connected;— that the one cannot possibly exist without the other. It follows, therefore, that during the period of national rejection and punishment (i.e. during 'the times of the Gentiles,' and 'the treading down of Jerusalem'), imposed on account of sinfulness, the Kingdom cannot be in existence" (ibid., p. 422). "David's throne... it cannot—according to prophecy—exist during these 'times of the Gentiles'" (ibid., 2:206) "Dr. Seiss (Last Times, p. 135), after referring to this dispensation in which 'the throne of David is yet less than a cipher,' and during which His inheritance 'is still trodden by the vile foot of the destroyer,' remarks: 'Oh, tell me not that this is the glorious reign of the Messiah! Tell me not that these are the scenes to which the saints of old looked with so much joy! I will not so disgrace my Saviour or His Word, as to allow for a moment that this dispensation is the sublime Messianic Kingdom. No, no, no; Christ does not yet reign in the Kingdom which He has promised, and for which He has taught us to pray. Isaiah and Gabriel have said that He should occupy the throne of His Father, David, and reign over the house of Jacob, and establish His government in eternal peace and righteousness; but David's sceptre He has never held, over Jacob's house He has never ruled, and the whole world is yet full of iniquity and woe.' (Comp. e.g. Luther on Ps. 2, quoted by Seiss, p. 254.) Hundreds of able and talented pens express the same faith and hope, for which we thank God" (ibid.). "...the restoration of all things... so long as we live in 'the times of the Gentiles' (which now exist, and will continue to exist so long as Jerusalem is trodden down by the Gentiles), these glorious and predicted 'times' are not to be realized" (ibid., p. 472). "Indeed, it is impossible for the Kingdom to come so long as Jerusalem is trodden down by the Gentiles" (ibid., p. 624). "...the folly, so widely prevalent, of exalting this present period of time—embracing as it does 'the times of the Gentiles'—above the position assigned to it in Holy Scripture... in this dispensation the Church, with all her blessings and privileges, is still in 'the night,' surrounded by darkness (herself led by 'the light shining in the dark place')... looking for an absent bridegroom, fighting, struggling, and pressed with the curse, it is certainly unwise, both against Scripture and existing fact, to appropriate to her blessings which only belong to her after these 'times' are ended" (ibid., p. 774). "Our argument exposes the absurdity and arrogance of Gentile kings also (without a Theocratic claim) assuming to be such 'anointed by God,' and 'ruling by special divine appointment.' Not only the Papacy, but Prelacy, etc., has aided in keeping up such a gloss over Gentile domination. How God regards such ruling is seen from the prophecies and the expressive symbolical representations of 'beasts,' and yet such, under the professed sanction of religion, are to be transformed into 'God's anointed' to secure the reverence of the multitude" (ibid., 3:541). "Though blessings abound in the individual heart where Christ is enthroned, yet not one trace of this glorious transformed earth can be found in the present Gentile age" (Chafer, S, C2:37/37). "Viewed from the vantage point of Old Testament prophecy, Daniel saw no relief short of the Kingdom: 'Unto the end shall be war' (9:26, ASV)" (McClain, GK, p. 182).

The times of the Gentiles is one of two intercalations in the Kingdom program for Israel. "Little true understanding of prophecy will be gained until it is recognized that the divine purpose for the earth is centered about Israel. Whatever may intervene, this program begins and ends with Israel. Two intercalations are experienced. The first is that of Gentile times, which began with the Babylonian captivity and serves as a chastisement upon Israel as well as a definite divine arrangement with the Gentiles out of which they are to be judged as nations. The Gentile times are interrupted by the second intercalation, which is the age of the Church and which extends from the death of Christ to the removal of the Church from the earth, which age contributes the whole feature of indefiniteness to all that follows looked at from the standpoint of the time it begins. There will yet be seven years of Gentile times following the removal of the Church from the earth” (Chafer, ST, 4:341).

Purposes of the Times of the Gentiles

One purpose of the times of the Gentiles is to demonstrate the nature of rulership by fallen man and the necessity of rulership by God. “In this Gentile ordering God allows an exemplification to take place, on a decisive scale, ‘of what fallen man is as a ruler of his fellow-men,’ as essential to show what is in man, what he will do when in power, and to demonstrate the necessity—in order to have a perfect government—of Christ’s assuming the Theocratic rule” (Peters, TTK, 1:681).

A second purpose of the times of the Gentiles is to prepare Israel for the Kingdom. “As God disciplines and chastens man before He elevates him to kingship, as the Messiah Himself passed through humiliation and suffering before His exaltation, so also the city destined to such high distinction and grandeur passes through its allotted period of depression and tribulation” (Peters, TTK, 3:37).

Events of the Times of the Gentiles

The times of the Gentiles encompass a long period of time (over 2600 years and counting as of this writing), during which a number of significant prophesied events are to take place.

The times of the Gentiles began with Jerusalem’s Babylonian captivity in 587-586 B.C. Dr. McClain details the events of the captivity and their chronology: “A careful comparison of the events closely associated with the departure of the Shekinah-Glory from Jerusalem will show that we have here one of the most important milestones in all of human history. From the initial coming of the Glory at Sinai to its departure from Jerusalem, the Mediatorial Kingdom had endured for approximately eight centuries. During that long period the power and authority of the Theocracy was never in question. No nation, regardless of its size or strength, could stand successfully against Israel as long as that people followed the will of its divine King. Even their defeats because of sin were an evidence of the supernatural supremacy of this tiny nation; something which was never in serious dispute, from the miraculous destruction of the Egyptian armies in the Red Sea down to the disaster suffered by the Assyrian host at the hand of the angel of the LORD. Israel went down in defeat only when she turned aside from the divinely written charter of her kingdom. And even then there was always a gracious restoration of supremacy when the nation came back to the path of God. But now under Zedekiah, last reigning king in Jerusalem, the cup of Israel's iniquity was filled up 'till there was no remedy' (2 Chron. 36:11-16). The end came quickly, indicated by at least three significantly related events, all occurring in the short space of about ten years. These events, with their approximate dates, are as follows: First, in 603 B.C. we have the divinely authorized transfer of world supremacy to Gentile power. The record of this transfer is found in the second chapter of the Book of Daniel. Here we have the dream of Nebuchadnezzar which, according to the inspired interpretation of Daniel indicates that political supremacy is being committed to Gentile empire of which Babylon is the first and golden head ([Daniel 2] vs. 38). After Babylon there will come three other Gentile empires in unbroken succession, the last to endure down to the end when once more the 'God of heaven' will establish the Mediatorial Kingdom on earth, never again to be interrupted (vs. 44). This transfer of political supremacy furnishes the immediate background of the next events" (GK, p. 125) "Second, in 597 B.C. the prophet Jeremiah pronounces the divine ban putting an end to the Solomonic family succession on the throne of Israel. The record of this important event appears in Jeremiah 22:24-30 [...O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of Jehovah. Thus saith Jehovah, Write ye this man childless, a man that shall not prosper in his days; for no more shall a man of his seed prosper, sitting upon the throne of David, and ruling in Judah.]. It is directed against 'Coniah the son of Jehoiakim,' who is known in Scripture by two other names: 'Jeconiah' (Jer. 24:1) and 'Jehoiachin' (2 Kings 24:6). Although Zedekiah succeeded this man after he had been carried away captive to Babylon (2 Kings 24:11-20), Jehoiachin was very probably the last living ex-king of Judah, for he is seen in the court of Babylon thirty-seven years later (Jer. 52:31-34). It was during his brief reign of 'three months' in Jerusalem (2 Kings 24:8) that Jeremiah was sent to pronounce the doom of his royal family line. It was an utterance of great solemnity and addressed to the entire world as a message of universal interest and concern" (ibid.) "In Jehoiachin the failure of the family of Solomon became complete, and no man of his 'seed' shall ever again sit on the throne of David. As a matter of historical fact, Jehoiachin was not 'childless.' After being carried away into Babylon, he had a son through whom the family line finally culminated in Joseph, the husband of the Virgin Mary (Matt. 1:12-16). But our Lord Jesus Christ was not the 'seed' of Joseph; He was the seed of Mary, who was descended from David through Nathan (Luke 3:31), not through Solomon. Hence it is correct to say that Jehoiachin was to be written ‘childless,’ that is in the genealogical register of the royal family line” (ibid., p. 126). “Finally, following close on the transfer of world supremacy to Gentile power and the divine judgment ending the Solomonic family succession, the Mediatorial Kingdom of Israel was officially terminated by the departure of the Shekinah-Glory, dated by Ezekiel in ‘the sixth year’ of the captivity of Jehoiachin (8:1 with 1:2). This was very probably the year 591 B.C. And it should be noted that although the great prophet Jeremiah was in the city of Jerusalem at the time, the vision of the departing Glory was given to a prophet who was a captive outside the city and the land of the historical kingdom. It may be significant that immediately following the vision which he recorded in chapter 11, Ezekiel refers to Zedekiah as ‘the prince in Jerusalem’ (12:10, italics added). Since the kingdom of the Old Testament was finished, in the mind of the prophet there could be no king in Jerusalem until the kingdom would be finally re-established in Millennial glory. In the long interim, political world supremacy has passed by divine decree into the hands of Gentile power, yet never wholly independent of that providential control which is being exercised by the never-ceasing Universal Kingdom of God” (ibid.). Dr. Pentecost adds, “Finally Nebuchadnezzar returned the third time in 586 B.C. and set siege against the city, bringing about its downfall and destruction (2 Kings 25:1-2; 2 Chron. 36:17-20; Jer. 39:8-10)” (TKC, p. 114). “...the southern kingdom that went into captivity in 606-605 B.C. under Nebuchadnezzar, when Daniel and the princes of Israel were taken. In 597 B.C. Ezekiel and many of the inhabitants of Jerusalem were taken captive. Finally in 586 B.C. the city was destroyed and those previously left behind were taken” (ibid., p. 161). And Dr. Fruchtenbaum, “Zedekiah, the last king of Jerusalem, at which point the Times of the Gentiles began” (I, p. 402). “Nebuchadnezzar destroyed Jerusalem and the Solomonic Temple in 586 B.C” (FM, p. 23). “...the Times of the Gentiles, the lengthy period that began with Nebuchadnezzar’s destruction of Jerusalem in 586 B.C” (ibid., p. 188).

Jeremiah’s 70 Years

According to Jeremiah, the Babylonian captivity was to last 70 years. “And this whole land shall be a desolation, and an astonishment; and these nations shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years. And it shall come to pass, when seventy years are accomplished, that I will punish the king of Babylon, and that nation, saith Jehovah, for their iniquity, and the land of the Chaldeans; and I will make it desolate for ever” (Jer. 25:11-12). “In the first year of Darius the son of Ahasuerus, of the seed of the Medes, who was made king over the realm of the Chaldeans, in the first year of his reign I,

Daniel, understood by the books the number of the years whereof the word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah the prophet, for the accomplishing of the desolations of Jerusalem, even seventy years" (Dan. 9:1-2). "Hence the retention of 70 in the prophecy. Daniel made inquiry concerning 70 [years of Babylonian captivity—ed.], and the angel informs him that another 70 [weeks of years, Dan. 9:24—ed.] relating to his people must transpire" (Peters, TTK, 2:665).

The Succession of Gentile World Powers

In Daniel chapters two and seven, the succession of Gentile world powers is portrayed as four sections of a great statue (as seen by man) and as four wild beasts (as seen by God) respectively. "Fausset (Com., Dan. 7) remarks: 'Daniel sees the world kingdoms in their essence as of an animal nature lower than human, being estranged from God; and that only in the Kingdom of God ("the Son of Man," the representative Man) is the true dignity of man realized.'... Humanity is impossible without divinity; it sinks to beastiality" (Peters, TTK, 3:16)

These four Gentile powers were Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome, with a revived Rome prophesied for the very end of the times of the Gentiles. "Thou, O king, sawest, and, behold, a great image. This image, which was mighty, and whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee; and the aspect thereof was terrible. As for this image, its head was of fine gold, its breast and its arms of silver, its belly and its thighs of brass, its legs of iron, its feet part of iron, and part of clay. Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon its feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them in pieces. Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken in pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshing-floors; and the wind carried them away, so that no place was found for them: and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth. This is the dream; and we will tell the interpretation thereof before the king. Thou, O king, art king of kings, unto whom the God of heaven hath given the kingdom, the power, and the strength, and the glory; and wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field and the birds of the heavens hath he given into thy hand, and hath made thee to rule over them all: thou [Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon] art the head of gold. And after thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee; and another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth. And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron, forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things; and as iron that crusheth all these, shall it break in pieces and crush. And whereas thou sawest the feet and toes, part of potters' clay, and part of iron, it shall be a divided kingdom; but there shall be in it of the strength of the iron, forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay. And as the toes of the feet were part of iron, and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong, and partly broken. And whereas thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men; but they shall not cleave one to another, even as iron doth not mingle with clay. And in the days of those kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, nor shall the sovereignty thereof be left to another people; but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever. Forasmuch as thou sawest that a stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold; the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter: and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure" (Dan. 2:31-45). "In the first year of Belshazzar king of Babylon Daniel had a dream and visions of his head upon his bed: then he wrote the dream and told the sum of the matters. spake and said, I saw in my vision by night, and, behold, the four winds of heaven brake forth upon the great sea. And four great beasts came up from the sea, diverse one from another. The first was like a lion, and had eagle's wings: I beheld till the wings thereof were plucked, and it was lifted up from the earth, and made to stand upon two feet as a man; and a man's heart was given to it. And, behold, another beast, a second, like to a bear; and it was raised up on one side, and three ribs were in its mouth between its teeth: and they said thus unto it, Arise, devour much flesh. After this I beheld, and, lo, another, like a leopard, which had upon its back four wings of a bird; the beast had also four heads; and dominion was given to it. After this I saw in the night-visions, and, behold, a fourth beast, terrible and powerful, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth; it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with its feet: and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it; and it had ten horns. I considered the horns, and, behold, there came up among them another horn, a little one, before which three of the first horns were plucked up by the roots: and, behold, in this horn were eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things. I beheld till thrones were placed, and one that was ancient of days did sit: his raiment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like pure wool; his throne was fiery flames, and the wheels thereof burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him: thousands of thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him: the judgment was set, and the books were opened. I beheld at that time because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake; I beheld even till the beast was slain, and its body destroyed, and it was given to be burned with fire. And as for the rest of the beasts, their dominion was taken away: yet their lives were prolonged for a season and a time. I saw in the night-visions, and, behold, there came with the clouds of heaven one like unto a son of man, and he came even to the ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all the peoples, nations, and languages should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed. As for me, Daniel, my spirit was grieved in the midst of my body, and the visions of my head troubled me. I came near unto one of them that stood by, and asked him the truth concerning all this. So he told me, and made me know the interpretation of the things. These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, that shall arise out of the earth. But the saints of the Most High shall receive the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever. Then I desired to know the truth concerning the fourth beast, which was diverse from all of them, exceeding terrible, whose teeth were of iron, and its nails of brass; which devoured, brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with its feet; and concerning the ten horns that were on its head, and the other horn which came up, and before which three fell, even that horn that had eyes, and a mouth that spake great things, whose look was more stout than its fellows. I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them; until the ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High, and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom. Thus he said, The fourth beast shall be a fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be diverse from all the kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces. And as for the ten horns, out of this kingdom shall ten kings arise: and another shall arise after them; and he shall be diverse from the former, and he shall put down three kings. And he shall speak words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High; and he shall think to change the times and the law; and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and half a time. But the judgment shall be set, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end. And the kingdom and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdoms under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High: his kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him” (Dan. 7:1-27). “But the ‘Colossus’ grows weaker and weaker until the feet and toes become a mixture of Iron and Clay. In other words the government degenerates from an Absolute Monarch to an Autocratic Democracy, a form of government in which the people largely have the say. In short the ‘Colossus’ shows that the Gentile dominion passes gradually from the Head, the organ which ought to direct the members, to the Feet, which are only made to carry the body whither the head directs. We see then that the first of these Kingdoms was a Unit, the second Dual, the third became Quadruple (Dan. 7:6, 8:8), and the fourth, in its final form, becomes Ten-Toed” (Larkin, DT, p. 67). “The reason why these Four Kingdoms are represented first as a ‘Golden Headed Metallic Image,’ and then as a succession of ‘Wild Beasts,’ is to show the difference between man’s view and God’s view of the World Kingdoms. Man sees in them the concentration of wealth, majesty and power; God sees them as a succession of rapacious wild beasts devouring one another” (ibid., p. 69). “In the second and seventh chapters of Daniel there is given a preview of the coming of God’s Kingdom in its relation to the governments of men. Although the symbols used are totally different—a great image in chapter 2 and four beasts in chapter 7—the two visions have certain striking similarities. In each there is presented a succession of four world empires; and in each the fourth empire in its final development consists of a coalition of ten lesser powers. The vision of chapter 7 carries the political development one step further: among the ten powers a notable world ruler emerges who will embody the consummation of all sinful men’s efforts at political organization apart from and opposed to God (Dan. 7:20-25)” (McClain, GK, p. 152). “Through the great image made up of four different metals (Dan. 2), it was revealed that the land given to Abraham’s descendants, and the descendants themselves, would be subjected to the authority of four distinct world empires” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 115). “...four beasts that emerged from the sea (Dan. 7:3), which in prophetic Scripture often refers to Gentile nations... four world empires were to rule over Daniel’s people” (ibid.). “When Rome fell before the invading forces from central and northern Europe, the political power of Rome did not pass to the conquerors, as the power of Babylon had passed to Medo-Persia, the power of Medo-Persia had passed to Greece, and the power of Greece had passed to Rome. Instead, the political power at the fall of Rome was divided among many separate individual nations. According to Daniel's vision, the Roman empire would continue in this divided state until the ultimate reunion of these nations under one head" (ibid., p. 116). "...ten horns, or the ten nations that merged out of the Roman empire... the times of the Gentiles will culminate in a reunion of ten nations that emerge out of the old Roman empire to form a false kingdom in opposition to the kingdom of God" (ibid., p. 117). "The prophetic foreview of Daniel 2 in Nebuchadnezzar's image and the fourth beast of Daniel 7:23-27 likewise ignores the present age" (Walvoord, MK, p. 228). "After Daniel requests the interpretation in [Dan. 7] verses 15-16, he is given a summary interpretation in verses 17-18. In verse 17, Daniel is told that these four beasts represent four kingdoms. Nevertheless, it is the servants of the Most High who will possess the kingdom, for whatever will be possessed by the four Gentile empires will be only temporary (v.18). Whereas earlier the four beasts arose out of the sea, here they arise out of the earth. Coming out of the sea emphasizes their Gentile identity. Arising out of the earth emphasizes their humanity: these are human, not divine, kingdoms" (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 29).

Daniel's Seventy Weeks

When Jeremiah's seventy years were almost completed, thinking that the Kingdom would soon be restored to Israel, Daniel prayed for understanding regarding the restoration of the theocracy. The answer to Daniel's prayer came in the form of an explanation from the angel Gabriel to the effect that although Jeremiah's seventy years were about to expire, the Kingdom would not be restored to Israel for another seventy weeks of years, or four hundred ninety years. "yea, while I was speaking in prayer, the man Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, being caused to fly swiftly, touched me about the time of the evening oblation. And he instructed me, and talked with me, and said, O Daniel, I am now come forth to give thee wisdom and understanding. At the beginning of thy supplications the commandment went forth, and I am come to tell thee; for thou art greatly beloved: therefore consider the matter, and understand the vision. Seventy weeks are decreed upon thy people and upon thy holy city, to finish transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up vision and prophecy, and to anoint the most holy" (Dan. 9:21-24). "...the times of the Gentiles, evinced in the four world empires of Dan. 2 and 7, previously existed, yet Jewish time existed more or less contemporaneously down to the First Advent; for while periods of non-recognition existed (owing to sinfulness, and almost total in respect to the ten tribes), yet, in view of the divine purpose of God relating to the First Advent, He still recognizes the city and nation until we come to the crucifixion of the Messiah, when the non-recognition intervenes, and Gentile domination has paramount sway in power and time” (Peters, TTK, 2:666). “Since the divine reply contains a prediction of the First Advent of Christ, it is wholly appropriate that the messenger should have been Gabriel, the same angel who several hundred years later would announce His birth of the Virgin Mary (Luke 1:26 [‘Now in the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God to a city in Galilee, called Nazareth’])” (McClain, DP, p. 11). “‘Seventy weeks’ (of years) are determined upon Israel and Jerusalem to bring in the long predicted blessings of the Mediatorial Kingdom ([Dan.] 9:24). These seventy weeks of years will begin with ‘the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem’; and the end of the first sixty-nine of the weeks will mark the arrival of ‘Messiah the Prince’ (9:25)” (McClain, GK, p. 173). “Know therefore and discern, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem unto the anointed one, the prince, shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks: it shall be built again, with street and moat, even in troublous times. And after the threescore and two weeks shall the anointed one be cut off, and shall have nothing; and the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and even unto the end shall be war; desolations are determined. And he shall make a firm covenant with many for one week: and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease; and upon the wing of abominations shall come one that maketh desolate; and even unto the full end, and that determined, shall wrath be poured out upon the desolate” (Dan. 9:25-27). “God cut a fixed time of 70 weeks (sevens) of years to chasten Israel and end its rebellion against Him” (Showers, M, p. 53). “God determined all 70 weeks or 490 years for Daniel’s people and holy city (v. 25); therefore, all 70 weeks were determined specifically for Israel and Jerusalem” (ibid., p. 239). “A Summary of Facts... The examination of the 70-weeks prophecy of Daniel 9 has produced several significant facts. First, the Daniel 9:24-27 prophecy involved 70 weeks or 490 years of time. Second, God determined all 70 weeks or 490 years specifically for Israel and Jerusalem, not for the church. Third, the first 69 weeks or 483 years ended with Jesus’ triumphal entry into Jerusalem on the foal of a donkey on Palm Sunday. Fourth, the church did not exist during any part of the first 69 weeks or 483 years. God consistently kept the church out of this entire period of time. It is evident that He intended the first 69 weeks or 483 years to be His program specifically for Israel, not the church. Fifth, God temporarily interrupted His 70-weeks program for Israel at the end of the first 69 weeks or 483 years. Sixth, God started the church very shortly after He interrupted His 70-weeks program for Israel and Jerusalem with a gap of time at the end of the first 69 weeks” (ibid., p. 242).

These seventy weeks were decreed upon the Jews and upon Jerusalem to complete six things.

The seventy weeks were decreed upon the Jews and upon Jerusalem. “Seventy weeks are decreed upon thy people and upon thy holy city, to finish transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up vision and prophecy, and to anoint the most holy” (Dan. 9:24). “‘Upon thy people and upon thy holy city;’ respecting or pertaining to the Jewish nation, and Jerusalem” (Peters, TTK, 2:660). “This promise specially given to the nation and city cannot, without violation of the prediction, be thus applied to the present experience of believers” (ibid.). “The ‘Seventy Weeks,’ or 490 years, only cover the period when the Jews are, by God’s permission, dwelling as a people in their own land. It does not cover the present period of their Dispersion” (Larkin, DT, p. 70). “...decreed upon your people [Daniel’s people, the Jewish people] and upon your holy city [Jerusalem]” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 188)

The seventy weeks were decreed to complete six things. “Seventy weeks are decreed upon thy people and upon thy holy city, [1] to finish transgression, and [2] to make an end of sins, and [3] to make reconciliation for iniquity, and [4] to bring in everlasting righteousness, and [5] to seal up vision and prophecy, and [6] to anoint the most holy” (Dan. 9:24). Individually, these six things are:

1. To finish transgression. “...the death of Christ fearfully increased the sinfulness and the punishment of the nation, and increases the sinfulness of the world in rejecting Him. Transgression produced that death, continued transgression rejects Him, and yet the prophecy declares that, as pertaining to them and the city, at the close of the seventy weeks they shall be no longer under the dominion of transgression... it is certainly wrong to insist upon a fulfillment, in which neither the nation nor city, as such, participated to any extent, but terribly suffered for transgression... It is at the end of this last week that the transgression is to be restrained. The only explanation is, that, as the prophecy itself intimates, this one week is detached, separated from the rest, and held in abeyance—owing to the rejection of the nation and pre-eminence of Gentile times—until this nation is again recognized in its national capacity” (Peters, TTK, 2:660). “In the Hebrew text, it has a definite article. It is not merely to finish transgression, but to finish the transgression, to finish the rebellion. It refers to one specific act of rebellion, one specific act of transgression, to bring it to a finish, to bring it to completion. The one specific transgression in this context is the rejection of the Messiahship of Jesus. The finishing of this one transgression is seen in Isaiah 53:1-9 and Zechariah 12:10-13:1” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 189). “Who hath believed our message? and to whom hath the arm of Jehovah been revealed? For he grew up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground: he hath no form nor comeliness; and when we see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him. He was despised, and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and as one from whom men hide their face he was despised; and we esteemed him not. Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and Jehovah hath laid on him the iniquity of us all. He was oppressed, yet when he was afflicted he opened not his mouth; as a lamb that is led to the slaughter, and as a sheep that before its shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth. By oppression and judgment he was taken away; and as for his generation, who among them considered that he was cut off out of the land of the living for the transgression of my people to whom the stroke was due? And they made his grave with the wicked, and with a rich man in his death; although he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth” (Isa. 53:1–9). “And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and of supplication; and they shall look unto me whom they have pierced; and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his first-born. In that day shall there be a great mourning in Jerusalem, as the mourning of Hadadrimmon in the valley of Megiddon. And the land shall mourn, every family apart; the family of the house of David apart, and their wives apart; the family of the house of Nathan apart, and their wives apart; the family of the house of Levi apart, and their wives apart; the family of the Shimeites apart, and their wives apart; all the families that remain, every family apart, and their wives apart. In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, for sin and for uncleanness” (Zech. 12:10–13:1). “In this first purpose, sin is to come under control so that it will no longer flourish, specifically, Israel's sin of the rejection of the Messiahship of Jesus. Israel's national sin is now to be firmly restrained, to be brought to completion. The same point is brought out in Isaiah 59:20 and Romans 11:26. The first purpose, then, is to bring to an end Israel's national transgression: the rejection of the Messiahship of Jesus" (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 190). "And a Redeemer will come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith Jehovah" (Isa. 59:20). "and thus all Israel will be saved; just as it is written, 'THE DELIVERER WILL COME FROM ZION, HE WILL REMOVE UNGODLINESS FROM JACOB'" (Rom. 11:26).

2. To make an end of sins. "...while there may be sin among the Gentile nations, in the Kingdom there will be no sin in Israel. This very same truth is taught in Isaiah 27:9; Ezekiel 36:25-27; 37:23; and Romans 11:27. This is also the point of the New Covenant in Jeremiah 31:31-34, where Jeremiah clearly predicts the day will come when all Israel's sins will be removed and all Israel will be saved, from the least to the greatest" (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 190). "Therefore by this shall the iniquity of Jacob be forgiven, and this is all the fruit of taking away his sin: that he maketh all the stones of the altar as chalkstones that are beaten in sunder, so that the Asherim and the sun-images shall rise no more" (Isa. 27:9). "Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was a husband unto them, saith Jehovah. But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith Jehovah: I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write it; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people: and they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know Jehovah; for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith Jehovah: for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin will I remember no more" (Jer. 31:31-34). "And I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you a heart of flesh. And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep mine ordinances, and do them" (Ezek. 36:25-27). "neither shall they defile themselves any more with their idols, nor with their de- testable things, nor with any of their transgressions; but I will save them out of all their dwelling-places, wherein they have sinned, and will cleanse them: so shall they be my people, and I will be their God” (Ezek. 37:23). “AND THIS IS MY COVENANT WITH THEM, WHEN I TAKE AWAY THEIR SINS” (Rom. 11:27).

3. To make reconciliation for iniquity. “Instead of pardoning the iniquity of the Jewish nation, to whom the prophecy specially applies, the nation is still feeling the effects of God’s withdrawal, but the time is coming when their iniquity shall be forgiven and the forgiveness manifested in prosperity and exaltation” (Peters, TTK, 2:661). “The phrase ‘to make reconciliation for iniquity’ does not here refer to the death of Christ, as some have assumed, but refers to what God will do for Israel on the basis of the death of Christ. As the late Sir Robert Anderson has already pointed out, the sacrifice itself was not the reconciliation, but rather the means by which the reconciliation was made. At His glorious appearing, which will close the Seventieth Week, our Lord on the basis of His sacrifice at Calvary will ‘reconcile’ the chosen people unto Himself” (McClain, DP, p. 66). “The Hebrew word for reconciliation is a word that means ‘to make an atonement.’ This is the means by which the first and second purposes will be accomplished. The means by which Israel’s national sin of rejecting the Messiah will be removed and the means by which her daily sins will be removed is by an atonement. The third purpose is to make an atonement specifically for iniquity. The word iniquity refers to the sin nature. The program of the Seventy Sevens is a cleansing of Israel that will include the removal of all three things: first, the national sin of rejecting His Messiahship; second, sinning daily; and third, dealing with the sin nature itself” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 190).

4. To bring in everlasting righteousness. “The fourth purpose of the Seventy Sevens is: to bring in everlasting righteousness or more literally, ‘to bring in an age of righteousness,’ which is what the Hebrew word for everlasting really means. This age of righteousness is called the Messianic Kingdom and the Millennium” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 191). “The fourth purpose is to bring in an age of righteousness, to establish the Kingdom. Daniel thought the Kingdom would be set up immediately after the seventy years of captivity; now he is told that this will occur not after seventy years, but after seventy sevens of years or 490 years” (ibid.).

5. To seal up vision and prophecy. “‘to seal up vision and prophecy’ is generally taken to mean that prophecy is to be brought to an end by its fulfillment, but there may also be the further idea that the very fountain of prophecy will be sealed because with the Son of God personally on earth

His word will go forth directly, no longer through the medium of the prophet” (McClain, DP, p. 66). “The fifth purpose of the Seventy Sevens is to cause a cessation of both oral and written prophecy, because the program of the Seventy Sevens will contain the final fulfillment of all prophecies; the function of all prophecies will cease at the Second Coming of the Messiah” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 191). “The thing to remember, however, is that the Eternal State is New Testament revelation; no Old Testament prophet ever saw beyond the Kingdom into the Eternal Order. From the perspective of the Old Testament and in light of the fact that no prophet ever saw beyond the Messianic Kingdom, when Daniel speaks about the sealing up of vision and prophecy with the Kingdom, he means that insofar as Old Testament prophecy is concerned, everything will indeed be fulfilled” (ibid., p. 192).

6. To anoint the most holy. “‘To anoint the Most Holy’... Christ will consecrate, at His Second Coming, with His presence the Holy hill of Zion” (Peters, TTK, 2:662) “‘to anoint a most holy place’ (A.R.V. margin) is undoubtedly the correct reading and translation. The reference is to the great millennial Temple which will be consecrated as a place of worship and prayer for all nations at the beginning of Messiah’s kingdom. During that blessed age, not to Geneva, nor to Rome, will men come to worship the Lord. But there will be a temple of the Lord in Jerusalem, and there God will meet with men in a ‘holy place’ sanctified by the personal presence of our Lord Jesus Christ Himself. This will not abrogate the universality of worship ushered in by Calvary (John 4:21-24 [“Jesus said to her, ‘Woman, believe Me, an hour is coming when neither in this mountain, nor in Jerusalem, shall you worship the Father. You worship that which you do not know; we worship that which we know, for salvation is from the Jews. But an hour is coming, and now is, when the true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and truth; for such people the Father seeks to be His worshipers. God is spirit, and those who worship Him must worship in spirit and truth.”]), as some have objected, but will add to this universality a further glory in the personal presence of the Son of God on earth. To go up to Jerusalem to worship the Lord will no more detract from the present universality and spirituality of worship than the going to a church-building for worship as we do today. Today even modernistic theologians will spend a great deal of time and energy and money to make the trip to Jerusalem for the purpose of seeing the city where His blessed feet once trod. It will be a thousand times more wonderful to go when He Himself is there once more, as we trust He soon will be” (McClain, DP, p. 66). “...to anoint the most holy... it is the Fourth Temple, the Temple of the Messianic Kingdom, built by the Lord Himself, and it will be anointed as part of the program of Seventy Sevens” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 192). We’ll discuss the millennial temple in detail in our chapter The Millennial Kingdom.

These seventy weeks are weeks of years, not weeks of days. “The Hebrew word is shabua, which means literally a ‘seven,’ and it would be well to read the passage thus, dropping for a moment the word ‘week’ which to the English ear always means a week of days. Thus the twenty-fourth verse of Daniel’s ninth chapter simply asserts that ‘seventy sevens are determined’” (McClain, DP, p. 18) “In their divinely inspired calendar, the Jews had a ‘seven’ of years as well as a ‘seven’ of days. And this Biblical ‘week’ of years was just as familiar to the Jew as the ‘week’ of days. It was, in certain respects, even more important. Six years the Jew was free to till and sow his land, but the seventh year was to be a solemn ‘Sabbath of rest unto the land’ (Lev. 25:3-4)... Nothing could be so important to the Jew as this week of years” (ibid., p. 19). “Daniel also knew that the very length of the Babylonian captivity had been based on Jewish violations of the divine law of the Sabbatic year. Since according to 2 Chronicles 36:21 [to fulfil the word of Jehovah by the mouth of Jeremiah, until the land had enjoyed its sabbaths: for as long as it lay desolate it kept sabbath, to fulfil threescore and ten years] the Jews had been removed from off the land in order that it might rest for seventy years, it should be evident that the Sabbatic year had been violated for 490 years, or exactly seventy ‘sevens’ of years. How appropriate, therefore, that now at the end of the judgment for these violations the angel should be sent to reveal the start of a new era of God’s dealing with the Jew which would extend for the same number of years covered by his violations of the Sabbatic year, namely, a cycle of 490 years, or ‘Seventy Sevens’ of years (Dan. 9:24)” (ibid.). “Seventy weeks... One of the greatest tragedies in biblical interpretation is that the word has been translated here as weeks. This would require the Hebrew word shavout. But the word used here is shavuim which does not mean weeks, but simply means ‘sevens.’ As such, it could refer to ‘seven’ of anything, just as the English word ‘dozen’ simply means ‘twelve’ and can be twelve of anything... the context must be studied to determine the content... In this context, obviously, it must be a seven of years, because Daniel has been dealing with years. He has been counting up the seventy years of the Babylonian Captivity, assuming that after seventy years the Kingdom was going to be set up. Clearly, Daniel has been thinking in terms of years. In the Hebrew text there is a play upon words. Daniel is told that it is not ‘seventy years’ but that ‘seventy sevens of years’ must pass before the introduction of the Kingdom” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 188).

These seventy weeks began with the decree of Artaxerxes to rebuild Jerusalem in 445 B.C. “The commandment to Restore and Rebuild Jerusalem.’ The date of this ‘commandment’ is given in Neh. 2:1, as the month Nisan, in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes the king, which was the 14th day of March, B.C. 445” (Larkin, DT, p. 84). “And it came to pass in the month Nisan, in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes the king, when wine was before him, that I took up the wine, and gave it unto the king. Now I had not been beforetime sad in his presence” (Neh. 2:1). “...the famous edict of Artaxerxes Longimanus, dated March 14, B.C. 445” (Larkin, DT, p. 85) “The official ‘commandment’ authorizing the rebuilding of Jerusalem was issued to Nehemiah by the Persian king, Artaxerxes, in ‘the twentieth year’ of his reign, which happens to be one of the best authenticated dates in ancient history—445 B.C. From this date to the arrival of the Messianic King, according to Daniel, will be 69 weeks or 483 prophetic years. After allowing all due consideration for the various differences in computing these years, the prophecy remains unshaken. Its terminus ad quem, within close limits, is fixed and must fall somewhere within the earthly career of Jesus of Nazareth. If He is not the Messianic King of Old Testament prophecy, then prophecy has failed, and we can have no certain hope that there will ever be any such king” (McClain, GK, p. 173).

Division of the Seventy Weeks

Daniel’s seventy weeks are divided up into four sections: Seven weeks, sixty-two weeks, “after” the sixty-two weeks, then the final seventieth week. “Seventy weeks are decreed upon thy people and upon thy holy city, to finish transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up vision and prophecy, and to anoint the most holy. Know therefore and discern, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem unto the anointed one, the prince, shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks: it shall be built again, with street and moat, even in troublous times. And after the threescore and two weeks shall the anointed one be cut off, and shall have nothing: and the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and even unto the end shall be war; desolations are determined. And he shall make a firm covenant with many for one week: and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease; and upon the wing of abominations shall come one that maketh desolate; and even unto the full end, and that determined, shall wrath be poured out upon the desolate” (Dan. 9:24–27).

The First Seven Weeks

The first seven weeks, or forty-nine years, were for the rebuilding of Jerusalem. “Know therefore and discern, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem unto the anointed one, the prince, shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks: it shall be built again, with street and moat, even in troublous times” (Dan. 9:25-26). “The first subdivision, the seven sevens, is a total of forty-nine years and refers to the forty-nine year period that it took to rebuild Jerusalem” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 193).

The Sixty-two Weeks

The next sixty-two weeks, or sixty-nine weeks (four hundred eighty-three years) total, end with the arrival of Messiah the prince. “Know therefore and discern, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem unto the anointed one, the prince, shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks [7 + 62 = 69 weeks]: it shall be built again, with street and moat, even in troublous times” (Dan. 9:25). “And as they were untying the colt, its owners said to them, ‘Why are you untying the colt?’ And they said, ‘The Lord has need of it.’ And they brought it to Jesus, and they threw their garments on the colt, and put Jesus on it. And as He was going, they were spreading their garments in the road. And as He was now approaching, near the descent of the Mount of Olives, the whole multitude of the disciples began to praise God joyfully with a loud voice for all the miracles which they had seen, saying, ‘BLESSED IS THE KING WHO COMES IN THE NAME OF THE LORD; Peace in heaven and glory in the highest” (Luke 19:33–38)! “And when He approached, He saw the city and wept over it, saying, ‘If you had known in this day, even you, the things which make for peace! But now they have been hidden from your eyes. For the days shall come upon you when your enemies will throw up a bank before you, and surround you, and hem you in on every side, and will level you to the ground and your children within you, and they will not leave in you one stone upon another, because you did not recognize the time of your visitation’” (Luke 19:41-44). “And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it, Saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes” (Luke 19:41–4, KJV) “On the exact measurement of the time indicated by Daniel, Dr. Henry C. Thiessen writes (Bibliotheca Sacra, 1935, XCII, 47-48): Sir Robert Anderson proves that the luni-solar year was the form of the year in use in Bible times, both at Babylon and at Jerusalem. He shows this from the Scriptures and from authorities on astronomy (Daniel in the Critics' Den, pp. 117-23). On the basis of information furnished him by the Astronomer Royal, Sir Robert assigns the 1st Nisan, B.C. 445 [some scholars suggest the 1st Nisan, B.C. 444—ed.], the time when the decree was issued to rebuild Jerusalem, to March 14th. On the basis of the chronological data supplied by the Gospels he assigns the 10th Nisan, the day when Christ entered Jerusalem on the colt of an ass, to the 6th April, A.D. 32 [or 6th April, A.D. 33, if the 1st Nisan, B.C. 444 start date is the correct one—ed.]. This is the Sunday preceding the Passover of that year. 'The interval [between these two termini],' Sir Robert says, 'contained exactly and to the very day, 173,880 days, or seven times sixty-nine prophetic years of 360 days, the first sixty-nine weeks of Gabriel's prophecy [$7 \times 69 \times 360 = 173,880$ days—ed.]' (The Coming Prince, pp. 123-29). In computing the time from the 14 March, B.C. 445, to the 6th April, A.D. 32, he uses the following language: 'The intervening period was 476 years [445 B.C. to 32 A.D. = 476 years; there is no zero year in the Gregorian calendar—ed.] and 24 days [March 14 to April 6 inclusively = 24 days—ed.] (the days being reckoned inclusively, as required by the language of the prophecy, and in accordance with the Jewish practice). But 476 times 365 is 173,740 days [$476 \times 365 = 173,740$ days—ed.]; add (14th March to 6th April, both inclusive) 24 days; add for leap years 116 days [(476 years/4 years per leap year) - 3 days = 116 days; a leap year is skipped every 100 years, but is kept every 400th year, hence the subtracting 3 days—ed.]; and we have 173,880 days [$173,740 + 24 + 116 = 173,880$ days—ed.]. And 69 weeks of prophetic years of 360 days (or 69 times 7 times 360) equals 173,880 days.' Cf. Luke 19:42. This careful computation of the time covered by these weeks has all the appearance of accuracy and therefore commends itself as the true one. It makes the sixty-ninth week end on Palm Sunday, and so is in harmony with Daniel's statement that Messiah would be 'cut off after these weeks" (Chafer, ST, 4:338). "The division of those weeks is as follows: (1) seven weeks, or 49 years, (2) sixty-two weeks, or 434 years, (3) one week, or 7 years. The beginning of the reckoning is the time of the decree to restore and build Jerusalem, which was in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes, or 445 B.C. (Neh. 2). From that time till Messiah the Prince there were to be sixty-nine weeks, or 483 years, and it is only another proof of the infallibility of the Word of our God that the Lord Jesus Christ entered Jerusalem (according to the calculations of Sir Robert Anderson), at the consummation of the sixty-ninth week" (Showers, M, p. 150). "...triumphal entry (Matt. 21:1-17), which conformed to the time of Messiah's coming announced in Daniel 9:24-27" (Pentecost, TTC, p. 460).

“27: ‘If thou hadst known, even thou, in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace, but now they are hid from thine eyes’ ([Luke 19:] 42). What ‘day’? Why the day God had fixed in Daniel’s prophecy, the day that belonged to Israel, the day on which their ‘Messiah’ would manifest Himself as the ‘Prince,’ the exact 173,880th day of the prophecy! And what were ‘the things’ belonging to their peace? They are the identical ‘things’ named in verse 24 of the prophecy of the Seventy Weeks, those marvelous blessings promised to Israel by that God Who never breaks a covenant. But now for a time all these ‘things’ are to be hid from the eyes of the nation; their enemies will prevail over them; and the city will be once more destroyed. But why? The answer is tragic but just: ‘Because thou knewest not the Time of thy visitation’ (44)” (McClain, DP, p. 27). “The 173,880 Days of the first Sixty-nine Weeks ran their course to the very day—deep and abiding encouragement to all who love the Lord and His precious Word of prophecy... The exact fulfillment of this prophecy is sufficient to demonstrate the accuracy of Daniel and also by implication the inspiration of the Bible and the truth of Christianity. Only God can ‘declare the end from the beginning’ and forecast to the very day ‘things that are not yet done’ (Isa. 46:10)” (ibid., p. 27). “The prophet Daniel had spoken of the ‘day’ when ‘Messiah the Prince’ would arrive: ‘from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem unto the Messiah the Prince shall be seven weeks: and threescore and two weeks’ (9:25). These 69 weeks of prophetic years of 360 days each add up to 173,880 days, and on the final one of these days our Lord rode into Jerusalem as the Messianic King of Israel... If the day was fixed by divine prophecy, this would explain the complete absence of any other official offer before this particular time” (McClain, GK, p. 351). “The fact that Gabriel referred to the Messiah as ‘the Prince’ implies that the event must be related significantly to the Messiah’s being Israel’s Prince or coming King” (Showers, M, p. 240). “As Jesus approached Jerusalem on that day, He wept over the city and said, ‘If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! But now they are hidden from thine eyes.’ He warned Jerusalem that it would be destroyed by enemy forces ‘because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation’ (Lk. 19:41-44). Jesus’ language indicated that that particular day had been marked out by God as the time of Jerusalem’s visitation by her Messiah-Prince—the day that could have brought lasting peace to that city if its people had accepted Jesus for who He was. It also indicated that the people of Israel should have recognized that that particular day was the day when the Messiah would visit Jerusalem as Prince because several centuries earlier, in Daniel 9, God had revealed the exact time when the Messiah would present Himself as Prince to Israel” (ibid.). “...the first 483 years of the 490 year period came to an end with the First Coming of the Messiah” (Frucht-enbaum, FM, p. 193).

“After” the Sixty-two Weeks

After the sixty-two weeks, several important events were to occur.

After the sixty-two weeks, which is after the (total) sixty-nine weeks, Messiah was to be cut off, and the city and temple destroyed. “And after the threescore and two weeks shall the anointed one be cut off, and shall have nothing: and the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and even unto the end shall be war; desolations are determined.” (Dan. 9:26). “Instead of a Kingdom and great glory described as pertaining to the nation, we have the Messiah cut off, the destruction of the city, desolations determined ‘even until the consummation,’ or for a certain period of time. Thus do the facts, as they exist to-day, tally with the previously given predictions” (Peters, TTK, 1:391). “...the advanced student... Dan. 9:26, to the clause ‘shall Messiah be cut off, but not for Himself.’... Barnes, however, asserts that the marginal reading is the correct rendering: ‘And shall have nothing.’... ‘there shall be nothing for Him; He will be rejected, and His earthly Kingdom will be a thing on which He will not enter’” (ibid., p. 693). “And after three score and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off;’ this, as eminent commentators have abundantly shown, was fulfilled in the death of the Messiah. ‘But not for himself;’ if this rendering is correct, then He died for the benefit of others; if the marg. reading is to be preferred, ‘and shall have nothing,’ it refers to the fact that the Messiah, as David’s Son, did not obtain His inheritance” (ibid., 2:663) “‘the people’... the Romans. The prince is the Roman emperor or head who comes with his armies after the death of the Messiah for purposes of devastation. ‘Shall destroy the city and the sanctuary;’ how this was accomplished under the Roman power is part of history, and needs no explanation... ‘And unto the end of the war desolations are determined;’... The city and the sanctuary being overthrown, this desolation would be continued on during a period of time decreed or determined by God, as e.g. the Messiah predicted that Jerusalem would continue (after it was taken) to be trodden down by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles were fulfilled. The impressive feature that after the taking of the city by the Romans the overthrow and desolation of the Jewish nation would not cease, but continue on, has been fearfully verified in its history” (ibid.). “The word translated ‘cut off’ was used for the death penalty (Lev. 7:20-21, 25, 27) and often referred to a violent death (1 Sam. 17:51; Obad. 9; Nah. 3:15)” (Showers, M, p. 240). “It is a fact of history that Jesus was condemned to death and crucified several days (less than a week) after His triumphal entry into Jerusalem on Palm Sunday (Mk. 11-15)” (ibid.).

This cutting-off of Messiah and destruction of the city were to occur after the sixty-ninth week, but before the seventieth week. “It should be carefully observed that, in the literary sequence of the prophecy, both the cutting off of the King and a subsequent destruction of Jerusalem are placed before the seventieth week” (McClain, GK, p. 174) “Daniel 9:24-27... The anointed one, or the Messiah, is cut off after the sixty-ninth week, but not in the seventieth. Such a circumstance could be true only if there were a time interval between these two periods” (Walvoord, MK, p. 228). “When he says, ‘after the sixty-two sevens,’ he means after the conclusion of the second subdivision of the Seventy Sevens and before the beginning of the third subdivision of the Seventy Sevens. This phrase clearly shows that a gap of time exists between the second and third subdivisions, that is, between the sixty-ninth seven and the seventieth seven. In this gap of time three events are to occur... a. The Messiah Would Be Killed... First, the Messiah shall be cut off, and shall have nothing. The expression to be cut off means ‘to be killed.’ This occurred in A.D. 30 [two years earlier than the A.D. 32 of Sir Robert Anderson’s chronology—ed.], approximately thirty-five years after the birth of Jesus. Furthermore, it says: and shall have nothing. The noun may mean ‘nothingness,’ to explain His state at death, or the Hebrew term may also mean ‘but not for Himself,’ meaning He did not die for Himself, but for others. That is probably the intent of the passage. b. The Destruction of Jerusalem and the Temple... The people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary... By saying the prince, Daniel uses the article of previous reference, because he has spoken of him in the previous chapters... Since the Antichrist must be of the same nationality as the people who destroyed the city and the Temple, it is this verse that shows that the Antichrist will be a Gentile of Roman origin... Whenever the figure of a flood is used symbolically, it always is a symbol of a military invasion. c. Continuing War... Even unto the end shall be war... For the remainder of the interval before the start of the seventieth seven, the Land will be characterized by war. This has certainly been true throughout the history of the Middle East. As a result of the wars, desolations are determined, a reference to the state of the Land as determined or decreed by God” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 194).

We know that the seventieth week did not immediately follow the sixty-ninth week because the destruction of Jerusalem in 70 A.D. occurred at a time beyond such a contiguous seventieth week. “Daniel 9 indicates that the destruction of Jerusalem and the Temple by the Romans fits within the scope of the 70 weeks or 490 years of the prophecy. Thus, this destruction was to occur before the end of the 70th week or last period of seven years. In light of this and the fact that the first 69 weeks ended with Jesus' triumphal entry, if the last seven of the 490 years had followed immediately after the end of the first 69 weeks, Jerusalem and the Temple would have been destroyed just seven years after Jesus' triumphal entry into Jerusalem in the early 30s A.D. It is a fact of history, however, that Jerusalem and the Temple were not destroyed until 70 A.D., several decades after Jesus' triumphal entry. Only if there were a gap of time between the end of the first 69 weeks and the beginning of the 70th week could this destruction have taken place so late and still be within the scope of the 70-weeks or 490-years prophecy" (Showers, M, p. 241).

Now, although we can readily identify in history the event prophesied to occur at the end of the sixty-ninth week (arrival of Messiah), and the two events prophesied to occur after the sixty-ninth week (Messiah cut off and the city and temple destroyed), we cannot identify in history any of the events prophesied for the seventieth week. This strongly suggests that there must be an unspecified gap of time between the sixty-ninth and seventieth weeks. "...the Seventy Weeks of Daniel... between the last week and the preceding weeks there is an interregnum or lengthy interval, of which, not being Jewish time, no account is taken. This interregnum embraces a large portion of the time in this dispensation" (Peters, TTK, 2:459). "While the interpretation of the first sixty-nine sevens is thus afforded a literal fulfillment, nothing can be found in history that provides a literal fulfillment of the last seven or the seventieth week. It has been taken by many that this indicated a postponement of the fulfillment of the last seven years of the prophecy to a future seven-year period preceding the Second Advent. If so, a parenthesis of time involving the whole present age is indicated" (Walvoord, TRQ, p. 26).

It is not uncommon for time gaps to occur in Bible prophecy. "It is not unusual for biblical prophecies to contain gaps of time. For example, Isaiah 9:6 says, 'For unto us a child is born' (referring to the Messiah's first coming), and 'the government shall be upon his shoulder' (related to the Messiah's Second Coming). Zechariah 9:9-10 states, 'behold, thy King cometh unto thee... lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt, the foal of an ass' (referring to the Messiah's triumphal entry during His first coming), and 'his dominion shall be from sea even to sea, and from the river even to the ends of the earth' (related to the Messiah's Second Coming)" (Showers, M, p. 242).

The time gap has enabled the creation and building of the church. “And I also say to you that you are Peter, and upon this rock I will build My church; and the gates of Hades shall not overpower it” (Matt. 16:18). “The clock of God stopped at the end of the sixty-ninth week and the Jewish age has been interrupted. That interval is the church age, not foreseen in the Old Testament. It is that interval that solves the problem that troubled the prophets when they searched for the specific time of the sufferings of Christ and of the glory that should follow. The church age began, then, when Daniel’s sixty-nine weeks were finished and will come to an end before the beginning of the seventieth week” (Feinberg, M, p. 150).

The time gap between the sixty-ninth and seventieth weeks was likely not disclosed clearly for the sakes of enabling human freedom and not unnecessarily depressing the Jewish eschatological hopes. “The critical student will not fail to notice one peculiarity connected with this prophecy, viz., that God in the manner of presenting the truth avoids the fearful depressing effect that the real facts of the future would have had, if fully stated, upon the nation. Suppose e.g. that the Spirit had revealed that the time determined upon the Jewish nation and city would embrace over eighteen centuries of trial and persecution—what a terrible blow this would have been. God’s mercy veils this in the peculiar manner of prediction. Daniel, who obtained a view of this long interval, was so deeply affected that for weeks he mourned and fasted ([Dan.] ch. 10:2, 3). Let us briefly place ourselves in Daniel’s position, and then we may more correctly imagine his feelings. He had previously received (chs. 2, 7) an epitome of history which indicated the deliverance of the nation at the Advent of the covenanted Messiah. But these were also so framed that they mercifully concealed the awful fact of the rejection and death of the Messiah by the nation and the consequent long-continued tribulation. The framework of the prophecy, dealing with the times of the Gentiles, allowed this skilful and compassionate veiling of the nation’s sin and doom. Now Daniel, because of this merciful concealment of facts, entertained (ch. 9:2-19) the hope that, according to Jeremiah, the restoration from the Babylonish captivity would result in the ultimate restoration under the Messiah. To ascertain the correctness of this hope, he proceeds to ‘prayer and supplication with fasting, and sackcloth and ashes,’ and proceeds to a confession of sin and supplication for mercy. The result is, that God reveals to him the inexpressible painful fact that his nation would reject the Messiah, and that fresh and long-continued tribulations would have to be endured, Jerusalem again being destroyed. No wonder that Daniel was astounded and mourned over that dreary, dark future—having a clear and unmistakable view of the inevitable postponement of the Messiah's Kingdom. Happy we, if, like Daniel, we feel deeply interested in, and ponder over, such predictions. In the world to come we may hear from Daniel's own lips how powerfully his feelings were wrought upon, and what fervent supplications flowed from his heart. God will honor him for his expression of feeling, and we, too, shall be honored with him because of our respect and reverence for such communications" (Peters, TTK, 2:667).

In theory, had the Jews accepted Jesus as Messiah, Daniel's sixty-ninth week could have been followed immediately by the seventieth week. "If the question be asked why such a brief period should be cut out of the larger portion and be thus expressed, several answers are suggested: (1) the time stated is, if we may so call it, Jewish time, i.e. time relating to the nation, and hence the period of Gentile domination is not included under it; (2) the Divine Spirit in a most remarkable manner presents His abhorrence of the appalling act of which the nation was guilty, viz., in crucifying the Messiah, by which act the nation forfeited for a period God's recognition of it as a nation, and hence the period of such non-recognition is not reckoned; (3) Jesus Himself tells us that 'the times of the Gentiles' shall intervene, which are not included, they becoming such pre-eminently by the rejection of the Messiah. For, at the appearing of the Messiah... the Kingdom was tendered to the nation on condition of repentance. Had the nation repented, the period of seventy weeks alone would have embraced their degradation, for the Kingdom would have been re-established... Hence the prophecy is given in view of the offer of this Kingdom, and yet fully by implication expresses the refusal of the same" (Peters, TTK, 2:660). "Since all the promised blessings are associated with the second coming of Christ (Rom. 11:26-27), if there were no gap, the Lord would have returned three and a half or seven years after His death to fulfill the promises. Since His coming is still anticipated there must be a gap between the last two weeks of the prophecy" (Pentecost, TTC, p. 248).

Even with the time gap, God can still deal with Israel in some ways during this period. "This does not mean that God stopped working altogether with Israel and Jerusalem when He interrupted the 70-weeks program and started the church. Instead, it means that God temporarily stopped one specific program (the 70-weeks program) with Israel and Jerusalem while He works His program with the church in the world. There is a major difference between saying that God stopped working with Israel altogether and saying that He temporarily stopped one specific program with that nation. God worked with Israel and Jerusalem in ways other than the 70-weeks program for many centuries before He started that specific program after Daniel's time. In like manner, during the present interruption of the 70-weeks program, He works with the nation and city in ways other than that program" (Showers, M, p. 243).

The Seventieth Week

Daniel's seventieth week is packed with prophetic significance (especially is this seen when it is recognized that most of the events of Matthew chapter twenty-four and Revelation chapters six through nineteen fit within the week). "And after the threescore and two weeks shall the anointed one be cut off, and shall have nothing; and the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and even unto the end shall be war; desolations are determined. And he shall make a firm covenant with many for one week; and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease; and upon the wing of abominations shall come one that maketh desolate; and even unto the full end, and that determined, shall wrath be poured out upon the desolate" (Dan. 9:26-27). "The seventieth week of Gentile times is, according to all prediction bearing on it, a period of vital importance and burdened with stupendous events. From the viewpoint of Gentile and Jewish prediction, there is continuity or unbroken sequence between the 483 years which were completed by the death of Christ and the 7 years yet to run. This continuity will be largely governmental and political. In many matters—social, economic, educational, and material—the world will have made its progress during the Church age; but, as in the 483 years, the divine reckoning will be in the last seven years with Gentile authorities and not with the outcalling of the Church. In the continuity of divine reckoning, the feet of iron and clay are attached and their representation follows the iron-leg period without interruption" (Chafer, ST, 4:339). "Likewise, Daniel's seventieth week is in a sequence of 69 which have gone before and completes that belonging to the 69. Though 2,000 years fall in between, prophetic continuity sees only the Gentile realities represented by an unamputated image, and the Jewish history of 490 years unbroken by any unforeseen and unrelated age. As before indicated, though the feet of the image are in point of time removed 2,000 years from the legs of iron and a new divine undertaking runs its course in between, the Smiting Stone is said to destroy that which the image represents—Gentile dominion—and serves no purpose as a judgment upon the Church or world conditions in her age. Similarly, what constituted the character of 483 years will be revived and consummated in the last 7 of the total 490" (ibid.).

We'll deal at length with the contents of Daniel's "seventieth week" prophecy in our chapter The Great Tribulation. Here, in this chapter, we will be covering only a few basic points, concerning the the timing of the seventieth week and identification of its two main characters. This will help prepare us for our more detailed study later.

First, regarding the timing of the fulfillment of Daniel's seventieth week, this writer is convinced that there is an irrefutable line of argument that proves that Daniel's seventieth week has not been fulfilled in the past, and that it therefore must necessarily find fulfillment in the future. This line of argument is as follows: 1. Daniel placed the abomination of desolation in the middle of his seventieth week (Dan. 9:27). 2. Jesus placed the abomination of desolation in the future (admittedly, the future from standpoint of the time at which He gave the prophecy), at the time of the Great Tribulation (Matt. 24:15-21). 3. In the same passage, Jesus said that immediately after the tribulation of those days, the Son of Man would come on the clouds of the sky with power and great glory (Matt. 24:29-30). Now, 4. The Son of Man has not yet come on the clouds of the sky with power and great glory. Therefore, 5. The Great Tribulation, which immediately precedes the Son of Man's coming in glory has not happened yet and, therefore, 6. The abomination of desolation, which immediately precedes the Great Tribulation ("the abomination of desolation... then there will be a great tribulation," Matt. 24:15-21), has not happened yet. Therefore, 7. Daniel's seventieth week, which features the abomination of desolation at its midpoint, has not happened yet. This line of argument also proves that 8. Since all commentators concede that Daniel's sixty-ninth week was fulfilled at Jesus' First Advent, there must therefore be a (almost two thousand-year-long now) time gap between Daniel's sixty-ninth and seventieth weeks. This linking of Daniel's seventieth week, the abomination of desolation, the Great Tribulation and the coming of the Son of Man is made by the following passages: "And he shall make a firm covenant with many for one week: and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease; and upon the wing of abominations shall come one that maketh desolate; and even unto the full end, and that determined, shall wrath be poured out upon the desolate" (Dan. 9:27). "Therefore when you see the abomination of desolation which was spoken of through Daniel the prophet, standing in the holy place (let the reader understand), then let those who are in Judea flee to the mountains; let him who is on the housetop not go down to get the things out that are in his house; and let him who is in the field not turn back to get his cloak. But woe to those who are with child and to those who nurse babes in those days! But pray that your flight may not be in the winter, or on a Sabbath; for then there will be a great tribulation, such as has not occurred since the beginning of the world until now, nor ever shall” (Matt. 24:15-21). “But immediately after the tribulation of those days the sun will be darkened, and the moon will not give its light, and the stars will fall from the sky, and the powers of the heavens will be shaken, and then the sign of the Son of Man will appear in the sky, and then all the tribes of the earth will mourn, and they will see the Son of Man coming on the clouds of the sky with power and great glory. And He will send forth His angels with a great trumpet and they will gather together His elect from the four winds, from one end of the sky to the other” (Matt. 24:29-31). “In Matthew 24:15 reference is made to the coming of the ‘abomination of desolation’ and this is a sign to Israel that the great tribulation is approaching (Matt. 24:21). But even in this time there is hope, for ‘immediately after the tribulation of those days... they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory’ (Matt. 24:29-30). Thus the Lord is placing the seventieth week of Daniel at the end of the age immediately before His second advent to the earth. Coupling this with Acts 1:6-8, we see that a whole age of undetermined duration is to intervene between the sixty-ninth and seventieth weeks of the prophecy. The only conclusion must be that the events of the seventieth week are as yet unfulfilled and await a future literal fulfillment” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 249). “There are several evidences for this gap of time between the end of the first 69 weeks and the beginning of the 70th week. First, Daniel 9:27 teaches that abomination will come with desolation during the 70th week, but Jesus indicated that this abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel will come shortly before His Second Coming immediately after the Great Tribulation (Mt. 24:15-21, 29-31), meaning that the 70th week or last seven years of the prophecy must also come shortly before Jesus’ Second Coming” (Showers, M, p. 241). (See also the section The Timing of The Great Tribulation of our chapter The Great Tribulation.)

Next, we identify the “prince that shall come” as the Antichrist; not the Christ. “And after the threescore and two weeks shall the anointed one be cut off, and shall have nothing; and the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and even unto the end shall be war; desolations are determined. And he shall make a firm covenant with many for one week; and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease; and upon the wing of abominations shall come one that maketh desolate; and even unto the full end, and that determined, shall wrath be poured out upon the desolate” (Dan. 9:26-27). “And he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week;... the one alluded to, who shall make the covenant, is by the tenor of the prophecy connected with ‘the people of the prince that shall come,’ i.e. shall also belong to, or be head of, this persecuting Roman power” (Peters, TTK, 2:663) “Christ did not make a covenant for a week, or seven years” (ibid.) “...there are two different princes mentioned: first, ‘Messiah the Prince’; and second, ‘the prince that shall come.’ The expression ‘prince that shall come’ cannot possibly refer to ‘Messiah, the Prince’ for the simple reason that it is ‘the people of the prince that shall come’ who are to destroy Jerusalem after the death of Messiah. And since it is now a matter of history that Jerusalem was destroyed in A.D. 70 by the Roman people, not by the Jewish people, it follows that ‘the prince that shall come’ cannot be the Jewish Messiah but is some great prince who will arise out of the Roman Empire” [quoting Alva J. McClain, Daniel’s Prophecy of the Seventy Weeks, p. 42] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 249). “His well-known identity is undoubtedly one reason why in chapter nine he is referred to simply as ‘the prince that shall come.’ For those who had read the great vision of chapter seven, no further identification would be needed. This same prince is, in my judgment, also the ‘king of fierce [strong] countenance’ of chapter eight, the Willful King of chapter eleven, the ‘man of sin’ of 2 Thessalonians 2:3, the beast ‘out of the sea’ of Revelation 13:1; the last great persecutor of Israel, Satan’s false Christ” (McClain, DP, p. 50) “[Dan. 9] verse 27... Does the ‘he’ refer back to the Messianic prince or to the Roman prince? Grammatically, it might refer to either, although presumption favors the latter because he is mentioned last before the pronoun... ‘he’ will make a firm covenant with the Jewish nation for a period of one week, or seven years. Now, there is absolutely nothing recorded in the earthly ministry of our Lord which even remotely resembles such a covenant... the death of Christ did not cause the Jewish sacrifices to cease. They continued, in fact, until the destruction of Jerusalem nearly forty years later... to insist that Messiah was the maker of this seven-year covenant necessarily puts the entire Seventieth Week in the past, immediately following the Sixty-ninth Week. But this is impossible... The Seventieth Week is still in the future, not in the past, according to the Word of our Lord Himself in the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew [verse 15]” (ibid., p. 51). “The one that makes desolate is the Antichrist, who will cause desolations to fall upon the Jewish people” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 197).

And finally, we emphasize that the “covenant with many” is a covenant, not with the church, but with Israel. As Paul clearly taught, the church is a “mystery” not seen at all in the Old Testament (Eph. 3). We’ll examine this “mystery” characteristic of the church in detail in our chapter The Mystery Kingdom (The Church).

The end of the times of the Gentiles was foretold by Jesus. In fact, in the Olivet Discourse in Matthew chapter twenty-four, Jesus gave a detailed composite sign that would be identifiable in world events at the time the times of the Gentiles were about to expire. “and they will fall by the edge of the sword, and will be led captive into all the nations; and Jerusalem will be trampled under foot by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled” (Luke 21:24). “And as He was sitting on the Mount of Olives, the disciples came to Him privately, saying, ‘Tell us, when will these things be, and what will be the sign of Your coming, and of the end of the age’” (Matt. 24:3)? “Therefore when you see the abomination of desolation which was spoken of through Daniel the prophet, standing in the holy place (let the reader understand), then let those who are in Judea flee to the mountains; let him who is on the housetop not go down to get the things out that are in his house; and let him who is in the field not turn back to get his cloak. But woe to those who are with child and to those who nurse babes in those days! But pray that your flight may not be in the winter, or on a Sabbath; for then there will be a great tribulation, such as has not occurred since the beginning of the world until now, nor ever shall” (Matt. 24:15-21). “But immediately after the tribulation of those days the sun will be darkened, and the moon will not give its light, and the stars will fall from the sky, and the powers of the heavens will be shaken, and then the sign of the Son of Man will appear in the sky, and then all the tribes of the earth will mourn, and they will see the Son of Man coming on the clouds of the sky with power and great glory. And He will send forth His angels with a great trumpet and they will gather together His elect from the four winds, from one end of the sky to the other” (Matt. 24:29-31). “When Christ was asked by His disciples for a sign of the end of the age (Matt 24:3), reference was being made to the age then in progress, namely, that foreseen by Daniel, the Gentile age... There could be no allusion to the present age of the Church, concerning which nothing had at that time ever been revealed. The sign, then, is needed to indicate the end of Gentile times, or, more specifically, the remaining seven years yet to be experienced at the close of the age of the Church” (Chafer, ST, 4:349). We’ll have more to say on this composite sign of the impending end of the times of the Gentiles in our chapter The Great Tribulation.

Finally, the times of the Gentiles will be terminated by Christ’s Second Advent. “I will tell of the decree: Jehovah said unto me, Thou art my son; This day have I begotten thee. Ask of me, and I will give thee the nations for thine inheritance, And the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession. Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; Thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel" (Ps. 2:7-9). "And thou, O deadly wounded wicked one, the prince of Israel, whose day is come, in the time of the iniquity of the end, thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Remove the mitre, and take off the crown; this shall be no more the same; exalt that which is low, and abase that which is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it: this also shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him" (Ezek. 21:25-27). "And in the days of those kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, nor shall the sovereignty thereof be left to another people; but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever. Forasmuch as thou sawest that a stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold; the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter: and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure" (Dan. 2:44-45). "I saw in the night-visions, and, behold, there came with the clouds of heaven one like unto a son of man, and he came even to the ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all the peoples, nations, and languages should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed" (Dan. 7:13-14). "These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, that shall arise out of the earth. But the saints of the Most High shall receive the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever" (Dan. 7:17-18). "And the kingdom and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdoms under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High: his kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him" (Dan. 7:27). "And after the threescore and two weeks shall the anointed one be cut off, and shall have nothing: and the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and even unto the end shall be war; desolations are determined. And he shall make a firm covenant with many for one week: and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease; and upon the wing of abominations shall come one that maketh desolate; and even unto the full end, and that determined, shall wrath be poured out upon the desolate" (Dan. 9:25-27). "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, who kills the prophets and stones those who are sent to her! How often I wanted to gather your children together, the way a hen gathers her chicks under her wings, and you were unwilling. Behold, your house is being left to you desolate! For I say to you, from now on you shall not see Me until you say, “BLESSED IS HE WHO COMES IN THE NAME OF THE LORD”” (Matt. 23:37–39)! “and they will fall by the edge of the sword, and will be led captive into all the nations; and Jerusalem will be trampled under foot by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled” (Luke 21:24). “And I saw the heaven opened; and behold, a white horse, and he that sat thereon called Faithful and True; and in righteous he doth judge and make war. And his eyes are a flame of fire, and upon his head are many diadems; and he hath a name written which no one knoweth but he himself. And he is arrayed in a garment sprinkled with blood: and his name is called The Word of God. And the armies which are in heaven followed him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and pure. And out of his mouth proceedeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron: and he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness of the wrath of God, the Almighty. And he hath on his garment and on his thigh a name written, KINGS OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS” (Rev. 19:11-16). “Justin Martyr (Dial. with Trypho) quotes Dan. 7, and refers its fulfillment to the future... His coming was in humiliation... Justin correctly meets the objection by showing that the prophecy will be fulfilled at the Sec. Advent” (Peters, TTK, 1:680). “Fausset (Com. Dan. 2:4) says: ‘The falling of the Stone on the image must mean destroying judgment on the fourth Gentile power, not gradual evangelization of it by grace; and the destroying judgment cannot be dealt by Christians, for they are taught to submit to the powers that be, so that it must be dealt by Christ Himself at His coming again’” (ibid., p. 681). “The fact that this Stone is not presented as a foundation stone (i.e. preservative), but as a judgment stone (i.e. destructive), confirms the same. So also the image is not presented as something transformed or changed by the action of the Stone, but a complete demolition of it is expressed... The ‘breaking to pieces’ in Dan. 2:40 (comp. Dan. 7:7, 19, 23) is admitted by all to indicate violence, but the same phraseology is applied to the action of the Stone” (ibid., p. 682). “[Dan 9:26] ‘Even until the consummation;’ that is, until the completion of the period appointed, showing that all is under God’s control, and that this power, after all, endures just as long as He allows it. ‘And that determined shall be poured upon the desolate or desolater;’ God has foretold the rise, progress, and apparent triumph of this Roman power, but He has also predicted the fearful vengeance that shall befall this hostile power at the time of the end. What God has determined to pour out upon him is stated in numerous prophecies, as e.g. in those already adduced, Rev. 19:20, 21; Rev. 14:10, 11; Rev. 10, etc. Thus the latter part of this prediction was applied by the early Church to the events preceding the future open personal Advent of Christ” (ibid., 2:664) “We cannot receive the predictions of otherwise able writers on the perpetuity and prosperity of ‘the times of the Gentiles’... a false principle, viz., that truth must inevitably prevail and triumph, which is proven by history to be untrue, as exemplified in the Antediluvian world, in the Theocracy, in the life and death of Jesus, in the retrogressions of Christianity, in the overthrow of nations, etc.” (ibid., p. 776). “Jesus comes in ‘the times of the Gentiles,’ hence in this dispensation” (ibid., 3:104) “in predictions like Daniel, this Kingdom is outward, external, visible, just as the preceding empires” (ibid., p. 463) “This vast program, it will be observed, is terminated by the God of heaven setting up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed—one to be set up by the resistless impact of the glorious return of Christ who is likened in His coming to a smiting stone (cf. Ps 2:7-9; Isa. 63:1-6; Rev. 19:11-16)” (Chafer, ST, 4:333). “the Stone does not ‘become a mountain and fill the whole earth’ until the great image has been scattered to dust” (Chafer, S, C2:27/37). “If the first empire is on earth, so are the others. In the succession of powers, beginning with historical Babylon, there is no point where a shift can be made from earth to heaven, from things seen to things unseen” (McClain, GK, p. 153). “Just as the fourth power shall ‘break in pieces’ the political power it displaces, even so the heavenly Kingdom will ‘break in pieces’ the powers which it supplants (Dan. 2:40, 44)” (ibid.). “It is not the Kingdom but the present age which will be consummated at the second advent of Christ. At that time the age of Gentile misrule will end, being supplanted by the glorious and perfect rule of our Lord Jesus Christ” (ibid., p. 367). “Thus it was revealed that the Messiah, the rock in Nebuchadnezzar’s dream, will destroy the nations that subordinated Israel to their authority during the times of the Gentiles, and He will establish a kingdom that will fill the whole earth. Therefore Israel must be redeemed from Gentile bondage in order to become the theocracy through which God ultimately will demonstrate His right to rule” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 115). “The times of the Gentiles would end when Christ the Messiah (referred to as a smiting ‘rock’ in Dan. 2:34-35, 45) would destroy the nations that ruled over Jerusalem and liberate that city, land, and people from bondage to the Gentiles” (ibid., p. 249). “The kingdom over which the beast ruled will pass to the authority of Messiah and will become the kingdom of the saints (Dan.

7:27)” (ibid., p. 305). We’ll have more to say regarding the termination of the times of the Gentiles in our chapter The Second Coming of the King.

Duration of the Times of the Gentiles

The duration of the times of the Gentiles is unknown, because the duration of the intercalary Church Age is unknown. We can say in summary, though, that the times of the Gentiles span from the beginning of Jerusalem’s Babylonian captivity in 586 or 587 B.C. to the time of Christ’s future (as of this writing) return. This time period encompasses Jeremiah’s seventy years of captivity, the period from the end of the captivity to the decree to rebuild Jerusalem in 445 B.C., Daniel’s first sixty-nine weeks which ended with Jesus’ presentation of Himself to Jerusalem on Palm Sunday, the entire church age which ends with the Rapture of the church, the time gap, if there is one, between the Rapture of the church and the beginning of Daniel’s seventieth week, and Daniel’s seventieth week itself. This will be, at least, a finite period of time. “...whether the mention of the present era as ‘the times of the Gentiles’ is not sufficiently suggestive of their ending” (Peters, TTK, 2:58)

Now, because of the unknown length of the Church Age, we can be sure that anyone who claims to have calculated the exact duration of the times of the Gentiles (as Jehovah’s Witnesses claim to have done through their convoluted, grossly assumptive interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar’s ‘seven times’ of Daniel chapter four) are badly mistaken. The end of the times of the Gentiles is yet future, and will be evident to all when it transpires, at the unmistakable, visible return of Israel’s Messiah (Rev. 1:7). At that blessed time, Jerusalem’s trampling by the Gentiles will end (Luke 21:24) and God’s restored Davidic, Theocratic Kingdom of Israel will “come” (Matt. 6:10).

Israel to be Preserved

Even during the times of the Gentiles, wherein the Theocratic Kingdom of Israel lies dormant, Israel is to be preserved as a people. “And yet for all that, when they are in the land of their enemies, I will not reject them, neither will I abhor them, to destroy them utterly, and to break my covenant with them; for I am Jehovah their God” (Lev. 26:44) “In the midst of the melancholy vision given to Ezekiel concerning the end of the Old Testament kingdom, the prophet was authorized to say that God will be a refuge to Israel even during the long period of her captive and dispersed condition. ‘Thus saith the LORD God; Although I have cast them far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come' (Ezek. 11:16, italics added). The original word rendered 'little' in this passage may refer to either time or degree. Against Ellicott and Lange, I feel that the idea of degree better fits the context. The temple in Jerusalem is being abandoned by Jehovah, and with the city it will soon be destroyed; but scattered Israel will be compensated to some degree by God's presence and help for the elect remnant through the long centuries of dispersion until the Kingdom is restored and the outcasts are regathered back in the promised land to worship once more in the final temple at Jerusalem (Ezek. 11:17). This comforting promise, however, is not something wholly apart from moral and spiritual considerations. If God will continue to be a 'little sanctuary' to scattered Israel, it is also true that He will also be to many in the nation a 'stone of stumbling' and a 'rock of offence' (Isa. 8:14)" (McClain, GK, p. 127). "That the blessing of God would in some degree continue to rest upon the nation, even after the end of the Theocratic Kingdom, is evidenced by God's command through Haggai to rebuild the temple (2:1-4). For their encouragement, two motives were set before the people: first, the Mosaic Covenant still holds good (2:5); second, there is the prospect of a future Millennial Temple which will surpass in glory any building in the past (2:6-9)" (ibid.). We'll further discuss the preservation of Israel as a people in our chapter The Great Tribulation.

Eventual Restoration of the Theocracy Promised

Even with the theocracy's fall, its restoration is promised. "In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof; and I will raise up its ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old" (Amos 9:11) "And so when they had come together, they were asking Him, saying, 'Lord, is it at this time You are restoring the kingdom to Israel?' He said to them, 'It is not for you to know times or epochs which the Father has fixed by His own authority'" (Acts 1:6-7) "God has had in the past, as such admit, a 'Kingdom of God' in a visible form, and He will not allow this visible Kingdom to prove a failure, but is making his preparations to reproduce it, at the appointed time, in greater power and glory" (Peters, TTK, 2:121). "If such a Theocratic Kingdom, as God Himself instituted, is not permanently and gloriously re-established here upon earth, then it follows that God's efforts at the establishment of government and the interest which He manifests in it are fruitless of abiding results. Or, in other words, His own Kingdom has proven a failure" (ibid., p. 125). "If the general opinion is to be received, as expressed by numerous theologians, that it would be foolishness to expect such a restoration; that it has given place to a much higher, refined, spiritual Theocratic order, etc., then it leaves God's direct attempt at exercising the functions of an earthly Ruler an inscrutable riddle" (ibid., p. 126). "The same Kingdom in which God ruled on earth as an earthly king is to be reinstated. To this all the prophets with one voice testify, and this is the one postponed to the Second Advent" (ibid., 3:460). "If such a restoration here on earth is not effected, it places God in the position of a Ruler who in His attempt at an earthly rule has been defeated" (ibid., p. 544) "Hosea 3:4... At this point the political supremacy was transferred to the Gentiles. Hosea foretold: 'The Israelites will live many days without king or prince,' and from here onward it was a matter of prophesying a coming messianic kingdom" (Geisler, ST, 4:469). "God's purposes for His people were unchanged in spite of their disobedience—because God's covenant was unchangeable" (Pentecost, TKC, p. 118). Several hundred prophecies concerning the future restoration of the Kingdom will be presented in our chapter The Kingdom in Hebrew Prophecy.

The same theocratic, Davidic kingdom that was overthrown will be restored. "In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof; and I will raise up its ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old; that they may possess the remnant of Edom, and all the nations that are called by my name, saith Jehovah that doeth this. Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt. And I will bring back the captivity of my people Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them. And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be plucked up out of their land which I have given them, saith Jehovah thy God" (Amos 9:11-15). "Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will perform that good word which I have spoken concerning the house of Israel and concerning the house of Judah" (Jer. 33:14). "And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the nations, whither they are gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land: and I will make them one nation in the land, upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all; and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all" (Ezek. 37:21-22) "And the angel said to her, 'Do not be afraid, Mary; for you have found favor with God. And behold, you will conceive in your womb, and bear a son, and you shall name Him Jesus. He will be great, and will be called the Son of the Most High; and the Lord God will give Him the throne of His father David; and He will reign over the house of Jacob forever; and His kingdom will have no end” (Luke 1:30-33). “And so when they had come together, they were asking Him, saying, ‘Lord, is it at this time You are restoring the kingdom to Israel?’ He said to them, ‘It is not for you to know times or epochs which the Father has fixed by His own authority’” (Acts 1:6-7) “Such passages as Amos 9:11, Luke 1:32, 33, Ezek. 37:21, 22, Jer. 33:14, etc., it is admitted by all men, do in their plain grammatical sense distinctively teach such downfall and restoration. This is denied by no one; but we are informed by eminent and pious men, that this is not the sense (excepting only as it pertains to downfall) intended by God. Aside from the inconsistency of charging God with employing a sense—the one, too, in common usage between men—that fairly expresses this idea and fosters corresponding hopes, we hold with the Primitive Church, and shall prove as we proceed, that it is the only sense which consistently maintains God’s covenant, oath, promises, and election of the nation” (Peters, TTK, 1:240). “When this Theocracy was overthrown, all the prophets, with one mind and voice, proclaim that the same identical Theocracy shall be restored again with increased splendor and glory” (ibid., p. 218) “...the identical Theocratic Kingdom overthrown shall be restored” (ibid., 2:123). (See also our discussion of the Davidic Covenant in our next chapter Covenants of the Kingdom.)

The Shekinah Glory will return to the temple. “Afterward he brought me to the gate, even the gate that looketh toward the east: and, behold, the glory of the God of Israel came from the way of the east: and his voice was like the sound of many waters; and the earth shined with his glory. And it was according to the appearance of the vision which I saw, even according to the vision that I saw when I came to destroy the city; and the visions were like the vision that I saw by the river Chebar; and I fell upon my face. And the glory of Jehovah came into the house by the way of the gate whose prospect is toward the east. And the Spirit took me up, and brought me into the inner court; and, behold, the glory of Jehovah filled the house. And I heard one speaking unto me out of the house; and a man stood by me. And he said unto me, Son of man, this is the place of my throne, and the place of the soles of my feet, where I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel for ever; and the house of Israel shall no more defile my holy name, neither they, nor their kings, by their whoredom, and by the dead bodies of their kings in their high places” (Ezek. 43:1-7) “Furthermore, to the same prophet who saw the departure of the Glory and the end of the Kingdom in Old Testament history, the LORD graciously gave a vision of the future return of the same Glory (Ezek. 43:1-7). Just as Ezekiel had seen the Glory of God leaving by way of ‘the door of the east gate’ (10:19), even so likewise he describes the final return of the Glory: ‘And the glory of the LORD came into the house by way of the gate whose prospect is toward the east’ (43:2, 4). As to the general meaning of all this there can be no misunderstanding—the Glory of Jehovah will return to the Jewish temple; the Kingdom of God will again be established on earth; the temple will again be built in the city of Jerusalem. Here, the Word of God declares, is ‘the place of my throne... where I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel for ever’ (43:7). And if historically the final glimpse of the departing Glory was ‘upon the mountain which is on the east side of the city’ (11:23), even so the same Glory shall be seen at the last returning in the Person of the Messianic King: ‘His feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east... And the LORD shall be king over all the earth’ (Zech. 14:4, 9)” (McClain, GK, p. 127).

The Jews will be perfected, and they will have a perfect King. “But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith Jehovah: I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write it; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people” (Jer. 31:33) “And there shall come forth a shoot out of the stock of Jesse, and a branch out of his roots shall bear fruit. And the Spirit of Jehovah shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of Jehovah. And his delight shall be in the fear of Jehovah; and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither decide after the hearing of his ears; but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and decide with equity for the meek of the earth; and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth; and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked” (Isa. 11:1-4). “But over against the darkness of failure on the part of both rulers and the people in the Old Testament kingdom, the prophets spoke of a future and better age when the two defects stated above would be remedied. First, it will be an age when the laws of the Kingdom will be written in the very hearts of its citizens by the Spirit of God (Jer. 31:33); and second, an age when the mediatorial ruler of the Kingdom will be God’s own Messianic King; perfect in His character, wisdom, and ways (Isa. 11:1-4)” (McClain, GK, p. 129). (See also our discussions of Israel's holiness and the government of the Millennial Kingdom in our chapter The Millennial Kingdom.)

The theocracy will be supernaturally restored. “Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not: behold, your God will come with vengeance, with the recompense of God; he will come and save you” (Isa. 35:4). “This means, of course, that the future independence and success of the Jewish State is inseparably bound up with the divine re-establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth by supernatural means. The Maccabees made one of the most desperate and heroic attempts in all recorded history to re-establish the independency of the Jewish State, and failed in the end. All other attempts, through political and military means alone, must likewise fail. In its finality and fullness, this must wait for a supernatural intervention on the part of God in human affairs, just as the Kingdom originally began in history with such an intervention in Egypt and at the mount of Sinai. ‘The children of Israel shall abide many days without a king’ (Hos. 3:4). But during the ‘many days’ of waiting, there is always the blessed promise of God through Isaiah: ‘Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not: behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompence; he will come and save you’ (35:4)” (McClain, GK, p. 129). (See also our discussion of the supernatural characteristics of Christ's return in our chapter The Second Coming of the King.)

The theocracy will be restored only in Israel; not in any other group. Jehovah's theocratic earthly government has always been and always will be through the nation Israel. All other would-be usurpers of the Kingdom are doomed to failure, whether they be the church, Jehovah's Witnesses or anyone else.

The theocracy will be restored in God's due time. Misunderstanding the timing of the Kingdom's reestablishment has led to bad theology, with tragic consequences, both in the church and in groups such as the Jehovah's Witnesses. The church has had its crusades and its dominion theology¹⁸; Jehovah's Witnesses have only 144,000 ‘spiritual Israelites’ going to heaven, a ‘great crowd’ of unregenerated souls clinging to an entirely unbiblical (for this Church Age) ‘earthly hope,’ and severe shunning and ostracism of those few who do manage to find their way out of the Watchtower maze into ‘the kingdom of His beloved Son’ (Col. 1:13). All of these tragedies could have been entirely avoided through a correct understanding of the time and nature of the restoration of the Kingdom.

We'll discuss the details of the restoration of the Kingdom in our chapters The Second Coming of the King, Inauguration of the Kingdom and The Millennial Kingdom.

Chapter 12: Covenants of the Kingdom

Essential to our understanding of God's Kingdom program is our understanding of the eight covenants that God has made with mankind. These eight covenants form the legal and prophetic foundations of the biblical Kingdom of God.

Basic Principles Concerning the Biblical Covenants

Before investigating the specifics of each of the eight covenants, it will be helpful for us to first consider some basic principles concerning the biblical covenants.

Our Reception and Understanding of the Covenants

It is a sad fact of our day that both in formal seminary training and in local biblical instruction, the covenants that God has made with mankind are largely ignored and/or misunderstood, resulting in appalling ignorance and/or misunderstanding of the covenants among the majority of Christians. "Entire systems of Divinity, given by learned men, make no mention whatever of the Davidic covenant" (Peters, TTK, 3:565). "It is a sad fact, that more ignorance and misunderstanding exist in relation to the covenants than perhaps of any other portion of the Bible" (ibid., 1:320).

However, if we are to correctly understand God's revelation to us, the Bible, and particularly His Kingdom program, then our understanding the covenants is vitally important. "Oosterzee (Ch. Dog., vol. 2, p. 471) observes: 'We have learned to recognize the covenant of God with Abraham as the foundation of the entire revelation of Salvation.' Abraham is this chosen instrument, and through his promised seed complete redemption is to be obtained. Certainly then the Abrahamic history becomes one of absorbing interest, in view of its fundamental and living connection with final Salvation. It deserves and demands our most earnest and closest attention, for to it all other things, in the development, must sustain a close and abiding relation. We cannot overestimate the importance of this, as Isa. 51:1, 2 teaches. Even the incarnation, life, etc., of Christ grow out of the deep significance, and in behalf of the fulfillment, of the covenant made with Abraham" (Peters, TTK, 1:293). "Hearken to me, ye that follow after righteousness, ye that seek Jehovah: look unto the rock whence ye were hewn, and to the hold of the pit whence ye were digged. Look unto Abraham your father, and unto Sarah that bare you; for when he was but one I called him, and I blessed him, and made him many" (Isa. 51:1–2). "...the most essential portion of God's Word, viz.: the Covenants” (Peters, TTK, p. 454). “All notions of the Kingdom that do not stand the test of the Covenant must be discarded” (ibid., p. 606). “It certainly is unjust to ignore the Jewish and early Church belief, that the covenant would be fulfilled in the restored Davidic throne and Kingdom, which was to be accomplished by a resurrection of saints, and the numerous passages alleged to sustain this view as found in the Old Test. Rev. 20 was adduced by the Primitive Christians in confirmation of this doctrine. The foundation of the Millenarian system is the covenant, and Rev. 20 only illustrates how a certain feature pertaining to it is to be realized. Hence any attack upon us which leaves untouched the covenant and covenant promises is one-sided and unavailing” (ibid., 2:281).

The Purposes of the Covenants

The covenants serve to determine the fundamental form and responsibility of life in each dispensation, and also form the foundation of all prophecy, helping us to correctly interpret and understand prophecy.

Regarding the covenants’ determination of the form and responsibility of life in each dispensation, Walvoord says, “The premillennial and dispensational interpretation of Scripture builds upon the successive Biblical covenants which are expressly revealed in the Bible, interprets them literally, and conditions the form and responsibility of life in successive dispensations according to the covenants which apply” (MK, p. 90).

The covenants also form the foundation of all prophecy, and help us to interpret and understand prophecy. George Peters explains the vital connection between the covenants and subsequent prophecy: “The relation that the Kingdom sustains to ‘the covenants of promise,’ enables us to appreciate the prophecies pertaining to the Kingdom. All predictions, all promises, all preparative measures, relating to the Kingdom, are based on, and result from, these covenants” (TTK, 1:337). “...one intent of prophecy, viz.: to instruct us in the manner by which God will ultimately fulfill His covenants and establish His Theocratic rule over the nations” (ibid.). “All applications of prophecy which do not incorporate as fundamental the restoration of the Jews, is radically defective, simply because it makes the fulfillment of the Davidic covenant an utter impossibility” (ibid.). “The covenanted foundation of the predictions is overlooked or perverted, and, of course, the superstructure is correspondingly untenable. Thus valuable Scripture is given up to unbelief” (ibid., p. 340). “The covenants outline the Plan of the Divine Purpose; prophecy partially fills up and deepens the lines thus drawn” (ibid.). “The keystone of the whole system (i.e. Millenarian) is not to be found, as Prof. Sanborn (Essay on Mill.), in the pre-Millennial Advent (however indispensable), but in the covenants. The promises are not in the Sec. Advent, but in the covenants and prophecies based on them; the Advent being only the necessary means toward their accomplishment” (ibid., p. 348). “Any theory, inference, or doctrine which militates against the covenants is not only open to grave suspicion, but must be rejected, no matter by whom presented or however eloquently urged. God cannot, does not, contradict Himself... the covenant is the measure of accuracy, being the most solemnly given and strongly affirmed portion of God’s Holy Word” (ibid., 3:565).

Characteristics of the Covenants

At least three characteristics are common to all eight of the biblical covenants.

First, the covenants are presented and worded such that they are easily understood. “A covenant must, in the nature of the case, be understood by the parties to whom it is given” (Peters, TTK, 1:342). “The very nature of a covenant demands, that it should be so worded, so plainly expressed, that it conveys a decisive meaning, and not a hidden or mystical one that requires many centuries to revolve in order to develop” [quoting George Peters, The Theocratic Kingdom, I, pp. 290-91] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 69).

Second, the covenants are to be understood literally. “If it is important in any mere earthly relationship for the parties to understand each other, and such a comprehension is based on the plain grammatical sense of the language used, is it not equally, yea more, essential in so weighty a case as this; and to insure comprehension of the same is it not most reasonable to expect the same literal language? Indeed, when the covenants embrace the vital interests of a nation and the destiny of the race and the world, is it not requisite that they should be presented in such a form that the parties to whom they are given can readily perceive their meaning, without searching around for another and very different one to be engrafted upon them, or, without waiting for an Origen or Swedenborg to arise and spiritualize them into a proper conception? It is saddening (it would be crushing to the few believing ones, if this lack of faith—its universality—had not been also predicted) to see how extensively the latter is done by good and great men, thereby darkening knowledge and obscuring the revealed purposes of God... God never gave the covenants to deceive in their plain, grammatical sense! Men, indeed, say so; learned men declare it so; but this does not make it so—leaving the Word to speak for itself” (Peters, TTK, 1:290). “Our Proposition is confirmed by the indisputable fact that God has stamped the grammatical sense as the correct one by literally fulfilling a portion of the covenants. Take e.g. the promised ‘seed.’ He has come from Abraham, through the line of David...” (ibid., p. 291) “If all the rest contained in these covenants has not yet been thus literally confirmed by fulfillment, we should not hastily limit the Almighty in His dispensational proceedings by rejecting the remainder, or by attaching another meaning to it to suit present circumstances. No! With Abrahamic faith clinging to His revealed intention, at some time, to fulfill them as He has done a part, let us calmly ask, Why has it not all been thus fulfilled? When this question is scripturally answered, and the reasons assigned, which God Himself gives, then, then we shall not only be satisfied to let its plain meaning stand, but rejoice in its precious significance” (ibid.). “The partial fulfillment of them clearly shows that they are not to be regarded as typical” (ibid.). “To answer unbelief, by endeavoring to make out a fulfillment by spiritualizing the promises, by substituting something else in their place, is only another form of unbelief in the precise words of the covenants” (ibid., p. 294). Dr. Geisler adds, “...a category mistake: Not all Old Testament predictions were types... a covenant is not a type” (ST, 4:587)

Third, the covenants always have an earthly focus. “Concerning the future life, upon which the Egyptians had so much to say, Moses taught nothing. His rewards and punishments were inflicted in this world. Retribution, individual and national, took place here. As this could not have been from ignorance or accident, it must have had a purpose, it must have been intentional... Moses carefully rejects the Egyptian theories and confines himself to a specific Plan... lay down a foundation in relation to this earth that (if accomplished) is adapted to secure the blessedness of man and creation in deliverance from an imposed curse... No man, unless he apprehends the inheritance that Moses says God promised to the Patriarchs and the relation that believers sustain to it through coming resurrection power, can do justice to Moses or properly vindicate his unity with the after statements of prophets and apostles... Let it be noticed, the Theocracy pertains to this earth—it is God’s Kingdom here on the earth, He ruling in it as the earthly Ruler... with the Theocracy the interests, the rewards, of every believer are identified, and it pertains to the earth” (Peters, TTK, 1:310).

However, there is one characteristic that is not the same for every covenant, namely, the characteristic of conditionality. Each covenant is either conditional or unconditional, and it is essential that we determine whether each covenant is conditional or unconditional, if we are to correctly understand the relationships between it and the other covenants, and the outworking of the covenants in history. A conditional covenant is a covenant whose fulfillment is conditioned upon man’s obedience. “A conditional covenant is a bilateral covenant in which a proposal of God to man is characterized by the formula: if you will, then I will whereby God promises to grant special blessings to man providing man fulfills certain conditions contained in the covenant. Man's failure to do so often results in punishment. Thus one's response to the covenant agreement brings either blessings or cursings. The blessings are secured by obedience and man must meet his conditions before God will meet His. Two of the eight covenants of the Bible are conditional: the Edenic Covenant and the Mosaic Covenant" (Fruchtenbaum, EC, p. 5). An unconditional covenant is a covenant whose fulfillment is dependent only upon God, and whose fulfillment is independent of man's obedience or disobedience. "An unconditional covenant is a unilateral covenant and is a sovereign act of God whereby He unconditionally obligates Himself to bring to pass definite blessings and conditions for the covenanted people. This covenant is characterized by the formula: I will which declares God's determination to do as He promises. Blessings are secured by the grace of God. There may be conditions in the covenant by which God requests the covenanted one to fulfill out of gratitude, but they are not themselves the basis of God's fulfilling His promises. Six of the eight covenants are unconditional: the Adamic Covenant, the Noahic Covenant, the Abrahamic Covenant, the Palestinian or Land Covenant, the Davidic Covenant, and the New Covenant" (ibid.). It should be recognized, however, that unconditional covenants may (and sometimes do) contain conditioned blessings. "The failure to observe that an unconditional covenant may have certain conditioned blessings attached to it had led many to the position that conditioned blessings necessitate a conditional covenant, thus perverting the essential nature of Israel's determinative covenants" (Pentecost, TTC, p. 68).

God's Eight Covenants With Mankind

God has made a total of eight covenants with mankind. "God has made eight Covenants with man. They all relate to the earth. Each one introduces a New Dispensation" (Larkin, DT, p. 149).

Three Covenants With Mankind in General

Three of the eight covenants were made with mankind in general. They are the Edenic, Adamic and Noahic Covenants.

The first of these three covenants made with mankind in general, the Edenic Covenant, was conditional. In the Edenic Covenant Adam and Eve's idyllic life in the garden was conditioned on their obedience to the covenant. They disobeyed the covenant's one prohibitive condition by eating of the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thereby breaking the covenant. Then, as promised in the Edenic Covenant, in the very day that they ate from the forbidden fruit, they died spiritually and also began to die physically. They were then dismissed from the garden and forbidden reentry. “And Jehovah God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die” (Gen. 2:16–17). “But they like Adam have transgressed the covenant: there have they dealt treacherously against me” (Hos. 6:7). We discussed the Edenic Covenant at length in the Covenant #1: The Edenic Covenant section of our chapter God and Creation.

The second of these three covenants made with mankind, the Adamic Covenant, was unconditional. In the Adamic Covenant the serpent was cursed, and a seed was promised that would one day bruise the serpent’s head. Also, the earth was cursed, Eve was told that childbearing would now be painful, and Adam was told that he would return to the dust from whence he came. All of these features of the Adamic Covenant were unconditional; they depended upon God alone for fulfillment. “And Jehovah God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, cursed art thou above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life: and I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: he shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel. Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy pain and thy conception; in pain thou shalt bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee. And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in toil shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return” (Gen. 3:14-19). We discussed the Adamic Covenant at length in the Covenant #2: The Adamic Covenant section of our chapter Conscience, Government and Promise.

The third of these three covenants made with mankind in general, the Noahic Covenant, was also unconditional. In the Noahic Covenant Noah was promised that the earth would never again be deluged by a global flood, and the State was given authority to punish sin. These features of the Noahic Covenant were unconditional, being parts of the unconditional Noahic Covenant. “And God blessed Noah and his sons, and said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth. And the fear of you and the dread of you shall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon every bird of the heavens. With all wherewith the ground teemeth, and all the fishes of the sea, into your hand are they delivered. Every moving thing that liveth shall be food for you. As the green herb have I given you all. But flesh with the life thereof, which is the blood thereof, shall ye not eat. And surely your blood, the blood of your lives, will I require. At the hand of every beast will I require it. And at the hand of man, even at the hand of every man’s brother, will I require the life of man. Whoso sheddeth man’s blood, by man shall his blood be shed. For in the image of God made he man. And you, be ye fruitful, and multiply. Bring forth abundantly in the earth, and multiply therein. And God spake unto Noah, and to his sons with him, saying, And I, behold, I establish my covenant with you, and with your seed after you. And with every living creature that is with you, the birds, the cattle, and every beast of the earth with you. Of all that go out of the ark, even every beast of the earth. And I will establish my covenant with you. Neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of the flood. Neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the earth. And God said, This is the token of the covenant which I make between me and you and every living creature that is with you, for perpetual generations. I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth. And it shall come to pass, when I bring a cloud over the earth, that the bow shall be seen in the cloud, And I will remember my covenant, which is between me and you and every living creature of all flesh. And the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh. And the bow shall be in the cloud. And I will look upon it, that I may remember the everlasting covenant between God and every living creature of all flesh that is upon the earth. And God said unto Noah, This is the token of the covenant which I have established between me and all flesh that is upon the earth” (Gen. 9:1-17). We discussed the Noahic Covenant at length in the Covenant #3: The Noahic Covenant section of our chapter Conscience, Government and Promise.

Five Covenants With Israel

The other five of the eight biblical covenants were all made exclusively with Israel. They are the Abrahamic, Mosaic, Palestinian, Davidic and New Covenants. If we are to understand the biblical Kingdom program correctly, it is essential that we keep in mind that these five covenants were made by God with Israel; not with Gentiles.

One of these five covenants with Israel, the Mosaic Covenant, was conditional.

At Mount Sinai, Jehovah made the Mosaic Covenant with Israel, which was comprised of six hundred thirteen laws, designed to govern the religious, moral and civil aspects of Jewish life. The Mosaic Covenant is stated in Exodus 20:1-31:18. As it has been well said elsewhere, the Old Testament is the record of Israel breaking the Mosaic Covenant. Hence the need for its replacement by the promised New Covenant. “And he cried unto Jehovah; And Jehovah showed him a tree, and he cast it into the waters, and the waters were made sweet. There he made for them a statute and an ordinance, and there he proved them; and he said, If thou wilt diligently hearken to the voice of Jehovah thy God, and wilt do that which is right in his eyes, and wilt give ear to his commandments, and keep all his statutes, I will put none of the diseases upon thee, which I have put upon the Egyptians: for I am Jehovah that healeth thee” (Ex. 15:25-26). “Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bare you on eagles’ wings, and brought you unto myself. Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be mine own possession from among all peoples: for all the earth is mine” (Ex. 19:4-5) “Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was a husband unto them, saith Jehovah. But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith Jehovah: I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write it; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people: and they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know Jehovah; for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith Jehovah: for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin will I remember no more” (Jer. 31:31-34). We discussed the Mosaic Covenant at length in the Covenant #5: The Mosaic Covenant section of our chapter The Theocratic Kingdom.

Israel's Four Unconditional Covenants

The other four covenants made with Israel, the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic and New Covenants, were unconditional. Again, the unconditionality of these four covenants is essential for us to keep in mind if we are to understand the Bible and its overall Kingdom program correctly.

Characteristics of Israel's Four Unconditional Covenants

Israel's four unconditional covenants all share several important characteristics:

They present us with an outline of God's Kingdom program. "There is a Judaism founded on the temporary provisions of the Mosaic economy and the traditions of the past, which is irreconcilable with our doctrine of the Kingdom; and there is a Judaism grounded upon the Abrahamic and Davidic covenants, and the promises to the nation, which is inseparably connected with our belief—indeed, is fundamental to it" (Peters, TTK, 1:428). "Pre-Millenarians are beginning to realize, as they have never before (unless we except the quite early Church) that the foundations of their faith rest on two everlasting covenants, the Abrahamic and Davidic" (ibid., 3:132). "God's kingdom program was the outworking of His eternal and unconditional covenants" [quoting Pentecost, Things to Come, p. 9] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 629).

They bind God to a specific course of action. "These [four unconditional] covenants not only had a relation to the nation at the time of their inception and built a foundation on which God dealt with Israel, but they bind God to a course of action in relation to future events, as illustrated in Bible prophecy" (Pentecost, TKC, p. 176).

Together, they promise seven things to Israel. "Of the five [plus two added below for a total of seven—ed.] eternal features of Jehovah's covenants with Israel—an everlasting nation, an everlasting possession of her land, an everlasting throne, an everlasting king, and an everlasting kingdom—two, the nation and the possession of the land, are covenanted through Abraham, while the remaining three, the throne, the king, and the kingdom, are covenanted through David" (Chafer, ST, 5:318). "When the covenants are studied analytically we find seven great features which are determinative: (1) a nation forever, (2) a land forever, (3) a King forever, (4) a throne forever, (5) a kingdom forever, (6) a new covenant, and (7) abiding blessings" [referencing Chafer, Systematic Theology, 4:315] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 128) These seven things are: 1. A Nation Forever. "The fact is that the reason God will bring salvation to the nation is because they are the Jewish nation, and it is with them that God has a covenant" (Fruchten-baum, I, p. 307). “The first feature is ‘A Nation Forever.’ Chafer [in Systematic Theology, 4:315] points out that the clear teaching of Scripture is that Israel is an ‘elect nation’ and for this reason ‘will be preserved as such forever.’ For this reason Israel as a nation will continue to exist even beyond the Messianic Kingdom of one thousand years. They will continue to exist as Israel through all eternity. Since ‘their covenants respecting the land are everlasting, it follows, also that this people as a nation must inherit and inhabit the new earth that is to be.’ This is a teaching of the Old Testament. In the New Testament, Jesus also promised the ‘preservation of this nation throughout this age of her scattering.’ This nation ‘will be preserved forever.’ If this is not what the text means, then ‘language fails to express thought.’ The election of Israel is on the basis of ‘Jehovah’s love for that people’ and not on the basis of merit. This elective love is an everlasting love which ‘includes a love from all eternity past and extends on into eternity to come.’ For that reason Israel is ‘a nation forever’” (ibid., p. 370).

2. A Land Forever. “The second feature is ‘A Land Forever.’ That the land of Canaan is Israel’s was promised by the Abrahamic Covenant, and it was reaffirmed by the Palestinian Covenant. Chafer [in Systematic Theology, 4:317-323] then points out that there are seven facets of this feature of ‘a land forever,’ all of which are based on the Palestinian Covenant of Deuteronomy 28-30. The first facet was the dispersion of Israel. There are a total of ‘three distinct dispossessions of the land... and three restorations.’ According to Chafer, the present dispersion is the third dispersion and the third restoration is still future. The second facet is a ‘Future Repentance of Israel,’ which will cause Israel to become ‘a mourning people’ which will occur at the second coming ‘when they recognize their true Messiah at the time of His return.’ The third facet is the ‘Return of the Messiah’ at which time Israel will gain ‘the final possession of the land.’ In fact, ‘Jehovah will Himself place Israel in their land at the time of His “return.”’ The fourth facet then becomes ‘Israel’s restoration to the land.’ The ‘truth that Israel will return to their own land’ becomes one of the major themes of prophecy. Jesus said that ‘Israel’s regathering... will be accomplished by angelic ministration and in relation to His second coming.’ Chafer then cites the many times that God said to the Patriarchs, ‘I will give you this land,’ to show that the possession of the land was promised to the Patriarchs as well as to their descendants. Obviously, they died without the promises ever being fulfilled. ‘Since it was given to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, as well as to their seed these must be resurrected and through resurrection come to the realization of this covenant.’ The point is that when the resurrection of the Old Testament saints occurs, they will possess the land and inherit the promises made to them. The fifth facet is ‘Israel’s conversion as a nation.’ With the final regathering, Israel will experience a national regeneration that will keep them a saved nation throughout the kingdom period. When the ‘national conversion’ comes, it will include ‘from the least of them unto the greatest of them.’ The sixth facet is ‘judgment on Israel’s oppressors.’ Gentiles will all appear before this judgment at or after the second coming. They will be judged on the basis of their ‘treatment of Israel whom Christ identifies as “my brethren.”’ This judgment will determine who among the surviving Gentiles ‘are accounted worthy of entrance into Israel’s kingdom.’ The seventh facet is that ‘the nation will be blessed then.’ At this point Israel will enjoy all of the blessings and conditions promised in those four covenants” (ibid., p. 371). 3. A King Forever. “...the covenant with David provided an unending occupancy of David’s throne. His throne is established forever (2 Sam. 7:16), His seed shall endure forever (Ps. 89:36), and David shall never lack for one to sit upon his throne (Jer. 33:17)... Christ was the rightful heir to that throne and He, from that time on and forever, fulfills the promise to David” [quoting Chafer, Systematic Theology, 4:323] (ibid., p. 372). 4. A Throne Forever. “In addition to the initial covenant with David, three other passages announce the eternal character of David’s throne: ...(Ps. 89:36-37); ...(Isa. 9:6-7); ...(Luke 1:31-32). Here the observation may be made that David himself believed this promise was of an earthly throne, which would not be located in heaven then or ever... David was not promised a heavenly, spiritual throne, and the one who contends that David’s throne is now a heavenly rule is by so much obliged to name the time and circumstances when and where so great a change has been introduced” [quoting Chafer, Systematic Theology, 4:323-324] (ibid.). 5. A Kingdom Forever. “In Scripture usage, the King, His throne, and His kingdom are inseparable. The reign of the King, however, is over a theocratic kingdom. Its Ruler will be Immanuel—“God with us” (Isa. 7:14)... The kingdom will be heavenly in its character, since it manifests the rule of heaven over the earth and the heavenly demands... This kingdom will be in the earth... It will be centered in Jerusalem... This kingdom will be over regathered and converted Israel... Messiah’s kingdom will include Gentiles... That kingdom will be established by virtue of the returning King” [quoting Chafer, Systematic Theology, 4:324] (ibid.). 6. A New Covenant. “Reference at this point is to the new covenant yet to be made with Israel and not to the new covenant now in force in the Church. All unconditional covenants—the Abrahamic, the Palestinian, the Davidic—since they rest on the faithfulness of God and not at all on the unfaithfulness of men, are unbreakable by men. They endure forever... He will make a new covenant with them—not to supersede any unconditional covenant, but to supersede the law covenant which they have broken... (Jer. 31:31-34).’ [quoting Chafer, Systematic Theology, 4:325] Chafer believed in two new covenants, one which was ‘yet to be made with Israel,’ and one ‘now in force in the Church.’ This was and still is the view of many Dispensationalists, but not all. Even Chafer observed, after citing Jeremiah 31:31-34, which he identified as the New Covenant with Israel, that ‘the four blessings which this covenant promises... are the present possession of those who comprise the Church.’ At any rate, Chafer’s two new covenants are not germane to Dispensationalism” (ibid.). 7. Abiding Blessings. “Every promise found in Jehovah’s covenants, including those just named in the new covenant, will constitute Israel’s blessings forever... But no blessing is more far-reaching or complete than that oft-repeated assurance from Jehovah, “And I will be their God”... and they will be His people. This promise suggests that in the Messianic kingdom Israel’s relation to Jehovah will be one of unbroken fellowship such as was accorded Adam in Eden before the fall” [quoting Chafer, Systematic Theology, 3:77] (ibid., p. 373).

They are unconditional. “The unfaithfulness of man, however it may delay the final result, cannot alter or reverse it” (Peters, TTK, 1:222). “...the Abrahamic, the Davidic covenant... Those covenants have never, and can never, be broken because they do not depend in the slightest particular upon any act or performance of man, but are rooted and grounded in the immutable promise and oath of God” (Feinberg, M, p. 110). “God’s ability to make unconditional covenants in the outworking of His sovereign purpose is demonstrated in the covenants made with Abraham and David. The only responsibility in either of these covenants is contained in the sovereign ‘I will’ of Jehovah” (Chafer, ST, 3:318). “God intends to fulfill the content of the covenants, those promises dependent upon God for fulfillment, regardless of whether Israel fulfills her’s” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 571). “God made four unconditional eternal covenants with Israel” (ibid., p. 646). “Third: it is necessary to re-emphasize that these are unconditional covenants that were not abrogated because of Israel’s disobedience; because the covenants are unconditional and totally dependent upon God for fulfillment, their ultimate fulfillment can be expected” (Fruchtenbaum, EC, p. 6).

They were given to and are to be fulfilled literally by Israel. “Have we not all one father? hath not one God created us? why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother, profaning the covenant of our fathers” (Mal. 2:10)? “First: they are literal covenants and their contents must be interpreted literally as well” (Fruchtenbaum, EC, p. 6). “Fourth: these covenants were made with a specific people: Israel. This point is brought out by Paul in Romans 9:4: who are Israelites; whose is the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises. This passage clearly points out that these covenants were made with the covenanted people and are Israel's possession. This is brought out again in Ephesians 2:11, 12: 'Wherefore remember, that once ye, the Gentiles in the flesh, who are called Uncircumcision by that which is called Circumcision, in the flesh, made by hands; that ye were at that time separate from Christ, alienated from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of the promise, having no hope and without God in the world.' Five of the eight Bible covenants belong to the people of Israel and, as this passage notes, Gentiles were considered strangers from the covenants" (ibid.).

They were given to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob personally; not to their seed only. "But as this Kingdom was tendered to those then living, it would have been incongruous to have told them at that period, before the unbelief of the nation and the downfall of the kingdom made it necessary to particularize God's purposes and to explain more in detail the manner of accomplishment, that they could only inherit the Kingdom at the period of the resurrection" (Peters, TTK, 1:220).

They are still in effect. "It follows, then, that it is a grave misapprehension of Scripture teaching to say, as some do, that all the older covenants ended in Christ" (Peters, TTK, 1:328). "While the Jewish ritual was abolished by the sacrifice of Jesus, this cannot be extended, as we have shown in detail in other places, to a termination of 'their national covenant'" (ibid., 3:576). "Dispensationalists, though very clear as to how the unconditional covenants work out in relationship to Israel Past and Israel Future, have been far less clear with Israel Present. Chafer, as cited in the previous chapter, took the view that the Jewish covenants are now in 'abeyance,' and Pentecost failed to recognize the existence of the remnant today. No such view of the covenants is necessary or defensible. The fact is that all four unconditional covenants are not only still in effect, but also still operative at the present time" (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 628). "The promises that God made to Israel have not been rendered null and void. Israel is yet to enjoy all the promises of the four unfulfilled unconditional covenants, each of which points respectively to the four facets of Israel's final restoration" (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 436).

They are to be fulfilled by Christ. (See the sections on the fulfillments of the covenants in our chapters The Second Coming of the King and The Millennial Kingdom.)

And, they are eternal. “All of Israel’s covenants are called eternal except the Mosaic Covenant, which is declared to be temporal (i.e., it was to continue only until the coming of the promised Seed)” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 60). “Second: the covenants that God has made with Israel are eternal and are not in any way restricted or altered by time” (Fruchtenbaum, EC, p. 6).

The first of Israel’s four unconditional covenants is the Abrahamic Covenant. In the Abrahamic Covenant God unconditionally promised to Abraham and to his descendants the land of Palestine, national identity, blessing, a great name, and potential blessing and cursing on other peoples. “Now Jehovah said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father’s house, unto the land that I will show thee. And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great. And be thou a blessing. And I will bless them that bless thee, and him that curseth thee will I curse. And in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed” (Gen. 12:1-3). “Abram dwelt in the land of Canaan, and Lot dwelt in the cities of the Plain, and moved his tent as far as Sodom. Now the men of Sodom were wicked and sinners against Jehovah exceedingly. And Jehovah said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward and southward and eastward and westward. For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever. And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth. So that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then may thy seed also be numbered. Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it. For unto thee will I give it” (Gen. 13:12-17). We discussed the Abrahamic Covenant at length in the Covenant #4: The Abrahamic Covenant section of our chapter Conscience, Government and Promise.

The second of Israel’s four unconditional covenants is the Palestinian Covenant. In the Palestinian Covenant, as the Israelites were poised to enter the promised land, Jehovah unconditionally confirmed eternal ownership of the land of Palestine to Israel, while at the same time conditioning the Israelites’ enjoyment of and blessing in the land on their repentance and obedience. “And it shall come to pass, when all these things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations, whither Jehovah thy God hath driven thee, and shalt return unto Jehovah thy God, and shalt obey his voice according to all that I command thee this day, thou and thy children, with all thy heart, and with all thy soul; that then Jehovah thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from all the peoples, whither Jehovah thy God hath scattered thee. If any of thine outcasts be in the uttermost parts of heaven, from thence will Jehovah thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee: and Jehovah thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it; and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers. And Jehovah thy God will circumcise thy heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love Jehovah thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live. And Jehovah thy God will put all these curses upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, that persecuted thee. And thou shalt return and obey the voice of Jehovah, and do all his commandments which I command thee this day. And Jehovah thy God will make thee plenteous in all the work of thy hand, in the fruit of thy body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy ground, for good: for Jehovah will again rejoice over thee for good, as he rejoiced over thy fathers; if thou shalt obey the voice of Jehovah thy God, to keep his commandments and his statutes which are written in this book of the law; if thou turn unto Jehovah thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul” (Deut. 30:1-10). We discussed the Palestinian Covenant at length in the Covenant #6: The Palestinian Covenant section of our chapter The Theocratic Kingdom.

The remaining two of Israel’s four unconditional covenants are the Davidic Covenant and the New Covenant. We will discuss these in detail now.

Covenant #7: The Davidic Covenant

The third of Israel’s four unconditional covenants is the Davidic Covenant. It was made by Jehovah with king David for the purpose of securing on earth an eternal Davidic house, throne, king and kingdom. In this writer’s view, the Davidic Covenant is one of the two most important covenants given to Israel (the other being the Abrahamic Covenant), and we will therefore be covering it here in considerable detail. “The Theocratic-Davidic Kingdom is the Kingdom of God” (Peters, TTK, 1:250) “He [David] notices also the connection that this promised Seed of his has with the older promises. For, we have first simply the seed of the woman; next that He shall be Abraham’s seed; next that He shall inherit the land and bless all nations; next, that He shall be a mighty King; and next that He shall be David’s Son and Lord, sitting on David’s throne and from thence exerting a world-wide dominion” (ibid., p. 314). “According to Chafer [in Systematic Theology, 4:313-315], this [the Davidic Covenant] was both unconditional and eternal. It had four primary features. First, the House of David will never lack one with the right to rule from his throne. Divine discipline ‘may cause the throne itself to be unoccupied; but there shall never lack one whose right it is to sit on that throne.’ Second, this covenant ‘can never... be abrogated.’ Third, an eternal throne is guaranteed. Fourth, an eternal kingdom is promised” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 345). “It promised to David ‘the perpetuity of the Davidic house, the Davidic throne, and the Davidic kingdom’” [quoting Chafer, Systematic Theology, 4:315] (ibid.). “Next in importance to the Abrahamic covenant in the Old Testament doctrine of premillennialism stands the Davidic covenant—the promises of God to David that his seed, throne, and kingdom would endure forever” [quoting Walvoord, MK, pp. 194-195] (ibid., p. 349). “A major importance of the Davidic Covenant is that it is a basis for believing in a Messianic Kingdom and to counteract the claim of many Covenant Theologians that Revelation 20 is the only basis for such a belief” (ibid.). “Walvoord [in The Millennial Kingdom, pp. 196-197] next shows that the Davidic Covenant later had ‘Old Testament Confirmation: It should be clear to anyone who interprets the Old Testament prophecies literally that the entire theme of Messianic prophecy confirms the Davidic promises. The great kingdom promises of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel combine with the Minor Prophets in reiterating the theme of the coming Immanuel and His kingdom upon the earth’” (ibid., p. 350). “Basically, the Davidic Covenant promised three eternal things: an eternal house or dynasty, an eternal kingdom, and an eternal throne” (ibid., p. 352). “The fifth area is the ‘Covenanted Davidic Kingdom.’ This facet, Chafer writes, is ‘the most extensive and important feature of the eschatology of Judaism’” [quoting Chafer, Dispensationalism, pp. 57-67] (ibid., p. 439). “To summarize, the Davidic Covenant promised four eternal things: an eternal house or dynasty, an eternal throne, an eternal kingdom, and an eternal descendent. The eternality of the house, throne, and kingdom are guaranteed because the Seed of David culminated in a person Who is Himself eternal: the Messiah, the God-Man” (ibid., p. 585). “After the failure of Saul to fulfill the responsibilities of theocratic administrator, God appointed David from the tribe of Judah to that significant role. God later entered into an eternal, unconditional covenant with David, establishing the Davidic dynasty as the sole rightful occupant of His earthly throne. Through David a kingdom of peace and righteousness would be established over the covenant people in the land that God had previously promised to them. This covenant will have its eventual literal fulfillment here on earth at the second advent of Christ as King of kings and Lord of lords. This covenant was made through David with the nation Israel, and must be fulfilled by Israel. Thus the present session of Christ at the right hand of His Father in heaven and His rule over the church cannot be a fulfillment of the Davidic Covenant” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 155). “...the Davidic covenant—the promises of God to David that his seed, throne, and kingdom would endure forever” (Walvoord, MK, p. 194). “As the Abrahamic covenant centers around the land, the Davidic covenant centers around the throne. The former provides the land and the nation; the latter provides a king to rule over the kingdom. Both involve literal, national, unconditional, and perpetual blessings” (Geisler, ST, 4:517)..

Statement of the Davidic Covenant

The Davidic Covenant is stated in Second Samuel and First Chronicles, and is reiterated in the Psalms and in the Hebrew prophets. “When thy [David’s] days are fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee, that shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build a house for my name, and I will establish the throne of his kingdom for ever. I will be his father, and he shall be my son: if he commit iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men; but my lovingkindness shall not depart from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I put away before thee. And thy house and thy kingdom shall be made sure for ever before thee: thy throne shall be established for ever. According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David. Then David the king went in, and sat before Jehovah; and he said, Who am I, O Lord Jehovah, and what is my house, that thou hast brought me thus far? And this was yet a small thing in thine eyes, O Lord Jehovah; but thou hast spoken also of thy servant’s house for a great while to come; and this too after the manner of men, O Lord Jehovah” (2 Sam. 7:12-19)! “The emphasis in this first account of the Davidic Covenant has been on Solomon” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 803). “And thou didst establish to thyself thy people Israel to be a people unto thee for ever; and thou, Jehovah, becamest their God. And now, O Jehovah God, the word that thou hast spoken concerning thy servant, and concerning his house, confirm thou it for ever, and do as thou hast spoken. And let thy name be magnified for ever, saying, Jehovah of hosts is God over Israel; and the house of thy servant David shall be established before thee. For thou, O Jehovah of hosts, the God of Israel, hast revealed to thy servant, saying, I will build thee a house: therefore hath thy servant found in his heart to pray this prayer unto thee. And now, O Lord Jehovah, thou art God, and thy words are truth, and thou hast promised this good thing unto thy servant: now therefore let it please thee to bless the house of thy servant, that it may continue for ever before thee; for thou, O Lord Jehovah, hast spoken it: and with thy blessing let the house of thy servant be blessed for ever" (2 Sam. 7:24-29). "And it shall come to pass, when thy [David's] days are fulfilled that thou must go to be with thy fathers, that I will set up thy seed after thee, who shall be of thy sons; and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build me a house, and I will establish his throne for ever. I will be his father, and he shall be my son: and I will not take my lovingkindness away from him, as I took it from him that was before thee; but I will settle him in my house and in my kingdom for ever; and his throne shall be established for ever. According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David. Then David the king went in, and sat before Jehovah; and he said, Who am I, O Jehovah God, and what is my house, that thou hast brought me thus far? And this was a small thing in thine eyes, O God; but thou hast spoken of thy servant's house for a great while to come, and hast regarded me according to the estate of a man of high degree, O Jehovah God. What can David say yet more unto thee concerning the honor which is done to thy servant? for thou knowest thy servant. O Jehovah, for thy servant's sake, and according to thine own heart, hast thou wrought all this greatness, to make known all these great things. O Jehovah, there is none like thee, neither is there any God besides thee, according to all that we have heard with our ears. And what one nation in the earth is like thy people Israel, whom God went to redeem unto himself for a people, to make thee a name by great and terrible things, in driving out nations from before thy people, whom thou redeemest out of Egypt? For thy people Israel didst thou make thine own people for ever; and thou, Jehovah, becamest their God. And now, O Jehovah, let the word that thou hast spoken concerning thy servant, and concerning his house, be established for ever, and do as thou hast spoken. And let thy name be established and magnified for ever, saying, Jehovah of hosts is the God of Israel, even a God to Israel: and the house of David thy servant is established before thee. For thou, O my God, hast revealed to thy servant that thou wilt build him a house: therefore hath thy servant found in his heart to pray before thee. And now, O Jehovah, thou art God, and hast promised this good thing unto thy servant: and now it hath pleased thee to bless the house of thy servant, that it may continue for ever before thee: for thou, O Jehovah, hast blessed, and it is blessed for ever" (1 Chron. 17:11-27). "A slightly different emphasis is given in the second passage in I Chronicles 17:10b-14. The emphasis in this passage is not on Solomon, but on the Messiah... Since the

Chronicles passage emphasized the Messiah, there is no possibility of sin and, hence, no mention of sin. Finally, it is this Person Himself who is established forever and not merely the dynasty, kingdom, and throne (v. 14)” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 803). “Now therefore, O Jehovah, the God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised him, saying, There shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit on the throne of Israel, if only thy children take heed to their way, to walk in my law as thou hast walked before me” (2 Chron. 6:16). “I will sing of the lovingkindness of Jehovah for ever: With my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness to all generations. For I have said, Mercy shall be built up for ever; Thy faithfulness wilt thou establish in the very heavens. I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David my servant: Thy seed will I establish for ever, And build up thy throne to all generations. Selah” (Ps. 89:1-4) “I also will make him my first-born, The highest of the kings of the earth. My lovingkindness will I keep for him [David] for evermore; And my covenant shall stand fast with him. His seed also will I make to endure for ever, And his throne as the days of heaven. If his children forsake my law, And walk not in mine ordinances; If they break my statutes, And keep not my commandments; Then will I visit their transgression with the rod, And their iniquity with stripes. But my lovingkindness will I not utterly take from him, Nor suffer my faithfulness to fail. My covenant will I not break, Nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by my holiness: I will not lie unto David: His seed shall endure for ever, And his throne as the sun before me. It shall be established for ever as the moon, And as the faithful witness in the sky. Selah” (Ps. 89:27-37) “To leave no doubt whatever, and to render unbelief utterly inexcusable, God concisely and most forcibly presents His determination (Psl. 89:34) ‘My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips.’ It would have been sheer presumption and blindness in the Jews to have altered (under the plea—modern—of spirituality) the covenant, and to have refused to accept of the obvious sense conveyed by the words; and there is a heavy responsibility resting upon those, who, even under the most pious intentions, deliberately alter the covenant words and attach to them a foreign meaning” (Peters, TTK, 1:316). “If the oath, covenant and promises of Jehovah cannot be trusted, what assurance can be drawn from any word He has spoken? Purposing to instruct us as to a yet future earthly kingdom for Israel, and for the nations through them, what more positive, or meaningful, language could He have employed” (Chafer, KHP, 37%)? “How long, O Jehovah?

wilt thou hide thyself for ever? How long shall thy wrath burn like fire? Oh remember how short my time is: For what vanity hast thou created all the children of men! What man is he that shall live and not see death, That shall deliver his soul from the power of Sheol? Selah Lord, where are thy former lovingkindnesses, Which thou swarest unto David in thy faithfulness” (Ps. 89:46-49)? “For thy servant David’s sake Turn not away the face of thine anointed. Jehovah hath sworn unto David in truth; He will not turn from it: Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne. If thy children will keep my covenant And my testimony that I shall teach them, Their children also shall sit upon thy throne for evermore. For Jehovah hath chosen Zion; He hath desired it for his habitation” (Ps. 132:10-13). “For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of Jehovah of hosts will perform this” (Isa. 9:6-7). “And a throne shall be established in lovingkindness; and one shall sit thereon in truth, in the tent of David, judging, and seeking justice, and swift to do righteousness” (Isa. 16:5). “then shall there enter in by the gates of this city [Jerusalem] kings and princes sitting upon the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, they, and their princes, the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and this city shall remain for ever” (Jer. 17:25). “Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and he shall reign as king and deal wisely, and shall execute justice and righteousness in the land. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called: Jehovah our righteousness” (Jer. 23:5-6). “In those days, and at that time, will I cause a Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he shall execute justice and righteousness in the land. In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely; and this is the name whereby she shall be called: Jehovah our righteousness. For thus saith Jehovah: David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel; neither shall the priests the Levites want a man before me to offer burnt-offerings, and to burn meal-offerings, and to do sacrifice continually. And the word of Jehovah came unto Jeremiah, saying, Thus saith Jehovah: If ye can break my covenant of the day, and my covenant of the night, so that there shall not be day and night in their season; then may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, that he shall not have a son to reign upon his throne; and with the Levites the priests, my ministers. As the host of heaven cannot be numbered, neither the sand of the sea measured; so will I multiply the seed of David my servant, and the Levites that minister unto me. And the word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah, saying, Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying, The two families which Jehovah did choose, he hath cast them off? thus do they despise my people, that they should be no more a nation before them. Thus saith Jehovah: If my covenant of day and night stand not, if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth; then will I also cast away the seed of Jacob, and of David my servant, so that I will not take of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: for I will cause their captivity to return, and will have mercy on them” (Jer. 33:15-26). “And my servant David shall be king over them; and they all shall have one shepherd: they shall also walk in mine ordinances, and observe my statutes, and do them. And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers dwelt; and they shall dwell therein, they, and their children, and their children’s children, for ever: and David my servant shall be their prince for ever” (Ezek. 37:24-25). “For the children of Israel shall abide many days without king, and without prince, and without sacrifice, and without pillar, and without ephod or teraphim: afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek Jehovah their God, and David their king, and shall come with fear unto Jehovah and to his goodness in the latter days” (Hos. 3:4-5). “In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof; and I will raise up its ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old; that they may possess the remnant of Edom, and all the nations that are called by my name, saith Jehovah that doeth this. Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt. And I will bring back the captivity of my people Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them. And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be plucked up out of their land which I have given them, saith Jehovah thy God” (Amos 9:11-15).

Features of the Davidic Covenant

The Davidic Covenant promises to David an eternal house, throne, king and kingdom. “And thy house and thy kingdom shall be made sure for ever before thee: thy throne shall be established for ever” (2 Sam. 7:16). “It guarantees (1) an unfailing house or line of David’s sons—a king without cessation to sit on David’s throne (The necessity of chastisement may cause the throne itself to be unoccupied; but there shall never lack one whose right it is to sit on that throne—2 Sam 7:14-15; Ps. 89:30-33; Jer 33:17. The covenant can never—on the oath of Jehovah—be abrogated.); (2) a throne, the earthly throne of David to continue forever; and (3) a kingdom forever” (Chafer, ST, 4:314). “The essential features of the Davidic Covenant are found in these three words in 2 Samuel 7:16: house, kingdom, and throne” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 142). “The Davidic covenant... house... future kingdom” (McClain, GK, p. 156) “This covenant promised four eternal things: house, throne, kingdom, and descendant” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 632). “In essence then, the Davidic Covenant promised four eternal things: an eternal dynasty, an eternal kingdom, an eternal throne, and an eternal person” (ibid., p. 803).

Regarding the house (seed), “When thy [David’s] days are fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee, that shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build a house for my name, and I will establish the throne of his kingdom for ever. I will be his father, and he shall be my son: if he commit iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men; but my lovingkindness shall not depart from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I put away before thee. And thy house and thy kingdom shall be made sure for ever before thee: thy throne shall be established for ever. According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David. Then David the king went in, and sat before Jehovah; and he said, Who am I, O Lord Jehovah, and what is my house, that thou hast brought me thus far? And this was yet a small thing in thine eyes, O Lord Jehovah; but thou hast spoken also of thy servant’s house for a great while to come; and this too after the manner of men, O Lord Jehovah” (2 Sam. 7:12-19)! “I will sing of the lovingkindness of Jehovah for ever: With my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness to all generations. For I have said, Mercy shall be built up for ever; Thy faithfulness wilt thou establish in the very heavens. I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David my servant: Thy seed will I establish for ever, And build up thy throne to all generations. Selah” (Ps. 89:1-4) “I also will make him my first-born, The highest of the kings of the earth. My lovingkindness will I keep for him for evermore; And my covenant shall stand fast with him. His seed also will I make to endure for ever, And his throne as the days of heaven. If his children forsake my law, And walk not in mine ordinances; If they break my statutes, And keep not my commandments; Then will I visit their transgression with the rod, And their iniquity with stripes. But my lovingkindness will I not utterly take from him, Nor suffer my faithfulness to fail. My covenant will I not break, Nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by my holiness: I will not lie unto David: His seed shall endure for ever, And his throne as the sun before me. It shall be established for ever as the moon, And as the faithful witness in the sky. Selah” (Ps. 89:27-37) (See also 2 Sam.7:24-29, 1 Chron. 17:11-27, Isaiah 16:5, Jer. 33:15-26 and Amos 9:11-15.) “The only necessary feature is that the lineage cannot be lost, not that the throne be occupied continuously” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 147).

Regarding the throne, “When thy [David’s] days are fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee, that shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom... thy throne shall be established for ever... thou hast spoken also of thy servant’s house for a great while to come; and this too after the manner of men, O Lord Jehovah” (2 Sam. 7:12-19)! “Now therefore, O Jehovah, the God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised him, saying, There shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit on the throne of Israel, if only thy children take heed to their way, to walk in my law as thou hast walked before me” (2 Chron. 6:16). “I will sing of the lovingkindness of Jehovah for ever: With my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness to all generations. For I have said, Mercy shall be built up for ever; Thy faithfulness wilt thou establish in the very heavens. I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David my servant: Thy seed will I establish for ever, And build up thy throne to all generations. Selah” (Ps. 89:1-4) “I also will make him my first-born, The highest of the kings of the earth. My lovingkindness will I keep for him for evermore; And my covenant shall stand fast with him. His seed also will I make to endure for ever, And his throne as the days of heaven. If his children forsake my law, And walk not in mine ordinances; If they break my statutes, And keep not my commandments; Then will I visit their transgression with the rod, And their iniquity with stripes. But my lovingkindness will I not utterly take from him, Nor suffer my faithfulness to fail. My covenant will I not break, Nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by my holiness: I will not lie unto David: His seed shall endure for ever, And his throne as the sun before me. It shall be established for ever as the moon, And as the faithful witness in the sky. Selah” (Ps. 89:27-37) “For thy servant David’s sake Turn not away the face of thine anointed. Jehovah hath sworn unto David in truth; He will not turn from it: Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne. If thy children will keep my covenant And my testimony that I shall teach them, Their children also shall sit upon thy throne for evermore. For Jehovah hath chosen Zion; He hath desired it for his habitation” (Ps. 132:10-13). “For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of Jehovah of hosts will perform this” (Isa. 9:6-7). “And a throne shall be established in lovingkindness; and one shall sit thereon in truth, in the tent of David, judging, and seeking justice, and swift to do righteousness” (Isa. 16:5). “then shall there enter in by the gates of this city [Jerusalem] kings and princes sitting upon the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, they, and their princes, the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and this city shall remain for ever” (Jer. 17:25). “In those days, and at that time, will I cause a Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he shall execute justice and righteousness in the land. In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely; and this is the name whereby she shall be called: Jehovah our righteousness. For thus saith Jehovah: David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel; neither shall the priests the Levites want a man before me to offer burnt-offerings, and to burn meal-offerings, and to do sacrifice continually. And the word of Jehovah came unto Jeremiah, saying, Thus saith Jehovah: If ye can break my covenant of the day, and my covenant of the night, so that there shall not be day and night in their season; then may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, that he shall not have a son to reign upon his throne; and with the Levites the priests, my ministers. As the host of heaven cannot be numbered, neither the sand of the sea measured; so will I multiply the seed of David my servant, and the Levites that minister unto me. And the word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah, saying, Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying, The two families which Jehovah did choose, he hath cast them off? thus do they despise my people, that they should be no more a nation before them. Thus saith Jehovah: If my covenant of day and night stand not, if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth; then will I also cast away the seed of Jacob, and of David my servant, so that I will not take of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: for I will cause their captivity to return, and will have mercy on them” (Jer. 33:15-26). “And behold, you will conceive in your womb, and bear a son, and you shall name Him Jesus. He will be great, and will be called the Son of the Most High; and the Lord God will give Him the throne of His father David; and He will reign over the house of Jacob forever; and His kingdom will have no end” (Luke 1:31–33). “And so, because he [David] was a prophet, and knew that God had sworn to him with an oath to seat one of his descendants upon his throne” (Acts 2:30) See also 1 Chron. 17:11-27.

This Davidic throne is also David’s son Solomon’s throne, but it is not to be occupied by Solomon’s seed. “It should be noted that it was not Solomon, nor Solomon’s seed that ‘would be established forever,’ but only the ‘throne of Solomon’s kingdom would be established forever.’ This is significant in that Christ came from David through Nathan rather than Solomon.” [quoting Ryrie, Basic Theology, p. 458] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 346).

In identifying David’s throne, we should recognize that David’s (earthly) throne is not God’s (heavenly) throne. Contrasting passages that speak of God’s (heavenly) throne with those that speak of David’s throne will be helpful in this regard:

Regarding God’s (heavenly) throne, “So then, when the Lord Jesus had spoken to them, He was received up into heaven, and sat down at the right hand of God” (Mark 16:19). “But from now on THE SON OF MAN WILL BE SEATED AT THE RIGHT HAND of the power OF GOD” (Luke 22:69). “Therefore having been exalted to the right hand of God, and having received from the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, He has poured forth this which you both see and hear. For it was not David who ascended into heaven, but he himself says: “THE LORD SAID TO MY LORD, ‘SIT AT MY RIGHT HAND’”” (Acts 2:33–34) “He is the one whom God exalted to His right hand as a Prince and a Savior, to grant repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins” (Acts 5:31). “But being full of the Holy Spirit, he gazed intently into heaven and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing at the right hand of God; and he said, ‘Behold, I see the heavens opened up and the Son of Man standing at the right hand of God” (Acts 7:55–56). “who is the one who condemns? Christ Jesus is He who died, yes, rather who was raised, who is at the right hand of God, who also intercedes for us” (Rom. 8:34). “which He brought about in Christ, when He raised Him from the dead, and seated Him at His right hand in the heavenly places” (Eph. 1:20) “If then you have been raised up with Christ, keep seeking the things above, where Christ is, seated at the right hand of God” (Col. 3:1). “And He is the radiance of His glory and the exact representation of His nature, and upholds all things by the word of His power. When He had made purification of sins, He sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on high” (Heb. 1:3) “But to which of the angels has He ever said, ‘SIT AT MY RIGHT HAND, UNTIL I MAKE THINE ENEMIES A FOOTSTOOL FOR THY FEET’” (Heb. 1:13)? “Now the main point in what has been said is this: we have such a high priest, who has taken His seat at the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens” (Heb. 8:1) “but He, having offered one sacrifice for sins for all time, SAT DOWN AT THE RIGHT HAND OF GOD” (Heb. 10:12) “fixing our eyes on Jesus, the author and perfecter of faith, who for the joy set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and has sat down at the right hand of the throne of God” (Heb. 12:2). “who is at the right hand of God, having gone into heaven, after angels and authorities and powers had been subjected to Him” (1 Pet. 3:22). “He who overcomes, I will grant to him to sit down with Me on My throne, as I also overcame and sat down with My Father on His throne” (Rev. 3:21).

In contrast, regarding David’s and the Son of Man’s messianic (Davidic) throne, which in Scripture is never equated with God’s throne, “to transfer the kingdom from the house of Saul, and to establish the throne of David over Israel and over Judah, from Dan even to Beersheba” (2 Sam. 3:10). “For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of Jehovah of hosts will perform this.” (Isa. 9:6-7) “And Jesus said to them, “Truly I say to you, that you who have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man will sit on His glorious throne, you also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel” (Matt. 19:28). “But when the Son of Man comes in His glory, and all the angels with Him, then He will sit on His glorious throne” (Matt. 25:31). “And behold, you will conceive in your womb, and bear a son, and you shall name Him Jesus. He will be great, and will be called the Son of the Most High; and the Lord God will give Him the throne of His father David; and He will reign over the house of Jacob forever; and His kingdom will have no end” (Luke 1:31–33). “Men of Israel, listen to these words: Jesus the Nazarene, a man attested to you by God with miracles and wonders and signs which God performed through Him in your midst, just as you yourselves know — this Man, delivered up by the predetermined plan and foreknowledge of God, you nailed to a cross by the hands of godless men and put Him to death. And God raised Him up again, putting an end to the agony of death, since it was impossible for Him to be held in its power. For David says of Him, “I WAS ALWAYS BEHOLDING THE LORD IN MY PRESENCE; FOR HE IS AT MY RIGHT HAND, THAT I MAY NOT BE SHAKEN. THEREFORE MY HEART WAS GLAD AND MY TONGUE EXULTED; MOREOVER MY FLESH ALSO WILL ABIDE IN HOPE; BECAUSE THOU WILT NOT ABANDON MY SOUL TO HADES, NOR ALLOW THY HOLY ONE TO UNDERGO DECAY. THOU HAST MADE KNOWN TO ME THE WAYS OF LIFE; THOU WILT MAKE ME FULL OF GLADNESS WITH THY PRESENCE.” Brethren, I may confidently say to you regarding the patriarch David that he both died and was buried, and his tomb is with us to this day. And so, because he was a prophet, and knew that GOD HAD SWORN TO HIM WITH AN OATH TO SEAT one OF HIS DESCENDANTS UPON HIS THRONE, he looked ahead and spoke of the resurrection of the Christ, that HE WAS NEITHER ABANDONED TO HADES, NOR DID His flesh SUFFER DECAY. This Jesus God raised up again, to which we are all witnesses. Therefore having been exalted to the right hand of God, and having received from the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, He has poured forth this which you both see and hear. For it was not David who ascended into heaven, but he himself says: “THE LORD SAID TO MY LORD, SIT AT MY RIGHT HAND, UNTIL I MAKE THINE ENEMIES A FOOTSTOOL FOR THY FEET.” Therefore let all the house of Israel know for certain that God has made Him both Lord and Christ — this Jesus whom you crucified” (Acts 2:22–36). “He who overcomes, I will grant to him to sit down with Me on My throne, as I also overcame and sat down with My Father on His throne” (Rev. 3:21). From these passages, it is evident that David’s throne, which is the Son of Man’s messianic throne, is not God’s throne. “Rev. 3:21, where the Father’s throne in heaven is distinguished from ‘my throne’—a distinction made requisite by the Covenant to David” (Peters, TTK, 2:355). “God’s throne in heaven and David’s throne on earth are never employed in Scripture as synonymous or identical (Rev. 3:21; cf. also Acts 2:30, 34)” (Feinberg, M, p. 147). “Christ... It is overlooked, alas, that He sits not on His own throne, as He shall in the kingdom, but He Himself declares (Rev. 3:21) that He is seated on His blessed Father’s throne” (ibid., p. 254). “The New Testament has fifty-nine references to David. It also has many references to the present session of Christ. A search of the New Testament reveals that there is not one reference connecting the present session of Christ with the Davidic throne” (Walvoord, MK, p. 203). “The New Testament is totally lacking in positive teaching that the throne of the Father in heaven is to be identified with the Davidic throne” (ibid.). “It is foolish to claim that the Throne of David and the Throne of God are the same unless Covenant Theologians wish to insist that David once sat on the Throne of God the Father” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 633)! “Today Messiah sits at the right hand of God on the Father’s throne. In the coming Kingdom He will sit as King and Priest upon His own throne” (McClain, GK, p. 242). “In the present time, between His ascension and His return, Christ is on His Father’s throne (Rev. 3:21; Heb. 8:1)... [However,] in the Millennial kingdom Christ is on David’s throne (Luke 1:32; Acts 2:30). The throne of this His earthly ancestor is then His throne (Rev. 3:21; Matt. 19:28; 25:31).” [quoting Erich Sauer, From Eternity to Eternity, pp. 51-52] (Geisler, ST, 4:533). (See also our discussion of the fact that Jesus is not sitting on David’s throne now in our chapter Postponement of the Kingdom.)

In contrast with God’s throne, which is heavenly, the Davidic throne is earthly. “to transfer the kingdom from the house of Saul, and to set up the throne of David over Israel and over Judah, from Dan even to Beer-sheba” (2 Sam. 3:10). “And Solomon sat upon the throne of David his father; and his kingdom was established greatly” (1 Kings. 2:12). “Now therefore as Jehovah liveth, who hath established me, and set me on the throne of David my father, and who hath made me a house, as he promised, surely Adonijah shall be put to death this day” (1 Kings. 2:24). “And Solomon said, Thou hast showed unto thy servant David my father great lovingkindness, according as he walked before thee in truth, and in righteousness, and in uprightness of heart with thee; and thou hast kept for him this great lovingkindness, that thou hast given him a son to sit on his throne, as it is this day” (1 Kings. 3:6). “And Jehovah hath established his word that he spake; for I am risen up in the room of David my father, and sit on the throne of Israel, as Jehovah promised, and have built the house for the name of Jehovah, the God of Israel” (1 Kings. 8:20). “Then Solomon sat on the throne of Jehovah as king instead of David his father, and prospered; and all Israel obeyed him” (1 Chron.

29:23). “And Jehovah hath performed his word that he spake; for I am risen up in the room of David my father, and sit on the throne of Israel, as Jehovah promised, and have built the house for the name of Jehovah, the God of Israel” (2 Chron. 6:10). “then I will establish the throne of thy kingdom, according as I covenanted with David thy father, saying, There shall not fail thee a man to be ruler in Israel” (2 Chron. 7:18). “Jehovah hath sworn unto David in truth; He will not turn from it: Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne” (Ps. 132:11). “Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of Jehovah of hosts will perform this” (Isa. 9:7). “And a throne shall be established in lovingkindness; and one shall sit thereon in truth, in the tent of David, judging, and seeking justice, and swift to do righteousness” (Isa. 16:5). “Then shalt thou say unto them, Thus saith Jehovah, Behold, I will fill all the inhabitants of this land, even the kings that sit upon David’s throne, and the priests, and the prophets, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, with drunkenness” (Jer. 13:13). “then shall there enter in by the gates of this city kings and princes sitting upon the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, they, and their princes, the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and this city shall remain for ever” (Jer. 17:25). “Thus saith Jehovah, Write ye this man childless, a man that shall not prosper in his days; for no more shall a man of his seed prosper, sitting upon the throne of David, and ruling in Judah” (Jer. 22:30). “thus saith Jehovah concerning the king that sitteth upon the throne of David, and concerning all the people that dwell in this city, your brethren that are not gone forth with you into captivity” (Jer. 29:16) “For thus saith Jehovah: David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel” (Jer. 33:17) “then may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, that he shall not have a son to reign upon his throne; and with the Levites the priests, my ministers” (Jer. 33:21). “Therefore thus saith Jehovah concerning Jehoiakim king of Judah: He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David; and his dead body shall be cast out in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost” (Jer. 36:30). “And Jesus said to them, “Truly I say to you, that you who have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man will sit on His glorious throne, you also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel” (Matt. 19:28). “But when the Son of Man comes in His glory, and all the angels with Him, then He will sit on His glorious throne” (Matt. 25:31). “And behold, you will conceive in your womb, and bear a son, and you shall name Him Jesus. He will be great, and will be called the Son of the Most High; and the Lord God will give Him the throne of His father David; and He will reign over the house of Jacob forever; and His kingdom will have no end” (Luke 1:31–33). “Men of Israel, listen to these words: Jesus the Nazarene, a man attested to you by God with miracles and wonders and signs which God performed through Him in your midst, just as you yourselves know — this Man, delivered up by the predetermined plan and foreknowledge of God, you nailed to a cross by the hands of godless men and put Him to death. And God raised Him up again, putting an end to the agony of death, since it was impossible for Him to be held in its power. For David says of Him, “I WAS ALWAYS BEHOLDING THE LORD IN MY PRESENCE; FOR HE IS AT MY RIGHT HAND, THAT I MAY NOT BE SHAKEN. THEREFORE MY HEART WAS GLAD AND MY TONGUE EXULTED; MOREOVER MY FLESH ALSO WILL ABIDE IN HOPE; BECAUSE THOU WILT NOT ABANDON MY SOUL TO HADES, NOR ALLOW THY HOLY ONE TO UNDERGO DECAY. THOU HAST MADE KNOWN TO ME THE WAYS OF LIFE; THOU WILT MAKE ME FULL OF GLADNESS WITH THY PRESENCE.” Brethren, I may confidently say to you regarding the patriarch David that he both died and was buried, and his tomb is with us to this day. And so, because he was a prophet, and knew that GOD HAD SWORN TO HIM WITH AN OATH TO SEAT one OF HIS DESCENDANTS UPON HIS THRONE, he looked ahead and spoke of the resurrection of the Christ, that HE WAS NEITHER ABANDONED TO HADES, NOR DID His flesh SUFFER DECAY. This Jesus God raised up again, to which we are all witnesses. Therefore having been exalted to the right hand of God, and having received from the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, He has poured forth this which you both see and hear. For it was not David who ascended into heaven, but he himself says: “THE LORD SAID TO MY LORD, SIT AT MY RIGHT HAND, UNTIL I MAKE THINE ENEMIES A FOOTSTOOL FOR THY FEET.” Therefore let all the house of Israel know for certain that God has made Him both Lord and Christ — this Jesus whom you crucified” (Acts 2:22–36). “And while he was clinging to Peter and John, all the people ran together to them at the so-called portico of Solomon, full of amazement. But when Peter saw this, he replied to the people, ‘Men of Israel, why do you marvel at this, or why do you gaze at us, as if by our own power or piety we had made him walk? The God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the God of our fathers, has glorified

His servant Jesus, the one whom you delivered up, and disowned in the presence of Pilate, when he had decided to release Him. But you disowned the Holy and Righteous One, and asked for a murderer to be granted to you, but put to death the Prince of life, the one whom God raised from the dead, a fact to which we are witnesses. And on the basis of faith in His name, it is the name of Jesus which has strengthened this man whom you see and know; and the faith which comes through Him has given him this perfect health in the presence of you all. And now, brethren, I know that you acted in ignorance, just as your rulers did also. But the things which God announced beforehand by the mouth of all the prophets, that His Christ should suffer, He has thus fulfilled. Repent therefore and return, that your sins may be wiped away, in order that times of refreshing may come from the presence of the Lord; and that He may send Jesus, the Christ appointed for you, whom heaven must receive until the period of restoration of all things about which God spoke by the mouth of His holy prophets from ancient time” (Acts 3:11–22) “And the seventh angel sounded; and there arose loud voices in heaven, saying, The kingdom of the world has become the kingdom of our Lord, and of His Christ; and He will reign forever and ever” (Rev. 11:15). (See also 1 Kings 1:13, 37, 47; 2:33, 45; 5:5; 8:25; 9:5 and 1 Chron. 6:16.) “The ‘Throne of David’ was on the earth, and can never be anywhere else” (Larkin, DT, p. 84). “The throne of David is precisely what David believed it to be, an earthly institution which has never been, nor will it ever be, in heaven” (Chafer, ST, 4:315).

This Davidic throne is not yet occupied. “The throne of His father David... That throne Jesus has never occupied. It was denied Him on earth, and since the ascension He has been seated on the throne of the Father” (Chafer, ST, 5:331).

However, it definitely will be occupied. “He will be great, and will be called the Son of the Most High; and the Lord God will give Him the throne of His father David” (Luke 1:32)

Regarding the Davidic Covenant’s promise of a King, “Now therefore, O Jehovah, the God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised him, saying, There shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit on the throne of Israel, if only thy children take heed to their way, to walk in my law as thou hast walked before me” (2 Chron. 6:16). “For thy servant David’s sake Turn not away the face of thine anointed. Jehovah hath sworn unto David in truth; He will not turn from it: Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne. If thy children will keep my covenant And my testimony that I shall teach them, Their children also shall sit upon thy throne for evermore. For Jehovah hath chosen Zion; He hath desired it for his habitation” (Ps. 132:10-13). “And a throne shall be established in lovingkindness; and one shall sit thereon in truth, in the tent of David, judging, and seeking justice, and swift to do righteousness” (Isa. 16:5). “Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and he shall reign as king and deal wisely, and shall execute justice and righteousness in the land. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called: Jehovah our righteousness” (Jer. 23:5-6). “In those days, and at that time, will I cause a Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he shall execute justice and righteousness in the land... Thus saith Jehovah: If my covenant of day and night stand not, if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth; then will I also cast away the seed of Jacob, and of David my servant, so that I will not take of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: for I will cause their captivity to return, and will have mercy on them” (Jer. 33:15-26). “For the children of Israel shall abide many days without king, and without prince, and without sacrifice, and without pillar, and without ephod or teraphim: afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek Jehovah their God, and David their king, and shall come with fear unto Jehovah and to his goodness in the latter days” (Hos. 3:4-5). “...the nation’s King. This being the only office that is ever assigned to a ‘Son of David’” (Chafer, KHP, 24%).

Regarding the Kingdom, “When thy [David’s] days are fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee, that shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build a house for my name, and I will establish the throne of his kingdom for ever. I will be his father, and he shall be my son: if he commit iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men; but my lovingkindness shall not depart from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I put away before thee. And thy house and thy kingdom shall be made sure for ever before thee: thy throne shall be established for ever. According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David. Then David the king went in, and sat before Jehovah; and he said, Who am I, O Lord Jehovah, and what is my house, that thou hast brought me thus far? And this was yet a small thing in thine eyes, O Lord Jehovah; but thou hast spoken also of thy servant’s house for a great while to come; and this too after the manner of men, O Lord Jehovah” (2 Sam. 7:12-19)! “And it shall come to pass, when thy days are fulfilled that thou must go to be with thy fathers, that I will set up thy seed after thee, who shall be of thy sons; and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build me a house, and I will establish his throne for ever. I will be his father, and he shall be my son: and I will not take my lovingkindness away from him, as I took it from him that was before thee; but I will settle him in my house and in my kingdom for ever; and his throne shall be established for ever. According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David... And what one nation in the earth is like thy people Israel, whom God went to redeem unto himself for a people, to make thee a name by great and terrible things, in driving out nations from before thy people, whom thou redeemest out of Egypt? For thy people Israel didst thou make thine own people for ever; and thou, Jehovah, becamest their God... And now, O Jehovah, thou art God, and hast promised this good thing unto thy servant: and now it hath pleased thee to bless the house of thy servant, that it may continue for ever before thee: for thou, O Jehovah, hast blessed, and it is blessed for ever” (1 Chron. 17:11-27). “In those days, and at that time, will I cause a Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he shall execute justice and righteousness in the land. In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely; and this is the name whereby she shall be called: Jehovah our righteousness. For thus saith Jehovah: David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel... Thus saith Jehovah: If my covenant of day and night stand not, if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth; then will I also cast away the seed of Jacob, and of David my servant, so that I will not take of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: for I will cause their captivity to return, and will have mercy on them” (Jer. 33:15-26). “For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of Jehovah of hosts will perform this” (Isa. 9:6-7). “And behold, you will conceive in your womb, and bear a son, and you shall name Him Jesus. He will be great, and will be called the Son of the Most High; and the Lord God will give Him the throne of His father David; and He will reign over the house of Jacob forever; and His kingdom will have no end” (Luke 1:31-33)

Characteristics of the Davidic Covenant

The Davidic Covenant is an amplification of the Abrahamic Covenant. “the Davidic covenant (which is an amplification of the Abrahamic, showing how it will be fulfilled)” (Peters, TTK, 1:322) “...the Davidic Covenant also, which is an outgrowth or enlargement of the Abrahamic” (ibid., 2:452). “The seed promise contained in the Abrahamic Covenant was made the center or nucleus of the Davidic promise” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 140).

It is to be interpreted literally. “Our appeal, with Barnabas and all other Millenarians, for our foundation is in the covenanted Theocratic Kingdom. To show that we are fundamentally incorrect, to get at the root of our doctrine, let them go to the Davidic Covenant and prove that the grammatical sense of that covenant is not meant; that another meaning is to be engrafted upon it; that they have an express authoritative Scripture for making such an alteration; and that a covenant sworn to be fulfilled can be ignored or explained away. Let our opponents, in this connection, proceed to indicate how we are wrong in cleaving to the grammatical sense of the Bible in doctrine; and, if wrong, let them produce the unvarying rules of a spiritual or Origenistic interpretation to be a guide to us so as not to leave us at the pleasure of the expositor” (Peters, TTK, 3:244). Pentecost contends, “The Davidic Covenant is to interpreted literally. There are several reasons for this: (1) Portions of the covenant that already have been fulfilled have been fulfilled literally. As we’ve seen before, it is entirely logical and consistent that we determine our method of understanding unfulfilled portions by observing the nature of those portions that have been partially fulfilled. Since all the partial fulfillments have been literal and historical, we can safely assume that the unfulfilled portions will be the same. (2) It is apparent that David understood the covenant as literal, and its future fulfillments as literal. Throughout Scripture we can readily see that he never considered it as anything but a literal covenant, to be fulfilled literally (2 Sam. 23:5; 1 Kings 1:30-37). And David was so led by God to interpret it. [‘Verily my house is not so with God; Yet he hath made with me an everlasting covenant, Ordered in all things, and sure: For it is all my salvation, and all my desire, Although he maketh it not to grow.’ (2 Sam. 23:5); ‘verily as I swear unto thee by Jehovah, the God of Israel, saying, Assuredly Solomon thy son shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne in my stead; verily so will I do this day. Then Bath-sheba bowed with her face to the earth, and did obeisance to the king, and said, Let my lord king David live for ever. And king David said, Call to me Zadok the priest, and Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada. And they came before the king. And the king said unto them, Take with you the servants of your lord, and cause Solomon my son to ride upon mine own mule, and bring him down to Gihon: and let Zadok the priest and Nathan the prophet anoint him there king over Israel; and blow ye the trumpet, and say, Long live king Solomon. Then ye shall come up after him, and he shall come and sit upon my throne; for he shall be king in my stead; and I have appointed him to be prince over Israel and over Judah. And Benaiah the son of Jehoiada answered the king, and said, Amen: Jehovah, the God of my lord the king, say so too. As Jehovah hath been with my lord the king, even so be he with Solomon, and make his throne greater than the throne of my lord king David.’ (1 Kings. 1:30–37)] (3) We also find support for the literal interpretation of the covenant in the way it was interpreted by the nation of Israel. We have already mentioned the way the literal aspects of the covenant were emphasized in all the Old Testament prophetic books. This same literal emphasis continued throughout Jewish history, as we will see in more detail later. (4) There is evidence for the literal interpretation from the New Testament references to the covenant made with David. Consider, for example, that the New Testament contains no fewer than 59 references to David. It also has many references to the present ministry of Jesus the Messiah. Comparing these with one another, a search of the New Testament reveals that there is not one reference connecting the present session of Christ with the Davidic throne. It is almost incredible that in so many references to David and in so frequent reference to the present session of Christ at the Father’s throne, there should be no references connecting the two in any authoritative way. The New Testament is totally lacking in positive teaching that the throne of the Father in heaven is to be identified with the Davidic throne. The inference is plain that Christ is seated on the Father’s throne, but that this is not at all the same as being seated on the throne of David. It can also be shown that in all the preaching concerning the kingdom by John (Matt. 3:2), by Christ (4:7), by the Twelve (10:5-7), and by the seventy (Luke 10:1-12), not once is the kingdom offered to Israel as anything but an earthly literal kingdom. Even after the rejection of that offer by Israel and the announcement of the mystery of the kingdom (Matt. 13), Christ anticipated such a literal, earthly kingdom (25:1-13, 31-46)” (TKC, p. 144). “Throughout the New Testament, as well as in the Old, the Davidic Covenant is everywhere treated as literal in its provisions as well as its fulfillment” (ibid., p. 146). “Premillenarians believe these promises were intended to be interpreted literally as most certainly David understood them and as the Jews living in the time of Christ anticipated” (Walvoord, MK, p. 194).

David's throne and Kingdom are to be restored, not to be created from scratch. “A ruin, a ruin, a ruin, I shall make it. This also will be no more, until He comes whose right it is; and I shall give it to Him” (Ezek. 21:27). “In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof; and I will raise up its ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old; that they may possess the remnant of Edom, and all the nations that are called by my name, saith Jehovah that doeth this. Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt. And I will bring back the captivity of my people Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them. And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be plucked up out of their land which I have given them, saith Jehovah thy God” (Amos 9:11-15). “And the angel said to her, ‘Do not be afraid, Mary; for you have found favor with God. And behold, you will conceive in your womb, and bear a son, and you shall name Him Jesus. He will be great, and will be called the Son of the Most High; and the Lord God will give Him the throne of His father David; and He will reign over the house of Jacob forever; and His kingdom will have no end’” (Luke 1:30-33). “Simeon has related how God first concerned Himself about taking from among the Gentiles a people for His name. And with this the words of the Prophets agree, just as it is written, ‘After these things I will return, And I will rebuild the tabernacle of David which has fallen, And I will rebuild its ruins, And I will restore it, In order that the rest of mankind may seek the Lord, And all the Gentiles who are called by My name”” (Acts 15:14-17) “It is ‘the fallen down’ throne and Kingdom (which shows that it is no type) that is to be restored” (Peters, TTK, 1:345) “The identical throne and Kingdom, now overturned, is the one that is promised to the Messiah to be re-established” (ibid., p. 347). “The Theocratic crown cast down, the Theocratic throne overturned, the Theocratic Kingdom overthrown, is the crown, throne, and Kingdom that the Christ is to restore” (ibid.). “The future kingdom is to be a genuine revival and continuation of the ‘throne of David’” (McClain, GK, p. 42). (See also our discussion of the eventual restoration of the theocracy in our previous chapter The Decline and Fall of the Theocratic Kingdom.)

The Davidic Covenant is to be fulfilled:

It has not yet been fulfilled. “The claim of so-called ‘progressive dispensationalists’ that the Davidic covenant has already begun to be fulfilled is without justification” (Geisler, ST, 4:494).

It is to be fulfilled by Christ. “And the angel said to her, ‘Do not be afraid, Mary; for you have found favor with God. And behold, you will conceive in your womb, and bear a son, and you shall name Him Jesus. He will be great, and will be called the Son of the Most High; and the Lord God will give Him the throne of His father David; and He will reign over the house of Jacob forever; and His kingdom will have no end” (Luke 1:30-33). “Remember Jesus Christ, risen from the dead, descendant of David, according to my gospel, for which I suffer hardship even to imprisonment as a criminal; but the word of God is not imprisoned. For this reason I endure all things for the sake of those who are chosen, that they also may obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus and with it eternal glory. It is a trustworthy statement: For if we died with Him, we shall also live with Him; If we endure, we shall also reign with Him; If we deny Him, He also will deny us” (2 Tim. 2:8-12) “And to the angel of the church in Philadelphia write: He [Jesus] who is holy, who is true, who has the key of David, who opens and no one will shut, and who shuts and no one opens, says this” (Rev. 3:7) “and one of the elders said to me, ‘Stop weeping; behold, the Lion that is from the tribe of Judah, the Root of David, has overcome so as to open the book and its seven seals” (Rev. 5:5). “I, Jesus, have sent My angel to testify to you these things for the churches. I am the root and the offspring of David, the bright morning star” (Rev. 22:16). “The Theocratic-Davidic rule was of heavenly origin, for God chose David, adopted his throne and Kingdom, calling it ‘His throne,’ and gives it as an inheritance to the Seed selected by Himself, to which Seed He unites Himself in the strictest Theocratic relationship” (Peters, TTK, 1:346). “David’s Kingdom is no type of Christ’s but a reality which David’s Son at the appointed time is to inherit, i.e. the same Theocratic throne and Kingdom over the same elect people” (ibid., p. 524). “...Messiah (one who had the right to occupy the Davidic throne)... Genealogical records were preserved in the temple, and without doubt the religious leaders had examined those records to see if they could disprove Jesus’ claim to be the Davidic king. No such objection, however, was ever raised” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 154). It is to be fulfilled in His humanity. “Peters in The Theocratic Kingdom, Proposition 52... The throne and kingdom as a promise and inheritance belong to the humanity of Christ as the seed of David rather than belong to His deity” (Walvoord, MK, p. 199). This writer would add that it’s only in His humanity that Jesus has any right to inherit David's throne. If He has given up His humanity, as Jehovah's Witnesses claim, then He no longer has the qualification. Michael the archangel has no such right. No spirit creature has any right to David's throne.

It was given to and is to be fulfilled literally by Israel in the Millennial Kingdom. This is such a foundational premise of our view of the Kingdom that we'll give it a fairly extensive treatment here. "And what one nation in the earth is like thy people, even like Israel, whom God went to redeem unto himself for a people, and to make him a name, and to do great things for you, and terrible things for thy land, before thy people, whom thou redeemest to thee out of Egypt, from the nations and their gods? And thou didst establish to thyself thy people Israel to be a people unto thee for ever; and thou, Jehovah, becamest their God" (2 Sam. 7:23-24). "And so when they had come together, they were asking Him, saying, 'Lord, is it at this time You are restoring the kingdom to Israel'" (Acts 1:6)? "The covenant is distinctively associated with the Jewish nation and none other... 2 Sam. 7:23-24... this the same nation that was brought out of Egypt" (Peters, TTK, 1:315) "Consider Ps. 89, and observe these particulars as stated: (1) David acknowledges the bestowal of the covenant by God, and its confirmation by oath, 'I have made a covenant with My chosen, I have sworn unto David My servant, Thy seed will I establish forever, and build up thy throne to all generations' (v. 1-4). (2) He expresses praise that God's wonders and faithfulness will be shown 'in the congregation (gathering) of the saints,' and that He has the authority, power, and mercy to perform His promises (v. 5 to 18). (3) He again refers to the covenant, shows that One shall be specially exalted, and that God says: 'I will make Him My First-born, higher than the kings of the earth. My mercy will I keep for Him forevermore, and My covenant shall stand fast in Him. His (David's) seed also will I make to endure forever, and His throne as the days of heaven' (v. 19-29). (4) Then as this Kingdom is offered to the regular descendants of David, and it is foreseen that they will become unworthy of it, God foretells the same, with the additional assurance to David that, notwithstanding such rebellion and His withdrawal for a time, the covenant will still be fulfilled, in these pregnant words: 'If his (David's) children forsake My law and walk not in My judgments, if they break My statutes and keep not My commandments, then will I visit their transgression with the rod, and their iniquity with stripes. Nevertheless, My lovingkindness will I not utterly take from him, nor suffer My faithfulness to fail. My covenant will I not break nor alter the thing that is gone out of My lips. Once have I sworn by My Holiness, that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before Me. It shall be established forever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven' (v. 30-37). Here it is positively asserted that the relapse of the nation and a resultant infliction of punishment (just as centuries have witnessed) shall not change God's promise, to David respecting that seed of his that shall reign on his throne. (5) Now comes a remarkable transition, which should shame the unbelief of doubting ones, seeing that it is descriptive of the precise condition of things as they exist to-day. David having foretold the conditional overthrow of his kingdom, and yet that God will be faithful in its final restoration, now plainly predicts the downfall itself: 'But Thou hast cast off and abhorred; Thou hast been wroth with Thine anointed' (i.e. the Theocratic kings that followed David). 'Thou hast made void the covenant of Thy servant; Thou hast profaned his crown by casting it to the ground,' etc. 'Thou hast made his glory to cease, and cast his throne down to the ground,' etc. The covenant is unrealized; the Theocratic Kingdom is fallen; the very throne and Kingdom, the subject of such special promise, is now overthrown. Then, however, resting upon the assurances given, he asks: 'How long, Lord? Wilt Thou hide Thyself forever? Shall Thy wrath burn as fire?' 'Lord, where are Thy former lovingkindnesses, which Thou swarest unto David in Thy truth?' David's faith in God that He would remember His covenant and restore his cast-down crown and throne, is briefly but finely expressed: 'Remember, Lord, the reproach of Thy servants.' 'Blessed be the Lord forevermore. Amen and Amen.' Who, that is an humble believer in the Word as written, can, in the face of such predictions, deride the early church faith evolved by them? Who, when observing how carefully every objection is answered lest faith should stumble and fall, can resist the conviction that there is a force in these words, which are yet—when realized—destined to, form one of the grandest displays of God's faithfulness and mercy in the Redemptive scheme" (ibid., p. 319)? "The language of the covenant does not fulfill the conditions of typical language, for the throne and Kingdom of David were already incorporated as the real, undoubted Kingdom of God—a Theocracy" (ibid., p. 345). "It is unreasonable to make it a type, because it makes a throne cast down the type of an eternal one in heaven, and David a type of the Father, which is an unfit application, there being no proper analogy between them. Such a view entirely overlooks the important and essential fact, that this throne and Kingdom was covenanted, not to the Son of God (for it, in virtue of His Theocratic relationship, already belongs to Him as God, and no covenant is necessary), but to the Son of Man. It is sadly defective in making the promises of such a nature, that pious Israelites, John the Baptist, and the disciples, were deceived by them, resting their faith and hope not in a reality, but in misconceived figures of speech, thus placing the Church [Old Testament saints—ed.] before and at the First Advent in an exceeding low state of intelligence” (ibid.). “Change in the officials and government of a Kingdom does not destroy its identity, provided the regular succession (a descendant of David’s), the nationality (restored Jewish nation), and locality (Palestine) are preserved” (ibid., p. 346). “It took a long time before the Seed promised came and before His coming the non-fulfillment of what afterward literally occurred, was no reason to spiritualize the promise away; and so again, it may require a long period before the remainder is fulfilled” (ibid.). “We are willing to accept covenanted promises and predictions as written, without setting ourselves up as a judge to decide whether they agree with our sense of proprieties, or our notion of the fitness of things. The Jews did this at the First Advent, and they made a fearful mistake. Those who, honestly but mistakenly, speak so degradingly of this throne and Kingdom forget that it is a Theocratic throne and Kingdom, and they might just as well write of God lowering His majesty, etc., when He condescended to act in the capacity of earthly Ruler over the Jewish nation” (ibid.). “The ancient faith in covenanted language must not be discarded through Gentile ‘high-mindedness’” (ibid., p. 347). “No subject is more baffling within the range of prophetic themes to those who spiritualize the kingdom than the question why it was prerequisite for Christ to be born of the line of David” (Chafer, ST, 5:246). “Peters goes into the question of literal fulfillment more thoroughly, perhaps, than any other author. He argues for the literal interpretation of the covenant as follows [in The Theocratic Kingdom, 1:315-16]: ‘Before censuring the Jews... for believing that Jesus would literally restore the Davidic throne and Kingdom, we must consider in fairness, that they were justified in so doing by the very language of the covenant. It is incredible that God should in the most important matters, affecting the interests and the happiness of man and nearly touching His own veracity, clothe them in words, which, if not true in their obvious and common sense, would deceive the pious and God-fearing of many ages... (1) The words and sentences in their plain grammatical acceptation, do expressly teach their belief. This is denied by no one, not even by those who then proceed to spiritualize the language. (2) The covenant is distinctively associated with the Jewish nation and none other. (3) It is called a perpetual covenant, i.e. one that shall endure forever. It may, indeed, require time before its fulfillment; it may even for a time be held, so far as the nation is concerned, in the background, but it must be ultimately realized. (4) It was confirmed by oath (Ps. 132:11, and 89:3, 4, 33), thus giving the strongest possible assurance of its ample fulfillment... (5) To leave no doubt whatever, and to render unbelief utterly inexcusable,

God concisely and most forcibly presents His determination (Ps. 89:34): “My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips.” It would have been sheer presumption and blindness in the Jews to have altered (under the plea—modern—of spirituality) the covenant, and to have refused to accept of the obvious sense covered by the words; and there is a heavy responsibility resting upon those, who, even under the most pious intentions, deliberately alter the covenant words and attach to them a foreign meaning” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 104). “He then proceeds to give a list of some twenty-one reasons for believing that the whole concept of the Davidic throne and kingdom is to be understood literally. He writes [in The Theocratic Kingdom, 1:343-44]: ‘If the Davidic throne and Kingdom is to be understood literally, then all other promises necessarily follow; and as the reception of this literal fulfillment forms the main difficulty in the minds of many, a brief statement of reasons why it must be received, is in place. 1. It is solemnly covenanted, confirmed by oath, and hence cannot be altered or broken. 2. The grammatical sense alone is becoming a covenant. 3. The impression made on David, if erroneous, is disparaging to his prophetic office. 4. The conviction of Solomon (2 Chron. 6:14-16) was that it referred to the literal throne and Kingdom. 5. Solomon claims that the covenant was fulfilled in himself, but only in so far that he too as David’s son sat on David’s throne... 6. The language is that ordinarily used to denote the literal throne and Kingdom of David, as illustrated in Jer. 17:25 and 22:4. 7. The prophets adopt the same language, and its constant reiteration under Divine guidance is evidence that the plain grammatical sense is the one intended. 8. The prevailing belief of centuries, a national faith, engendered by the language, under the teaching of inspired men, indicates how the language is to be understood. 9. This throne and Kingdom is one of promise and inheritance and hence refers not to the Divinity but to the Humanity of Jesus. 10. The same is distinctively promised to David’s son “according to the flesh” to be actually realized, and therefore, He must appear the Theocratic King as promised. 11. We have not the slightest hint given that it is to be interpreted in any other way than a literal one; any other is the result of pure inference... 12. Any other view than that of a literal interpretation involves the grossest self contradiction. 13. The denial of a literal reception of the covenant robs the heir of His covenanted inheritance... 14. No grammatical rule can be laid down which will make David’s throne to be the Father’s throne in the third heaven. 15. That if the latter is attempted under the notion of “symbolical” or “typical,” then the credibility and meaning of the covenants are left to the interpretations of men, and David himself becomes “the symbol” or “type” (creature as he is) of the Creator. 16. That if David's throne is the Father's throne in heaven (the usual interpretation), then it must have existed forever. 17. If such covenanted promises are to be received figuratively, it is inconceivable that they should be given in their present form without some direct affirmation, in some place, of their figurative nature, God foreseeing (if not literal) that for centuries they would be preeminently calculated to excite and foster false expectations, e.g. even from David to Christ. 18. God is faithful in His promises, and deceives no one in the language of His covenants. 19. No necessity existed why, if this throne promised to David's Son meant something else, the throne should be so definitely promised in the form given. 20. The identical throne and Kingdom overthrown are the ones restored. 21. But the main, direct reasons for receiving the literal covenanted language [is that]... David's throne and Kingdom [are made] a requisite for the display of that Theocratic ordering which God has already instituted (but now holds in abeyance until the preparations are completed) for the restoration and exaltation of the Jewish nation (which is preserved for this purpose), for the salvation of the human race (which comes under the Theocratic blessing), and for the dominion of a renewed curse-delivered world... Such a throne and Kingdom are necessary to preserve the Divine Unity of Purpose in the already proposed Theocratic line" (ibid., p. 105). "Lord, are You at this time going to restore the kingdom to Israel?' (Acts 1:6)... Nothing that had taken place during the lifetime of Christ on earth, nor had anything He taught, altered their concept of a literal fulfillment of the Davidic Covenant" (Pentecost, TKC, p. 155). "Ryrie [in Basic Theology, pp. 459-460] then turns to the 'New Testament Confirmation of the Covenant.' The issue is this: the Old Testament presents a concept of the kingdom as being a visible earthly kingdom over which a descendant of David will rule over Israel. Most Covenant Theologians even admit that if the Old Testament is taken at face value, that is the kind of kingdom which is clearly portrayed. However, Covenant Theology insists that Jesus changed that concept" (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 347). "This leads to Walvoord's next point, 'Does the Davidic Covenant Require Literal Fulfillment?: The arguments in favor of literal interpretation are so massive in their construction and so difficult to waive that they are more commonly ignored by those who do not want to believe in literal fulfillment than answered by argument'" [quoting Walvoord, The Millennial Kingdom, pp. 196-197] (ibid., p. 350). "Second, 'the Davidic covenant is to be interpreted literally.' This is evidenced by four things. First, the portions of the covenant which have already 'been fulfilled have been fulfilled literally,' and this shows that the unfulfilled portions will be fulfilled in the same way. Second, it is obvious from David's own exposition of the covenant in Psalm 89 that he anticipated a literal fulfillment. Third, throughout Israel's history, both biblical and post-biblical, the Jews have interpreted the terms of the covenant literally. Fourth, the New Testament interprets the covenant literally. The 'preaching concerning the kingdom by John... by Christ... by the twelve... by the seventy... offered to Israel... an earthly literal kingdom.' Not once did they try to explain that the kingdom they were offering was something different from that which was commonly expected by the Jewish population which was 'a literal earthly kingdom.' Even after Israel rejected the offer, there were still prophecies of a future literal earthly kingdom. Furthermore, the 'New Testament never relates the kingdom promised to David to Christ's present session.' Finally, when Gabriel announced the birth of the Messiah to Mary, his 'message centers around the three key words of the original Davidic covenant, the throne, the house, the kingdom, all of which are here promised a fulfillment.' Pentecost concludes that 'throughout the New Testament, as well as the Old, the Davidic covenant is everywhere treated as literal'" [quoting Pentecost, Things to Come, p. 100] (ibid., p. 353).

The Davidic Covenant is unconditional. "The covenant made with David (2 Sam 7:11-16), like the covenant made with Abraham, is unconditional and everlasting in its duration" (Chafer, ST, 4:314). "As in the case of Abraham, the Davidic covenant is both unconditional and irrevocable, for the one is simply a more detailed extension of certain features of the other" (McClain, GK, p. 156). "The one conditional element in this covenant was 'whether the descendants of David would continually occupy the throne or not.' While unfaithfulness on the part of the House of David 'might bring about chastening,' it can 'never abrogate the covenant.'" [quoting Pentecost, Things to Come, p. 100] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 353).

It is irrevocable. "In those days, and at that time, will I cause a Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he shall execute justice and righteousness in the land. In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely; and this is the name whereby she shall be called: Jehovah our righteousness. For thus saith Jehovah: David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel; neither shall the priests the Levites want a man before me to offer burnt-offerings, and to burn meal-offerings, and to do sacrifice continually. And the word of Jehovah came unto Jeremiah, saying, Thus saith Jehovah: If ye can break my covenant of the day, and my covenant of the night, so that there shall not be day and night in their season; then may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, that he shall not have a son to reign upon his throne; and with the Levites the priests, my ministers. As the host of heaven cannot be numbered, neither the sand of the sea measured; so will I multiply the seed of David my servant, and the Levites that minister unto me. And the word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah, saying, Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying, The two families which Jehovah did choose, he hath cast them off? thus do they despise my people, that they should be no more a nation before them. Thus saith Jehovah: If my covenant of day and night stand not, if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth; then will I also cast away the seed of Jacob, and of David my servant, so that I will not take of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: for I will cause their captivity to return, and will have mercy on them” (Jer. 33:15-26). “Because the covenants are eternal, unconditional, and therefore irrevocable, the Davidic kingdom program would not be cancelled. It could, however, be postponed” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 233). “God’s second assurance (cf. vv. 19-22) to Jeremiah came because of external doubt and reproach. The group in question (these people) was not specified—they may have been doubting Israelites or Israel’s heathen neighbors. Whoever they were, ‘these people’ were claiming that God had so rejected the two kingdoms mishpakhot, lit., ‘families or clans’; cf. 31:1) that He would no longer regard them as a nation. They felt that Israel’s and Judah’s sin had invalidated all God’s covenant promises so that He was no longer obligated to fulfill them. God responded to this argument by reaffirming His commitment to His covenant promises. The covenants with Abraham and David were not conditioned on the people’s obedience but on God’s character. They were as sure as His covenant with day and night and as immutable as the fixed laws of heaven and earth. Only if these natural laws could be undone would God reject Jacob’s and David’s descendants. The reference to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob called to mind God’s covenant promise to these patriarchs regarding His selection of Israel (cf. Gen. 15:7-21; 17:1-8; 26:1-6; 28:10-15). God was bound to His promises and He would restore the nation’s fortunes (cf. Jer. 30:18; 32:44; 33:11; Deut. 30:3) and have compassion on her. The greatest argument for the future restoration of Israel as a nation is the character of God. He made a series of covenants with the patriarchs, David, and the Levites; His character demands that He will ultimately fulfill these promises to their nation” (Walvoord, BKK, Jer. 33:23-26). “Like the Abrahamic covenant, this Davidic covenant, which was an extension of it, was irrevocable” (Geisler, ST, 4:467)

It is confirmed in the New Testament. “The book of the genealogy of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham” (Matt. 1:1). “But when he had considered this, behold, an angel of the Lord appeared to him in a dream, saying, ‘Joseph, son of David, do not be afraid to take Mary as your wife; for that which has been conceived in her is of the Holy Spirit” (Matt. 1:20). “And as Jesus passed on from there, two blind men followed Him, crying out, and saying, ‘Have mercy on us, Son of David” (Matt. 9:27)! “And all the multitudes were amazed, and began to say, ‘This man cannot be the Son of David, can he” (Matt. 12:23)? “And behold, a Canaanite woman came out from that region, and began to cry out, saying, ‘Have mercy on me, O Lord, Son of David; my daughter is cruelly demon-possessed” (Matt. 15:22). “And behold, two blind men sitting by the road, hearing that Jesus was passing by, cried out, saying, ‘Lord, have mercy on us, Son of David!’ And the multitude sternly told them to be quiet; but they cried out all the more, saying, ‘Lord, have mercy on us, Son of David” (Matt. 20:30–31)! “And when they had approached Jerusalem and had come to Bethphage, to the Mount of Olives, then Jesus sent two disciples, saying to them, ‘Go into the village opposite you, and immediately you will find a donkey tied there and a colt with her; untie them, and bring them to Me. And if anyone says something to you, you shall say, “The Lord has need of them,” and immediately he will send them.’ Now this took place that what was spoken through the prophet might be fulfilled, saying, ‘SAY TO THE DAUGHTER OF ZION, “BEHOLD YOUR KING IS COMING TO YOU, GENTLE, AND MOUNTED ON A DONKEY, EVEN ON A COLT, THE FOAL OF A BEAST OF BURDEN.” And the disciples went and did just as Jesus had directed them, and brought the donkey and the colt, and laid on them their garments, on which He sat. And most of the multitude spread their garments in the road, and others were cutting branches from the trees, and spreading them in the road. And the multitudes going before Him, and those who followed after were crying out, saying, ‘Hosanna to the Son of David; BLESSED IS HE WHO COMES IN THE NAME OF THE LORD; Hosanna in the highest!’ And when He had entered Jerusalem, all the city was stirred, saying, ‘Who is this?’ And the multitudes were saying, ‘This is the prophet Jesus, from Nazareth in Galilee” (Matt. 21:1–11). “But when the chief priests and the scribes saw the wonderful things that He had done, and the children who were crying out in the temple and saying, ‘Hosanna to the Son of David,’ they became indignant” (Matt. 21:15) “Now while the Pharisees were gathered together, Jesus asked them a question, saying, ‘What do you think about the Christ, whose son is He?’ They said to Him, ‘The son of David’” (Matt. 22:41–42). “And when he heard that it was Jesus the Nazarene, he began to cry out and say, ‘Jesus, Son of David, have mercy on me!’ And many were sternly telling him to be quiet, but he kept crying out all the more, ‘Son of David, have mercy on me’” (Mark 10:47–48)! “And Jesus answering began to say, as He taught in the temple, ‘How is it that the scribes say that the Christ is the son of David’” (Mark 12:35)? “Now in the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God to a city in Galilee, called Nazareth, to a virgin engaged to a man whose name was Joseph, of the descendants of David; and the virgin’s name was Mary. And coming in, he said to her, ‘Hail, favored one! The Lord is with you.’ But she was greatly troubled at this statement, and kept pondering what kind of salutation this might be. And the angel said to her, ‘Do not be afraid, Mary; for you have found favor with God. And behold, you will conceive in your womb, and bear a son, and you shall name Him Jesus. He will be great, and will be called the Son of the Most High; and the Lord God will give Him the throne of His father David; and He will reign over the house of Jacob forever; and His kingdom will have no end’” (Luke 1:26–33). “All four key aspects of the Davidic Covenant are mentioned here. The Son of Mary is to sit upon the eternal throne over an eternal kingdom, for He was born into the eternal dynasty” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 805). “And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Spirit, and prophesied, saying: ‘Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, For He has visited us and accomplished redemption for His people, And has raised up a horn of salvation for us In the house of David His servant — As He spoke by the mouth of His holy prophets from of old — Salvation FROM OUR ENEMIES, And FROM THE HAND OF ALL WHO HATE US; To show mercy toward our fathers, And to remember His holy covenant, The oath which He swore to Abraham our father, To grant us that we, being delivered from the hand of our enemies, Might serve Him without fear, In holiness and righteousness before Him all our days. And you, child, will be called the prophet of the Most High; For you will go on BEFORE THE LORD TO PREPARE HIS WAYS; To give to His people the knowledge of salvation By the forgiveness of their sins, Because of the tender mercy of our God, With which the Sunrise from on high shall visit us, TO SHINE UPON THOSE WHO SIT IN DARKNESS AND THE SHADOW OF DEATH, To guide our feet into the way of peace” (Luke 1:67–79). “the son of Melea, the son of Menna, the son of Mattatha, the son of Nathan, the son of David” (Luke 3:31) “And he called out, saying, ‘Jesus, Son of David, have mercy on me!’

And those who led the way were sternly telling him to be quiet; but he kept crying out all the more, ‘Son of David, have mercy on me’” (Luke 18:38–39)! “The multitude therefore answered Him, ‘We have heard out of the Law that the Christ is to remain forever; and how can You say, The Son of Man must be lifted up? Who is this Son of Man’” (John 12:34)? “And so when they had come together, they were asking Him, saying, ‘Lord, is it at this time You are restoring the kingdom to Israel?’ He said to them, ‘It is not for you to know times or epochs which the Father has fixed by His own authority’” (Acts 1:6-7) “Brethren, I may confidently say to you regarding the patriarch David that he both died and was buried, and his tomb is with us to this day. And so, because he was a prophet, and knew that God had sworn to him with an oath to seat one of his descendants upon his throne, he looked ahead and spoke of the resurrection of the Christ, that He was neither abandoned to Hades, nor did His flesh suffer decay. This Jesus God raised up again, to which we are all witnesses. Therefore having been exalted to the right hand of God, and having received from the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, He has poured forth this which you both see and hear. For it was not David who ascended into heaven, but he himself says: “The Lord said to my Lord, ‘Sit at My right hand, Until I make Thine enemies a footstool for Thy feet.”” Therefore let all the house of Israel know for certain that God has made Him both Lord and Christ [but not King—yet—ed.] — this Jesus whom you crucified” (Acts 2:29-36). “Repent therefore and return, that your sins may be wiped away, in order that times of refreshing may come from the presence of the Lord; and that He may send Jesus, the Christ appointed for you, whom heaven must receive until the period of restoration of all things about which God spoke by the mouth of His holy prophets from ancient time” (Acts 3:19-21). “Simeon has related how God first concerned Himself about taking from among the Gentiles a people for His name. And with this the words of the Prophets agree, just as it is written, “After these things I will return, And I will rebuild the tabernacle of David which has fallen, And I will rebuild its ruins, And I will restore it, In order that the rest of mankind may seek the Lord, And all the Gentiles who are called by My name”” (Acts 15:14-17) “And to the angel of the church in Philadelphia write: He [Jesus] who is holy, who is true, who has the key of David, who opens and no one will shut, and who shuts and no one opens, says this” (Rev. 3:7) “and one of the elders said to me, ‘Stop weeping; behold, the Lion that is from the tribe of Judah, the Root of David, has overcome so as to open the book and its seven seals” (Rev. 5:5). “I, Jesus, have sent My angel to testify to you these things for the churches. I am the root and the offspring of David, the bright morning star” (Rev. 22:16).

It is still in effect. “The Davidic Covenant, being an unconditional covenant, is still very much in effect” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 586).

And, it is eternal. “And thy [David’s] house and thy kingdom shall be made sure for ever before thee: thy throne shall be established for ever” (2 Sam. 7:16). “...the Davidic House or Dynasty, the Davidic Throne and Davidic Kingdom will be eternal ([2 Sam. 7] v. 16)” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 433). “but I will settle him [David] in my house and in my kingdom for ever; and his throne shall be established for ever” (1 Chron. 17:14). “I have found David my servant; With my holy oil have I anointed him: With whom my hand shall be established; Mine arm also shall strengthen him. The enemy shall not exact from him, Nor the son of wickedness afflict him. And I will beat down his adversaries before him, And smite them that hate him. But my faithfulness and my lovingkindness shall be with him; And in my name shall his horn be exalted. I will set his hand also on the sea, And his right hand on the rivers. He shall cry unto me, Thou art my Father, My God, and the rock of my salvation. I also will make him my first-born, The highest of the kings of the earth. My lovingkindness will I keep for him for evermore; And my covenant shall stand fast with him. His seed also will I make to endure for ever, And his throne as the days of heaven. If his children forsake my law, And walk not in mine ordinances; If they break my statutes, And keep not my commandments; Then will I visit their transgression with the rod, And their iniquity with stripes. But my lovingkindness will I not utterly take from him, Nor suffer my faithfulness to fail. My covenant will I not break, Nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by my holiness: I will not lie unto David: His seed shall endure for ever, And his throne as the sun before me. It shall be established for ever as the moon, And as the faithful witness in the sky. Selah” (Ps. 89:20-37) “In those days, and at that time, will I cause a Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he shall execute justice and righteousness in the land. In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely; and this is the name whereby she shall be called: Jehovah our righteousness. For thus saith Jehovah: David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel; neither shall the priests the Levites want a man before me to offer burnt-offerings, and to burn meal-offerings, and to do sacrifice continually. And the word of Jehovah came unto Jeremiah, saying,

Thus saith Jehovah: If ye can break my covenant of the day, and my covenant of the night, so that there shall not be day and night in their season; then may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, that he shall not have a son to reign upon his throne; and with the Levites the priests, my ministers. As the host of heaven cannot be numbered, neither the sand of the sea measured; so will I multiply the seed of David my servant, and the Levites that minister unto me. And the word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah, saying, Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying, The two families which Jehovah did choose, he hath cast them off? thus do they despise my people, that they should be no more a nation before them. Thus saith Jehovah: If my covenant of day and night stand not, if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth; then will I also cast away the seed of Jacob, and of David my servant, so that I will not take of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: for I will cause their captivity to return, and will have mercy on them” (Jer. 33:15-26). “Incline your ear and come to Me. Listen, that you may live; And I will make an everlasting covenant with you, According to the faithful mercies shown to David” (Isa. 55:3). “The prophet Isaiah reiterates (55:3), pronouncing it ‘an everlasting covenant, even the sure mercies of David’” (Peters, TTK, 1:316). “And the angel said to her, ‘Do not be afraid, Mary; for you have found favor with God. And behold, you will conceive in your womb, and bear a son, and you shall name Him Jesus. He will be great, and will be called the Son of the Most High; and the Lord God will give Him the throne of His father David; and He will reign over the house of Jacob forever; and His kingdom will have no end’” (Luke 1:30-33). “This covenant, as herein stated, secures an established kingly order which will continue for ever. The element of perpetuity in this kingly rule was not conditioned in Jehovah’s oath by sin in the Davidic house. Chastisement was provided in case of disobedience, — chastisement which fell upon the nation in the captivities and the dispersion, — but the eternal purpose of the covenant is not abrogated: “Thy throne shall be established for ever”” (Chafer, KHP, 10%). “The covenant made with David (2 Sam 7:11-16), like the covenant made with Abraham, is unconditional and everlasting in its duration” (Chafer, ST, 4:314). “I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure for ever, and his throne as the sun before me’ (Ps. 89:20-37). Let the student read Jeremiah 33:15-26 and observe that this irrevocable covenant with David is linked historically to the promises made to the people of ‘Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob’ (vs. 26)” (McClain, GK, p. 156). “In keeping with the kingdom concept, McClain [in The Greatness of the Kingdom, p.

156] views the Davidic Covenant as a ‘reaffirmation of the regal terms of the original Abrahamic covenant,’ with the addition that ‘these covenanted rights will now attach permanently to the historic house and succession of David.’ Although these regal rights might be ‘historically interrupted for a season,’ they will at some point ‘in a future kingdom be restored to the nation in perpetuity with no further possibility of interruption.’ The character of this covenant is both ‘unconditional and irrevocable,’ since it is ‘simply a more detailed extension of certain features’ of the Abrahamic Covenant. Because of its unconditional nature, disobedience on the part of the descendants of David brought discipline, but the covenant itself stood sure” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 354). “The Davidic Covenant promised four eternal things: an eternal Dynasty, an eternal Kingdom, an eternal Throne, and an eternal Person” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 434). “God put His name on the line. The Davidic kingdom—a political, religious, moral, visible, earthly kingdom—would be restored and remain forever” (Geisler, ST, 4:467).

Covenant #8: The New Covenant

The fourth of Israel’s four unconditional covenants, and the last of the Bible’s eight covenants is the New Covenant.

Statement of the New Covenant

The New Covenant is stated in Jeremiah and Ezekiel. “Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was a husband unto them, saith Jehovah. But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith Jehovah: I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write it; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people: and they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know Jehovah; for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith Jehovah: for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin will I remember no more. Thus saith Jehovah, who giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, who stirreth up the sea, so that the waves thereof roar; Jehovah of hosts is his name: If these ordinances depart from before me, saith Jehovah, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever. Thus saith Jehovah: If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, then will I also cast off all the seed of Israel for all that they have done, saith Jehovah” (Jer. 31:31-37). “Behold, I will gather them out of all the countries, whither I have driven them in mine anger, and in my wrath, and in great indignation; and I will bring them again unto this place, and I will cause them to dwell safely: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God: and I will give them one heart and one way, that they may fear me for ever, for the good of them, and of their children after them: and I will make an everlasting covenant with them, that I will not turn away from following them, to do them good; and I will put my fear in their hearts, that they may not depart from me. Yea, I will rejoice over them to do them good, and I will plant them in this land assuredly with my whole heart and with my whole soul. For thus saith Jehovah: Like as I have brought all this great evil upon this people, so will I bring upon them all the good that I have promised them” (Jer. 32:37-42). “Behold, I will bring it health and cure, and I will cure them; and I will reveal unto them abundance of peace and truth. And I will cause the captivity of Judah and the captivity of Israel to return, and will build them, as at the first. And I will cleanse them from all their iniquity, whereby they have sinned against me; and I will pardon all their iniquities, whereby they have sinned against me, and whereby they have transgressed against me. And this city shall be to me for a name of joy, for a praise and for a glory, before all the nations of the earth, which shall hear all the good that I do unto them, and shall fear and tremble for all the good and for all the peace that I procure unto it” (Jer. 33:6-9). “Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: I will gather you from the peoples, and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel. And they shall come thither, and they shall take away all the detestable things thereof and all the abominations thereof from thence. And I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them a heart of flesh; that they may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances, and do them: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God. But as for them whose heart walketh after the heart of their detestable things and their abominations, I will bring their way upon their own heads, saith the Lord Jehovah” (Ezek. 11:17-21). “Nevertheless I will remember my covenant with thee in the days of thy youth, and I will establish unto thee an everlasting covenant. Then shalt thou remember thy ways, and be ashamed, when thou shalt receive thy sisters, thine elder sisters and thy younger; and I will give them unto thee for daughters, but not by thy covenant. And I will establish my covenant with thee; and thou shalt know that I am Jehovah” (Ezek. 16:60-62) “Multitudes, however, contend that God does not remember His covenant” (Peters, TTK, 1:422) “And I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you a heart of flesh. And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep mine ordinances, and do them” (Ezek. 36:25-27). “Moreover I will make a covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them; and I will place them, and multiply them, and will set my sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore. My tabernacle also shall be with them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. And the nations shall know that I am Jehovah that sanctifieth Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for evermore” (Ezek. 37:26-28).

The New Covenant will take Israel's sins away. “Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was a husband unto them, saith Jehovah. But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith Jehovah: I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write it; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people: and they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know Jehovah; for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith Jehovah: for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin will I remember no more” (Jer. 31:31-34). “And I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you a heart of flesh. And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep mine ordinances, and do them” (Ezek. 36:25-27). “and thus all Israel will be saved; just as it is written, ‘THE DELIVERER WILL COME FROM ZION, HE WILL REMOVE UNGodliness from JACOB. AND THIS IS MY COVENANT WITH THEM, WHEN I TAKE AWAY THEIR SINS” (Rom. 11:26–27). “The moral problem posed by the failure of the Mosaic covenant will under the New Covenant be met by God’s own sovereign grace and power... God says, ‘I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts’ (Jer. 31:33). By these means the benefits of the Mosaic covenant will be attained, and at the same time its moral requirements will be secured; not as a legal condition of blessing but as its divinely caused result... The New Covenant, therefore, is in the gracious spirit of the earlier Abrahamic covenant, rather than in the legalistic spirit of the Mosaic covenant which it supplants” (McClain, GK, p. 158). “The New Covenant will do the very thing which the Mosaic Covenant was unable to do. The latter was only able to cover the sins of Israel, but the New Covenant will take them away” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 587). “The major feature of this covenant was Israel’s national salvation down to every individual Jew” (ibid., p. 633).

It will also provide for the building of the Millennial Temple. “Moreover I will make a covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them; and I will place them, and multiply them, and will set my sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore. My tabernacle also shall be with them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. And the nations shall know that I am Jehovah that sanctifieth Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for evermore” (Ezek. 37:26-28). “The Davidic Covenant provided for the building of the first Temple by Solomon; the New Covenant will provide for the building of the Messianic or Millennial Temple. This temple will be a continual reminder to Israel of all that God has done” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 587).

Characteristics of the New Covenant

The New Covenant was made with Israel. “Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was a husband unto them, saith Jehovah. But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith Jehovah: I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write it; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people: and they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know Jehovah; for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith Jehovah:

for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin will I remember no more. Thus saith Jehovah, who giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, who stirreth up the sea, so that the waves thereof roar; Jehovah of hosts is his name: If these ordinances depart from before me, saith Jehovah, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever. Thus saith Jehovah: If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, then will I also cast off all the seed of Israel for all that they have done, saith Jehovah” (Jer. 31:31-37). “Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: I will gather you from the peoples, and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel. And they shall come thither, and they shall take away all the detestable things thereof and all the abominations thereof from thence. And I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them a heart of flesh; that they may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances, and do them: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God. But as for them whose heart walketh after the heart of their detestable things and their abominations, I will bring their way upon their own heads, saith the Lord Jehovah” (Ezek. 11:17-21). “Nevertheless I will remember my covenant with thee in the days of thy youth, and I will establish unto thee an everlasting covenant. Then shalt thou remember thy ways, and be ashamed, when thou shalt receive thy sisters, thine elder sisters and thy younger; and I will give them unto thee for daughters, but not by thy covenant. And I will establish my covenant with thee; and thou shalt know that I am Jehovah” (Ezek. 16:60-62) “Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: I do not this for your sake, O house of Israel, but for my holy name, which ye have profaned among the nations, whither ye went. And I will sanctify my great name, which hath been profaned among the nations, which ye have profaned in the midst of them; and the nations shall know that I am Jehovah, saith the Lord Jehovah, when I shall be sanctified in you before their eyes. For I will take you from among the nations, and gather you out of all the countries, and will bring you into your own land. And I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you a heart of flesh. And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep mine ordinances, and do them” (Ezek. 36:22–27). “Moreover I will make a covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them; and I will place them, and multiply them, and will set my sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore. My tabernacle also shall be with them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. And the nations shall know that I am Jehovah that sanctifieth Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for evermore” (Ezek. 37:26–28). “That the Old Testament teaches that the new covenant is for Israel is also seen by the fact that in its establishment the perpetuity of the nation Israel and her restoration to the land is vitally linked with it (Jer. 31:35–40)...” [quoting Charles C. Ryrie, The Basis of the Premillennial Faith, pp. 108–10] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 120) “It is undeniable that the Mosaic Covenant was made with Israel—and since this covenant supplants the Mosaic Covenant, it must of necessity be made with the same people with whom the original Mosaic Covenant had been made” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 171). “According to Jeremiah 31, the New Covenant is solidly embedded in a historical context... people... children shall be gathered again ‘from the uttermost parts of the earth’... land... ‘land of Judah’... ‘mountains of Samaria’... city... Jerusalem... other cities... worshipers of Jehovah... ‘wheat’... ‘wine’... ‘oil’... ‘young of the flock’” (McClain, GK, p. 159) “Later [in Premillennial Faith, pp. 106–114], Ryrie discusses the ‘Old Testament Teaching on the New Covenant with Israel.’ Ryrie discusses what the Old Testament said about the New Covenant in three categories. First, ‘the people of the new covenant.’ His point is that the New Covenant is made with the Jewish people. This is evidenced in three ways. First, the wording of the covenant clearly states that it is made with the Houses of Judah and Israel. Second, the New Covenant is said to be made with the same people as the Mosaic Covenant. Since the Mosaic Covenant and the Law of Moses was made with the Jewish people, then obviously the New Covenant must be made with the Jewish people as well. Third, the New Covenant is frequently connected with the restoration of Israel to her land as a nation. The church ‘is never called a nation’ and has no land to be gathered into. Ryrie concludes ‘that for these three incontrovertible reasons, the very words of the text, the name itself, and the linking with the perpetuity of the nation, the new covenant according to the teaching of the Old Testament is for the people of Israel’” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 357). “Ryrie’s [in Premillennial Faith, p. 114] own summary is: ‘By way of summary, it may be said that as far as the Old Testament teaching on the new covenant is concerned, the covenant was made with the Jewish people. Its period of fulfillment is yet future beginning when the Deliverer shall come and continuing throughout all eternity. Its provisions for the nation Israel are glorious, and they all rest and depend on the very Word of God” (ibid., p. 358). “One can agree with all that Ryrie has written and still believe in only one New Covenant, already ratified by the blood of the Messiah with present spiritual blessings now being enjoyed by the Church while Israel as a nation will enjoy them in the future along with the physical promises intended only for Israel” (ibid., p. 360). “God made the new covenant with the house of Judah and the house of Israel; the Church does not have its own covenant with God” (Horner, FI, p. 368).

It is an amplification of the Abrahamic and Davidic Covenants; not of the Mosaic Covenant. “Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: not according to the [Mosaic] covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was a husband unto them, saith Jehovah” (Jer. 31:31-32). “The prophet calls this ‘a new’ covenant, not because it is entirely new, but, as is said by the apostle, because the other is superseded by it, i.e. it is renewed, as e.g. in the coming of the seed, etc.” (Peters, TTK, 1:322). “Persons are apt to be misled by the use of the word ‘new,’ thinking that it necessarily means something entirely new, different from what preceded. They forget that in Bible usage it frequently means renewed, restored again, newly confirmed, etc., as in new heart, new moon, new creature, new heavens and new earth, new commandment, drink new (Matt. 26:29), etc. It is important then to discriminate whenever the word is employed, especially in so weighty a matter as this, seeing the high interests that are involved. As the phrase ‘new covenant’ only appears once in the Old Test. and but a few times in the New, the general analogy of Scripture must be allowed to determine the sense in which it is used” (ibid., p. 323). “Now down to Origen not a single Father has the least idea of an entire new covenant instituted by Jesus, but every one, either directly or indirectly as far as we can gather, confirms our view of it” (ibid., p. 324). “Those who advocate that an entire new covenant was given and confirmed by the death of Jesus differ very much as to the nature and meaning of this alleged covenant. A variety of explanations are tendered, but all these, so far as noticed, with but few exceptions, attempt no Scriptural proof” (ibid., p. 326). “...Origen, for we are indebted to him (Home’s Introd., vol. I, p. 38) for first applying the phrase ‘New Testament’ to the writings of the Apostles. (This is a title, which, while merely of human origin and incorrect, if understood as pertaining to the New Covenant, may be retained.) Some, therefore, are misled in making the Scriptures as contained in the Gospels, Acts, Epistles, and Apocalypse, the New Covenant. This embraces too much, and defeats itself. Lange, however, only applies this in a general way, for on the same page he particularizes: ‘the Lord designates the Eucharist the New Covenant in His blood, in the strict sense of the term.’ But Lange is again mistaken, for Christ did not call the Eucharist or Supper the covenant, because ‘the cup’ is significant of the Eucharist, and hence ‘the cup of the New Testament’ shows that the Supper or that expressed by it is separate from the covenant. It simply denotes what we have already shown, that by the death represented in this cup the covenant itself is renewed or confirmed” (ibid., p. 327). “New Covenant... if it is so exclusively spiritual, how comes it that Jesus came literally in the flesh as the promised Seed” (ibid.)? “It will not answer to exalt the provision made by Christ for the fulfillment of covenant promise, however indispensable and precious, into the position of the covenant itself. Where is the express covenant, consecrated by the death of Jesus, found, if not in the Abrahamic? If any other exists, as Schmid and others state, why is it not formally expressed somewhere in the Scriptures” (ibid.). “Hence, we cannot receive the current phraseology on the subject, as e.g. Pressense (The Early Days of Christianity, p. 240), who says of Paul’s teaching: ‘The new covenant is to him essentially a new fact, the proclamation of pardon, the sovereign manifestation of grace—in one word, the Gospel’—for this is simply to mistake the means intended to secure covenant blessings for the covenant itself. Much that is said of a ‘covenant of grace’ (as distinguished from a ‘covenant of works’), while correct in principle and showing the contrast between the dispensations, may be retained, but just so soon as it is made to occupy the position of ‘the everlasting covenant’ which contains the promises and under which we inherit by grace extended, then we reject it as unscriptural and misleading” (ibid., p. 328). “Advocating a New Covenant and ignoring the renewed Abrahamic, leads to an entire change of Biblical terms. Thus e.g. Israel and Judah are made to mean simply believers in Christ without the slightest reference to their adoption as the children of Abraham by which they become entitled to the name. The true Israel are a covenanted people, which they obtain by their relationship to Abraham as the covenanted head. Gentiles only can become such by adoption” (ibid., p. 330). “2 Cor. 3:6... ‘Who has made us able ministers of the New Testament; not of the letter, but of the spirit: for the letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life.’... not of the letter as Abraham received it and trusted in it, but of the Spirit, as it has been unfolded and ratified by the appearance of the Seed, His death and resurrection, etc.; for the mere letter, without this attestation and provision, killeth, i.e. it cannot give life because although Abraham and all the ancient worthies believed in it yet they all died without receiving the promise... the apostle means that we now, in a covenant renewed by the blood of Jesus and by His resurrection from among the dead, have immensely more than the mere letter originally given and which in itself cannot save from death; for now we have the Spirit, which in the same chapter is said to be Christ, who 'giveth life,' i.e. fully ensuring to all who receive the promises that they by being also 'quicken'd' shall inherit the covenanted promises. Christ is the root of the whole matter; without Him and His solemn ratifying acts, the Abrahamic covenant would forever remain a dead letter. It is in Him, through Him, by Him, and for Him, that it is given, and proceeds to its final accomplishment" (ibid., p. 332). "The New Covenant... the future covenant is 'new' only in relation to the Mosaic covenant... 'according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt' (31:31-32). The New Covenant is never thus set over against the Abrahamic and Davidic covenants, as if they needed to be replaced by something better" (McClain, GK, p. 157). "But here it is deeply significant that when the sin has been confessed and pardon has been granted, it is not on the basis of any surviving rights in the broken covenant of Sinai but simply because Jehovah remembers His earlier 'covenant with Jacob,... with Isaac, and... with Abraham' (Lev. 26:42). It is on this basis, He reminds the nation, that in spite of all they have done, 'neither will I abhor them, to destroy them utterly, and to break my covenant with them: for I am the LORD their God' (Lev. 26:44). Exactly the same idea is expressed by Ezekiel in his reference to the New Covenant: Although the nation had broken the Mosaic covenant, 'Nevertheless,' God says, 'I will remember my covenant with thee in the days of thy youth, and I will establish unto thee an everlasting covenant' (Ezek. 16:59-60). The expression 'days of thy youth' fixes definitely the reference to the earlier covenant" (ibid., p. 158). "Within the original Abrahamic Covenant were promises concerning land, seed, and blessings. The Palestinian Covenant developed the land promises; the Davidic covenant furthers the seed promises. Now it is the New Covenant that develops and guarantees the blessing promises of the original Abrahamic Covenant" (Pentecost, TKC, p. 169). "The new covenant is new in relation to the time-bound Mosaic covenant, which it replaced, but it gives no implication of annulling the unconditional, timeless Abrahamic and Davidic covenants" (Geisler, ST, 4:469).

It is unconditional. "Pentecost [in Things to Come, pp. 118-119] then discusses the 'Character of the New Covenant.' As with the preceding three covenants, the New Covenant is also viewed as 'a literal and unconditional covenant,' and Pentecost presents three reasons for this view. First, it is called an 'eternal' covenant, and for that to be true it must be unconditional. Second, the only condition spelled out is the 'I will' of God, so the fulfillment is entirely dependent upon God and not man. Third, this covenant elaborates on the 'blessing' aspect of the Abrahamic Covenant, and that one is unconditional; therefore, 'this covenant must be also.' Fourth, this covenant is primarily concerned with the issue of salvation, which 'is solely the work of God.' A covenant that 'guarantees salvation to the nation Israel must be apart from all human agency and therefore unconditional'" (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 365). "Even when the Mosaic Covenant predicted Israel's future salvation and restoration, this basis was not 'any surviving rights in the broken covenant of Sinai,' but even the Law of Moses states the basis to be the Abrahamic Covenant in Leviticus 26:40-44 ['And they shall confess their iniquity, and the iniquity of their fathers, in their trespass which they trespassed against me, and also that, because they walked contrary unto me, I also walked contrary unto them, and brought them into the land of their enemies: if then their uncircumcised heart be humbled, and they then accept of the punishment of their iniquity; then will I remember my covenant with Jacob; and also my covenant with Isaac, and also my covenant with Abraham will I remember; and I will remember the land. The land also shall be left by them, and shall enjoy its sabbaths, while it lieth desolate without them: and they shall accept of the punishment of their iniquity; because, even because they rejected mine ordinances, and their soul abhorred my statutes. And yet for all that, when they are in the land of their enemies, I will not reject them, neither will I abhor them, to destroy them utterly, and to break my covenant with them; for I am Jehovah their God']. Fifth, the New Covenant, is as sure as 'the very order and stability of the created universe' according to Jeremiah 31:35-37. This shows that it is unconditional and 'rests on what God is and does'" [quoting McClain, The Greatness of the Kingdom, pp. 157-159] (ibid., p. 369).

It is confirmed in the New Testament. "But now He has obtained a more excellent ministry, by as much as He is also the mediator of a better covenant, which has been enacted on better promises. For if that first covenant had been faultless, there would have been no occasion sought for a second. For finding fault with them, He says, 'Behold, days are coming, says the Lord, When I will effect a new covenant With the house of Israel and with the house of Judah; Not like the covenant which I made with their fathers On the day when I took them by the hand To lead them out of the land of Egypt; For they did not continue in My covenant, And I did not care for them, says the Lord. For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel After those days, says the Lord: I will put My laws into their minds, And I will write them upon their hearts. And I will be their God, And they shall be My people. And they shall not teach everyone his fellow citizen, And everyone his brother, saying, “Know the Lord,” For all shall know Me, From the least to the greatest of them. For I will be merciful to their iniquities, And I will remember their sins no more.’ When He said, ‘A new covenant,’ He has made the first obsolete. But whatever is becoming obsolete and growing old is ready to disappear” (Heb. 8:6-13). “And for this reason He is the mediator of a new covenant, in order that since a death has taken place for the redemption of the transgressions that were committed under the first covenant, those who have been called may receive the promise of the eternal inheritance” (Heb. 9:15).

It is still in effect. “The New Covenant, being an unconditional covenant, is still very much in effect” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 587).

It is now having partial fulfillment in the church. “And for this reason He is the mediator of a new covenant, in order that since a death has taken place for the redemption of the transgressions that were committed under the first covenant, those who have been called may receive the promise of the eternal inheritance” (Heb. 9:15). “The blood of the covenant, i.e. the blood or sacrifice pertaining to or sealing the covenant, brings us, if received by faith, into covenant relationship” (Peters, TTK, 1:333). “Scofield... according to this view, there is one new covenant with a two-fold application; one to Israel in the future and one to the church now... This view places the church under the new covenant, and views the relationship as a partial fulfillment of the covenant... Any application of it to the church, as the Scofield position holds, does not nullify the primary application to Israel” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 123). “The church is never promised inheritance in a land, material blessings on the earth, and rest from oppression, which were parts of the promise to Israel” (ibid., p. 127). “Since the church receives blessings of the Abrahamic covenant (Gal. 3:14; 4:22-31) by faith without being under or fulfilling that covenant, so the church may receive blessings from the new covenant without being under or fulfilling that new covenant” (ibid.). “The church cannot now be fulfilling this covenant, though it is obviously partaking of some of its blessings” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 174). “While it is true that by the blood of the New Covenant believers in the church today receive benefits from that blood (such as the forgiveness of sins, the impartation of the Holy Spirit as God’s gift), it certainly does not mean that the church is fulfilling the New Covenant” (ibid.). “Let’s not forget that the original Abrahamic Covenant promised, 'All peoples on earth will be blessed through you' (Gen. 12:3)... 'This is My blood of the covenant, which is poured out for many for the forgiveness of sins' (Matt. 26:28). We can logically and consistently conclude, then, that this [New] covenant is Israel's covenant; but on the basis of the blood of the covenant, those outside that nation likewise may experience the removal of guilt and the forgiveness of sins" (ibid., p. 175). "As for Hebrews 9:15, the point of this passage is only that the Messiah is the Mediator of the New Covenant and this would be true 'both for a covenant with the church and a covenant with Israel'" [quoting Walvoord, Premillennial Faith, pp. 215-218] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 358). "The New Covenant was instituted by the death of Christ and the shedding of Messiah's blood; however, 'its benefits will not be received by Israel until the second advent' [quoting Pentecost, Things to Come, pp. 119-127]. Pentecost's approach is the best in explaining how the Church relates to the New Covenant" (ibid., p. 368). "While the Church is promised the spiritual blessings such as 'salvation, the forgiveness of sin, the ministry of the Holy Spirit,' the Church is never promised the physical blessings such as 'inheritance in a land, material blessings on the earth, and rest from oppression, which were parts of the promise to Israel'" [quoting Pentecost, Things to Come, pp. 119-127] (ibid.). "In relationship to the Church, the New Covenant is the basis for the Dispensation of Grace. In relationship to Israel, it will be the basis for the Dispensation of the Kingdom" (ibid., p. 587). "The fact that today every believer is indwelt by the Holy Spirit is also due to the present outworking of the New Covenant" (ibid., p. 633). "The Law of Moses taught: do, in order to be blessed. The Law of Christ teaches: you are blessed; therefore, do. The present obligation to obey the Law of Christ is due to the present outworking of the New Covenant" (ibid., p. 634). "Gentiles today are partakers of Jewish spiritual blessings; they are not taker-overs" (ibid., p. 635). "The relationship of the Church to the New Covenant is the same as the Church's relationship to the Abrahamic, the Palestinian, and the Davidic covenants. The physical promises of the Abrahamic Covenant, as amplified by the Palestinian and Davidic covenants, were promised exclusively to Israel. However, the blessing aspect amplified by the New Covenant was to include the Gentiles. The Church is enjoying the spiritual blessings of these covenants, not the material and physical benefits" (ibid.). "That the church is also the beneficiary of the new covenant does not mean there will not also be a literal fulfillment of it in national Israel. Applying the benefits to one group does not mean they are thereby cancelled for the other; it means that the same thing literally promised for Israel (to be fulfilled in the future) is also presently true of

New Testament believers” (Geisler, ST, 4:445). “While the covenant was made with Israel, it is also appropriately applied to the church ([Heb.] 8:7-13); the benefits of Christ’s death were intended by God from the very beginning for both. The New Testament is not spiritualizing a promise that will not be literally fulfilled” (ibid.). “It’s not that the new covenant was made with Israel and fulfilled in the church; it was made with Israel and also applied to the church” (ibid., p. 588). “According to Romans 11, the Church is incorporated into the new covenant that God made with Israel” (Horner, FI, p. 368).

It is to have future fulfillment in Israel. “Jer. 31:31... the context in which the passage stands in Jeremiah—preceded, followed, and connected with a literal restoration of the Jewish nation” (Peters, TTK, 1:322) “Since the disciples would certainly have understood any reference to the New Covenant as referring to Israel’s anticipated covenant recorded in Jeremiah, it seems certain that the Lord was stating that that very covenant was being instituted with His death, and that they (the disciples) were ministers of the blood (the soteriological aspects) of that covenant (2 Cor. 3:6). But those to whom it was primarily and originally made (Israel as a nation) will not receive its fulfillment or its blessings until the second advent of Christ, when ‘all Israel shall be saved... and this is My covenant with them when I take away their sin’ (Rom. 11:26-27)... In other words, there is a marked and critical difference between the institution of the covenant and the realization of its benefits. By His death, Christ laid the foundation for Israel’s New Covenant—but its benefits will not be received by Israel until the second advent of Messiah” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 173). “The prophetic implications of the New Covenant are very significant, and show just how extensive a prophetic program awaits fulfillment. According to this covenant, Israel must be restored to the land of Palestine, which they will possess as their own. This also entails the preservation of the nation. Israel must experience a national conversion, be regenerated, and receive the forgiveness of sins and the implantation of a new heart—which will take place following the return of Messiah to the earth” (ibid., p. 175). “Not one of the seven features, nor the added ones from related passages, are now being fulfilled in Israel or for Israel or by Israel” [quoting Walvoord, The Millennial Kingdom, p. 208] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 361) “A favorite passage used by Covenant Theology is Hebrews eight which quotes the entire New Covenant as found in Jeremiah 31:34 which they claim proves the New Covenant is being fulfilled in the Church. Walvoord [in The Millennial Kingdom, p.p 215-218], however, denies that this is the point of Hebrews eight. On the contrary, what Hebrews eight is trying to prove is that the Mosaic Covenant was temporary and that ‘Christ is the Mediator of a better covenant than Moses, established upon better promises.’ Since ‘the Mosaic covenant was not faultless,’ it was ‘never intended to be an everlasting covenant.’ The reason for the quotation of the Jeremiah passage was not to show that it was now being fulfilled, because the writer of Hebrews never states that this is the case. The purpose was to show ‘that the Old Testament itself anticipated the end of the Mosaic law in that a new covenant is predicted to supplant it’” (ibid.). “It should again be noted that in Dispensationalism it is possible to believe in only one New Covenant, already ratified by the blood of the Messiah with the spiritual blessings available to Jewish and Gentile believers today, but with the national, material and spiritual blessings for Israel still awaiting a future fulfillment. As with the Abrahamic and Davidic Covenants, not all provisions of each covenant go immediately into effect upon ratification” (ibid., p. 363). “The New Covenant is an unconditional covenant, ‘but it has never been received by Israel as a nation’” [quoting Feinberg, Israel, pp. 117-126] (ibid., p. 506). “There will be an ultimate fulfillment of the new covenant after Israel has been resurrected and returned to the Holy Land (Ezek. 37)” (Geisler, ST, 4:523).

And it is eternal. “Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was a husband unto them, saith Jehovah. But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith Jehovah: I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write it; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people: and they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know Jehovah; for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith Jehovah: for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin will I remember no more. Thus saith Jehovah, who giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, who stirreth up the sea, so that the waves thereof roar; Jehovah of hosts is his name: If these ordinances depart from before me, saith Jehovah, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever. Thus saith Jehovah: If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, then will I also cast off all the seed of Israel for all that they have done, saith Jehovah” (Jer. 31:31-37). “Now the God of peace, who brought up from the dead the great Shepherd of the sheep through the blood of the eternal covenant, even Jesus our Lord, equip you in every good thing to do His will, working in us that which is pleasing in His sight, through Jesus Christ, to whom be the glory forever and ever. Amen” (Heb. 13:20-21). “Ryrie’s own summary [in Premillennial Faith, p. 114] is... the covenant... continuing throughout all eternity” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 358). “(Jer. 31:35-37)... The creation and preservation of order in the universe are matters wholly beyond the control of men, depending on God alone. Even so, the New Covenant rests on what God is and does” (McClain, GK, p. 159). “...Hebrews... 13:20-21... the eternal covenant... the New Covenant... That covenant is referred to here as an ‘eternal covenant.’ This New Covenant is in contrast to the Mosaic Covenant which, as the writer of Hebrews has already shown, was viewed even during its time of operation as a temporary covenant” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 288).

Chapter 13: The Kingdom in Hebrew Prophecy

In Hebrew prophecy God's theocratic Kingdom program is laid out both in broad outline and in remarkably fine detail. To acquire an accurate (and awe-inspiring) picture of the Bible's eschatological Kingdom, the Bible student has therefore only to read the Hebrew prophets with an open mind, an eye toward the future and a willingness to receive the prophets' messages as written. When the Hebrew prophets are read without preconception and without prejudice, their overall Kingdom program is unmistakable: After being scattered throughout the world for "many days," Israel is to be regathered back to her land, reconstituted as a nation, threatened by her surrounding nations, purged, defended by Messiah, regenerated, ruled by Messiah, and greatly blessed, both spiritually and materially. Concurrently, the Gentile nations are to be dealt with by God on the basis of their treatment of Israel. "The prophets all uniformly predict the temporal depressed condition of the nation, and in the same connection a glorious temporal deliverance" (Peters, TTK, 1:273). "The prophetic message in its essence is an unfolding of the divine plan concerning the times of the Gentiles, the coming Messiah, the restoration of Israel, the millennial blessings, and all details that are part of these themes" (Pentecost, TKC, p. 179). "There is a perfect continuity among the prophets from the time of Saul, through the Exile, and down to Malachi. After this final 'Old Testament prophet,' there was a time lapse until John the Baptist—but in reality John the Baptist picked up exactly where the post-exilic prophets left off. Again, there is a perfect, logical, literal, historical continuity among all of God's prophets" (ibid., p. 180). "Much of the message of the prophets was devoted to contemporary issues and contained messages to their own people. However, much was also devoted to the prophetic program. And it is in the prophetic aspect of the writing prophets that we find God's outline for the program concerning His kingdom. In the pages of the prophets, we can readily find the message of the prophets concerning the King, the kingdom, the nature of the kingdom, and the program leading up to its initiation. Because this is true, our understanding of biblical prophecy and end time events should be basically built not on the New Testament, but rather on the Old Testament. Except for the church—which is revealed in the New Testament—everything else in God's prophetic program is revealed in the Old Testament. Many people have problems with eschatology (the doctrine of 'last things,' or biblical prophecy) because they've never examined the teaching of the prophets as a systematic, unified whole, particularly in light of God's kingdom program... we strongly encourage the reader to take the time to examine the logical, systematic consistency of God's message through His prophets, and the way that message is continually moving toward literal, historical fulfillment" (ibid., p. 183). "Premillennialism is founded principally on interpretation of the Old Testament. If interpreted literally, the Old Testament gives a clear picture of the prophetic expectation of Israel... All the major prophets and practically all the minor prophets have Messianic sections picturing the restoration and glory of Israel in this future kingdom. This is so clear to competent students of the Old Testament that it is conceded by practically all parties that the Old Testament presents premillennial doctrine if interpreted literally. The premillennial interpretation offers the only possible literal fulfillment for the hundreds of verses of prophetic testimony" (Walvoord, MK, p. 114). "Floyd Hamilton, who attacks premillennialism, concedes [in The Basis of the Millennial Faith, p. 38], 'Now we must frankly admit that a literal interpretation of the Old Testament prophecies gives us just such a picture of an earthly reign of the Messiah as the premillennialist pictures. That was the kind of a Messianic kingdom that the Jews of the time of Christ were looking for, on the basis of a literal interpretation of the Old Testament'" (ibid.). "Wilkinson [Samuel Hinds Wilkinson, The Israel Promises and the Fulfillment, pp. 56-57]... '...The O.T. promises are all as certain of fulfillment in their O.T. sense and meaning and purpose to Israel, as are the N.T. promises certain of fulfillment to the Church'" (ibid., p. 202). "Old Testament prophecy knows no other subjects of discourse than these, Israel, Messiah, and the nations" (ibid., p. 264).

Hebrew prophecy is important; its Kingdom message is not something to be taken lightly. "Surely it is no small matter to have the prophets, all testifying to this Kingdom, in our hands; and God justly holds us accountable for the manner in which we receive and understand them" (Peters, TTK, 3:240).

And, contrary to much popular opinion, Hebrew prophecy is not hard to understand. How many who claim that prophecy is hard to understand have actually read the prophetic books? Armed with the novel idea that the prophecies just might happen to mean precisely what they say, to the same people group to whom they were originally given (i.e. to Israel; not to the church, and not to Jehovah's Witnesses), these prophecies provide light to anyone seeking to understand the Bible's message correctly, not darkness.

Taking the prophetic books at face value, it should become obvious that the Hebrew prophets prophesy a future, literal, earthly, Jewish Kingdom. "The Old Testament taken alone would never have suggested the spiritualized interpretation adopted by the amillenarians" (Walvoord, MK, p. 213).

“The prophecies of the Old Testament give adequate basis for the doctrine that Israel has an earthly hope... the hundreds of prophecies that have to do with Israel’s hope in the millennial kingdom” (ibid., p. 325).

The Kingdom is Promised

The Kingdom is promised in the historical books, in the Psalms and in the prophets. In this section, I’ll be simply presenting several hundred passages from the Old Testament which I’ve collected in my own personal Bible reading, in my effort to obtain for myself an accurate and impartial picture of the future Kingdom. It would be my first choice for the reader to make his or her own similar personal collection of Bible verses pertaining to the Kingdom, via his or her own personal Bible reading. This way, from reading all the passages in these books, the reader would, I believe, arrive at his or her own conclusion, as I have, that the verses that I’ve (and he/she will have) collected are indeed (almost exhaustively) representative of the Old Testament’s Kingdom message, and that there are in fact no contrary passages in these books that this writer has purposefully ignored or omitted. But to save time, the reader may of course prefer to simply read the verses that I’ve collected here, with my personal assurance that I have not intentionally left out any passages related to the biblical Kingdom that apparently contradict the premillennial view. To date I have in fact not become aware of any such passages.

With this introduction, I will now present my collection of passages with a bare minimum of commentary. It is my hope that the reader will quickly and easily see that these passages, especially when all considered together, are self-explanatory. Some of these passages will already be at least somewhat familiar to the reader, from our preceding study of the covenants, etc., and some will be new.

The Kingdom is Promised in the Historical Books

“When thy [David’s] days are fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee, that shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build a house for my name, and I will establish the throne of his kingdom for ever. I will be his father, and he shall be my son: if he commit iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men; but my lovingkindness shall not depart from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I put away before thee. And thy house and thy kingdom shall be made sure for ever before thee: thy throne shall be established for ever. According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David. Then David the king went in, and sat before Jehovah; and he said, Who am I, O Lord Jehovah, and what is my house, that thou hast brought me thus far? And this was yet a small thing in thine eyes, O Lord Jehovah; but thou hast spoken also of thy servant's house for a great while to come; and this too after the manner of men, O Lord Jehovah" (2 Sam. 7:12-19)!

"And what one nation in the earth is like thy people, even like Israel, whom God went to redeem unto himself for a people, and to make him a name, and to do great things for you, and terrible things for thy land, before thy people, whom thou redeemest to thee out of Egypt, from the nations and their gods? And thou didst establish to thyself thy people Israel to be a people unto thee for ever; and thou, Jehovah, becamest their God. And now, O Jehovah God, the word that thou hast spoken concerning thy servant, and concerning his house, confirm thou it for ever, and do as thou hast spoken. And let thy name be magnified for ever, saying, Jehovah of hosts is God over Israel; and the house of thy servant David shall be established before thee. For thou, O Jehovah of hosts, the God of Israel, hast revealed to thy servant, saying, I will build thee a house: therefore hath thy servant found in his heart to pray this prayer unto thee. And now, O Lord Jehovah, thou art God, and thy words are truth, and thou hast promised this good thing unto thy servant: now therefore let it please thee to bless the house of thy servant, that it may continue for ever before thee; for thou, O Lord Jehovah, hast spoken it: and with thy blessing let the house of thy servant be blessed for ever" (2 Sam. 7:23-29).

"And it shall come to pass, when thy days are fulfilled that thou must go to be with thy fathers, that I will set up thy [David's] seed after thee, who shall be of thy sons; and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build me a house, and I will establish his throne for ever. I will be his father, and he shall be my son: and I will not take my lovingkindness away from him, as I took it from him that was before thee; but I will settle him in my house and in my kingdom for ever; and his throne shall be established for ever. According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David. Then David the king went in, and sat before Jehovah; and he said, Who am I, O Jehovah God, and what is my house, that thou hast brought me thus far? And this was a small thing in thine eyes, O God; but thou hast spoken of thy servant's house for a great while to come, and hast regarded me according to the estate of a man of high degree, O Jehovah God. What can David say yet more unto thee concerning the honor which is done to thy servant? for thou knowest thy servant. O Jehovah, for thy servant's sake, and according to thine own heart, hast thou wrought all this greatness, to make known all these great things. O Jehovah, there is none like thee, neither is there any God besides thee, according to all that we have heard with our ears. And what one nation in the earth is like thy people Israel, whom God went to redeem unto himself for a people, to make thee a name by great and terrible things, in driving out nations from before thy people, whom thou redeemest out of Egypt? For thy people Israel didst thou make thine own people for ever; and thou, Jehovah, becamest their God. And now, O Jehovah, let the word that thou hast spoken concerning thy servant, and concerning his house, be established for ever, and do as thou hast spoken. And let thy name be established and magnified for ever, saying, Jehovah of hosts is the God of Israel, even a God to Israel: and the house of David thy servant is established before thee. For thou, O my God, hast revealed to thy servant that thou wilt build him a house: therefore hath thy servant found in his heart to pray before thee. And now, O Jehovah, thou art God, and hast promised this good thing unto thy servant: and now it hath pleased thee to bless the house of thy servant, that it may continue for ever before thee: for thou, O Jehovah, hast blessed, and it is blessed for ever" (1 Chron. 17:11-27).

"Now therefore, O Jehovah, the God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised him, saying, There shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit on the throne of Israel, if only thy children take heed to their way, to walk in my law as thou hast walked before me" (2 Chron. 6:16).

The Kingdom is Promised in the Psalms

It is this writer's expectation that with the background material that we've already covered in this book, the reader will now already be better-equipped to understand the messianic Psalms than was even Martin Luther. "Luther, who (Michelet's Life of, p. 272) professes: 'I candidly avow my ignorance as to whether I rightly understand the Psalms in their legitimate sense,' and adds: 'Others who come after me will, I am aware, perceive much that has escaped me,' etc." (Peters, TTK, 3:390).

Psalm 2

“Why do the nations rage, And the peoples meditate a vain thing? The kings of the earth set themselves, And the rulers take counsel together, Against Jehovah, and against his anointed, saying, Let us break their bonds asunder, And cast away their cords from us. He that sitteth in the heavens will laugh: The Lord will have them in derision. Then will he speak unto them in his wrath, And vex them in his sore displeasure: Yet I have set my king Upon my holy hill of Zion. I will tell of the decree: Jehovah said unto me, Thou art my son; This day have I begotten thee. Ask of me, and I will give thee the nations for thine inheritance, And the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession. Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; Thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter’s vessel. Now therefore be wise, O ye kings: Be instructed, ye judges of the earth. Serve Jehovah with fear, And rejoice with trembling. Kiss the son, lest he be angry, and ye perish in the way, For his wrath will soon be kindled. Blessed are all they that take refuge in him” (Ps. 2:1-12).

“My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? Why art thou so far from helping me, and from the words of my groaning” (Ps. 22:1)?

“For dogs have compassed me: A company of evil-doers have inclosed me; They pierced my hands and my feet. I may count all my bones; They look and stare upon me. They part my garments among them, And upon my vesture do they cast lots. But be not thou far off, O Jehovah: O thou my succor, haste thee to help me. Deliver my soul from the sword, My darling from the power of the dog. Save me from the lion’s mouth; Yea, from the horns of the wild-oxen thou hast answered me. I will declare thy name unto my brethren: In the midst of the assembly will I praise thee. Ye that fear Jehovah, praise him; All ye the seed of Jacob, glorify him; And stand in awe of him, all ye the seed of Israel. For he hath not despised nor abhorred the affliction of the afflicted; Neither hath he hid his face from him; But when he cried unto him, he heard. Of thee cometh my praise in the great assembly: I will pay my vows before them that fear him. The meek shall eat and be satisfied; They shall praise Jehovah that seek after him: Let your heart live for ever. All the ends of the earth shall remember and turn unto Jehovah; And all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee. For the kingdom is Jehovah's; And he is the ruler over the nations" (Ps. 22:16-28).

Psalm 24

"A Psalm of David. The earth is Jehovah's, and the fulness thereof; The world, and they that dwell therein. For he hath founded it upon the seas, And established it upon the floods. Who shall ascend into the hill of Jehovah? And who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart; Who hath not lifted up his soul unto falsehood, And hath not sworn deceitfully. He shall receive a blessing from Jehovah, And righteousness from the God of his salvation. This is the generation of them that seek after him, That seek thy face, even Jacob. Selah. Lift up your heads, O ye gates; And be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors: And the King of glory will come in. Who is the King of glory? Jehovah strong and mighty, Jehovah mighty in battle. Lift up your heads, O ye gates; Yea, lift them up, ye everlasting doors: And the King of glory will come in. Who is this King of glory? Jehovah of hosts, He is the King of glory. Selah" (Ps. 24:0-10)

Psalm 25

"What man is he that feareth Jehovah? Him shall he instruct in the way that he shall choose. His soul shall dwell at ease; And his seed shall inherit the land. The friendship of Jehovah is with them that fear him; And he will show them his covenant. Mine eyes are ever toward Jehovah; For he will pluck my feet out of the net. Turn thee unto me, and have mercy upon me; For I am desolate and afflicted. The troubles of my heart are enlarged: Oh bring thou me out of my distresses. Consider mine affliction and my travail; And forgive all my sins. Consider mine enemies, for they are many; And they hate me with cruel hatred. Oh keep my soul, and deliver me: Let me not be put to shame, for I take refuge in thee. Let integrity and uprightness preserve me, For I wait for thee. Redeem Israel, O God, Out all of his troubles" (Ps. 25:12-22).

"A Psalm of David. Fret not thyself because of evil-doers, Neither be thou envious against them that work unrighteousness. For they shall soon be cut down like the grass, And wither as the green herb. Trust in Jehovah, and do good; Dwell in the land, and feed on his faithfulness. Delight thyself also in Jehovah; And he will give thee the desires of thy heart. Commit thy way unto Jehovah; Trust also in him, and he will bring it to pass. And he will make thy righteousness to go forth as the light, And thy justice as the noon-day. Rest in Jehovah, and wait patiently for him:

Fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way, Because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass. Cease from anger, and forsake wrath: Fret not thyself, it tendeth only to evil-doing. For evil-doers shall be cut off; But those that wait for Jehovah, they shall inherit the land. For yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be: Yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and he shall not be. But the meek shall inherit the land, And shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace. The wicked plotteth against the just, And gnasheth upon him with his teeth. The Lord will laugh at him; For he seeth that his day is coming. The wicked have drawn out the sword, and have bent their bow, To cast down the poor and needy, To slay such as are upright in the way. Their sword shall enter into their own heart, And their bows shall be broken. Better is a little that the righteous hath Than the abundance of many wicked. For the arms of the wicked shall be broken; But Jehovah upholdeth the righteous. Jehovah knoweth the days of the perfect; And their inheritance shall be for ever. They shall not be put to shame in the time of evil; And in the days of famine they shall be satisfied. But the wicked shall perish, And the enemies of Jehovah shall be as the fat of lambs: They shall consume; In smoke shall they consume away. The wicked borroweth, and payeth not again; But the righteous dealeth graciously, and giveth. For such as are blessed of him shall inherit the land; And they that are cursed of him shall be cut off. A man's goings are established of Jehovah; And he delighteth in his way. Though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down; For Jehovah upholdeth him with his hand. I have been young, and now am old; Yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, Nor his seed begging bread. All the day long he dealeth graciously, and lendeth; And his seed is blessed. Depart from evil, and do good; And dwell for evermore. For Jehovah loveth justice, And forsaketh not his saints; They are preserved for ever: But the seed of the wicked shall be cut off. The righteous shall inherit the land, And dwell therein for ever. The mouth of the righteous talketh of wisdom, And his tongue speaketh justice. The law of his God is in his heart; None of his steps shall slide. The wicked watcheth the righteous, And seeketh to slay him. Jehovah will not leave him in his hand, Nor condemn him when he is judged. Wait for Jehovah, and keep his way, And he will exalt thee to inherit the land: When the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it. I have seen the wicked in great power, And spreading himself like a green tree in its native soil. But one passed by, and, lo, he was not: Yea, I sought him, but he could not be found. Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright; For there is a happy end to the man of peace. As for transgressors, they shall be destroyed together; The end of the wicked shall be cut off. But the salvation of the righteous is of Jehovah; He is their stronghold in the time of trouble. And Jehovah helpeth them, and rescueth them; He rescueth them from the wicked, and saveth them, Because they have taken refuge in him” (Ps. 37:0–40).

Psalm 45

“For the Chief Musician; set to Shoshannim. A Psalm of the sons of Korah. Maschil. A Song of loves. My heart overfloweth with a goodly matter; I speak the things which I have made touching the king: My tongue is the pen of a ready writer. Thou art fairer than the children of men; Grace is poured into thy lips: Therefore God hath blessed thee for ever. Gird thy sword upon thy thigh, O mighty one, Thy glory and thy majesty. And in thy majesty ride on prosperously, Because of truth and meekness and righteousness: And thy right hand shall teach thee terrible things. Thine arrows are sharp; The peoples fall under thee; They are in the heart of the king’s enemies. Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: A sceptre of equity is the sceptre of thy kingdom. Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated wickedness: Therefore God, thy God, hath anointed thee With the oil of gladness above thy fellows. All thy garments smell of myrrh, and aloes, and cassia; Out of ivory palaces stringed instruments have made thee glad. Kings’ daughters are among thy honorable women: At thy right hand doth stand the queen in gold of Ophir. Hearken, O daughter, and consider, and incline thine ear; Forget also thine own people, and thy father’s house: So will the king desire thy beauty; For he is thy lord; And reverence thou him. And the daughter of Tyre shall be there with a gift; The rich among the people shall entreat thy favor. The king’s daughter within the palace is all glorious: Her clothing is inwrought with gold. She shall be led unto the king in brodered work: The virgins her companions that follow her Shall be brought unto thee. With gladness and rejoicing shall they be led: They shall enter into the king’s palace. Instead of thy fathers shall be thy children, Whom thou shalt make princes in all the earth. I will make thy name to be remembered in all generations: Therefore shall the peoples give thee thanks for ever and ever” (Ps. 45:0–17).

“The nations raged, the kingdoms were moved: He uttered his voice, the earth melted. Jehovah of hosts is with us; The God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah Come, behold the works of Jehovah, What desolations he hath made in the earth. He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; He breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder; He burneth the chariots in the fire. Be still, and know that I am God: I will be exalted among the nations, I will be exalted in the earth” (Ps. 46:6-10).

Psalm 48

“Great is Jehovah, and greatly to be praised, In the city of our God, in his holy mountain. Beautiful in elevation, the joy of the whole earth, Is mount Zion, on the sides of the north, The city of the great King. God hath made himself known in her palaces for a refuge. For, lo, the kings assembled themselves, They passed by together. They saw it, then were they amazed; They were dismayed, they hasted away. Trembling took hold of them there, Pain, as of a woman in travail. With the east wind Thou breakest the ships of Tarshish. As we have heard, so have we seen In the city of Jehovah of hosts, in the city of our God: God will establish it for ever. Selah. We have thought on thy lovingkindness, O God, In the midst of thy temple. As is thy name, O God, So is thy praise unto the ends of the earth: Thy right hand is full of righteousness. Let mount Zion be glad, Let the daughters of Judah rejoice, Because of thy judgments. Walk about Zion, and go round about her; Number the towers thereof; Mark ye well her bulwarks; Consider her palaces: That ye may tell it to the generation following. For this God is our God for ever and ever: He will be our guide even unto death” (Ps. 48:1-14).

Psalm 67

“God be merciful unto us, and bless us, And cause his face to shine upon us; Selah. That thy way may be known upon earth, Thy salvation among all nations. Let the peoples praise thee, O God; Let all the peoples praise thee. Oh let the nations be glad and sing for joy; For thou wilt judge the peoples with equity, And govern the nations upon earth. Selah. Let the peoples praise thee, O God; Let all the peoples praise thee. The earth hath yielded its increase: God, even our own God, will bless us. God will bless us; And all the ends of the earth shall fear him” (Ps. 67:1-7).

Psalm 72

“Give the king thy judgments, O God, And thy righteousness unto the king’s son. He will judge thy people with righteousness, And thy poor with justice. The mountains shall bring peace to the people, And the hills, in righteousness. He will judge the poor of the people, He will save the children of the needy, And will break in pieces the oppres-

sor. They shall fear thee while the sun endureth, And so long as the moon, throughout all generations. He will come down like rain upon the mown grass, As showers that water the earth. In his days shall the righteous flourish, And abundance of peace, till the moon be no more. He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, And from the River unto the ends of the earth. They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him; And his enemies shall lick the dust. The kings of Tarshish and of the isles shall render tribute: The kings of Sheba and Seba shall offer gifts. Yea, all kings shall fall down before him; All nations shall serve him. For he will deliver the needy when he crieth, And the poor, that hath no helper. He will have pity on the poor and needy, And the souls of the needy he will save. He will redeem their soul from oppression and violence; And precious will their blood be in his sight: And they shall live; and to him shall be given of the gold of Sheba: And men shall pray for him continually; They shall bless him all the day long. There shall be abundance of grain in the earth upon the top of the mountains; The fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon: And they of the city shall flourish like grass of the earth. His name shall endure for ever; His name shall be continued as long as the sun: And men shall be blessed in him; All nations shall call him happy. Blessed be Jehovah God, the God of Israel, Who only doeth wondrous things: And blessed be his glorious name for ever; And let the whole earth be filled with his glory. Amen, and Amen. The prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended” (Ps. 72:1-20).

“A Song, a Psalm of Asaph. O God, keep not thou silence: Hold not thy peace, and be not still, O God. For, lo, thine enemies make a tumult; And they that hate thee have lifted up the head. They take crafty counsel against thy people, And consult together against thy hidden ones. They have said, Come, and let us cut them off from being a nation; That the name of Israel may be no more in remembrance. For they have consulted together with one consent; Against thee do they make a covenant: The tents of Edom and the Ishmaelites; Moab, and the Hagarenes; Gebal, and Ammon, and Amalek; Philistia with the inhabitants of Tyre: Assyria also is joined with them; They have helped the children of Lot. Selah. Do thou unto them as unto Midian, As to Sisera, as to Jabin, at the river Kishon; Who perished at Endor, Who became as dung for the earth. Make their nobles like Oreb and Zeeb; Yea, all their princes like Zebah and Zalmunna; Who said, Let us take to ourselves in possession The habitations of God. O my God, make them like the whirling dust; As stubble before the wind. As the fire that burneth the forest, And as the flame that setteth the mountains on fire, So pursue them with thy tempest, And terrify them with thy storm. Fill their faces with confusion, That they may seek thy name, O Jehovah. Let them be put to shame and dismayed for ever; Yea, let them be confounded and perish; That they may know that thou alone, whose name is Jehovah, Art the Most High over all the earth” (Ps. 83:0-18).

“I will sing of the lovingkindness of Jehovah for ever: With my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness to all generations. For I have said, Mercy shall be built up for ever; Thy faithfulness wilt thou establish in the very heavens. I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David my servant: Thy seed will I establish for ever, And build up thy throne to all generations. Selah.” (Ps. 89:1-4)

“My lovingkindness will I keep for him for evermore; And my covenant shall stand fast with him. His seed also will I make to endure for ever, And his throne as the days of heaven. If his children forsake my law, And walk not in mine ordinances; If they break my statutes, And keep not my commandments; Then will I visit their transgression with the rod, And their iniquity with stripes. But my lovingkindness will I not utterly take from him, Nor suffer my faithfulness to fail. My covenant will I not break, Nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by my holiness: I will not lie unto David: His seed shall endure for ever, And his throne as the sun before me. It shall be established for ever as the moon, And as the faithful witness in the sky. Selah.” (Ps. 89:28-37).

“How long, O Jehovah? wilt thou hide thyself for ever? How long shall thy wrath burn like fire? Oh remember how short my time is: For what vanity hast thou created all the children of men! What man is he that shall live and not see death, That shall deliver his soul from the power of Sheol? Selah Lord, where are thy former lovingkindnesses, Which thou swarest unto David in thy faithfulness” (Ps. 89:46-49)?

“Oh sing unto Jehovah a new song: Sing unto Jehovah, all the earth. Sing unto Jehovah, bless his name; Show forth his salvation from day to day. Declare his glory among the nations, His marvellous works among all the peoples. For great is Jehovah, and greatly to be praised: He is to be feared above all gods. For all the gods of the peoples are idols; But Jehovah made the heavens. Honor and majesty are before him: Strength and beauty are in his sanctuary. Ascribe unto Jehovah, ye kindreds of the peoples, Ascribe unto Jehovah glory and strength. Ascribe unto Jehovah the glory due unto his name: Bring an offering, and come into his courts. Oh worship Jehovah in holy array: Tremble before him, all the earth. Say among the nations, Jehovah reigneth: The world also is established that it cannot be moved: He will judge the peoples with equity. Let the heavens be glad, and let the earth rejoice; Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof; Let the field exult, and all that is therein; Then shall all the trees of the wood sing for joy Before Jehovah; For he cometh, For he cometh to judge the earth: He will judge the world with righteousness, And the peoples with his truth" (Ps. 96:1-13).

"Oh sing unto Jehovah a new song; For he hath done marvellous things: His right hand, and his holy arm, hath wrought salvation for him. Jehovah hath made known his salvation: His righteousness hath he openly showed in the sight of the nations. He hath remembered his lovingkindness and his faithfulness toward the house of Israel: All the ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God. Make a joyful noise unto Jehovah, all the earth: Break forth and sing for joy, yea, sing praises. Sing praises unto Jehovah with the harp; With the harp and the voice of melody. With trumpets and sound of cornet Make a joyful noise before the King, Jehovah. Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof; The world, and they that dwell therein; Let the floods clap their hands; Let the hills sing for joy together Before Jehovah; For he cometh to judge the earth: He will judge the world with righteousness, And the peoples with equity" (Ps. 98:1-9).

Psalm 110

"A Psalm of David. Jehovah saith unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand, Until I make thine enemies thy footstool. Jehovah will send forth the rod of thy strength out of Zion: Rule thou in the midst of thine enemies. Thy people offer themselves willingly In the day of thy power, in holy array: Out of the womb of the morning Thou hast the dew of thy youth. Jehovah hath sworn, and will not repent: Thou art a priest for ever After the order of Melchizedek. The Lord at thy right hand Will strike through kings in the day of his wrath. He will judge among the nations, He will fill the places with dead bodies; He will strike through the head in many countries. He will drink of the brook in the way: Therefore will he lift up the head" (Ps. 110:0-7).

Psalm 118

“Out of my distress I called upon Jehovah: Jehovah answered me and set me in a large place. Jehovah is on my side; I will not fear: What can man do unto me? Jehovah is on my side among them that help me: Therefore shall I see my desire upon them that hate me. It is better to take refuge in Jehovah Than to put confidence in man. It is better to take refuge in Jehovah Than to put confidence in princes. All nations compassed me about: In the name of Jehovah I will cut them off. They compassed me about; yea, they compassed me about: In the name of Jehovah I will cut them off” (Ps. 118:5-11).

“The stone which the builders rejected Is become the head of the corner. This is Jehovah’s doing; It is marvellous in our eyes. This is the day which Jehovah hath made; We will rejoice and be glad in it. Save now, we beseech thee, O Jehovah: O Jehovah, we beseech thee, send now prosperity. Blessed be he that cometh in the name of Jehovah: We have blessed you out of the house of Jehovah” (Ps. 118:22-26).

Psalm 132

“Jehovah hath sworn unto David in truth; He will not turn from it: Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne. If thy children will keep my covenant And my testimony that I shall teach them, Their children also shall sit upon thy throne for evermore. For Jehovah hath chosen Zion; He hath desired it for his habitation. This is my resting-place for ever: Here will I dwell; For I have desired it. I will abundantly bless her provision: I will satisfy her poor with bread. Her priests also will I clothe with salvation; And her saints shall shout aloud for joy. There will I make the horn of David to bud: I have ordained a lamp for mine anointed. His enemies will I clothe with shame; But upon himself shall his crown flourish” (Ps. 132:11-18).

The Kingdom is Promised in the Old Testament Prophets

“It is significant that the Old Testament prophets spoke, in the main, in one comparatively brief period. This was the time in which Israel was approaching and entering her national dispersion under the chastening hand of God. It was in the darkest hour of their history that these seers, as by contrast, set forth the unprecedented light of the nation’s coming glory. This consensus of prophetic vision has never had a semblance of fulfillment; yet the nation is still divinely preserved, and that, evidently, with this consummation in view (Jer. 31:35-37; Mt. 24:31-34)” (Chafer, KHP, 14%). “In tracing these passages scarcely a comment is necessary if the statements are taken in their plain and obvious meaning” (ibid.). “Practically every one of the Major and Minor Prophets mention in some form the hope of future possession of the land” [quoting Walvoord, Millennial Kingdom, p. 175] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 521).

The Major Prophets

Isaiah

“The vision of Isaiah the son of Amoz, which he saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem, in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah” (Isa. 1:1).

“Therefore saith the Lord, Jehovah of hosts, the Mighty One of Israel, Ah, I will ease me of mine adversaries, and avenge me of mine enemies; and I will turn my hand upon thee, and thoroughly purge away thy dross, and will take away all thy tin; and I will restore thy judges as at the first, and thy counsellors as at the beginning: afterward thou shalt be called The city of righteousness, a faithful town. Zion shall be redeemed with justice, and her converts with righteousness” (Isa. 1:24-27).

“The word that the son of Amoz saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem. And it shall come to pass in the latter days, that the mountain of Jehovah’s house shall be established on the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it. And many peoples shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of Jehovah, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of Jehovah from Jerusalem. And he will judge between the nations, and will decide concerning many peoples; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more” (Isa. 2:1-4).

“In that day shall the branch of Jehovah be beautiful and glorious, and the fruit of the land shall be excellent and comely for them that are escaped of Israel. And it shall come to pass, that he that is left in Zion, and he that remaineth in Jerusalem, shall be called holy, even every one that is written among the living in Jerusalem; when the Lord shall have washed away the filth of the daughters of Zion, and shall have purged the blood of Jerusalem from the midst thereof, by the spirit of justice, and by the spirit of burning. And Jehovah will create over the whole habitation of mount Zion, and over her assemblies, a cloud and smoke by day, and the shining of a flaming fire by night; for over all the glory shall be spread a covering” (Isa. 4:2-5).

“For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of Jehovah of hosts will perform this” (Isa. 9:6-7). Compare: “Now in the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a virgin betrothed to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David; and the virgin’s name was Mary. And he came in unto her, and said, Hail, thou that art highly favored, the Lord is with thee. But she was greatly troubled at the saying, and cast in her mind what manner of salutation this might be. And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favor with God. And behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Most High: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end” (Luke 1:26–33).

“And there shall come forth a shoot out of the stock of Jesse, and a branch out of his roots shall bear fruit. And the Spirit of Jehovah shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of Jehovah. And his delight shall be in the fear of Jehovah; and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither decide after the hearing of his ears; but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and decide with equity for the meek of the earth; and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth; and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked. And righteousness shall be the girdle of his waist, and faithfulness the girdle of his loins. And the wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the adder’s den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of Jehovah, as the waters cover the sea. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the root of Jesse, that standeth for an ensign of the peoples, unto him shall the nations seek; and his resting-place shall be glorious. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord will set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people, that shall remain, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the islands of the sea. And he will set up an ensign for the nations, and will assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth. The envy also of Ephraim shall depart, and they that vex Judah shall be cut off: Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim. And they shall fly down upon the shoulder of the Philistines on the west; together shall they despoil the children of the east: they shall put forth their hand upon Edom and Moab; and the children of Ammon shall obey them. And Jehovah will utterly destroy the tongue of the Egyptian sea; and with his scorching wind will he wave his hand over the River, and will smite it into seven streams, and cause men to march over dryshod. And there shall be a highway for the remnant of his people, that shall remain, from Assyria; like as there was for Israel in the day that he came up out of the land of Egypt" (Isa. 11:1-16).

"Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed; for Jehovah of hosts will reign in mount Zion, and in Jerusalem; and before his elders shall be glory" (Isa. 24:23).

"Thou hast increased the nation, O Jehovah, thou hast increased the nation; thou art glorified; thou hast enlarged all the borders of the land" (Isa. 26:15).

"In days to come shall Jacob take root; Israel shall blossom and bud; and they shall fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. 27:6).

"And it shall come to pass in that day, that Jehovah will beat off his fruit from the flood of the River unto the brook of Egypt; and ye shall be gathered one by one, O ye children of Israel. And it shall come to pass in that day, that a great trumpet shall be blown; and they shall come that were ready to perish in the land of Assyria, and they that were outcasts in the land of Egypt; and they shall worship Jehovah in the holy mountain at Jerusalem" (Isa. 27:12-13).

“And therefore will Jehovah wait, that he may be gracious unto you; and therefore will he be exalted, that he may have mercy upon you: for Jehovah is a God of justice; blessed are all they that wait for him. For the people shall dwell in Zion at Jerusalem; thou shalt weep no more; he will surely be gracious unto thee at the voice of thy cry; when he shall hear, he will answer thee” (Isa. 30:18-19).

“Until the Spirit is poured out upon us from on high, And the wilderness becomes a fertile field And the fertile field is considered as a forest. Then justice will dwell in the wilderness, And righteousness will abide in the fertile field. And the work of righteousness will be peace, And the service of righteousness, quietness and confidence forever” (Isa. 32:15-17).

“Look upon Zion, the city of our solemnities: thine eyes shall see Jerusalem a quiet habitation, a tent that shall not be removed, the stakes whereof shall never be plucked up, neither shall any of the cords thereof be broken” (Isa. 33:20).

“The wilderness and the dry land shall be glad; and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose. It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing; the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon: they shall see the glory of Jehovah, the excellency of our God. Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not: behold, your God will come with vengeance, with the recompense of God; he will come and save you. Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as a hart, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing; for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert. And the glowing sand shall become a pool, and the thirsty ground springs of water: in the habitation of jackals, where they lay, shall be grass with reeds and rushes. And a highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called The way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for the redeemed: the wayfaring men, yea fools, shall not err therein. No lion shall be there, nor shall any ravenous beast go up thereon; they shall not be found there; but the redeemed shall walk there: and the ransomed of Jehovah shall return, and come with singing unto Zion; and everlasting joy shall be upon their heads: they shall obtain gladness and joy, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away” (Isa. 35:1-10).

“But thou, Israel, my servant, Jacob whom I have chosen, the seed of Abraham my friend, thou whom I have taken hold of from the ends of the earth, and called from the corners thereof, and said unto thee, Thou art my servant, I have chosen thee and not cast thee away; Fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness. Behold, all they that are incensed against thee shall be put to shame and confounded: they that strive with thee shall be as nothing, and shall perish. Thou shalt seek them, and shalt not find them, even them that contend with thee: they that war against thee shall be as nothing, and as a thing of nought. For I, Jehovah thy God, will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, Fear not; I will help thee. Fear not, thou worm Jacob, and ye men of Israel; I will help thee, saith Jehovah, and thy Redeemer is the Holy One of Israel. Behold, I have made thee to be a new sharp threshing instrument having teeth; thou shalt thresh the mountains, and beat them small, and shalt make the hills as chaff. Thou shalt winnow them, and the wind shall carry them away, and the whirlwind shall scatter them; and thou shalt rejoice in Jehovah, thou shalt glory in the Holy One of Israel. The poor and needy seek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirst; I, Jehovah, will answer them, I, the God of Israel, will not forsake them. I will open rivers on the bare heights, and fountains in the midst of the valleys; I will make the wilderness a pool of water, and the dry land springs of water. I will put in the wilderness the cedar, the acacia, and the myrtle, and the oil-tree; I will set in the desert the fir-tree, the pine, and the box-tree together: that they may see, and know, and consider, and understand together, that the hand of Jehovah hath done this, and the Holy One of Israel hath created it” (Isa. 41:8-20).

“But now thus saith Jehovah that created thee, O Jacob, and he that formed thee, O Israel: Fear not, for I have redeemed thee; I have called thee by thy name, thou art mine. When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned, neither shall the flame kindle upon thee. For I am Jehovah thy God, the Holy One of Israel, thy Saviour; I have given Egypt as thy ransom, Ethiopia and Seba in thy stead. Since thou hast been precious in my sight, and honorable, and I have loved thee; therefore will I give men in thy stead, and peoples instead of thy life. Fear not; for I am with thee: I will bring thy seed from the east, and gather thee from the west; I will say to the north, Give up; and to the south, Keep not back; bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the end of the earth; every one that is called by my name, and whom I have created for my glory, whom I have formed, yea, whom I have made. Bring forth the blind people that have eyes, and the deaf that have ears. Let all the nations be gathered together, and let the peoples be assembled: who among them can declare this, and show us former things? let them bring their witnesses, that they may be justified; or let them hear, and say, It is truth. Ye are my witnesses, saith Jehovah, and my servant whom I have chosen; that ye may know and believe me, and understand that I am he: before me there was no God formed, neither shall there be after me” (Isa. 43:1-10).

“And the ransomed of Jehovah shall return, and come with singing unto Zion; and everlasting joy shall be upon their heads: they shall obtain gladness and joy; and sorrow and sighing shall flee away” (Isa. 51:11).

“For thy Maker is thy husband; Jehovah of hosts is his name: and the Holy One of Israel is thy Redeemer; the God of the whole earth shall he be called. For Jehovah hath called thee as a wife forsaken and grieved in spirit, even a wife of youth, when she is cast off, saith thy God. For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee” (Isa. 54:5-7).

“Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of Jehovah is risen upon thee. For, behold, darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the peoples; but Jehovah will arise upon thee, and his glory shall be seen upon thee. And nations shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising. Lift up thine eyes round about, and see: they all gather themselves together, they come to thee; thy sons shall come from far, and thy daughters shall be carried in the arms. Then thou shalt see and be radiant, and thy heart shall thrill and be enlarged; because the abundance of the sea shall be turned unto thee, the wealth of the nations shall come unto thee. The multitude of camels shall cover thee, the dromedaries of Midian and Ephah; all they from Sheba shall come; they shall bring gold and frankincense, and shall proclaim the praises of Jehovah. All the flocks of Kedar shall be gathered together unto thee, the rams of Nebaioth shall minister unto thee; they shall come up with acceptance on mine altar; and I will glorify the house of my glory. Who are these that fly as a cloud, and as the doves to their windows? Surely the isles shall wait for me, and the ships of Tarshish first, to bring thy sons from far, their silver and their gold with them, for the name of Jehovah thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel, because he hath glorified thee. And foreigners shall build up thy walls, and their kings shall minister unto thee: for in my wrath I smote thee, but in my favor have I had mercy on thee. Thy gates also shall be open continually; they shall not be shut day nor night; that men may bring unto thee the wealth of the nations, and their kings led captive. For that nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted. The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir-tree, the pine, and the box-tree together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary; and I will make the place of my feet glorious. And the sons of them that afflicted thee shall come bending unto thee; and all they that despised thee shall bow themselves down at the soles of thy feet; and they shall call thee The city of Jehovah, The Zion of the Holy One of Israel. Whereas thou hast been forsaken and hated, so that no man passed through thee, I will make thee an eternal excellency, a joy of many generations. Thou shalt also suck the milk of the nations, and shalt suck the breast of kings; and thou shalt know that I, Jehovah, am thy Saviour, and thy Redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob. For brass I will bring gold, and for iron I will bring silver, and for wood brass, and for stones iron. I will also make thy officers peace, and thine exactors righteousness. Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, desolation nor destruction within thy borders; but thou shalt call thy walls Salvation, and thy gates Praise. The sun shall be no more thy light by day; neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee: but Jehovah will be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory. Thy sun shall no more go down, neither shall thy moon withdraw itself; for Jehovah will be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended. Thy people also shall be all righteous; they shall inherit the land for ever, the branch of my planting, the work of my hands, that I may be glorified. The little one shall become a thousand, and the small one a strong nation; I, Jehovah, will hasten it in its time” (Isa. 60:1-22).

“The Spirit of the Lord Jehovah is upon me; because Jehovah hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound; to proclaim the year of Jehovah’s favor, and the day of vengeance of our God; to comfort all that mourn; to appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give unto them a garland for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness; that they may be called trees of righteousness, the planting of Jehovah, that he may be glorified. And they shall build the old wastes, they shall raise up the former desolations, and they shall repair the waste cities, the desolations of many generations. And strangers shall stand and feed your flocks, and foreigners shall be your plowmen and your vine-dressers. But ye shall be named the priests of Jehovah; men shall call you the ministers of our God: ye shall eat the wealth of the nations, and in their glory shall ye boast yourselves. Instead of your shame ye shall have double; and instead of dishonor they shall rejoice in their portion: therefore in their land they shall possess double; everlasting joy shall be unto them. For I, Jehovah, love justice, I hate robbery with iniquity; and I will give them their recompense in truth, and I will make an everlasting covenant with them. And their seed shall be known among the nations, and their offspring among the peoples; all that see them shall acknowledge them, that they are the seed which Jehovah hath blessed. I will greatly rejoice in Jehovah, my soul shall be joyful in my God; for he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness, as a bridegroom decketh himself with a garland, and as a bride adorneth herself with her jewels. For as the earth bringeth forth its bud, and as the garden causeth the things that are sown in it to spring forth; so the Lord Jehovah will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all the nations" (Isa. 61:1-11).

"For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest, until her righteousness go forth as brightness, and her salvation as a lamp that burneth. And the nations shall see thy righteousness, and all kings thy glory, and thou shalt be called by a new name, which the mouth of Jehovah shall name. Thou shalt also be a crown of beauty in the hand of Jehovah, and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God. Thou shalt no more be termed Forsaken; neither shall thy land any more be termed Desolate: but thou shalt be called Hephzi-bah, and thy land Beulah; for Jehovah delighteth in thee, and thy land shall be married. For as a young man marrieth a virgin, so shall thy sons marry thee; and as the bridegroom rejoiceth over the bride, so shall thy God rejoice over thee. I have set watchmen upon thy walls, O Jerusalem; they shall never hold their peace day nor night: ye that are Jehovah's remembrancers, take ye no rest, and give him no rest, till he establish, and till he make Jerusalem a praise in the earth. Jehovah hath sworn by his right hand, and by the arm of his strength, Surely I will no more give thy grain to be food for thine enemies; and foreigners shall not drink thy new wine, for which thou hast labored: but they that have garnered it shall eat it, and praise Jehovah; and they that have gathered it shall drink it in the courts of my sanctuary. Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up an ensign for the peoples. Behold, Jehovah hath proclaimed unto the end of the earth, Say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy salvation cometh; behold, his reward is with him, and his recompense before him. And they shall call them The holy people, The redeemed of Jehovah: and thou shalt be called Sought out, A city not forsaken" (Isa. 62:1-12).

"And I will bring forth a seed out of Jacob, and out of Judah an inheritor of my mountains; and my chosen shall inherit it, and my servants shall dwell there" (Isa. 65:9).

"For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth; and the former things shall not be remembered, nor come into mind. But be ye glad and rejoice for ever in that which I create; for, behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy. And I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people; and there shall be heard in her no more the voice of weeping and the voice of crying. There shall be no more thence an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days; for the child shall die a hundred years old, and the sinner being a hundred years old shall be accursed. And they shall build houses, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and eat the fruit of them. They shall not build, and another inhabit; they shall not plant, and another eat: for as the days of a tree shall be the days of my people, and my chosen shall long enjoy the work of their hands. They shall not labor in vain, nor bring forth for calamity; for they are the seed of the blessed of Jehovah, and their offspring with them. And it shall come to pass that, before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear. The wolf and the lamb shall feed together, and the lion shall eat straw like the ox; and dust shall be the serpent's food. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, saith Jehovah" (Isa. 65:17-25).

"Rejoice ye with Jerusalem, and be glad for her, all ye that love her: rejoice for joy with her, all ye that mourn over her; that ye may suck and be satisfied with the breasts of her consolations; that ye may milk out, and be delighted with the abundance of her glory. For thus saith Jehovah, Behold, I will extend peace to her like a river, and the glory of the nations like an overflowing stream: and ye shall suck thereof; ye shall be borne upon the side, and shall be dandled upon the knees. As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you; and ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem. And ye shall see it, and your heart shall rejoice, and your bones shall flourish like the tender grass: and the hand of Jehovah shall be known toward his servants; and he will have indignation against his enemies. For, behold, Jehovah will come with fire, and his chariots shall be like the whirlwind; to render his anger with fierceness, and his rebuke with flames of fire. For by fire will Jehovah execute judgment, and by his sword, upon all flesh; and the slain of Jehovah shall be many. They that sanctify themselves and purify themselves to go unto the gardens, behind one in the midst, eating swine's flesh, and the abomination, and the mouse, they shall come to an end together, saith Jehovah. For I know their works and their thoughts: the time cometh, that I will gather all nations and tongues; and they shall come, and shall see my glory. And I will set a sign among them, and I will send such as escape of them unto the nations, to Tarshish, Pul, and Lud, that draw the bow, to Tubal and Javan, to the isles afar off, that have not heard my fame, neither have seen my glory; and they shall declare my glory among the nations. And they shall bring all your brethren out of all the nations for an oblation unto Jehovah, upon horses, and in chariots, and in litters, and upon mules, and upon dromedaries, to my holy mountain Jerusalem, saith Jehovah, as the children of Israel bring their oblation in a clean vessel into the house of Jehovah. And of them also will I take for priests and for Levites, saith Jehovah. For as the new heavens and the new earth, which I will make, shall remain before me, saith Jehovah, so shall your seed and your name remain. And it shall come to pass, that from one new moon to another, and from one sabbath to another, shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith Jehovah. And they shall go forth, and look upon the dead bodies of the men that have transgressed against me: for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh" (Isa. 66:10-24).

“This doctrine of the Kingdom confirms the already overpowering reasons given for the retention and inspiration of the later prophecies of Isaiah, seeing that they form a consistent outgrowth of covenant and promise incorporating precisely that which is requisite to carry out the Theocratic ordering in the Redemption of the world” (Peters, TTK, 3:405). “The prophecy of Isaiah is largely applied to the Church, whereas the very first verse declares that it is—“Concerning JUDAH and JERUSALEM”” (Larkin, DT, p. 19).

Jeremiah

“Go, and cry in the ears of Jerusalem, saying, Thus saith Jehovah, I remember for thee the kindness of thy youth, the love of thine espousals; how thou wentest after me in the wilderness, in a land that was not sown. Israel was holiness unto Jehovah, the first-fruits of his increase: all that devour him shall be held guilty; evil shall come upon them, saith Jehovah” (Jer. 2:2-3).

“Return, O backsliding children, saith Jehovah; for I am a husband unto you: and I will take you one of a city, and two of a family, and I will bring you to Zion: and I will give you shepherds according to my heart, who shall feed you with knowledge and understanding. And it shall come to pass, when ye are multiplied and increased in the land, in those days, saith Jehovah, they shall say no more, The ark of the covenant of Jehovah; neither shall it come to mind; neither shall they remember it; neither shall they miss it; neither shall it be made any more. At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of Jehovah; and all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of Jehovah, to Jerusalem: neither shall they walk any more after the stubbornness of their evil heart. In those days the house of Judah shall walk with the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land that I gave for an inheritance unto your fathers” (Jer. 3:14-18).

“Therefore, behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that it shall no more be said, As Jehovah liveth, that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but, As Jehovah liveth, that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the countries whither he had driven them. And I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers” (Jer. 16:14-15).

“And I will gather the remnant of my flock out of all the countries whither I have driven them, and will bring them again to their folds; and they shall be fruitful and multiply. And I will set up shepherds over them, who shall feed them; and they shall fear no more, nor be dismayed, neither shall any be lacking, saith Je- hovah. Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and he shall reign as king and deal wisely, and shall execute justice and righteousness in the land. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called: Jehovah our righteousness. Therefore, behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that they shall no more say, As Jehovah liveth, who brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but, As Jehovah liveth, who brought up and who led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all the countries whither I had driven them. And they shall dwell in their own land" (Jer. 23:3-8).

"And I will bring upon that land all my words which I have pronounced against it, even all that is written in this book, which Jeremiah hath prophesied against all the nations. For many nations and great kings shall make bondmen of them, even of them; and I will recompense them according to their deeds, and according to the work of their hands. For thus saith Jehovah, the God of Israel, unto me: take this cup of the wine of wrath at my hand, and cause all the nations, to whom I send thee, to drink it. And they shall drink, and reel to and fro, and be mad, because of the sword that I will send among them" (Jer. 25:13-16).

"For, lo, I begin to work evil at the city which is called by my name; and should ye be utterly unpunished? Ye shall not be unpunished; for I will call for a sword upon all the inhabitants of the earth, saith Jehovah of hosts. Therefore prophesy thou against them all these words, and say unto them, Jehovah will roar from on high, and utter his voice from his holy habitation; he will mightily roar against his fold; he will give a shout, as they that tread the grapes, against all the inhabitants of the earth. A noise shall come even to the end of the earth; for Jehovah hath a controversy with the nations; he will enter into judgment with all flesh: as for the wicked, he will give them to the sword, saith Jehovah. Thus saith Jehovah of hosts, Behold, evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and a great tempest shall be raised up from the uttermost parts of the earth. And the slain of Jehovah shall be at that day from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth: they shall not be lamented, neither gathered, nor buried; they shall be dung upon the face of the ground" (Jer. 25:29-33).

"and give them a charge unto their masters, saying, Thus saith Jehovah of hosts, the God of Israel, Thus shall ye say unto your masters: I have made the earth, the men and the beasts that are upon the face of the earth, by my great power and by my outstretched arm; and I give it unto whom it seemeth right unto me” (Jer. 27:4-5).

“The word that came to Jeremiah from Jehovah, saying, Thus speaketh Jehovah, the God of Israel, saying, Write thee all the words that I have spoken unto thee in a book. For, lo, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will turn again the captivity of my people Israel and Judah, saith Jehovah; and I will cause them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it. And these are the words that Jehovah spake concerning Israel and concerning Judah. For thus saith Jehovah: We have heard a voice of trembling, of fear, and not of peace. Ask ye now, and see whether a man doth travail with child: wherefore do I see every man with his hands on his loins, as a woman in travail, and all faces are turned into paleness? Alas! for that day is great, so that none is like it: it is even the time of Jacob’s trouble; but he shall be saved out of it. And it shall come to pass in that day, saith Jehovah of hosts, that I will break his yoke from off thy neck, and will burst thy bonds; and strangers shall no more make him their bondman; but they shall serve Jehovah their God, and David their king, whom I will raise up unto them. Therefore fear thou not, O Jacob my servant, saith Jehovah; neither be dismayed, O Israel: for, lo, I will save thee from afar, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and shall be quiet and at ease, and none shall make him afraid. For I am with thee, saith Jehovah, to save thee: for I will make a full end of all the nations whither I have scattered thee, but I will not make a full end of thee; but I will correct thee in measure, and will in no wise leave thee unpunished. For thus saith Jehovah, Thy hurt is incurable, and thy wound grievous. There is none to plead thy cause, that thou mayest be bound up: thou hast no healing medicines. All thy lovers have forgotten thee; they seek thee not: for I have wounded thee with the wound of an enemy, with the chastisement of a cruel one, for the greatness of thine iniquity, because thy sins were increased. Why criest thou for thy hurt? thy pain is incurable: for the greatness of thine iniquity, because thy sins were increased, I have done these things unto thee. Therefore all they that devour thee shall be devoured; and all thine adversaries, every one of them, shall go into captivity; and they that despoil thee shall be a spoil, and all that prey upon thee will I give for a prey. For I will restore health unto thee, and I will heal thee of thy wounds, saith Jehovah; because they have called thee an outcast, saying, It is Zion, whom no man seeketh after. Thus saith Jehovah: Behold, I will turn again the captivity of Jacob’s tents, and have compassion on his dwelling- places; and the city shall be builded upon its own hill, and the palace shall be inhabited after its own manner. And out of them shall proceed thanksgiving and the voice of them that make merry: and I will multiply them, and they shall not be few; I will also glorify them, and they shall not be small. Their children also shall be as aforetime, and their congregation shall be established before me; and I will punish all that oppress them. And their prince shall be of themselves, and their ruler shall proceed from the midst of them; and I will cause him to draw near, and he shall approach unto me: for who is he that hath had boldness to approach unto me? saith Jehovah. And ye shall be my people, and I will be your God. Behold, the tempest of Jehovah, even his wrath, is gone forth, a sweeping tempest: it shall burst upon the head of the wicked. The fierce anger of Jehovah shall not return, until he have executed, and till he have performed the intents of his heart: in the latter days ye shall understand it" (Jer. 30:1-24).

"At that time [see Jer. 30], saith Jehovah, will I be the God of all the families of Israel, and they shall be my people" (Jer. 31:1).

"Behold, I will bring them from the north country, and gather them from the uttermost parts of the earth, and with them the blind and the lame, the woman with child and her that travaileth with child together: a great company shall they return hither. They shall come with weeping; and with supplications will I lead them: I will cause them to walk by rivers of waters, in a straight way wherein they shall not stumble; for I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my first-born. Hear the word of Jehovah, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off; and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him, as shepherd doth his flock. For Jehovah hath ransomed Jacob, and redeemed him from the hand of him that was stronger than he. And they shall come and sing in the height of Zion, and shall flow unto the goodness of Jehovah, to the grain, and to the new wine, and to the oil, and to the young of the flock and of the herd: and their soul shall be as a watered garden; and they shall not sorrow any more at all" (Jer. 31:8-12).

"Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will sow the house of Israel and the house of Judah with the seed of man, and with the seed of beast. And it shall come to pass that, like as I have watched over them to pluck up and to break down and to overthrow and to destroy and to afflict, so will I watch over them to build and to plant, saith Jehovah" (Jer. 31:27-28).

“Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was a husband unto them, saith Jehovah. But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith Jehovah: I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write it; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people: and they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know Jehovah; for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith Jehovah: for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin will I remember no more. Thus saith Jehovah, who giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, who stirreth up the sea, so that the waves thereof roar; Jehovah of hosts is his name: If these ordinances depart from before me, saith Jehovah, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever. Thus saith Jehovah: If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, then will I also cast off all the seed of Israel for all that they have done, saith Jehovah” (Jer. 31:31-37).

“Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that the city shall be built to Jehovah from the tower of Hananel unto the gate of the corner. And the measuring line shall go out further straight onward unto the hill Gareb, and shall turn about unto Goah. And the whole valley of the dead bodies and of the ashes, and all the fields unto the brook Kidron, unto the corner of the horse gate toward the east, shall be holy unto Jehovah; it shall not be plucked up, nor thrown down any more for ever” (Jer. 31:38-40).

“Behold, I will gather them out of all the countries, whither I have driven them in mine anger, and in my wrath, and in great indignation; and I will bring them again unto this place [Jerusalem, vs. 36], and I will cause them to dwell safely: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God: and I will give them one heart and one way, that they may fear me for ever, for the good of them, and of their children after them: and I will make an everlasting covenant with them, that I will not turn away from following them, to do them good; and I will put my fear in their hearts, that they may not depart from me. Yea, I will rejoice over them to do them good, and I will plant them in this land assuredly with my whole heart and with my whole soul” (Jer. 32:37-41).

“And I will cause the captivity of Judah and the captivity of Israel to return, and will build them, as at the first. And I will cleanse them from all their iniquity, whereby they have sinned against me; and I will pardon all their iniquities, whereby they have sinned against me, and whereby they have transgressed against me. And this city shall be to me for a name of joy, for a praise and for a glory, before all the nations of the earth, which shall hear all the good that I do unto them, and shall fear and tremble for all the good and for all the peace that I procure unto it. Thus saith Jehovah: Yet again there shall be heard in this place, whereof ye say, It is waste, without man and without beast, even in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, that are desolate, without man and without inhabitant and without beast, the voice of joy and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride, the voice of them that say, Give thanks to Jehovah of hosts, for Jehovah is good, for his lovingkindness endureth for ever; and of them that bring sacrifices of thanksgiving into the house of Jehovah. For I will cause the captivity of the land to return as at the first, saith Jehovah. Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: Yet again shall there be in this place, which is waste, without man and without beast, and in all the cities thereof, a habitation of shepherds causing their flocks to lie down. In the cities of the hill-country, in the cities of the lowland, and in the cities of the South, and in the land of Benjamin, and in the places about Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, shall the flocks again pass under the hands of him that numbereth them, saith Jehovah. Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will perform that good word which I have spoken concerning the house of Israel and concerning the house of Judah. In those days, and at that time, will I cause a Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he shall execute justice and righteousness in the land. In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely; and this is the name whereby she shall be called: Jehovah our righteousness. For thus saith Jehovah: David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel; neither shall the priests the Levites want a man before me to offer burnt-offerings, and to burn meal-offerings, and to do sacrifice continually. And the word of Jehovah came unto Jeremiah, saying, Thus saith Jehovah: If ye can break my covenant of the day, and my covenant of the night, so that there shall not be day and night in their season; then may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, that he shall not have a son to reign upon his throne; and with the Levites the priests, my ministers. As the host of heaven cannot be numbered, neither the sand of the sea measured; so will I multiply the seed of David my servant, and the Levites that minister unto me. And the word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah, saying, Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying, The two families which Jehovah did choose, he hath cast them off? thus do they despise my people, that they should be no more a nation before them. Thus saith Jehovah: If my covenant of day and night stand not, if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth; then will I also cast away the seed of Jacob, and of David my servant, so that I will not take of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: for I will cause their captivity to return, and will have mercy on them" (Jer. 33:7-26).

"Fear not thou, O Jacob my servant, saith Jehovah; for I am with thee: for I will make a full end of all the nations whither I have driven thee; but I will not make a full end of thee, but I will correct thee in measure, and will in no wise leave thee unpunished" (Jer. 46:28).

Ezekiel

"Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: I will gather you from the peoples, and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel. And they shall come thither, and they shall take away all the detestable things thereof and all the abominations thereof from thence. And I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them a heart of flesh; that they may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances, and do them: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God. But as for them whose heart walketh after the heart of their detestable things and their abominations, I will bring their way upon their own heads, saith the Lord Jehovah" (Ezek. 11:17-21).

"Nevertheless I will remember my covenant with thee in the days of thy youth, and I will establish unto thee an everlasting covenant. Then shalt thou remember thy ways, and be ashamed, when thou shalt receive thy sisters, thine elder sisters and thy younger; and I will give them unto thee for daughters, but not by thy covenant. And I will establish my covenant with thee; and thou shalt know that I am Jehovah" (Ezek. 16:60-62)

“As I live, saith the Lord Jehovah, surely with a mighty hand, and with an outstretched arm, and with wrath poured out, will I be king over you: and I will bring you out from the peoples, and will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with an outstretched arm, and with wrath poured out; and I will bring you into the wilderness of the peoples, and there will I enter into judgment with you face to face. Like as I entered into judgment with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so will I enter into judgment with you, saith the Lord Jehovah. And I will cause you to pass under the rod, and I will bring you into the bond of the covenant; and I will purge out from among you the rebels, and them that transgress against me; I will bring them forth out of the land where they sojourn, but they shall not enter into the land of Israel: and ye shall know that I am Jehovah. As for you, O house of Israel, thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Go ye, serve every one his idols, and hereafter also, if ye will not hearken unto me; but my holy name shall ye no more profane with your gifts, and with your idols. For in my holy mountain, in the mountain of the height of Israel, saith the Lord Jehovah, there shall all the house of Israel, all of them, serve me in the land: there will I accept them, and there will I require your offerings, and the first-fruits of your oblations, with all your holy things. As a sweet savor will I accept you, when I bring you out from the peoples, and gather you out of the countries wherein ye have been scattered; and I will be sanctified in you in the sight of the nations. And ye shall know that I am Jehovah, when I shall bring you into the land of Israel, into the country which I swear to give unto your fathers. And there shall ye remember your ways, and all your doings, wherein ye have polluted yourselves; and ye shall loathe yourselves in your own sight for all your evils that ye have committed” (Ezek. 20:33-43).

“And thou, O deadly wounded wicked one, the prince of Israel, whose day is come, in the time of the iniquity of the end, thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Remove the mitre, and take off the crown; this shall be no more the same; exalt that which is low, and abase that which is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it: this also shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him” (Ezek. 21:25-27).

“Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: When I shall have gathered the house of Israel from the peoples among whom they are scattered, and shall be sanctified in them in the sight of the nations, then shall they dwell in their own land which I gave to my ser- vant Jacob. And they shall dwell securely therein; yea, they shall build houses, and plant vineyards, and shall dwell securely, when I have executed judgments upon all those that do them despite round about them; and they shall know that I am Jehovah their God” (Ezek. 28:25-26).

“For thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Behold, I myself, even I, will search for my sheep, and will seek them out. As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered abroad, so will I seek out my sheep; and I will deliver them out of all places whither they have been scattered in the cloudy and dark day. And I will bring them out from the peoples, and gather them from the countries, and will bring them into their own land; and I will feed them upon the mountains of Israel, by the watercourses, and in all the inhabited places of the country. I will feed them with good pasture; and upon the mountains of the height of Israel shall their fold be: there shall they lie down in a good fold; and on fat pasture shall they feed upon the mountains of Israel. I myself will be the shepherd of my sheep, and I will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord Jehovah. I will seek that which was lost, and will bring back that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick: but the fat and the strong I will destroy; I will feed them in justice. And as for you, O my flock, thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Behold, I judge between sheep and sheep, the rams and the he-goats. Seemeth it a small thing unto you to have fed upon the good pasture, but ye must tread down with your feet the residue of your pasture? and to have drunk of the clear waters, but ye must foul the residue with your feet? And as for my sheep, they eat that which ye have trodden with your feet, and they drink that which ye have fouled with your feet. Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah unto them: Behold, I, even I, will judge between the fat sheep and the lean sheep. Because ye thrust with side and with shoulder, and push all the diseased with your horns, till ye have scattered them abroad; therefore will I save my flock, and they shall no more be a prey; and I will judge between sheep and sheep. And I will set up one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David; he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd. And I, Jehovah, will be their God, and my servant David prince among them; I, Jehovah, have spoken it. And I will make with them a covenant of peace, and will cause evil beasts to cease out of the land; and they shall dwell securely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods. And I will make them and the places round about my hill a blessing; and I will cause the shower to come down in its season; there shall be showers of blessing. And the tree of the field shall yield its fruit, and the earth shall yield its increase, and they shall be secure in their land; and they shall know that I am Jehovah, when I have broken the bars of their yoke, and have delivered them out of the hand of those that made bondmen of them. And they shall no more be a prey to the nations, neither shall the beasts of the earth devour them; but they shall dwell securely, and none shall make them afraid. And I will raise up unto them a plantation for renown, and they shall be no more consumed with famine in the land, neither bear the shame of the nations any more. And they shall know that I, Jehovah, their God am with them, and that they, the house of Israel, are my people, saith the Lord Jehovah. And ye my sheep, the sheep of my pasture, are men, and I am your God, saith the Lord Jehovah" (Ezek. 34:11-31).

"And thou, son of man, prophesy unto the mountains of Israel, and say, Ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of Jehovah. Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Because the enemy hath said against you, Aha! and, The ancient high places are ours in possession; therefore prophesy, and say, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Because, even because they have made you desolate, and swallowed you up on every side, that ye might be a possession unto the residue of the nations, and ye are taken up in the lips of talkers, and the evil report of the people; therefore, ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord Jehovah: Thus saith the Lord Jehovah to the mountains and to the hills, to the watercourses and to the valleys, to the desolate wastes and to the cities that are forsaken, which are become a prey and derision to the residue of the nations that are round about; therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Surely in the fire of my jealousy have I spoken against the residue of the nations, and against all Edom, that have appointed my land unto themselves for a possession with the joy of all their heart, with despite of soul, to cast it out for a prey. Therefore prophesy concerning the land of Israel, and say unto the mountains and to the hills, to the watercourses and to the valleys, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Behold, I have spoken in my jealousy and in my wrath, because ye have borne the shame of the nations: therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah: I have sworn, saying, Surely the nations that are round about you, they shall bear their shame. But ye, O mountains of Israel, ye shall shoot forth your branches, and yield your fruit to my people Israel; for they are at hand to come. For, behold, I am for you, and I will turn into you, and ye shall be tilled and sown; and I will multiply men upon you, all the house of Israel, even all of it; and the cities shall be inhabited, and the waste places shall be builded; and I will multiply upon you man and beast; and they shall increase and be fruitful; and I will cause you to be inhabited after your former estate, and will do better unto you than at your beginnings: and ye shall know that I am Jehovah. Yea, I will cause men to walk upon you, even my people Israel; and they shall possess thee, and thou shalt be their inheritance, and thou shalt no more henceforth bereave them of children. Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Because they say unto you, Thou land art a devourer of men, and hast been a bereaver of thy nation; therefore thou shalt devour men no more, neither bereave thy nation any more, saith the Lord Jehovah; neither will I let thee hear any more the shame of the nations, neither shalt thou bear the reproach of the peoples any more, neither shalt thou cause thy nation to stumble any more, saith the Lord Jehovah. Moreover the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying, Son of man, when the house of Israel dwelt in their own land, they defiled it by their way and by their doings: their way before me was as the uncleanness of a woman in her impurity. Wherefore I poured out my wrath upon them for the blood which they had poured out upon the land, and because they had defiled it with their idols; and I scattered them among the nations, and they were dispersed through the countries: according to their way and according to their doings I judged them. And when they came unto the nations, whither they went, they profaned my holy name; in that men said of them, These are the people of Jehovah, and are gone forth out of his land. But I had regard for my holy name, which the house of Israel had profaned among the nations, whither they went. Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: I do not this for your sake, O house of Israel, but for my holy name, which ye have profaned among the nations, whither ye went. And I will sanctify my great name, which hath been profaned among the nations, which ye have profaned in the midst of them; and the nations shall know that I am Jehovah, saith the Lord Jehovah, when I shall be sanctified in you before their eyes. For I will take you from among the nations, and gather you out of all the countries, and will bring you into your own land. And I will

sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you a heart of flesh. And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep mine ordinances, and do them. And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God. And I will save you from all your uncleannesses: and I will call for the grain, and will multiply it, and lay no famine upon you. And I will multiply the fruit of the tree, and the increase of the field, that ye may receive no more the reproach of famine among the nations. Then shall ye remember your evil ways, and your doings that were not good; and ye shall loathe yourselves in your own sight for your iniquities and for your abominations. Nor for your sake do I this, saith the Lord Jehovah, be it known unto you: be ashamed and confounded for your ways, O house of Israel. Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: In the day that I cleanse you from all your iniquities, I will cause the cities to be inhabited, and the waste places shall be builded. And the land that was desolate shall be tilled, whereas it was a desolation in the sight of all that passed by. And they shall say, This land that was desolate is become like the garden of Eden; and the waste and desolate and ruined cities are fortified and inhabited. Then the nations that are left round about you shall know that I, Jehovah, have builded the ruined places, and planted that which was desolate: I, Jehovah, have spoken it, and I will do it. Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: For this, moreover, will I be inquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them: I will increase them with men like a flock. As the flock for sacrifice, as the flock of Jerusalem in her appointed feasts, so shall the waste cities be filled with flocks of men; and they shall know that I am Jehovah” (Ezek. 36:1-38).

“The hand of Jehovah was upon me, and he brought me out in the Spirit of Jehovah, and set me down in the midst of the valley; and it was full of bones. And he caused me to pass by them round about: and, behold, there were very many in the open valley; and, lo, they were very dry. And he said unto me, Son of man, can these bones live? And I answered, O Lord Jehovah, thou knowest. Again he said unto me, Prophecy over these bones, and say unto them, O ye dry bones, hear the word of Jehovah. Thus saith the Lord Jehovah unto these bones: Behold, I will cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live. And I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live; and ye shall know that I am Jehovah. So I prophesied as I was commanded: and as I prophesied, there was a noise, and, behold, an earthquake; and the bones came together, bone to its bone. And I beheld, and, lo, there were sinews upon them, and flesh came up, and skin covered them above; but there was no breath in them. Then said he unto me, Prophecy unto the wind, prophecy, son of man, and say to the wind, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live. So I prophesied as he commanded me, and the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood up upon their feet, an exceeding great army. Then he said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel: behold, they say, Our bones are dried up, and our hope is lost; we are clean cut off. Therefore prophecy, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Behold, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, O my people; and I will bring you into the land of Israel. And ye shall know that I am Jehovah, when I have opened your graves, and caused you to come up out of your graves, O my people. And I will put my Spirit in you, and ye shall live, and I will place you in your own land: and ye shall know that I, Jehovah, have spoken it and performed it, saith Jehovah. The word of Jehovah came again unto me, saying, And thou, son of man, take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions: then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions: and join them for thee one to another into one stick, that they may become one in thy hand. And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, Wilt thou not show us what thou meanest by these? say unto them, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his companions; and I will put them with it, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in my hand. And the sticks whereon thou writest shall be in thy hand before their eyes. And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the nations, whither they are gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land: and I will make them one nation in the land, upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all; and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all; neither shall they defile themselves any more with their idols, nor with their detestable things, nor with any of their transgressions; but I will save them out of all their dwelling-places, wherein they have sinned, and will cleanse them: so shall they be my people, and I will be their God. And my servant David shall be king over them; and they all shall have one shepherd: they shall also walk in mine ordinances, and observe my statutes, and do them. And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers dwelt; and they shall dwell therein, they, and their children, and their children's children, for ever: and David my servant shall be their prince for ever. Moreover I will make a covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them; and I will place them, and multiply them, and will set my sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore. My tabernacle also shall be with them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. And the nations shall know that I am Jehovah that sanctifieth Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for evermore" (Ezek. 37:1-28).

"And I will set my glory among the nations; and all the nations shall see my judgment that I have executed, and my hand that I have laid upon them. So the house of Israel shall know that I am Jehovah their God, from that day and forward. And the nations shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity; because they trespassed against me, and I hid my face from them: so I gave them into the hand of their adversaries, and they fell all of them by the sword. According to their uncleanness and according to their transgressions did I unto them; and I hid my face from them. Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Now will I bring back the captivity of Jacob, and have mercy upon the whole house of Israel; and I will be jealous for my holy name. And they shall bear their shame, and all their trespasses whereby they have trespassed against me, when they shall dwell securely in their land, and none shall make them afraid; when I have brought them back from the peoples, and gathered them out of their enemies' lands, and am sanctified in them in the sight of many nations. And they shall know that I am Jehovah their God, in that I caused them to go into captivity among the nations, and have gathered them unto their own land; and I will leave none of them any more there; neither will I hide my face any more from them; for I have poured out my Spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord Jehovah" (Ezek. 39:21-29).

“It shall be eighteen thousand reeds round about: and the name of the city [Jerusalem] from that day shall be, Jehovah is there” (Ezek. 48:35).

Daniel

“answered and said, Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever; for wisdom and might are his. And he changeth the times and the seasons; he removeth kings, and setteth up kings; he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that have understanding” (Dan. 2:20-21)

“And in the days of those kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, nor shall the sovereignty thereof be left to another people; but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever. Forasmuch as thou sawest that a stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold; the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter: and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure” (Dan. 2:44-45).

“The sentence is by the decree of the watchers, and the demand by the word of the holy ones; to the intent that the living may know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the lowest of men” (Dan. 4:17).

“that thou [Nebuchadnezzar] shalt be driven from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field, and thou shalt be made to eat grass as oxen, and shalt be wet with the dew of heaven, and seven times shall pass over thee; till thou know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will” (Dan. 4:25).

“And at the end of the days I, Nebuchadnezzar, lifted up mine eyes unto heaven, and mine understanding returned unto me, and I blessed the Most High, and I praised and honored him that liveth for ever; for his dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom from generation to generation. And all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing; and he doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth; and none can stay his hand, or say unto him, What doest thou” (Dan. 4:34-35)?

“I saw in the night-visions, and, behold, there came with the clouds of heaven one like unto a son of man, and he came even to the ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all the peoples, nations, and languages should serve him: his do- minion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed” (Dan. 7:13-14).

“These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, that shall arise out of the earth. But the saints of the Most High shall receive the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever” (Dan. 7:17-18).

“And he shall speak words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High; and he shall think to change the times and the law; and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and half a time. But the judgment shall be set, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end. And the kingdom and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdoms under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High: his kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him” (Dan. 7:25-27).

“Now I am come to make thee understand what shall befall thy people in the latter days; for the vision is yet for many days” (Dan. 10:14)

“And the king shall do according to his will; and he shall exalt himself, and magnify himself above every god, and shall speak marvellous things against the God of gods; and he shall prosper till the indignation be accomplished; for that which is determined shall be done. Neither shall he regard the gods of his fathers, nor the desire of women, nor regard any god; for he shall magnify himself above all” (Dan. 11:36-37)

“And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince who standeth for the children of thy people; and there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time: and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book. And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt. And they that are wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever. But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end: many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased” (Dan. 12:1-4)

“And he said, Go thy way, Daniel; for the words are shut up and sealed till the time of the end. Many shall purify themselves, and make themselves white, and be refined; but the wicked shall do

wickedly; and none of the wicked shall understand; but they that are wise shall understand” (Dan. 12:9-10)

The Minor Prophets

Hosea

“Therefore, behold, I will allure her, and bring her into the wilderness, and speak comfortably unto her. And I will give her her vineyards from thence, and the valley of Achor for a door of hope; and she shall make answer there, as in the days of her youth, and as in the day when she came up out of the land of Egypt. And it shall be at that day, saith Jehovah, that thou shalt call me Ishi [my husband], and shalt call me no more Baali [my owner]. For I will take away the names of the Baalim out of her mouth, and they shall no more be mentioned by their name. And in that day will I make a covenant for them with the beasts of the field, and with the birds of the heavens, and with the creeping things of the ground: and I will break the bow and the sword and the battle out of the land, and will make them to lie down safely. And I will betroth thee unto me for ever; yea, I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness, and in justice, and in lovingkindness, and in mercies. I will even betroth thee unto me in faithfulness; and thou shalt know Jehovah. And it shall come to pass in that day, I will answer, saith Jehovah, I will answer the heavens, and they shall answer the earth; and the earth shall answer the grain, and the new wine, and the oil; and they shall answer Jezreel. And I will sow her unto me in the earth; and I will have mercy upon her that had not obtained mercy; and I will say to them that were not my people, Thou art my people; and they shall say, Thou art my God” (Hos. 2:14-23).

“For the children of Israel shall abide many days without king, and without prince, and without sacrifice, and without pillar, and without ephod or teraphim: afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek Jehovah their God, and David their king, and shall come with fear unto Jehovah and to his goodness in the latter days” (Hos. 3:4-5).

“Come, and let us return unto Jehovah; for he hath torn, and he will heal us; he hath smitten, and he will bind us up. After two days will he revive us: on the third day he will raise us up, and we shall live before him. And let us know, let us follow on to know Jehovah: his going forth is sure as the morning; and he will come unto us as the rain, as the latter rain that watereth the earth" (Hos. 6:1-3).

"They shall walk after Jehovah, who will roar like a lion; for he will roar, and the children shall come trembling from the west. They shall come trembling as a bird out of Egypt, and as a dove out of the land of Assyria; and I will make them to dwell in their houses, saith Jehovah" (Hos. 11:10-11).

"I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely; for mine anger is turned away from him. I will be as the dew unto Israel; he shall blossom as the lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon. His branches shall spread, and his beauty shall be as the olive-tree, and his smell as Lebanon. They that dwell under his shadow shall return; they shall revive as the grain, and blossom as the vine: the scent thereof shall be as the wine of Lebanon. Ephraim shall say, What have I to do any more with idols? I have answered, and will regard him: I am like a green fir-tree; from me is thy fruit found" (Hos. 14:4-8).

Joel

"Yet even now, saith Jehovah, turn ye unto me with all your heart, and with fasting, and with weeping, and with mourning: and rend your heart, and not your garments, and turn unto Jehovah your God; for he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and abundant in lovingkindness, and repenteth him of the evil. Who knoweth whether he will not turn and repent, and leave a blessing behind him, even a meal-offering and a drink-offering unto Jehovah your God? Blow the trumpet in Zion, sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly; gather the people, sanctify the assembly, assemble the old men, gather the children, and those that suck the breasts; let the bridegroom go forth from his chamber, and the bride out of her closet. Let the priests, the ministers of Jehovah, weep between the porch and the altar, and let them say, Spare thy people, O Jehovah, and give not thy heritage to reproach, that the nations should rule over them: wherefore should they say among the peoples, Where is their God? Then was Jehovah jealous for his land, and had pity on his people. And Jehovah answered and said unto his people, Behold, I will send you grain, and new wine, and oil, and ye shall be satisfied therewith; and I will no more make you a reproach among the nations; but I will remove far off from you the northern army, and will drive it into a land barren and desolate, its forepart into the eastern sea, and its hinder* part into the western sea; and its stench shall come up, and its ill savor shall come up, because it hath done great things. Fear not, O land, be glad and rejoice; for Jehovah hath done great things. Be not afraid, ye beasts of the field; for the pastures of the wilderness do spring, for the tree beareth its fruit, the fig-tree and the vine do yield their strength. Be glad then, ye children of Zion, and rejoice in Jehovah your God; for he giveth you the former rain in just measure, and he causeth to come down for you the rain, the former rain and the latter rain, in the first month. And the floors shall be full of wheat, and the vats shall overflow with new wine and oil. And I will restore to you the years that the locust hath eaten, the canker-worm, and the caterpillar, and the palmer-worm, my great army which I sent among you. And ye shall eat in plenty and be satisfied, and shall praise the name of Jehovah your God, that hath dealt wondrously with you; and my people shall never be put to shame. And ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel, and that I am Jehovah your God, and there is none else; and my people shall never be put to shame. And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions: and also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my Spirit. And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth: blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and terrible day of Jehovah cometh. And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of Jehovah shall be delivered; for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem there shall be those that escape, as Jehovah hath said, and among the remnant those whom Jehovah doth call” (Joel 2:12-32).

“For, behold, in those days, and in that time, when I shall bring back the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem, I will gather all nations, and will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat; and I will execute judgment upon them there for my people and for my heritage Israel, whom they have scattered among the nations: and they have parted my land, and have cast lots for my people, and have given a boy for a harlot, and sold a girl for wine, that they may drink. Yea, and what are ye to me, O Tyre, and Sidon, and all the regions of Philistia? will ye render me a recompense? and if ye recompense me, swiftly and speedily will I return your recompense upon your own head. Forasmuch as ye have taken my silver and my gold, and have carried into your temples my goodly precious things, and have sold the children of Judah and the children of Jerusalem unto the sons of the Grecians, that ye may remove them far from their border; behold, I will stir them up out of the place whither ye have sold them, and will return your recompense upon your own head; and I will sell your sons and your daughters into the hand of the children of Judah, and they shall sell them to the men of Sheba, to a nation far off: for Jehovah hath spoken it. Proclaim ye this among the nations; prepare war; stir up the mighty men; let all the men of war draw near, let them come up. Beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruning-hooks into spears: let the weak say, I am strong. Haste ye, and come, all ye nations round about, and gather yourselves together: thither cause thy mighty ones to come down, O Jehovah. Let the nations bestir themselves, and come up to the valley of Jehoshaphat; for there will I sit to judge all the nations round about. Put ye in the sickle; for the harvest is ripe: come, tread ye; for the winepress is full, the vats overflow; for their wickedness is great. Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision! for the day of Jehovah is near in the valley of decision. The sun and the moon are darkened, and the stars withdraw their shining. And Jehovah will roar from Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem; and the heavens and the earth shall shake: but Jehovah will be a refuge unto his people, and a stronghold to the children of Israel. So shall ye know that I am Jehovah your God, dwelling in Zion my holy mountain: then shall Jerusalem be holy, and there shall no strangers pass through her any more. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the mountains shall drop down sweet wine, and the hills shall flow with milk, and all the brooks of Judah shall flow with waters; and a fountain shall come forth from the house of Jehovah, and shall water the valley of Shittim. Egypt shall be a desolation, and Edom shall be a desolate wilderness, for the violence done to the children of Judah, because they have shed innocent blood in their land. But Judah shall abide for ever, and Jerusalem from generation to generation. And I will cleanse their blood, that I have not cleansed: for Jehovah dwelleth in Zion” (Joel 3:1-21).

Amos

“Behold, the eyes of the Lord Jehovah are upon the sinful kingdom, and I will destroy it from off the face of the earth; save that I will not utterly destroy the house of Jacob, saith Jehovah. For, lo, I will command, and I will sift the house of Israel among all the nations, like as grain is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least kernel fall upon the earth. All the sinners of my people shall die by the sword, who say, The evil shall not overtake nor meet us. In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof; and I will raise up its ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old; that they may possess the remnant of Edom, and all the nations that are called by my name, saith Jehovah that doeth this. Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt. And I will bring back the captivity of my people Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them. And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be plucked up out of their land which I have given them, saith Jehovah thy God” (Amos 9:8-15).

Micah

“I will surely assemble, O Jacob, all of thee; I will surely gather the remnant of Israel; I will put them together as the sheep of Bozrah, as a flock in the midst of their pasture; they shall make great noise by reason of the multitude of men. The breaker is gone up before them: they have broken forth and passed on to the gate, and are gone out thereat; and their king is passed on before them, and Jehovah at the head of them” (Mic. 2:12-13).

“But in the latter days it shall come to pass, that the mountain of Jehovah’s house shall be established on the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and peoples shall flow unto it. And many nations shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of Jehovah, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths. For out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of Jehovah from Jerusalem; and he will judge between many peoples, and will decide concerning strong nations afar off: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig-tree; and none shall make them afraid: for the mouth of Jehovah of hosts hath spoken it. For all the peoples walk every one in the name of his god; and we will walk in the name of Jehovah our God for ever and ever. In that day, saith Jehovah, will I assemble that which is lame, and I will gather that which is driven away, and that which I have afflicted; and I will make that which was lame a remnant, and that which was cast far off a strong nation: and Jehovah will reign over them in mount Zion from henceforth even for ever. And thou, O tower of the flock, the hill of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, yea, the former dominion shall come, the kingdom of the daughter of Jerusalem. Now why dost thou cry out aloud? Is there no king in thee, is thy counsellor perished, that pangs have taken hold of thee as of a woman in travail? Be in pain, and labor to bring forth, O daughter of Zion, like a woman in travail; for now shalt thou go forth out of the city, and shalt dwell in the field, and shalt come even unto Babylon: there shalt thou be rescued; there will Jehovah redeem thee from the hand of thine enemies. And now many nations are assembled against thee, that say, Let her be defiled, and let our eye see our desire upon Zion. But they know not the thoughts of Jehovah, neither understand they his counsel; for he hath gathered them as the sheaves to the threshing-floor. Arise and thresh, O daughter of Zion; for I will make thy horn iron, and I will make thy hoofs brass; and thou shalt beat in pieces many peoples: and I will devote their gain unto Jehovah, and their substance unto the Lord of the whole earth” (Mic. 4:1-13).

“Now shalt thou gather thyself in troops, O daughter of troops: he hath laid siege against us; they shall smite the judge of Israel with a rod upon the cheek. But thou, Beth-lehem Ephrathah, which art little to be among the thousands of Judah, out of thee shall one come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth are from of old, from everlasting. Therefore will he give them up, until the time that she who travaileth hath brought forth: then the residue of his brethren shall return unto the children of Israel. And he shall stand, and shall feed his flock in the strength of Jehovah, in the majesty of the name of Jehovah his God: and they shall abide; for now shall he be great unto the ends of the earth. And this man shall be our peace. When the Assyrian shall come into our land, and when he shall tread in our palaces, then shall we raise against him seven shepherds, and eight principal men. And they shall waste the land of Assyria with the sword, and the land of Nimrod in the entrances thereof: and he shall deliver us from the Assyrian, when he cometh into our land, and when he treadeth within our border. And the remnant of Jacob shall be in the midst of many peoples as dew from Jehovah, as showers upon the grass, that tarry not for man, nor wait for the sons of men. And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the nations, in the midst of many peoples, as a lion among the beasts of the forest, as a young lion among the flocks of sheep; who, if he go through, treadeth down and teareth in pieces, and there is none to deliver. Let thy hand be lifted up above thine adversaries, and let all thine enemies be cut off. And it shall come to pass in that day, saith Jehovah, that I will cut off thy horses out of the midst of thee, and will destroy thy chariots: and I will cut off the cities of thy land, and will throw down all thy strongholds. And I will cut off witchcrafts out of thy hand; and thou shalt have no more soothsayers: and I will cut off thy graven images and thy pillars out of the midst of thee; and thou shalt no more worship the work of thy hands; and I will pluck up thine Asherim out of the midst of thee; and I will destroy thy cities. And I will execute vengeance in anger and wrath upon the nations which have hearkened not" (Mic. 5:1-15).

"As in the days of thy coming forth out of the land of Egypt will I show unto them marvellous things. The nations shall see and be ashamed of all their might; they shall lay their hand upon their mouth; their ears shall be deaf. They shall lick the dust like a serpent; like crawling things of the earth they shall come trembling out of their close places; they shall come with fear unto Jehovah our God, and shall be afraid because of thee. Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity, and passeth over the transgression of the remnant of his heritage? he retaineth not his anger for ever, because he delighteth in lovingkindness. He will again have compassion upon us; he will tread our iniquities under foot; and thou wilt cast all their sins into the depths of the sea. Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob, and the lovingkindness to Abraham, which thou hast sworn unto our fathers from the days of old" (Mic. 7:15-20).

Habakkuk

"For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of Jehovah, as the waters cover the sea" (Hab. 2:14).

Zephaniah

of the earth, that have kept his ordinances; seek righteousness, seek meekness: it may be ye will be hid in the day of Jehovah's anger" (Zeph. 2:1-3).

"For then will I turn to the peoples of a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of Jehovah, to serve him with one consent. From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia my suppliants, even the daughter of my dispersed, shall bring mine offering. In that day shalt thou not be put to shame for all thy doings, wherein thou hast transgressed against me; for then I will take away out of the midst of thee thy proudly exulting ones, and thou shalt no more be haughty in my holy mountain. But I will leave in the midst of thee an afflicted and poor people, and they shall take refuge in the name of Jehovah. The remnant of Israel shall not do iniquity, nor speak lies; neither shall a deceitful tongue be found in their mouth; for they shall feed and lie down, and none shall make them afraid. Sing, O daughter of Zion; shout, O Israel; be glad and rejoice with all the heart, O daughter of Jerusalem. Jehovah hath taken away thy judgments, he hath cast out thine enemy: the King of Israel, even Jehovah, is in the midst of thee; thou shalt not fear evil any more. In that day it shall be said to Jerusalem, Fear thou not; O Zion, let not thy hands be slack. Jehovah thy God is in the midst of thee, a mighty one who will save; he will rejoice over thee with joy; he will rest in his love; he will joy over thee with singing. I will gather them that sorrow for the solemn assembly, who were of thee; to whom the burden upon her was a reproach. Behold, at that time I will deal with all them that afflict thee; and I will save that which is lame, and gather that which was driven away; and I will make them a praise and a name, whose shame hath been in all the earth. At that time I will bring you in, and at that time will I gather you; for I will make you a name and a praise among all the peoples of the earth, when I bring back your captivity before your eyes, saith Jehovah" (Zeph. 3:9-20).

"For thus saith Jehovah of hosts: Yet once, it is a little while, and I will shake the heavens, and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land; and I will shake all nations; and the precious things of all nations shall come; and I will fill this house with glory, saith Jehovah of hosts. The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith Jehovah of hosts. The latter glory of this house shall be greater than the former, saith Jehovah of hosts; and in this place will I give peace, saith Jehovah of hosts” (Hag. 2:6-9).

Zechariah

“and said unto him, Run, speak to this young man, saying, Jerusalem shall be inhabited as villages without walls, by reason of the multitude of men and cattle therein. For I, saith Jehovah, will be unto her a wall of fire round about, and I will be the glory in the midst of her. Ho, ho, flee from the land of the north, saith Jehovah; for I have spread you abroad as the four winds of the heavens, saith Jehovah” (Zech. 2:4-6).

“For thus saith Jehovah of hosts: After glory hath he sent me unto the nations which plundered you; for he that toucheth you toucheth the apple of his eye. For, behold, I will shake my hand over them, and they shall be a spoil to those that served them; and ye shall know that Jehovah of hosts hath sent me. Sing and rejoice, O daughter of Zion; for, lo, I come, and I will dwell in the midst of thee, saith Jehovah. And many nations shall join themselves to Jehovah in that day, and shall be my people; and I will dwell in the midst of thee, and thou shalt know that Jehovah of hosts has sent me unto thee. And Jehovah shall inherit Judah as his portion in the holy land, and shall yet choose Jerusalem. Be silent, all flesh, before Jehovah; for he is waked up out of his holy habitation” (Zech. 2:8-13).

“and speak unto him, saying, Thus speaketh Jehovah of hosts, saying, Behold, the man whose name is the Branch: and he shall grow up out of his place; and he shall build the temple of Jehovah; even he shall build the temple of Jehovah; and he shall bear the glory, and shall sit and rule upon his throne; and he shall be a priest upon his throne; and the counsel of peace shall be between them both. And the crowns shall be to Helem, and to Tobijah, and to Jedaiah, and to Hen the son of Zephaniah, for a memorial in the temple of Jehovah. And they that are far off shall come and build in the temple of Jehovah; and ye shall know that Jehovah of hosts hath sent me unto you. And this shall come to pass, if ye will diligently obey the voice of Jehovah your God” (Zech. 6:12-15).

“And the word of Jehovah of hosts came to me, saying, Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: I am jealous for Zion with great jealousy, and I am jealous for her with great wrath. Thus saith Jehovah: I am returned unto Zion, and will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem: and Jerusalem shall be called The city of truth; and the mountain of Jehovah of hosts, The holy mountain. Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: There shall yet old men and old women dwell in the streets of Jerusalem, every man with his staff in his hand for very age. And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof. Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: If it be marvellous in the eyes of the remnant of this people in those days, should it also be marvellous in mine eyes? saith Jehovah of hosts. Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: Behold, I will save my people from the east country, and from the west country; and I will bring them, and they shall dwell in the midst of Jerusalem; and they shall be my people, and I will be their God, in truth and in righteousness. Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: Let your hands be strong, ye that hear in these days these words from the mouth of the prophets that were in the day that the foundation of the house of Jehovah of hosts was laid, even the temple, that it might be built. For before those days there was no hire for man, nor any hire for beast; neither was there any peace to him that went out or came in, because of the adversary: for I set all men every one against his neighbor. But now I will not be unto the remnant of this people as in the former days, saith Jehovah of hosts. For there shall be the seed of peace; the vine shall give its fruit, and the ground shall give its increase, and the heavens shall give their dew; and I will cause the remnant of this people to inherit all these things. And it shall come to pass that, as ye were a curse among the nations, O house of Judah and house of Israel, so will I save you, and ye shall be a blessing. Fear not, but let your hands be strong. For thus saith Jehovah of hosts: As I thought to do evil unto you, when your fathers provoked me to wrath, saith Jehovah of hosts, and I repented not; so again have I thought in these days to do good unto Jerusalem and to the house of Judah: fear ye not. These are the things that ye shall do: speak ye every man the truth with his neighbor; execute the judgment of truth and peace in your gates; and let none of you devise evil in your hearts against his neighbor; and love no false oath: for all these are things that I hate, saith Jehovah. And the word of Jehovah of hosts came unto me, saying, Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: The fast of the fourth month, and the fast of the fifth, and the fast of the seventh, and the fast of the tenth, shall be to the house of Judah joy and gladness, and cheerful feasts; therefore love truth and peace. Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: It shall yet come to pass, that there shall come peoples, and the inhabitants of many cities; and the inhabitants of one city shall go to another, saying, Let us go speedily to entreat the favor of Jeho- vah, and to seek Jehovah of hosts: I will go also. Yea, many peoples and strong nations shall come to seek Jehovah of hosts in Jerusalem, and to entreat the favor of Jehovah. Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: In those days it shall come to pass, that ten men shall take hold, out of all the languages of the nations, they shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you, for we have heard that God is with you” (Zech. 8:1-23).

“Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy king cometh unto thee; he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, even upon a colt the foal of an ass. And I will cut off the chariot from Ephraim, and the horse from Jerusalem; and the battle bow shall be cut off; and he shall speak peace unto the nations: and his dominion shall be from sea to sea, and from the River to the ends of the earth” (Zech. 9:9-10).

“Mine anger is kindled against the shepherds, and I will punish the he-goats; for Jehovah of hosts hath visited his flock, the house of Judah, and will make them as his goodly horse in the battle. From him shall come forth the corner-stone, from him the nail, from him the battle bow, from him every ruler together. And they shall be as mighty men, treading down their enemies in the mire of the streets in the battle; and they shall fight, because Jehovah is with them; and the riders on horses shall be confounded. And I will strengthen the house of Judah, and I will save the house of Joseph, and I will bring them back; for I have mercy upon them; and they shall be as though I had not cast them off: for I am Jehovah their God, and I will hear them. And they of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man, and their heart shall rejoice as through wine; yea, their children shall see it, and rejoice; their heart shall be glad in Jehovah. I will hiss for them, and gather them; for I have redeemed them; and they shall increase as they have increased. And I will sow them among the peoples; and they shall remember me in far countries; and they shall live with their children, and shall return. I will bring them again also out of the land of Egypt, and gather them out of Assyria; and I will bring them into the land of Gilead and Lebanon; and place shall not be found for them. And he will pass through the sea of affliction, and will smite the waves in the sea, and all the depths of the Nile shall dry up; and the pride of Assyria shall be brought down, and the sceptre of Egypt shall depart. And I will strengthen them in Jehovah; and they shall walk up and down in his name, saith Jehovah” (Zech. 10:3-12).

“The burden of the word of Jehovah concerning Israel. Thus saith Jehovah, who stretcheth forth the heavens, and layeth the foundation of the earth, and formeth the spirit of man within him: behold, I will make Jerusalem a cup of reeling unto all the peoples round about, and upon Judah also shall it be in the siege against Jerusalem. And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will make Jerusalem a burdensome stone for all the peoples; all that burden themselves with it shall be sore wounded; and all the nations of the earth shall be gathered together against it. In that day, saith Jehovah, I will smite every horse with terror, and his rider with madness; and I will open mine eyes upon the house of Judah, and will smite every horse of the peoples with blindness. And the chieftains of Judah shall say in their heart, The inhabitants of Jerusalem are my strength in Jehovah of hosts their God. In that day will I make the chieftains of Judah like a pan of fire among wood, and like a flaming torch among sheaves; and they shall devour all the peoples round about, on the right hand and on the left; and they of Jerusalem shall yet again dwell in their own place, even in Jerusalem. Jehovah also shall save the tents of Judah first, that the glory of the house of David and the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem be not magnified above Judah. In that day shall Jehovah defend the inhabitants of Jerusalem: and he that is feeble among them at that day shall be as David; and the house of David shall be as God, as the angel of Jehovah before them. And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will seek to destroy all the nations that come against Jerusalem. And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and of supplication; and they shall look unto me whom they have pierced; and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his first-born. In that day shall there be a great mourning in Jerusalem, as the mourning of Hadadrimmon in the valley of Megiddon. And the land shall mourn, every family apart; the family of the house of David apart, and their wives apart; the family of the house of Nathan apart, and their wives apart; the family of the house of Levi apart, and their wives apart; the family of the Shimeites apart, and their wives apart; all the families that remain, every family apart, and their wives apart” (Zech. 12:1-14).

“In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, for sin and for uncleanness” (Zech. 13:1).

“And it shall come to pass, that in all the land, saith Jehovah, two parts therein shall be cut off and die; but the third shall be left therein. And I will bring the third part into the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried. They shall call on my name, and I will hear them: I will say, It is my people; and they shall say, Jehovah is my God” (Zech. 13:8-9).

“Behold, a day of Jehovah cometh, when thy spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee. For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city. Then shall Jehovah go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle. And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east; and the mount of Olives shall be cleft in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south. And ye shall flee by the valley of my mountains; for the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azel; yea, ye shall flee, like as ye fled from before the earthquake in the days of Uzziah king of Judah; and Jehovah my God shall come, and all the holy ones with thee. And it shall come to pass in that day, that there shall not be light; the bright ones shall withdraw themselves: but it shall be one day which is known unto Jehovah; not day, and not night; but it shall come to pass, that at evening time there shall be light. And it shall come to pass in that day, that living waters shall go out from Jerusalem; half of them toward the eastern sea, and half of them toward the western sea: in summer and in winter shall it be. And Jehovah shall be King over all the earth: in that day shall Jehovah be one, and his name one. All the land shall be made like the Arabah, from Geba to Rimmon south of Jerusalem; and she shall be lifted up, and shall dwell in her place, from Benjamin’s gate unto the place of the first gate, unto the corner gate, and from the tower of Hananel unto the king’s wine-presses. And men shall dwell therein, and there shall be no more curse; but Jerusalem shall dwell safely. And this shall be the plague wherewith Jehovah will smite all the peoples that have warred against Jerusalem: their flesh shall consume away while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes shall consume away in their sockets, and their tongue shall consume away in their mouth. And it shall come to pass in that day, that a great tumult from Jehovah shall be among them; and they shall lay hold every one on the hand of his neighbor, and his hand shall rise up against the hand of his neighbor. And Judah also shall fight at Jerusalem; and the wealth of all the nations round about shall be gathered together, gold, and silver, and apparel, in great abundance. And so shall be the plague of the horse, of the mule, of the camel, and of the ass, and of all the beasts that shall be in those camps, as that plague. And it shall come to pass, that every one that is left of all the nations that came against Jerusalem shall go up from year to year to worship the King, Jehovah of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles. And it shall be, that whoso of all the families of the earth goeth not up unto Jerusalem to worship the King, Jehovah of hosts, upon them there shall be no rain. And if the family of Egypt go not up, and come not, neither shall it be upon them; there shall be the plague wherewith Jehovah will smite the nations that go not up to keep the feast of tabernacles. This shall be the punishment of Egypt, and the punishment of all the nations that go not up to keep the feast of tabernacles. In that day shall there be upon the bells of the horses, HOLY UNTO JEHOVAH; and the pots in Jehovah's house shall be like the bowls before the altar. Yea, every pot in Jerusalem and in Judah shall be holy unto Jehovah of hosts; and all they that sacrifice shall come and take of them, and boil therein: and in that day there shall be no more a Canaanite in the house of Jehovah of hosts" (Zech. 14:1-21). "This chapter [14] of Zech. gives such a remarkable order of the events, and insists so pointedly on the exaltation of the Jews, that our opponents find it the most difficult of all passages to spiritualize" (Peters, TTK, 1:686).

Malachi

"I have loved you, saith Jehovah. Yet ye say, Wherein hast thou loved us? Was not Esau Jacob's brother, saith Jehovah: yet I loved Jacob" (Mal. 1:2)

"Have we not all one father? hath not one God created us? why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother, profaning the covenant of our fathers" (Mal. 2:10)?

"Behold, I send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me: and the Lord, whom ye seek, will suddenly come to his temple; and the messenger of the covenant, whom ye desire, behold, he cometh, saith Jehovah of hosts. But who can abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire, and like fuller's soap: and he will sit as a refiner and purifier of silver, and he will purify the sons of Levi, and refine them as gold and silver; and they shall offer unto Jehovah offerings in righteousness. Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto Jehovah, as in the days of old, and as in ancient years. And I will come near to you to judgment; and I will be a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against the false swearers, and against those that oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and that turn aside the sojourner from his right, and fear not me, saith Jehovah of hosts. For I, Jehovah, change not; therefore ye, O sons of Jacob, are not consumed" (Mal. 3:1-6).

"And all nations shall call you happy; for ye shall be a delightful-land, saith Jehovah of hosts" (Mal. 3:12).

"For, behold, the day cometh, it burneth as a furnace; and all the proud, and all that work wickedness, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith Jehovah of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that fear my name shall the sun of righteousness arise with healing in its wings; and ye shall go forth, and gambol as calves of the stall. And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I make, saith Jehovah of hosts. Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, even statutes and ordinances. Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the great and terrible day of Jehovah come. And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers; lest I come and smite the earth with a curse. (Mal. 4:1-6).

Conclusion

When taken at face value, Hebrew prophecy clearly and consistently promises a future, theocratic, Davidic, Jewish Kingdom. Major components of this prophesied Kingdom include a global regathering of the scattered Jewish people back to the land of Palestine, all nations of the world gathered for war against Israel, Israel's defeat of these nations (with supernatural and spectacular help from above), the purging and spiritual regeneration of the Jews, judgments of both Jews and Gentiles, resurrection of David, Daniel and "many" others, and Messiah's reign over Israel and the world from David's throne in Jerusalem. Concurrently, the Gentile nations are also to experience purging and blessing. (And noteworthy, especially in light of Jesus' (Matt. 13) and Paul's (Eph. 3) "mystery" teachings, the Christian church is not at all identifiable in any of these Hebrew prophecies.)

Really, is it any wonder the first-century Jews had the Kingdom expectations that they did?

Chapter 14: First-Century Expectation of the Kingdom

As we summarized briefly in our chapter Five Views of the Kingdom, differing schools of theology have differing definitions and understandings of the Kingdom of God. As we continue our pursuit of a correct understanding of the biblical Kingdom of God, it will now be helpful for us to take a thoughtful look at the understandings and expectations of the first-century Jews regarding the Kingdom.

First-Century Jewish Understanding of the Kingdom

If we are to make proper sense of the opening chapters of the New Testament, wherein we find John the Baptist and Jesus declaring publicly to the Jewish nation that “the kingdom of heaven is at hand,” it is essential that we first understand the then-prevailing Jewish understanding and expectation of the Kingdom. What was the Jewish mindset at that time? What did the first-century Jews understand the Kingdom of God to be? And therefore, what kind of Kingdom were they expecting?

The Jewish Mindset

In contrast with the more abstract and metaphysical spiritualities of much of pagan religion, the Jewish mindset, both ancient and modern, is more concrete than abstract. This is due largely to the simple fact that the spirituality of the Jewish Bible (the Old Testament) is more concrete than abstract. The Bible is a written record of a literal history of a literal people; a history consisting of concrete events in real time such as the Jewish God Jehovah’s creation of the material world, the literal Garden of Eden, the Flood, Abraham and his literal seed, the exodus from Egypt, the tablets of stone, the wilderness wandering, conquest of the promised land, Judea, Jerusalem, the temple, the Davidic throne, the Babylonian captivity, etc. Therefore, a spiritual-only kingdom, as exemplified in pagan spiritualities, such as transcendentalism, Platonic dualism and Gnosticism, divorced from the physical world, would not have been expected or even envisioned by a first-century Bible-believing Jew. “It is well known from a study of the Old Testament that the Semitic frame of mind emphasizes the concrete rather than the abstract” (Feinberg, M, p. 266).

The Jewish Understanding of the Kingdom

The first-century Jews understood the Kingdom exactly as covenanted and promised to them in their Hebrew Scriptures.

They understood the Kingdom as covenanted: literal and earthly. “Here is where many Theological writings make the fatal mistake: they are willing to receive the Abrahamic covenant as a perpetual one, but not the Davidic, when the same perpetuity is asserted of both; they are agreed to receive part of the Abrahamic, or part of the Davidic covenant, but not all that is written. No wonder that a diversity is thus produced, and an antagonism to the Old Test. The Jews and the Primitive Church were far more logical and scriptural when they cordially received those covenants and believed in God’s statements concerning them. The trouble at present is, that the church, with all her professions, has too little faith” (Peters, TTK, 1:286). “Language could not possibly make it any plainer or stronger. The sun may refuse to shine, the moon and the stars may depart, the sea may no longer war with its waves, day and night may not alternate in their season, the ordinances of heaven and earth may be repealed (comp. e.g. Jer. 33:17-26, Isa. 54:9, Jer. 31:35, 36, Ps. 89:36, 37, etc.), but the promises of God shall not fail in restoring the overthrown Davidic Kingdom; God will perform the promises made to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, David, and the Prophets, respecting the Jewish nation. Men may foolishly ridicule and sneer at these things because still unrealized, calling them ‘Jewish notions, fables, and prejudices,’ but God’s word stands pledged, as solemnly and sacredly as word can be substantiated, for their fulfillment. It is idle, it is folly—yea more, it is sinful to censure the Jews for a belief so clearly founded and so unmistakably encouraged” (ibid., p. 287). “Let the reader place himself in the period before the First Advent, with the Old Test. in his hands. Now what would be his belief in the Kingdom, with those covenants and prophecies, confirmed by oath and most expressive assurances? Surely it would be identical with that of the Jews themselves; it could not be otherwise, if there was faith in God’s Word and God’s oath. Can we believe that the First Advent of the Messiah obliterated this belief, destroyed the nature of the Kingdom, erased the grammatical sense of covenant and prophecy, and cancelled the oath of the Unchangeable? Multitudes do this, but we cannot, dare not follow the multitude in this matter. God’s assurances are too weighty, His Word is too pure, to allow of such a destructive process” (ibid.). “Hence, so long as the early Church received the covenants as the Jews themselves believed and taught, they could the more easily find access to Jewish minds and hearts, but just so soon as the Church departed from this view of the covenants (making the land heaven, etc.), then the Jew was the more difficult to reach, seeing that the Old Test. language and promise, upon which he relied as plain and indisputable, was changed and transformed into something else. This substitution made it more troublesome to prove the Messiahship of Jesus, for he naturally and inevitably became more distrustful of a Messiah who was not to fulfill the covenant promises as they were written... Saving in the acknowledgment of Jesus as Messiah, they are more in darkness than the Jew whom they pity or despise” (ibid., p. 308). “The words and sentences [of the Davidic Covenant] in their plain grammatical acceptation, do expressly teach their belief. This is denied by no one, not even by those who then proceed to spiritualize the language. Therefore already the Jews are excusable in believing what God so definitely declares” (ibid.). “It [the Davidic Covenant] was confirmed by oath (Ps. 132:11, and 89:3, 4, 33-37), thus giving the strongest possible assurance of its ample fulfillment. Could the Jews do less than trust in language thus confirmed” (ibid.)? “Our doctrine is the only one which preserves a consistency in the Old Test. idea of the Kingdom as held by the pious Jews, as preached by John and the Disciples, as covenanted, and which does not degrade the ancient worthies into an ignorant or mistaken people; interpreting as it does the Biblical view of the Kingdom in accordance with the ancient language, expectations, covenant, preaching, etc., and not with the Origenistic ideas and more modern modes of thought and spiritualizing” (ibid., p. 620). “Jewish eschatology recognized two ages: The first was this present age, the age in which Israel was waiting for the coming of the Messiah; and the second was the age to come, the age in which all of Israel’s covenants would be fulfilled and Israel would enter into her promised blessings as a result of the Messiah’s coming” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 248). We described in detail the Kingdom as covenanted in our chapter Covenants of The Kingdom.

They also understood the Kingdom as promised: literal and earthly. “It is universally admitted by writers of prominence (e.g. Neander, Ilagenbach, Schaff, Kurtz, etc.), whatever their respective views concerning the Kingdom itself, that the Jews, including the pious, held to a personal coming of the Messiah, the literal restoration of the Davidic throne and kingdom, the personal reign of Messiah on David’s throne, the resultant exaltation of Jerusalem and the Jewish nation, and the fulfillment of the Millennial descriptions in that reign. It is also acknowledged that the utterances of Luke 1:71; Acts 1:6; Luke 2:26, 30, etc., include the above belief, and that down, at least to the day of Pentecost, the Jews, the disciples, and even the apostles held to such a view. It is not denied, by able Protestant or Romanist, Christian or Unbeliever, that they regarded the prophecies and covenanted promises as literal (i.e. in their naked grammatical sense); and, believing in their fulfillment, looked for such a restoration of the Davidic Kingdom under the Messiah, with an increased power and glory befitting the majesty of the predicted King; and also that the pious of former ages would be raised up from the dead to enjoy the same” (Peters, TTK, 1:183). “The grammatical sense was the only one then used in relation to the Kingdom, producing unity of belief in a restored Davidic Kingdom. Even the Rabbins, who had already largely perverted Scripture by allegorical and mystical interpretations, still clung with unswerving faith to the plain grammatical sense when it related to the Kingdom. The testimony on this point is overwhelming” (ibid., p. 260). “...the plain covenant and prophetic language which locates the Kingdom, not in heaven but on the earth” (ibid., p. 284) “Among the Jews the representation was current that Messiah would reign a thousand years on earth... this notion was derived from Ps. 90:4 [“For a thousand years in thy sight Are but as yesterday when it is past, And as a watch in the night.”], the symbolical character of the six days of Creation, and the seventh being a Sabbath” (ibid., p. 458). We described in detail the Kingdom as promised in our previous chapter The Kingdom in Hebrew Prophecy.

The first-century Jews did not understand the Kingdom to be a spiritual-only kingdom. “...taking a modern spiritualistic conception of the Kingdom and fastening it upon the Jews, who never thus entertained it... All Jews held to the Messiah’s Kingdom in the same way, viz.: as the re-establishment of the Theocracy, allied with the Davidic throne and kingdom...” (Peters, TTK, 1:185) “Nowhere is a particle of evidence that any Jew—much less ‘some’—had the slightest idea of a ‘purely spiritual’ Kingdom” (ibid.). “...valid reasons, found in the conduct of the nation itself, why this ‘prejudice’ remained unrealized. When Fuller (Strictures on Robinson’s Sentiments, Let. 2) says of the disciples, ‘Their foolish minds were so dazzled with the false ideas of a temporal Kingdom that they were blinded to the true end of Christ’s coming and to all that the prophets declared concerning it,’ we, on the other hand, think that it is Fuller’s mind that is ‘so dazzled with the false ideas of a spiritual kingdom’ that it is ‘blinded,’ etc.” (ibid., p. 267). “Why are the Jews condemned for not seeing and acknowledging a Kingdom, which is not, in any shape or form, contained in the Davidic Covenant” (ibid., p. 269)?

Now, as we approach our study of the Kingdom in the New Testament, it is important for us to understand that the Theocratic Kingdom, dependent as it was on the Davidic kingship, was not in existence in the first century. As we studied at some length in our chapter The Fall of the Kingdom, with the Babylonian captivity of Jerusalem in 587 B.C., which commenced the times of the Gentiles, the theocratic, Davidic Kingdom had gone into remission. Subsequently, Daniel’s first sixty-nine weeks (Dan. 9:25), which commenced at the decree to rebuild Jerusalem in 445 B.C., and which were to run for six hundred eighty-three years, ending with the arrival of “Messiah the prince” (Dan. 9:25, KJV), would be in effect until Messiah’s formal presentation of Himself to Jerusalem on Palm Sunday in the year 32 B.C. Consequently, the restored Theocratic Kingdom had not been offered by God to the Jewish nation prior to the first century. “This Kingdom was not preached to the people immediately before John the Baptist came. Luke (16:16) says that Jesus declared: ‘The law and the prophets were until John; since that time the Kingdom of God is preached.’ In whatever way this is explained (see Judge Jones’s Notes, p. 110, etc., and Com. on Matt. 11:12, 13), it certainly implies a period of time preceding when the Kingdom was not directly offered for acceptance. The legitimate inference follows, that it was not in existence. It was, indeed, predicted, promised, believed in, and expected, but it was not authoritatively offered for present acceptance and realization, as was done by John and those following him” (Peters, TTK, 1:252).

First-Century Jewish Expectation of the Kingdom

Regarding Christ’s First Advent and the Jewish expectations associated with it, two things should be kept in mind:

First, relatively few Old Testament prophets refer to the First Advent of Christ. “Only a few of the Prophets refer to the First Advent and its mournful particulars, as if conscious (which is strongly intimated) of the rejection of the Messiah and the long-continued downfall of the Kingdom” (Peters, TTK, 1:249)

Second, the first-century Jews did not know that Christ would have two advents. “The Prophets describe this restored Kingdom, its extension, glory, etc., without distinguishing between the First and Second Advents” (Peters, TTK, 1:242). “Upon the horizon of their outlook there loomed large the two advents of the King; the one for the purpose of suffering for the sin of the world, and the other for the purpose of reigning as the Son of David upon His throne. Any intervening period was foreign to them, because it had not been revealed by God” (Feinberg, M, p. 149). “It is highly doubtful whether anyone, having only the Old Testament writings and with no knowledge of Christian history, could or ever did arrive at a correct solution of the problem; that is, not two Messiahs, but one Messiah with two comings separated by a vast gulf in time” (McClain, GK, p. 168). “If this time relationship was ever revealed exactly to the prophets, Old Testament Scripture is wholly silent as to any such revelation... a silence designed by inspi-

So then, just what were the first-century Jews expecting? Obviously, they were expecting the Kingdom as they understood it, which was the Kingdom covenanted and promised to them: a literal, earthly, Jewish theocracy. “And they brought the colt to Jesus and put their garments on it; and He sat upon it. And many spread their garments in the road, and others spread leafy branches which they had cut from the fields. And those who went before, and those who followed after, were crying out, ‘Hosanna! BLESSED IS HE WHO COMES IN THE NAME OF THE LORD; Blessed is the coming kingdom of our father David; Hosanna in the highest!’ And He entered Jerusalem and came into the temple; and after looking all around, He departed for Bethany with the twelve, since it was already late” (Mark 11:7–11). “Joseph of Arimathea came, a prominent member of the Council, who himself was waiting for the kingdom of God; and he gathered up courage and went in before Pilate, and asked for the body of Jesus” (Mark 15:43). “Salvation from our enemies, And from the hand of all who hate us” (Luke 1:71) “And it had been revealed to him [Simeon] by the Holy Spirit that he would not see death before he had seen the Lord’s Christ. And he came in the Spirit into the temple; and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, to carry out for Him the custom of the Law, then he took Him into his arms, and blessed God, and said, ‘Now Lord, Thou dost let Thy bond-servant depart in peace, according to Thy word; For my eyes have seen Thy salvation’” (Luke 2:26-30) “And so when they had come together, they were asking Him, saying, ‘Lord, is it at this time You are restoring the kingdom to Israel’” (Acts 1:6)? “At the introduction of Christianity the great, leading subject with the Jews was that of the Messianic Kingdom” (Peters, TTK, 1:131). “The prophecies of the Kingdom, interpreted literally, sustain the expectations and hopes of the pious Jews. This is universally admitted, even by those who contend that the same prophecies are susceptible of a different interpretation” (ibid., p. 190). “This sense obviously contained in the Scriptures formed the scripturally derived basis of the Jewish hopes” (ibid., p. 191). “Joseph of Arimathea (Mark 15:43), ‘also waited for the Kingdom of God’” (ibid., p. 367) “The Jews, influenced by the plain language of Covenant and prophecy, universally held that the Messianic Kingdom was to be accompanied by a complete restoration of the nation; both ideas were inseparably united, the one being regarded an impossibility without the other. So wedded were they to this view, that they objected to Jesus being the Messiah because it was not realized at the First Advent (the early Christians answered by locating the fulfillment at the Second Advent of this Jesus)” (ibid., 2:50). “...the extensive holding of a Pre-Mill. Advent as evidenced in the Apocryphal books, Oracles of the Sybils, etc.” (ibid., p. 191). “Mains believes that premillennialism slights the present spiritual order in maintaining that Christ’s reign will be effectively established on earth only after His glorious return. For them, he alleges, the present age of the church is but a twilight preparation as compared with the glory that shall come to the world in the millennial age. He admits that the Jews of old always thought of the Messianic reign as being realized upon the earth itself. That it would be a heavenly and spiritual kingdom apart from the earth never suggested itself to Israel. He does not explain that strange phenomenon” (Feinberg, M, p. 251).

Even today many religious Jews are still expecting a literal, earthly, Jewish Kingdom. “...e.g. the objection urged by Rabbi Crool (Restoration of Israel), against Jesus as the Messiah, is, that He did not sit on David’s throne or set up the Davidic Kingdom as it was predicted by the prophets and as covenanted; and also, that the Jews, instead of the promised peace, joy, exaltation, etc., under the Messianic Kingdom (if it really commenced at or immediately after the First Advent), found trouble, suffering, dispersion, etc. Now to such objections, the postponement, with the Scripturally given reasons for its occurrence, affords the only satisfactory reply, seeing that we leave the covenanted Kingdom intact, the covenants and predictions just as they are written, and the promises to the Jewish nation, in its covenanted relationship, to be yet fulfilled in all their greatness and glory” (Peters, TTK, 1:625). “...a vague and invisible fulfillment so exceedingly unsatisfactory to a Jewish mind. We do not take the promises expressly given to the Jewish nation and heap them, without regard to their connection, upon the Gentiles... our showing a postponement to the Second Advent of predictions especially near and dear to the Jewish heart, must necessarily be more acceptable to Jewish faith than the wholesale disclaimers of popular systems” (ibid.). “The Jews are, indeed, mistaken in their rejection of the Messiah, but not in the Messianic Kingdom and their connection with it” (ibid., 2:73). “The Jews... from their prayer-books... Such prayers evince such faith in God’s simple word as contained in the Old Test., that they put to shame the faith of many Gentiles, who have become ‘high-minded’ through a spiritualizing and appropriating the promises of God to this nation” (ibid., p. 90). “To give an idea of the more modern Jewish view, several quotations from the prayer books (Art. Jews, in the Galaxy, Jan., 1872) will suffice: ‘Oh, return with mercy to Jerusalem, Thy city, and reign therein as Thou hast promised to do; rebuild it soon, during our existence, to remain imperishable, and speedily re-establish in it the throne of David. Praised be Thou, O Eternal! who buildest up Jerusalem! 'Fill us with rejoicing, O Eternal, through Elijah the prophet, Thy servant, and through the royal house of David, Thy anointed; may He soon come and gladden our heart. Upon His throne let no stranger sit; no others take unto themselves His glory; for by Thy holy name hast Thou sworn unto Him, that His light shall never be extinguished in all eternity. Praised be Thou, O Eternal! the shield of David'" (ibid., p. 199). "Rabbi Bechai says, God granted four special honors to Israel, viz., (1) the land of Canaan; (2) the law; (3) prophecy; (4) the resurrection of the dead" (ibid., p. 312). "The Orthodox Jews... still fondly anticipate a further fulfillment of the same Word... The Reformed or Rationalistic class, have given up the hope of a Messiah as predicted" (ibid., 3:410). "Alas! how true it is to-day of many a Jew, that—as Dorner remarked of Philo—the Messianic idea has become in him a burnt-out cinder" (ibid., p. 411). "The Reformed Jews (art. 'Messiah' in M'Clintock and Strong's Cyclop.) in 1840, at Frankfort, declared that 'a Messiah who is to lead back to Palestine is neither expected nor desired'... On the other hand, the Orthodox Jews cleave to the prophecies and the Messianic idea and Kingdom" (ibid., p. 412). "Orthodox Judaism (which still awaits its Messiah, and which regards the Old Testament alone as Holy Scripture) denies that the kingdom-predictions have been fulfilled" (Geisler, ST, 4:477).

So, it is our contention that, contrary to much popular opinion, the first-century Jews were not mistaken in their understanding of the Kingdom and in their Kingdom expectations. "But the question is, were they mistaken? This is too much taken for granted, and upon its assumption a huge superstructure arises. Briefly and anticipatorily: the non-fulfillment thus far is no evidence against the faith, for there are valid and satisfactory reasons given in the New Test. why it should not down to the present time be realized. This is far from saying that it never will be attained" (Peters, TTK, 1:186). "every Jew... his ancestors were not a set of blind, deluded believers" (ibid., 3:413) It is a noteworthy fact that, at least in the biblical record, neither John the Baptist nor Jesus nor the apostles ever corrected the prevailing Jewish expectation of the Kingdom. We'll have more to say on this in our next chapter Announcement and Offer of the Kingdom. The first-century Jews may not have placed the emphasis on the prerequisite humiliation and suffering of Christ that they should have (i.e. as prophesied in Isaiah chapter 53), but it does not logically follow from that that they were therefore entirely mistaken on the nature of the eschatological Kingdom.

On the contrary, we contend that this Jewish understanding of the Kingdom is assumed in the New Testament, and that without acknowledging this assumption, the New Testament, and particularly the message preached in its opening chapters by John the Baptist, Jesus, the twelve and the seventy in the synoptic gospels, namely, that ‘the kingdom of heaven is at hand,’ cannot be understood correctly or satisfactorily. “The doctrine of the kingdom is first taught by covenant, theocratic ordering, and prophecy in the Old Testament, and it is taken for granted in the New Testament as a subject derived from the Old Testament and well understood; for the kingdom is preached without any appended explanation” (Peters, TTK, 1:157). “...the extraordinary manner in which the New Test., opens, taking, as it does, a previous knowledge of the Kingdom for granted. If they did make a mistake in their absorbing contemplation of the glorious Kingdom of the Messiah so as to overlook the antecedent humiliation, suffering, and death of the King, let not the man accuse them of ignorance concerning the Kingdom, which led to such a restraint of prediction, when he to-day reverses their conduct by confining himself so much to the sacrifice that he overlooks the Kingdom” (ibid., p. 188). “...the early preaching of ‘the Gospel of the Kingdom.’ What Kingdom is taken for granted as known? Evidently the one predicted in the older Scriptures, and hence, without an investigation of the Old Test., from whence the Jews and the first Christians obtained their views and expectations, it is simply impossible to obtain a correct idea of the Kingdom” (ibid.).

Chapter 15: Announcement and Offer of the Kingdom

Early in the first century, at a time when faithful Jewish believers were anticipating a restoration of the Davidic Kingdom (see our previous chapter, First-Century Expectation of the Kingdom), John the Baptist and Jesus arrived on the scene preaching to Israel, “Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.”

Introductory Biblical Considerations

Before getting into the details of the content of the message preached by John the Baptist and Jesus, it will be helpful for us to first review some relevant introductory considerations concerning our written Bible.

The Relationship Between the Old and New Testaments

Concerning the relationship between the Old and New Testaments, it is important for us to recognize the continuity between the Old Testament and the New Testament, and to notice that the New Testament confirms, rather than defines the biblical Kingdom.

We should recognize the continuity between the Old Testament and the Gospels. “Chronologically speaking, there is a 400-year gap between Malachi and Matthew. Logically and thematically, however, there is no gap at all. The New Testament immediately takes up where the Old Testament prophets left off. In fact, technically the ‘New’ Testament does not begin with Matthew, but with the Book of Acts. The Gospels demonstrate that God’s program still continued with the nation Israel. Israel was still under the Law, and everything continued as it had during the prophetic period. The message was directed to the lost sheep of the house of Israel (Matt. 10:6) [‘but rather go to the lost sheep of the house of Israel’] and excluded the Gentiles. The Law, in fact, was not abolished at the birth of Christ, but rather at His death; and the message of the Gospels concerns the fulfillment of all that the prophets predicted. Thus there is an unbroken continuity between the prophets and the Gospels” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 184).

And, we should observe that the New Testament does not so much define the Kingdom as it does confirm it. “The bulk and content of the coming kingdom is given so largely in the Old Testament that the New Testament confines itself for the most part to confirmation” (Walvoord, MK, p. 186).

We discussed these two points in some detail in our chapter Biblical Hermeneutics.

The Purposes of the Four Gospels

As we study the Kingdom in the four gospels, it will be helpful for us to keep in mind each book's unique purpose. "It has been objected to the gospels that they are greatly composed of detached, fragmentary parts strung together without unity of design, presenting varied, and, in a measure, contradictory, sketches of the life of Jesus. This is effectually disproven by looking at the gospels from the Kingdom standpoint; for then it appears that each writer had a definite object in view, viz., to evince unity and a consistent development of Divine Purpose in a pre-determined Plan corresponding with the covenants and prophecies relating to the Kingdom" (Peters, TTK, 3:349). "In order to ascertain the design of the gospels and to comprehend the unity therein, the student must place himself, not in the modern position of thought, but in the posture of those to whom these gospels were first presented. Then, all who read the Old Test. entertained the Theocratic-Davidic idea of the Messiah and Kingdom; all believed that a descendant of David, specially related (Theocratically) to God, would appear, who would restore the throne and Kingdom of David and reign majestically as the prophets predicted. Now, in the very nature of the case, writing for such persons who received the covenants and prophecies in their grammatical construction, it was requisite, in view of what actually occurred, to show that Jesus was a descendant of David; that He was related to and acknowledged by God; that He was the powerful Messiah; that the Kingdom was tendered to the elect nation; that the nation, through its representative men, rejected the Messiah and Kingdom; that this Messiah, foreseeing His rejection and death, must give assurances indicative of the postponement of the Kingdom; and that, notwithstanding His death, He is able to re-establish the Kingdom. Now, these are precisely the points that are fully presented in the gospels; thus most admirably adapted to meet the objections that in the quite early age would be urged against the claims of Jesus to be 'the Christ.'... The more the gospels are contemplated in the light of the covenants and of the facts as they existed at the First Advent, the more logically consistent, the more connected and admirably adapted to secure the design intended, will they appear" (ibid.). "We only now refer to the fact, as corroborative, that no controversy was raised between the early Christians and the Jews respecting the meaning, etc., of the Christ (for the controverted point between them was whether Jesus was the Messiah or not), and that many Jews, even priests, with their intense devotion to the covenanted and predicted Messiah, cordially received Jesus as the same, fully believing that at His Second Coming the postponed Kingdom and glory would be realized. It is painfully sad to find how this simple scripturallyfounded belief was soon overwhelmed by a mass of rubbish, which the wisdom of the world conceived to be better adapted to subserve the truth and God's praise" (ibid., p. 350). "The very form in which the Gospels are given indicates an early origin; for the design manifested in answering certain objections shows that it meets the only objections that were current immediately after the death of Jesus and opposed to His claims of Messiahship" (ibid., p. 358). "The defence of the Messiahship of Jesus in the Gospels is based upon two facts, constantly appealed to, viz., that Jesus in His manifestation, etc., fulfilled the prophets, and that by a certain determinate fulfillment He gives us sufficient evidence that the remainder will be fulfilled at the period of time designated" (ibid., p. 360). "The Gospels were not written 'to teach Christianity,' but to reveal Christ in the different aspects of His person and work as Israel's Messiah, Jehovah's servant, Son of Man and Son of God. No one of them is 'complete in itself'; and the Fourth alone expressly professes to teach the way of salvation (John xx. 31)" (Anderson, SOG, p. 54).

Matthew's purpose is to confirm Jesus' messianic credentials to a Jewish readership. "Briefly consider Matthew's statements to vindicate the claims of a crucified Jesus to the Messiahship as covenanted... The promised Messiah is one who must, in order to fulfill the covenants and promises as given, be able to exert supernatural power; and hence this power, as an earnest, is exhibited... a single fact, briefly stated, sufficiently comprehensive in itself to vindicate the ability of Jesus Christ to fulfill the covenants at His Second Advent, viz., His resurrection... Matthew, as well as the other evangelists, takes it for granted that the reader of the Gospel is previously well posted in covenant and prophecy, and hence writes for such persons. Therefore, a simple statement of facts, as they occurred, is all that is required to lead a believer in covenant and prophecy to acknowledge Jesus as 'the Christ,' who will yet fulfill them, as claimed, at His Second Coming. This was the universal belief of those Christians who first received and perpetuated the Gospel, thus verifying, in the reception of it, our doctrinal position" (Peters, TTK, 3:350). "Matthew contains not a single sentence which is foreign to the purpose for which it was written, as presenting Israel's Messiah, the 'son of David, the son of Abraham'" (Anderson, SOG, p. 51). "the Sermon on the Mount'... Our Lord was there unfolding the principles of the promised kingdom" (ibid., p. 178) "Of the four gospels, the first, Matthew, was written to the Jews. It presents Jesus as the Messianic King of the Jews and develops the kingdom program" (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 763).

Mark's purpose is to confirm Jesus as Jehovah's servant; as the One with sufficient power and ability to fulfill His will. "...the resurrection ([Mark] ch. 16), which insures the continued Messiahship of Jesus and His ability, at the appointed time, to fulfill all that is written” (Peters, TTK, 3:352).

Luke presents Jesus as the Son of Man Who is destined to fulfill the covenants. “Luke, writing at the time he did, must also follow the same course, viz., to meet the objections that might be alleged against a crucified Messiah and the non-appearance of the Messianic Kingdom. In the first and second chapters he shows, by the birth and office of John, and by the birth and announcements respecting Jesus, that He is the destined Theocratic King, who, while son of David, is also (v. 32, 33) ‘the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His Father David. And He shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of His Kingdom there shall be no end—’ and this, too, is done in view of (v. 72 and 73) ‘His holy covenant,’ etc. Having thus exhibited in the introduction full faith in the covenants, and that Jesus was the One through whom they were to be realized, he now proceeds in a narrative which shows why they were not then fulfilled, and why we should continue to exercise faith in Jesus that they will yet be verified” (Peters, TTK, 3:353).

John presents Jesus as the Son of God: the rejected, crucified and resurrected Savior of the world. “He came to His own, and those who were His own did not receive Him” (John 1:11). “The Gospel of John exhibits one trait differing from the preceding gospels (yet also mentioned by them) which gives it a remarkable complexion, viz., it commences at once with His rejection and death, with the implied postponement of the Kingdom, and call of the Gentiles” (Peters, TTK, 3:355). “The sacrifice of Himself was necessary to make Him the immortal Son of David and to give Him the power to raise up His own at the last day” (ibid.). “The true key to the proper comprehension of John’s Gospel is to notice the first point of contact between it and the previously given Gospels, viz., that the God-given Divine Messiah was rejected by His own elect nation, and consequently the implication (afterward enforced) that the blessings of the Messianic Kingdom (as covenanted and predicted) are delayed until He is again manifested at ‘the last day’” (ibid., p. 356).

The Kingdom is Announced and Offered

The New Testament opens with the announcement that “the kingdom of heaven is at hand.” “Now in those days John the Baptist came, preaching in the wilderness of Judea, saying, ‘Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand’” (Matt. 3:1–2). “From that time Jesus began to preach and say, ‘Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand” (Matt. 4:17). “The Kingdom... Jesus, the disciples, and the seventy announced it, not as actually present but as still future” (Peters, TTK, 1:263) “...the Kingdom as originally preached and believed” (ibid., p. 665)

Before getting into the details of John the Baptist’s and Jesus’ announcement and offer of the Kingdom to Israel, it is interesting for us to note first that while John the Baptist was announcing the Kingdom to Israel, and immediately before Jesus also began to announce and offer it to Israel, the kingdom of the world was offered by Satan to Jesus. “Again, the devil took Him to a very high mountain, and showed Him all the kingdoms of the world, and their glory; and he said to Him, ‘All these things will I give You, if You fall down and worship me’” (Matt. 4:8-9). “And the devil said to Him, ‘If You are the Son of God, tell this stone to become bread.’ And Jesus answered him, ‘It is written, “Man shall not live on bread alone.” And he led Him up and showed Him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time. And the devil said to Him, ‘I will give You all this domain and its glory; for it has been handed over to me, and I give it to whomever I wish. Therefore if You worship before me, it shall all be Yours’” (Luke 4:3-7). “Now judgment is upon this world; now the ruler of this world shall be cast out” (John 12:31). “...the third temptation, having no point or force if it had not, like the others, been based on the promises of God in that direction” (Peters, TTK, 1:698) “In the first temptation Jesus does not deny that He is hungry and able to make bread; in the second, He does not deny that He is the Son of God, and under special protection; and in the third, He does not deny the Kingdom or dominion which is to be given to Him, but only rejects the mode by which it is to be obtained... Satan’s temptation embraced a condition that was derogatory to God’s honor; it embraced a right in bestowal which only belongs to God; and it overlooked the time and manner when the predicted Theocracy should be restored” (ibid., p. 700). “The second test involved a short cut, apart from sacrifice, to the possession of the kingdoms of this world” (Chafer, ST, 2:52). “It is significant that Christ did not challenge Satan’s right to make the offer to surrender these Kingdoms. He viewed them as in Satan’s domain, so that Satan had the right to do with them as he willed” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 432). “In His divinely ordained experience of temptation, the kingdoms offered Him were existing political realms—‘the kingdoms of the world’ (Matt. 4:8-9)” (McClain, GK, p. 294).

And, it is a deeply meaningful introductory fact that the Kingdom of God was announced and offered only to Israel. “These twelve Jesus sent out after instructing them, saying, ‘Do not go in the way of the Gentiles, and do not enter any city of the Samaritans; but rather go to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And as you go, preach, saying, “The kingdom of heaven is at hand”’ (Matt. 10:5-7). “But He answered and said, ‘I was sent only to the lost sheep of the house of Israel’” (Matt. 15:24). “And from there He arose and went away to the region of Tyre. And when He had entered a house, He wanted no one to know of it; yet He could not escape notice. But after hearing of Him, a woman whose little daughter had an unclean spirit, immediately came and fell at His feet. Now the woman was a Gentile, of the Syrophoenician race. And she kept asking Him to cast the demon out of her daughter. And He was saying to her, ‘Let the children be satisfied first, for it is not good to take the children’s bread and throw it to the dogs.’ But she answered and said to Him, ‘Yes, Lord, but even the dogs under the table feed on the children’s crumbs.’ And He said to her, ‘Because of this answer go your way; the demon has gone out of your daughter.’ And going back to her home, she found the child lying on the bed, the demon having departed” (Mark 7:24-30). “And when they had approached Jerusalem and had come to Bethphage, to the Mount of Olives, then Jesus sent two disciples, saying to them, ‘Go into the village opposite you, and immediately you will find a donkey tied there and a colt with her; untie them, and bring them to Me. And if anyone says something to you, you shall say, “The Lord has need of them,” and immediately he will send them.’ Now this took place that what was spoken through the prophet might be fulfilled, saying, ‘Say to the daughter of Zion, “Behold your King is coming to you, Gentle, and mounted on a donkey, Even on a colt, the foal of a beast of burden.”’ And the disciples went and did just as Jesus had directed them, and brought the donkey and the colt, and laid on them their garments, on which He sat. And most of the multitude spread their garments in the road, and others were cutting branches from the trees, and spreading them in the road. And the multitudes going before Him, and those who followed after were crying out, saying, ‘Hosanna to the Son of David; Blessed is He who comes in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest!’ And when He had entered Jerusalem, all the city was stirred, saying, ‘Who is this?’ And the multitudes were saying, ‘This is the prophet Jesus, from Nazareth in Galilee’” (Matt. 21:1-11) “And Jesus said to him, ‘Today salvation has come to this house, because he, too, is a son of Abraham. For the Son of Man has come to seek and to save that which was lost’” (Luke 19:9-10). “He came to His own, and those who were His own did not receive

Him” (John 1:11). “Jesus said to her, ‘Woman, believe Me, an hour is coming when neither in this mountain, nor in Jerusalem, shall you worship the Father. You worship that which you do not know; we worship that which we know, for salvation is from the Jews” (John 4:21-22). “And so when they had come together, they were asking Him, saying, ‘Lord, is it at this time You are restoring the kingdom to Israel?’ He said to them, ‘It is not for you to know times or epochs which the Father has fixed by His own authority” (Acts 1:6-7) “It is you [Men of Israel] who are the sons of the prophets, and of the covenant which God made with your fathers, saying to Abraham, “And in your seed all the families of the earth shall be blessed.” For you first, God raised up His Servant, and sent Him to bless you by turning every one of you from your wicked ways” (Acts 3:25-26). “He is the one whom God exalted to His right hand as a Prince and a Savior, to grant repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins” (Acts 5:31). “For I say that Christ has become a servant to the circumcision on behalf of the truth of God to confirm the promises given to the fathers” (Rom. 15:8) “Why forbid the first preachers of the Gospel of the Kingdom to go to the Gentiles, etc.” (Peters, TTK, 1:211)? “Why did Christ and the apostles at first confine themselves to the Jewish nation, if the Kingdom was not national” (ibid., p. 339)? “This procedure of John, Jesus, and the disciples, in accordance with sacred covenanted relationship (but the subject of ignorant and unbelieving ridicule), teaches a fixed, fundamental truth, which must by no means be overlooked, viz.: that the regular lineal believing descendants of Abraham—the nationality of David—with those adopted by them, were entitled, by covenant, to this Kingdom” (ibid., p. 356). “...the disciples... ‘the Kingdom of heaven is at hand’ was not addressed by them to any Gentile. The same is true of John, and also of Jesus, who carefully avoided it in His address to Gentiles” (ibid., p. 361). “When He offered Himself as King, it was to Israel that He did so (Matt. 21:1-11)” (Feinberg, M, p. 255). “Until nine years after Pentecost the Church was exclusively Jewish” (Chafer, ST, 4:418). “The Lord’s earthly ministry, from the time of His presentation by John until His rejection by the nation, was confirmed to that nation alone. The kingdom offered by John, by Christ, by the twelve, and by the seventy witnesses sent out by Him was to Israel only. The principle must be observed that God was dealing throughout Christ’s earthly life with the remnant that existed then” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 293). “...to the Seventy... ‘into every city and place, whither he himself would come’ (Luke 10:1)... ‘I am not sent,’ He says, ‘but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel’ (Matt. 15:24). This dictum of Christ, which has so troubled some commentators... David Smith says [in

In the Days of His Flesh, p. 248], ‘There is no incident in our Lord’s earthly ministry more puzzling than this’... we have here something extraordinary, quite different from the usual program of evangelism in the Christian Church” (McClain, GK, p. 305).

The Kingdom is Announced

The Kingdom was announced to Israel in a number of different ways by a number of different people.

The Kingdom was announced by Jesus’ First Advent. “Jesus is represented as personally coming (just as God personally came at the establishment of the theocracy at Mt. Sinai)” (Peters, TTK, 1:93).

The Kingdom was announced by Jesus’ genealogy. “The scepter shall not depart from Judah, Nor the ruler’s staff from between his feet, Until Shiloh comes, And to him shall be the obedience of the peoples” (Gen. 49:10). “For a child will be born to us, a son will be given to us; And the government will rest on His shoulders; And His name will be called Wonderful Counselor, Mighty God, Eternal Father, Prince of Peace. There will be no end to the increase of His government or of peace, On the throne of David and over his kingdom, To establish it and to uphold it with justice and righteousness From then on and forevermore. The zeal of the LORD of hosts will accomplish this” (Isa. 9:6–7). “As I live, saith Jehovah, though Coniah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah were the signet upon my right hand, yet would I pluck thee thence; and I will give thee into the hand of them that seek thy life, and into the hand of them of whom thou art afraid, even into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of the Chaldeans... Thus saith Jehovah, Write ye this man childless, a man that shall not prosper in his days; for no more shall a man of his seed prosper, sitting upon the throne of David, and ruling in Judah” (Jer. 22:24–30). “Coniah... ‘No man of his seed shall prosper, sitting upon the “Throne of David” and ruling any more in Judah.’ So we see that Joseph could not be the ‘natural’ father of Jesus, for no descendant of his could sit on the Throne of David and ‘prosper.’ This forever sets at rest the claim that Joseph was the ‘natural’ father of Jesus, and establishes the fact of His ‘Virgin Birth.’ The marriage of Joseph and Mary made Jesus the adopted son and ‘legal heir’ of Joseph. The title, unaffected by the curse pronounced upon Coniah, was thus conveyed to Jesus, in whom there centres, through both Nathan and Solomon, exclusive right to the “Throne of David”” (Larkin, DT, p. 83). “The book of the genealogy of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham” (Matt. 1:1). “and to Jesse was born David the king. And to

David was born Solomon by her who had been the wife of Uriah” (Matt. 1:6) “and to Jacob was born Joseph the husband of Mary, by whom was born Jesus, who is called Christ” (Matt. 1:16). “But when he had considered this, behold, an angel of the Lord appeared to him in a dream, saying, ‘Joseph, son of David, do not be afraid to take Mary as your wife; for that which has been conceived in her is of the Holy Spirit” (Matt. 1:20). “And Jesus went away from there, and withdrew into the district of Tyre and Sidon. And behold, a Canaanite woman came out from that region, and began to cry out, saying, ‘Have mercy on me, O Lord, Son of David; my daughter is cruelly demon-possessed” (Matt. 15:21-22). “Now in the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God to a city in Galilee, called Nazareth, to a virgin engaged to a man whose name was Joseph, of the descendants of David; and the virgin’s name was Mary” (Luke 1:26-27). “Now it came about in those days that a decree went out from Caesar Augustus, that a census be taken of all the inhabited earth. This was the first census taken while Quirinius was governor of Syria. And all were proceeding to register for the census, everyone to his own city. And Joseph also went up from Galilee, from the city of Nazareth, to Judea, to the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, because he was of the house and family of David, in order to register, along with Mary, who was engaged to him, and was with child” (Luke 2:1-5). “That there might be no question as to Joseph’s and Mary’s ancestors, God, when the time came for Jesus to be born, put it into the heart of the Roman Emperor, Caesar Augustus, to call for an enrollment, and this required that every Jewish citizen should be enrolled in the city where his family had lived, and as Joseph was of the ‘House and Lineage of David’ (Luke 2:1-5), this required him to go to Bethlehem to be enrolled. And as Mary was of the same family, Joseph took her with him. They could not have been enrolled unless their names were on the Register, and that they were enrolled proves that they could at that time trace their ancestry back to King David. It was doubtless from this register that Matthew and Luke got their genealogy” (Larkin, DT, p. 84). “And when He began His ministry, Jesus Himself was about thirty years of age, being supposedly the son of Joseph, the son of Eli... the son of Nathan, the son of David, the son of Jesse, the son of Obed, the son of Boaz, the son of Salmon... the son of Enosh, the son of Seth, the son of Adam, the son of God” (Luke 3:23-38). “Has not the Scripture said that the Christ comes from the offspring of David, and from Bethlehem, the village where David was” (John 7:42)? “For it is evident that our Lord was descended from Judah, a tribe with reference to which Moses spoke nothing concerning priests” (Heb. 7:14). “The scep- tre shall not depart from Judah, Nor the ruler's staff from between his feet, Until Shiloh come: And unto him shall the obedience of the peoples be" (Gen. 49:10). "A throne and a kingdom is to be given to a promised son of David, a regular descendant of Abraham's. It is his by right of inheritance. He is the royal Theocratic heir. Hence without such a genealogy something essential would be lacking in the chain of evidence" (Peters, TTK, 1:352). "...Matthew commencing his table by asserting that Jesus was 'the Son of David, the Son of Abraham,' i.e. both covenants, the Abrahamic and Davidic, were thus realized in the person of Jesus Christ. Also in designating 'David the King,' and omitting it in the descendants" (ibid.) "If the Saviour was merely to descend from David, to take human nature in that line for the purpose of redemptive work at the First Advent, and then that was to be the finale of the matter, why lay so much stress on descent from the royal line" (ibid.)? "What difference, on the latter supposition, was it then, whether Jesus was, or was not, the legitimate Heir to David's throne, if He was never to occupy it? Why should special stress be laid on that which, if we are to credit the multitude, God never intended to fulfill? We, therefore, hold that there is a solid, sublime reason why those tables, so uninteresting to many, are given, viz.: not merely to identify Jesus as the Saviour, but to identify Him as the One, the Messiah, who has the lawful right to David's Theocratic throne. The throne is not typical, not representative, not symbolical, but actually and really covenanted to this Heir, and hence the tables truthfully and actually show how by course of descent He is the rightful Heir" (ibid., p. 353). "...the main object of Matthew... Jesus was the lawful heir and successor to whom the royalty of David belonged" (ibid.) "Matthew, writing of Christ as the rightful heir to Abraham's land and David's throne, very properly reproduced the lineage of Joseph, the lawful husband of Mary, while Luke, in portraying His history as the seed of the woman, traces the genealogy of His mother not merely to Abraham, but to the first human pair" (ibid.). "The genealogies of both Joseph and Mary unite in David" (ibid.). "Now, seeing that the promise has been so literally fulfilled in Christ's descent, in His being the legal Heir to the throne and Kingdom, we hold that such a fulfillment gives us the strongest assurance that the remainder of the promise will likewise, in God's ordering and time, be realized" (ibid.). "...the Primitive Church... they clearly and distinctly announced their faith and hope in the promises made to the Son of Man, and hence in David's Son as the promised Theocratic King. It was later, under Alexandrian and Popish influence, that the Humanity was ignored in a great measure for the Divine" (ibid.). "Up to the time of Jesus' rejection as King, all genealogical records were preserved in the Temple, and easily accessible to all the people, but when Titus in A. D. 70 destroyed the city and the Temple those records were all destroyed, and since that day the genealogical tables of Matthew and Luke alone remain to give us the lineal descent of Jesus from King David. Therefore the only living man who today can establish an unbroken genealogy directly and incontrovertibly from King David, is the MAN Christ Jesus, (1 Tim. 2:5), born ‘King of the Jews,’ (Matt. 2:2), crucified ‘King of the Jews,’ (John 19:19), and to come again ‘King of the Jews’” (Larkin, DT, p. 84). “For there is one God, and one mediator also between God and men, the man Christ Jesus” (1 Tim. 2:5) “Where is He who has been born King of the Jews? For we saw His star in the east, and have come to worship Him” (Matt. 2:2). “And Pilate wrote an inscription also, and put it on the cross. And it was written, ‘JESUS THE NAZARENE, THE KING OF THE JEWS’” (John 19:19). “Mary descended from another son of David entirely, Nathan—by curious coincidence the same name as the prophet’s who gave the Davidic covenant, through undoubtedly two different individuals... while the legal lineage came to Christ through Joseph, his legal father and a descendant of Solomon and his heirs, the actual seed of David was transmitted through Nathan and Mary” (Walvoord, MK, p. 201). “In the destruction of Jerusalem, the genealogies were destroyed and it would be impossible for Jews of today to trace their lineage back to the line of David” (ibid.). We covered the Davidic Covenant in detail in our chapter Covenants of the Kingdom.

The Kingdom was announced at Jesus’ birth. “But thou, Beth-lehem Ephrathah, which art little to be among the thousands of Judah, out of thee shall one come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth are from of old, from everlasting. Therefore will he give them up, until the time that she who travaileth hath brought forth: then the residue of his brethren shall return unto the children of Israel. And he shall stand, and shall feed his flock in the strength of Jehovah, in the majesty of the name of Jehovah his God: and they shall abide; for now shall he be great unto the ends of the earth. And this man shall be our peace” (Mic. 5:2-5). “And she will bear a Son; and you shall call His name Jesus, for it is He who will save His people from their sins” (Matt. 1:21). “Matt 1:21: ...thou shalt call his name Jesus; for it is he that shall save his people from their sins... his people... is mostly a reference to Jewish people, the Jewish nation” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 850). “Now after Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king, behold, magi from the east arrived in Jerusalem, saying, ‘Where is He who has been born King of the Jews? For we saw His star in the east, and have come to worship Him.’ And when Herod the king heard it, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him. And gathering together all the chief priests and scribes of the people, he began to inquire of them where the Christ was to be born. And they said to him, ‘In Bethlehem of Judea, for so it has been written by the prophet, “And you, Bethlehem, land of Judah, Are by no means least among the leaders of Judah; For out of you shall come forth a Ruler, Who will shepherd My people Israel”’ (Matt. 2:1-6). “And Zacharias was troubled when he saw him, and fear gripped him. But the angel said to him, ‘Do not be afraid, Zacharias, for your petition has been heard, and your wife Elizabeth will bear you a son, and you will give him the name John. And you will have joy and gladness, and many will rejoice at his birth. For he will be great in the sight of the Lord, and he will drink no wine or liquor; and he will be filled with the Holy Spirit, while yet in his mother’s womb. And he will turn back many of the sons of Israel to the Lord their God. And it is he who will go as a forerunner before Him in the spirit and power of Elijah, to turn the hearts of the fathers back to the children, and the disobedient to the attitude of the righteous; so as to make ready a people prepared for the Lord’” (Luke 1:12-17). “Now in the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God to a city in Galilee, called Nazareth, to a virgin engaged to a man whose name was Joseph, of the descendants of David; and the virgin’s name was Mary. And coming in, he said to her, ‘Hail, favored one! The Lord is with you.’ But she was greatly troubled at this statement, and kept pondering what kind of salutation this might be. And the angel said to her, ‘Do not be afraid, Mary; for you have found favor with God. And behold, you will conceive in your womb, and bear a son, and you shall name Him Jesus. He will be great, and will be called the Son of the Most High; and the Lord God will give Him the throne of His father David; and He will reign over the house of Jacob forever; and His kingdom will have no end’” (Luke 1:26-33). “For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of Jehovah of hosts will perform this” (Isa. 9:6-7). “There are 7 of God’s ‘shalls’ in this passage [Luke 1:26-33]. Four of them have been fulfilled, for Mary did bring forth a ‘son,’ He was called ‘Jesus,’ He was ‘great,’ and was called the ‘Son of the Highest;’ the other three must and will be fulfilled” (Larkin, DT, p. 92). “The second example is Gabriel’s message to Mary: that her Son would sit upon the throne of His father David and will have ‘rulership over Israel forever.’ This is in keeping with a literal understanding of the Davidic Covenant and Gabriel made no effort to correct a supposed Jewish misunderstanding of the nature of the kingdom” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 348). “The word of the angel Gabriel to the virgin Mary is that her Son ‘shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end’ (Luke 1:32, 33)... ‘their natural and literal sense... Mary could have understood these expressions in no other way” [quoting F. Godet, Commentary on Luke] (McClain, GK, p. 282). “Did Mary for one moment hold the amillenarian view? Would she spiritualize this passage—the throne of David is God’s throne in heaven; the kingdom is a spiritual kingdom; Israel is synonymous with the church? Certainly not! It was totally foreign to her thinking. If the amillenarians are right, Mary was sadly deceived. The prophecy of the angel could hardly have been better worded to confirm the ordinary Jewish hope as well as the exact essentials of the premillennial position—the literal and earthly fulfillment of the Davidic covenant” (Walvoord, MK, p. 117). “The force of the prophecy to Mary is a precise and dramatic confirmation of the promise to David in spite of Israel’s centuries of wandering, captivities, and sin” (ibid., p. 200). “For the Mighty One has done great things for me [Mary]; And holy is His name. And His mercy is upon generation after generation Toward those who fear Him. He has done mighty deeds with His arm; He has scattered those who were proud in the thoughts of their heart. He has brought down rulers from their thrones, And has exalted those who were humble. He has filled the hungry with good things; And sent away the rich empty-handed. He has given help to Israel His servant, In remembrance of His mercy, As He spoke to our fathers, To Abraham and his offspring forever” (Luke 1:49-55). “And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Spirit, and prophesied, saying: ‘Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, For He has visited us and accomplished redemption for His people, And has raised up a horn of salvation for us In the house of David His servant — As He spoke by the mouth of His holy prophets from of old — Salvation from our enemies, And from the hand of all who hate us; To show mercy toward our fathers, And to remember His holy covenant, The oath which He swore to Abraham our father, To grant us that we, being delivered from the hand of our enemies, Might serve Him without fear, In holiness and righteousness before Him all our days” (Luke 1:67-75). “And the angel said to them, ‘Do not be afraid; for behold, I bring you good news of a great joy which shall be for all the people; for today in the city of David there has been born for you a Savior, who is Christ the Lord” (Luke 2:10-11). “And behold, there was a man in Jerusalem whose name was Simeon; and this man was righteous and devout, looking for the consolation of Israel; and the Holy Spirit was upon him. And it had been revealed to him by the Holy Spirit that he would not see death before he had seen the Lord’s Christ. And he came in the Spirit into the temple; and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, to carry out for Him the custom of the Law, then he took Him into his arms, and blessed God, and said, ‘Now Lord, Thou dost let Thy bond-servant depart In peace, according to Thy word; For my eyes have seen Thy salvation, Which Thou hast prepared in the presence of all peoples, A light of revelation to the Gentiles, And the glory of Thy people Israel.’ And His father and mother were amazed at the things which were being said about Him. And Simeon blessed them, and said to Mary His mother, ‘Behold, this Child is appointed for the fall and rise of many in Israel, and for a sign to be opposed —” (Luke 2:25-34) “And there was a prophetess, Anna the daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of Asher. She was advanced in years, having lived with a husband seven years after her marriage, and then as a widow to the age of eighty-four. And she never left the temple, serving night and day with fastings and prayers. And at that very moment she came up and began giving thanks to God, and continued to speak of Him to all those who were looking for the redemption of Jerusalem” (Luke 2:36-38). “Luke 1:32, 33, 55, 72, 73, where we have undoubted allusions to previously obtained covenants, in ‘the mercy promised to the fathers,’ in ‘the holy covenant’ confirmed by oath ‘to our father Abraham,’ and in ‘the throne of his father David” (Peters, TTK, 1:285).

The Kingdom was announced by John the Baptist. “Now in those days John the Baptist came, preaching in the wilderness of Judea, saying, ‘Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand’” (Matt. 3:1-2). “This [John the Baptist] is the one about whom it is written, “Behold, I send My messenger before Your face, Who will prepare Your way before You”” (Matt. 11:10). “Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem; and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned, that she hath received of Jehovah’s hand double for all her sins. The voice of one that crieth, Prepare ye in the wilderness the way of Jehovah; make level in the desert a highway for our God” (Isa. 40:2-3) “Behold, I send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way be- fore me: and the Lord, whom ye seek, will suddenly come to his temple; and the messenger of the covenant, whom ye desire, behold, he cometh, saith Jehovah of hosts. But who can abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire, and like fuller's soap: and he will sit as a refiner and purifier of silver, and he will purify the sons of Levi, and refine them as gold and silver; and they shall offer unto Jehovah offerings in righteousness. Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto Jehovah, as in the days of old, and as in ancient years" (Mal. 3:1-4). "And if you care to accept it, he [John the Baptist] himself is Elijah, who was to come" (Matt. 11:14). "Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, even statutes and ordinances. Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the great and terrible day of Jehovah come" (Mal. 4:3-5). "If literal Elijah must appear Christ could not be making a bona fide offer of the kingdom, inasmuch as literal Elijah had to come and John could not have fulfilled that requirement. But if one coming in Elijah's spirit and power fulfills the requirements, then a genuine offer of the kingdom could be made. On the basis of the Lord's words it is concluded that Elijah personally need not appear, although one will come to fulfill this ministry (Matt 17:12)" (Pentecost, TTC, p. 312). "And He answered and said, 'Elijah is coming and will restore all things; but I say to you, that Elijah already came, and they did not recognize him, but did to him whatever they wished. So also the Son of Man is going to suffer at their hands'" (Matt. 17:11-12). "The Law and the Prophets were proclaimed until John; since that time the gospel of the kingdom of God has been preached, and everyone is forcing his way into it. But it is easier for heaven and earth to pass away than for one stroke of a letter of the Law to fail" (Luke 16:16-17). "The next day he saw Jesus coming to him, and said, 'Behold, the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world! This is He on behalf of whom I said, "After me comes a Man who has a higher rank than I, for He existed before me." And I did not recognize Him, but in order that He might be manifested to Israel, I came baptizing in water'" (John 1:29-31). "John the Baptist preached that this Kingdom, predicted by the Prophets, was 'nigh at hand.' This Kingdom was to be offered to the Jewish nation, and John's mission was to prepare the nation for its acceptance. However men may explain the Kingdom itself, the fact stated is not disputed" (Peters, TTK, 1:253). "Matt. 11:11 and Luke 7:28: 'Verily, I say unto you, among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist; notwithstanding he that is least in the Kingdom of heaven is greater than he.’ Our Saviour, undoubtedly, refers to the Kingdom of heaven as it will be established at His Second Advent... for the church is only preparative to that still future, coming Kingdom, in which the least that inherits is greater in official standing, more highly honored, than John was in his official position... who will then be greater than John in every respect, while John, also, in that Kingdom will occupy a still higher position than the one sustained at the First Advent” (ibid.). “John preached ‘the gospel of the Kingdom,’ just as Jesus, the twelve, and the seventy afterward preached it. Attention is simply directed to this, because some assert that there is no preaching of the Gospel unless a crucified Redeemer is proclaimed. But we have here and previous to the death of Jesus the gospel of the Kingdom proclaimed to the nation” (ibid.). “The preaching of John, giving no explanation of the Kingdom” (ibid.) “This satisfactorily answers the question, why John continued his ministry after the public appearance of Christ. The solution is found in John baptizing not only in view of a Messiah to come, but of a Kingdom to come” (ibid., p. 263). “When John the Baptist came preaching in the wilderness of Judea, he said: ‘Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand’ (Matt. 3:1-2). No explanation is offered as to the meaning of the ‘kingdom’ in his message, for the people knew what was implied by his words. After a study of the Old Testament prophetic Scriptures, what else could one expect him to say? There was no need to describe the conditions and characteristics of the kingdom, for that had been done so repeatedly and minutely” (Feinberg, M, p. 131). “In those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea, and saying, Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand’ (Matt. 3:1-2). This, too, was the early message of Christ (Matt 4:17; cf. Rom. 15:8), and of His disciples (Matt 10:6-7). The message announced what was then a new project, anticipated indeed by the whole nation, but without precedent in previous times. It called for the long foretold repentance which the nation will yet experience (cf. Deut. 4:29-30; 30:1-3, Isa. 61:2-3; Hos. 3:4-5; 14:7; Zech. 12:10-13:1; Mal. 3:7; Matt 24:30)” (Chafer, ST, 4:294). “In calling the nation to repentance, then, John was functioning as an Old Testament prophet” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 196). “‘The kingdom of heaven is near’ (Matt. 3:2). ‘Near’ meant that the only thing preventing the institution of the kingdom announced by John was the repentance of the nation” (ibid.). “Ryrie [in Basic Theology, pp. 459-460] first gives the example of the preaching of John the Baptist. He simply proclaimed that the kingdom of heaven is at hand without trying to explain the nature of the kingdom. If the nature was to be different from the common Jewish expectation, then certainly John should have made that plain. John simply expected his audience to know what he meant by the kingdom of heaven and, from the Old Testament, they did. All John emphasized was ‘repentance and not on describing the kingdom’” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 348). “The common understanding that ‘all Israel has a share in the age to come’ was an incorrect one and so both John and Jesus proclaimed that the need to repent for righteousness was the means of entering the kingdom” (ibid., p. 615).

It is our belief that John the Baptist was not mistaken, but rather that he had a correct conception of the Kingdom. “John the Baptist was not ignorant of the Kingdom that he preached. The prevailing view, indorsed by a multitude of eminent theologians, is that John was ignorant of, i.e., did not understand the nature of, the Kingdom he proclaimed. Numerous works proceed to tell us how ‘low’ and ‘carnal’ John’s ideas were, without perceiving the fatal flaw introduced; without realizing that they are actually sapping the very foundations of inspiration, and giving to infidelity its strongest weapons against the divine origin of Christianity” (Peters, TTK, 1:256). “Any theory of the Kingdom which makes the first great preacher of the Kingdom—a preacher specially prepared, sent, and inspired—ignorant of the leading subject that he was delegated, specifically commissioned to announce, is not only open to the gravest suspicion, but ought to be rejected as unworthy of God” (ibid.). “What was John’s conception of the Messiah’s Kingdom? Let those who consider John to be mistaken inform us, and let the reader judge for himself whether it is not the very idea of the Kingdom embraced in the grammatical sense of the prophets, and in a restored Theocratic-Davidic Kingdom. Thus e.g. Neander (Life of Christ, ch. 2, s. 40) truthfully admits that ‘he expects this Kingdom to be visible,’ ‘existing in communion with the divine life, with the Messiah as its visible King; so that, what had not been the case before, the idea of the Theocracy and its manifestation should precisely correspond to each other,’ and ‘his expectations of a visible realization of the Theocracy shows him as yet upon Old Test. ground.’ That is, John expected the restoration of the Theocracy in an exalted manner under the Messiah, just as the prophets plainly predicted. Was he mistaken in this conception? Many say that he was, simply because such a conception was not realized at the First Advent, and down to the present day no such Kingdom has existed, and, therefore, take it for granted, that he misapprehended the nature of the Kingdom; that the church must be the Kingdom intended; that the prophecies pertaining to the restored Theocracy must be spiritualized to suit the present church, etc., thus overlooking the fact, clearly given, that for certain reasons (which will hereafter be given in detail) the very Kingdom preached and anticipated by John was postponed. Instead of allowing God’s Word to speak, and having faith in it that it will yet be fulfilled as written, this lack of faith, based on a supposed never to be realized fulfillment, is made the measure of John's preaching and of God's Divine Purpose. Is it wise or prudent" (ibid.)? "If John is specially called to preach this Kingdom, and yet labors under delusion, gross error respecting its nature, we ask, Whom, then, can we trust? Let the reader ponder these facts: that this John was consecrated to the ministerial office from the womb (Luke 1:15); that for this purpose he was brought forth beyond the ordinary course of nature (Luke 1:18); that he was under such Divine guidance as (Luke 1:15, etc.) to be 'filled with the Holy Ghost'; constituted 'the prophet of the Highest'; 'to give knowledge of salvation'; and (John 1:7) to be 'a witness of the light';—and then is it credible, even supposable, that such a Prophet and Witness, thus filled with the Spirit, should grossly blunder in declaring the leading subject of his preaching, the Kingdom of heaven? Yet such is the opinion of multitudes, learned and unlearned, while infidels laugh and sneer at this practically acknowledged lowering of a divinely commissioned preacher of the Kingdom. Surely, if this is so, viz., that he misapprehended the Kingdom, then upon what does his credibility as a prophet depend? If mistaken in the most vital part of his mission, why was he not in error concerning the rest? Now, against all such dishonoring theories, we take the ground, sustained both by Scripture and the Primitive Church view, that he was not mistaken in his preaching; that he knew full well what Kingdom he was to tender to the Jewish nation, far better than the multitude which denies its correctness; and that if such a Kingdom, as he believed in and proclaimed, was not realized, we must allow the Scriptures themselves to assign the reasons for such a delay" (ibid., p. 257). "Fairness to John requires that we should accept of his preaching until it is proven to be erroneous" (ibid.). "John the Baptist, who proclaimed the kingdom of heaven at hand, knew nothing of the mystery form of that kingdom, for it was not revealed by our Lord Jesus until after the death of John" (Feinberg, M, p. 269). "John, in prison, inquires, 'Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?' (Matt. 11:3). This may have been no more than an inquiry why that which he himself had been sent to announce did not materialize" (Chafer, ST, 4:293). "'The ax is already at the root of the trees, and every tree that does not produce good fruit will be cut down and thrown into the fire' ([Matt. 3] v. 10). This was entirely consistent with the Old Testament revelation that the Messiah would come as a Judge and remove sinners from His kingdom" (Pentecost, TKC, p. 197).

The Kingdom was announced by Jesus' baptism. "This baptism was designed to indicate that the person receiving it was prepared or qualified for the Kingdom, yielding himself to the supreme will of God, hence David's Son could properly receive it" (Peters, TTK, 1:264).

The Kingdom was announced by Jesus. We'll cover Jesus' announcement of the Kingdom below, in our section The Kingdom was Announced and Offered.

The Kingdom was announced by others. It was announced by two blind men, "And as Jesus passed on from there, two blind men followed Him, crying out, and saying, 'Have mercy on us, Son of David!'" (Matt. 9:27) by a blind beggar, "And they came to Jericho. And as He was going out from Jericho with His disciples and a great multitude, a blind beggar named Bartimaeus, the son of Timaeus, was sitting by the road. And when he heard that it was Jesus the Nazarene, he began to cry out and say, 'Jesus, Son of David, have mercy on me!' And many were sternly telling him to be quiet, but he kept crying out all the more, 'Son of David, have mercy on me!'" (Mark 10:46-48) "And he [the blind man] called out, saying, 'Jesus, Son of David, have mercy on me!' And those who led the way were sternly telling him to be quiet; but he kept crying out all the more, 'Son of David, have mercy on me'" (Luke 18:38-39)! by Philip and Nathanael, "The next day He purposed to go forth into Galilee, and He found Philip. And Jesus said to him, 'Follow Me.' Now Philip was from Bethsaida, of the city of Andrew and Peter. Philip found Nathanael and said to him, 'We have found Him of whom Moses in the Law and also the Prophets wrote, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph.' And Nathanael said to him, 'Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?' Philip said to him, 'Come and see.' Jesus saw Nathanael coming to Him, and said of him, 'Behold, an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile!' Nathanael said to Him, 'How do You know me?' Jesus answered and said to him, 'Before Philip called you, when you were under the fig tree, I saw you.' Nathanael answered Him, 'Rabbi, You are the Son of God; You are the King of Israel.' Jesus answered and said to him, 'Because I said to you that I saw you under the fig tree, do you believe? You shall see greater things than these'" (John 1:43-50). by Peter, "He said to them, 'But who do you say that I am?' And Simon Peter answered and said, 'Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.' And Jesus answered and said to him, 'Blessed are you, Simon Barjona, because flesh and blood did not reveal this to you, but My Father who is in heaven'" (Matt. 16:15-17). "When Peter, therefore, made this confession he believed as fundamental to it, that 'the Christ' was the kingly title of Jesus, that which indicated Him as 'the anointed' One, coming as the King to restore the Theocratic-Davidic Kingdom" (Peters, TTK, 1:441). "When we see that Peter's conceptions of 'the Christ'—as shown to exist—were approved by Jesus Himself, who shall dare to decry them as ‘ignorant’ and ‘antiquated’” (ibid.). (See also our discussion of the title “Christ” in the section Titles of the King in our chapter The King of the Kingdom.) by those who wanted to take Jesus by force and make Him king, “Jesus therefore perceiving that they were intending to come and take Him by force, to make Him king, withdrew again to the mountain by Himself alone” (John 6:15). by another two blind men, “And as they were going out from Jericho, a great multitude followed Him. And behold, two blind men sitting by the road, hearing that Jesus was passing by, cried out, saying, ‘Lord, have mercy on us, Son of David!’ And the multitude sternly told them to be quiet; but they cried out all the more, saying, ‘Lord, have mercy on us, Son of David’” (Matt. 20:29-31)! and by children in the temple. “But when the chief priests and the scribes saw the wonderful things that He had done, and the children who were crying out in the temple and saying, ‘Hosanna to the Son of David,’ they became indignant” (Matt. 21:15)

The Kingdom was announced by Jesus’ transfiguration. “Truly I say to you, there are some of those who are standing here who shall not taste death until they see the Son of Man coming in His kingdom.’ And six days later Jesus took with Him Peter and James and John his brother, and brought them up to a high mountain by themselves. And He was transfigured before them; and His face shone like the sun, and His garments became as white as light. And behold, Moses and Elijah appeared to them, talking with Him” (Matt. 16:28–17:3). “The disciples saw Jesus, but not as ‘the Coming One’ in His Kingdom; they only saw Him in His state of humiliation; but the former is a reality as well as the latter, and the confession of the former having been elicited, Jesus now graciously proceeds to verify the former, so that hereafter, when withdrawn for a time, the apostles may proclaim the glorious truth that He is indeed ‘The Christ’— ‘The King of Israel.’... The trial of the nation being ended by the death of John the Baptist, and by the conspiracy against the life of Jesus, and now the trial of the Son of man and that of His devoted followers coming on, in this extremity something extraordinary—something out of the usual course of events—is needed to indicate the truth which the approaching death seems to crush, and that need is supplied in the wonderful transfiguration” (Peters, TTK, 2:557). “It was a temporary display, an outward manifestation or revealing of the majesty and glory that belongs to Jesus when He comes at the Second Advent in His Kingdom with His saints to reign over the nations” (ibid., p. 560). “...the saints, glorified... at His Second Advent these are made up of two parties, viz., the dead saints and the living saints translated, these two, Moses and Elias, are purposely chosen as a correct exhibition of the two parties—forming one class—who shall then appear ‘in glory’ with Christ” (ibid.). “Moses... for aught we know, he may have had a resurrection body... Kurtz (His. Old Cov., vol. 3, p. 495), when answering the question, ‘Why should Jehovah Himself bury Moses?’ says: ‘It is true that Moses was not saved from death in the same manner as Enoch and Elijah; he really died and his body was really buried—this is expressly stated in the Bible history—but we may assume, with the greatest probability, that, like them, he was saved from corruption... A resurrection similar to Christ’s, without seeing corruption, would suit this typical character” (ibid., p. 562). “Moses had been resurrected, and Elijah had never died, and the Transfiguration scene is a foreview of the condition of the dead after the FIRST RESURRECTION, when those who are with Christ shall return to the region of the air to reign with Christ over the earth” (Larkin, DT, p. 102). “Why did Michael the Archangel contend with the Devil over the ‘body’ of Moses, if Moses had no further need of it? Did not he and Elijah have use for their bodies when they appeared on the Mt. of Transfiguration with Jesus? And if they were ‘the’ two men that stood by in ‘white apparel’ when Jesus ascended (Acts 1:9-11), and are to be the ‘Two Witnesses’ of Rev. 11:3-6, we see, that as they are the ‘type’ of the Resurrected and Translated saints, that the Saints at the Rapture will have ‘bodies’ like Moses and Elijah now have” (ibid., p. 107).

And, the Kingdom was announced and foreshadowed by Jesus’ miracles. “After these things Jesus went away to the other side of the Sea of Galilee (or Tiberias). And a great multitude was following Him, because they were seeing the signs which He was performing on those who were sick... So the men sat down, in number about five thousand. Jesus therefore took the loaves; and having given thanks, He distributed to those who were seated; likewise also of the fish as much as they wanted. And when they were filled, He said to His disciples, ‘Gather up the leftover fragments that nothing may be lost.’ And so they gathered them up, and filled twelve baskets with fragments from the five barley loaves, which were left over by those who had eaten. When therefore the people saw the sign which He had performed, they said, ‘This is of a truth the Prophet who is to come into the world.’ Jesus therefore perceiving that they were intending to come and take Him by force, to make Him king, withdrew again to the mountain by Himself alone” (John 6:1–15). “The fact that after the miracle of the ‘Loaves and Fishes’ the multitude was desirous to take Jesus by force and make Him a KING (John 6:15), reveals what they understood by the preaching of the Kingdom of Heaven being AT HAND. That Jesus prevented their doing so by escaping to a mountain is no evidence that He repudiated the idea of Kingship over a visible earthly Kingdom, but that to have received the Kingdom from them would have been wrong, for He is to receive the Kingdom from the FATHER, and not from men. Dan. 7:13-14” (Larkin, DT, p. 86). “I saw in the night-visions, and, behold, there came with the clouds of heaven one like unto a son of man, and he came even to the ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all the peoples, nations, and languages should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed” (Dan. 7:13-14). “Indeed there is scarcely a feature of this kingdom foretold which is to be formed by the special work of the Divine, that is not also confirmed to us by some glimpses of the Power that shall bring them forth” (Peters, TTK, 1:90). “The miracles, therefore, are not types of something else, but signs, real earnest, inchoate foretastes, of something in the same line, greater, in the future” (ibid., p. 91). “Designed as the miracles (wrought by some, perhaps all) were to foreshadow the power to be experienced in the Kingdom itself, they were also, at the same time, a witness to the veracity of the preachers themselves” (ibid., p. 276). “Jesus... His ‘works’ and ‘signs’ evidenced His ability to verify Covenant and prophecy” (ibid., 2:152). “The works they were to perform were ‘Kingdom SIGNS,’ and had no reference to the salvation of the soul” (Larkin, DT, p. 86). “...the patent but sometimes overlooked fact that what is termed miracle in the New Testament is essentially a phenomenon which always occurs in the physical area of the world” (McClain, GK, p. 298). “If the Kingdom announced by the Lord was thus narrowly spiritual, why all these physical miracles so great in both kind and number during the ministry of Christ on earth? But, on the other hand, if such miracles properly belong to a spiritual kingdom, allegedly established at His first coming, why then are they not present today? They are not less needed than nineteen centuries ago” (ibid., p. 302). “The miracles were not performed to attract attention, to create interest, or to draw a crowd (although they did all those things). They were performed first of all to authenticate His person. Jesus claimed to be the Son of God, and His miracles gave proof to that claim. In addition they proved the genuineness of His offer of Himself as Israel’s Messiah/King and of His offer of the covenanted kingdom” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 207). “The miracles reveal the conditions that will prevail in His kingdom when He reigns. It will be a kingdom in which there is no sickness, no hunger, no sin [eventually—ed.], no death [eventually—ed.]. All creation will be under His control. These same conditions were predicted by the prophets in their descriptions of the messianic kingdom” (ibid.). “In brief, Christ did not ask the nation to accept Him on His Word alone, but authenticated that word by a multitude of signs. The nation was responsible then to make a response to that authenticated offer” (ibid.). “Jesus validated His offer of Himself as the Messiah by the miracles which He performed” (ibid., p. 214). “...through His miracles He had given Israel a foretaste of the miraculous powers by which the Messiah would usher in the theocratic kingdom” (Showers, M, p. 237). “...all the miracles in His life being in the physical world” (Geisler, ST, 4:479) (See also our description of the miraculous nature of the Kingdom in our chapter The Millennial Kingdom.)

The Kingdom is Announced and Offered

The Kingdom was not only announced; it was also offered to Israel.

The Kingdom was announced and offered by Jesus. “The third example is the preaching of Jesus Himself. Like John the Baptist, He simply proclaimed the kingdom to be at hand without describing it or correcting a supposed Jewish misunderstanding of the nature of the kingdom. He obviously expected His Jewish audience to know what He was talking about, and they did. It is true that ‘as His message continued to be rejected by the people, and especially by their leaders,’ Jesus then introduced a new facet of God’s kingdom program, the Mystery Kingdom, describing ‘what form the kingdom would take between the first and second advents of Christ.’ However, this does not validate the claim of so many Covenant Theologians that this new facet of the kingdom program replaces the Davidic Kingdom or that ‘the Davidic kingdom would take a new form with the church fulfilling the promise made to David.’ This is evident from the fact that Christ ‘continued to speak of the Davidic kingdom to the end of his earthly life.’ Even after the resurrection, in answer to the Apostles’ question about restoring the kingdom to Israel, Jesus ‘did not tell them that the kingdom had been changed to the church.’ He simply told them that the timing of that restoration is not for them to know. The introduction of the Mystery Kingdom in the present age did ‘not change or abrogate the promises of the Davidic Covenant concerning the future, earthly kingdom.’ Ryrie’s conclusion is: ‘the teaching of the New Testament confirms the Davidic Covenant’” [quoting from Ryrie, Basic Theology, pp. 459-460] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 348).

The Kingdom was announced and offered both by Jesus’ Person and by His preaching.

The Kingdom was announced and offered by Jesus’ Person:

Jesus came, not to write theology, but to fulfill Scripture. “Do not think that I came to abolish the Law or the Prophets; I did not come to abolish, but to fulfill” (Matt. 5:17). “He is not come to write, but to fulfill that which is written; hence a systematic arrangement of Divinity, a Theological system or summary of Doctrine, would have been out of place... Christ honors the prophetic record, honors the oath-confirmed covenant, and, by the fulfillment of His own birth, life, death, resurrection, ascension, words respecting the Jewish nation, Gentiles, Church etc., reconfirms in the most powerful manner—ininitely superior to mere writing—the testimony concerning Himself and the Kingdom” (Peters, TTK, 1:272). “Jesus came to fulfill the law and the prophets” (ibid., p. 362)

The Kingdom was offered to Israel in the Person of Jesus. “Toussaint [in Toussaint and Dyer, Pentecost Essays, p. 22] has stated the dispensational viewpoint quite well: ‘Very often the dispensationalist school of interpretation will refer to “the offer of the kingdom” to Israel. By this is meant the contingency of the coming of the kingdom to Israel in the first century based on Israel’s acceptance of Jesus as its Messiah. This concept is clearly found in the New Testament. For instance, Peter openly states the coming of the Messiah rests on Israel’s repentance (Acts 3:19-21). The Lord Himself said that John the Baptist could have been the fulfillment of the Elijah prophecy of Malachi 4:5-6 if Israel had repented (Matt. 11:14)... However, dispensationalists may want to clarify their terminology. The New Testament does teach the contingency of the coming of the kingdom premised on the response of the Jews. But every Israelite wanted the kingdom to come. To say Christ offered the kingdom to Israel is true, but it leaves the impression the Jews did not want the kingdom to come. It would be far better to say Jesus offered Himself as Israel’s Messiah and the coming of the kingdom was contingent on their acceptance or rejection of Him’” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 615). “The long-awaited messianic kingdom promised to David has arrived in the person of Jesus. It was ‘at hand’ (‘near’); all Israel needed to do was repent of their sins and accept their Messiah-King ([Matt. 3] v. 2)” (Geisler, ST, 4:482).

Jesus presented Himself as King of Israel to Jerusalem. “Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy king cometh unto thee; he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, even upon a colt the foal of an ass” (Zech. 9:9). “And when they had approached Jerusalem and had come to Bethphage, to the Mount of Olives, then Jesus sent two disciples, saying to them, ‘Go into the village opposite you, and immediately you will find a donkey tied there and a colt with her; untie them, and bring them to Me.

And if anyone says something to you, you shall say, “The Lord has need of them,” and immediately he will send them.’ Now this took place that what was spoken through the prophet might be fulfilled, saying, ‘SAY TO THE DAUGHTER OF ZION, “BEHOLD YOUR KING IS COMING TO YOU, GENTLE, AND MOUNTED ON A DONKEY, EVEN ON A COLT, THE FOAL OF A BEAST OF BURDEN.”’ And the disciples went and did just as Jesus had directed them, and brought the donkey and the colt, and laid on them their garments, on which He sat. And most of the multitude spread their garments in the road, and others were cutting branches from the trees, and spreading them in the road. And the multitudes going before Him, and those who followed after were crying out, saying, ‘Hosanna to the Son of David; BLESSED IS HE WHO COMES IN THE NAME OF THE LORD; Hosanna in the highest!’ And when He had entered Jerusalem, all the city was stirred, saying, ‘Who is this?’ And the multitudes were saying, ‘This is the prophet Jesus, from Nazareth in Galilee’” (Matt. 21:1–11). “And as they approached Jerusalem, at Bethphage and Bethany, near the Mount of Olives, He sent two of His disciples, and said to them, ‘Go into the village opposite you, and immediately as you enter it, you will find a colt tied there, on which no one yet has ever sat; untie it and bring it here. And if anyone says to you, “Why are you doing this?” you say, “The Lord has need of it”; and immediately he will send it back here.’ And they went away and found a colt tied at the door outside in the street; and they untied it. And some of the bystanders were saying to them, ‘What are you doing, untying the colt?’ And they spoke to them just as Jesus had told them, and they gave them permission. And they brought the colt to Jesus and put their garments on it; and He sat upon it. And many spread their garments in the road, and others spread leafy branches which they had cut from the fields. And those who went before, and those who followed after, were crying out, ‘Hosanna! Blessed is He who comes in the name of the Lord; Blessed is the coming kingdom of our father David; Hosanna in the highest’” (Mark 11:1–10)! “And as He was now approaching, near the descent of the Mount of Olives, the whole multitude of the disciples began to praise God joyfully with a loud voice for all the miracles which they had seen, saying, ‘Blessed is the King who comes in the name of the Lord; Peace in heaven and glory in the highest’” (Luke 19:37–38)! “On the next day the great multitude who had come to the feast, when they heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem, took the branches of the palm trees, and went out to meet Him, and began to cry out, ‘Hosanna! Blessed is He who comes in the name of the Lord, even the King of Israel.' And Jesus, finding a young donkey, sat on it; as it is written, 'Fear not, daughter of Zion; behold, your King is coming, seated on a donkey's colt'" (John 12:12-15). "The entry into Jerusalem by which as many admit 'the Saviour appears to have awakened and nourished those earthly Messianic hopes' (Olahausen, Com., vol. 2, p. 142) is only reconcilable with our view of this Coming and Kingdom" (Peters, TTK, 2:195). "That Jesus did not deny His Kingship of an outward and visible earthly Kingdom is clear from the fact that He accepted the 'Hosannahs' of the multitude when he rode into Jerusalem on Palm Sunday in fulfillment of the Messianic prophecy of Zech. 9:9. John 12:12-15" (Larkin, DT, p. 86). "If Christ did not mean to set up an earthly kingdom, then his triumphal entry into Jerusalem is inexplicable" (Feinberg, M, p. 256). "Now, while the civil and religious leaders of Israel had already made known their rejection of His claims, and in terms which could not be misunderstood (Matt. 12:24; Mark 3:22), there had been as yet no official decision on the part of the nation. And to secure such a decision, our Lord now sets His face toward Jerusalem, there to make the official offer" (McClain, GK, p. 344). "The triumphal entry, celebrated by Christendom for the most part with little understanding of its relation to the history of the Kingdom of God, was an event of tremendous import" (ibid., p. 346). "There is deep significance in the very language with which the multitude expressed their joy. As reported by the four gospel writers, they cried, 'Hosanna to the son of David; blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest' (Matt. 21:9). 'Blessed be the Kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord' (Mark 11:10). 'Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord: peace in heaven, and glory in the highest' (Luke 19:38). 'Blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord' (John 12:13). All these joyous cries, it is evident, arose out of the 118th Psalm which was recognized by the ancient Jewish Rabbins and early Christian writers as one of the greatest of all the Messianic Psalms" (ibid., p. 348). "The stone which the builders rejected Is become the head of the corner. This is Jehovah's doing; It is marvellous in our eyes. This is the day which Jehovah hath made; We will rejoice and be glad in it. Save now, we beseech thee, O Jehovah: O Jehovah, we beseech thee, send now prosperity. Blessed be he that cometh in the name of Jehovah: We have blessed you out of the house of Jehovah" (Ps. 118:22-26). "'Master, rebuke thy disciples' (Luke 19:39). By the commentators in general, almost no attention has been given to the implications of this Pharisaic protest... They must have known that upon former occasions our Lord had strictly enjoined silence upon His disciples with reference to public acclamation of His regal claims (Matt. 16:20; Luke 9:21)... But now, as He rides into the city, they hear the shouts of the people acclaiming Him openly as the ‘King of Israel’; and they must have wondered that there was no rebuke from the lips of Jesus as previously” (McClain, GK, p. 349). “Thousands of Jews cried, Hosanna, blessed is He that comes in the name of the Lord, which in its Jewish frame of reference is an official messianic greeting, based upon the messianic context of Psalm 118:26” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 301). “When Jesus was heralded at His triumphal entry, the Jerusalem crowd shouted, ‘Blessed is the coming kingdom of our father David!’ and ‘Hosanna in the highest!’ (Mark 11:10) and ‘Hosanna to the Son of David’ (Matt. 21:9). They were expecting the start of the promised messianic kingdom” (Geisler, ST, 4:467).

And, the Kingdom was announced and offered by Jesus’ preaching:

Again, Jesus preached only to Israel. “But He answered and said, ‘I was sent only to the lost sheep of the house of Israel’” (Matt. 15:24). “And from there He arose and went away to the region of Tyre. And when He had entered a house, He wanted no one to know of it; yet He could not escape notice. But after hearing of Him, a woman whose little daughter had an unclean spirit, immediately came and fell at His feet. Now the woman was a Gentile, of the Syrophenician race. And she kept asking Him to cast the demon out of her daughter. And He was saying to her, ‘Let the children be satisfied first, for it is not good to take the children’s bread and throw it to the dogs.’ But she answered and said to Him, ‘Yes, Lord, but even the dogs under the table feed on the children’s crumbs.’ And He said to her, ‘Because of this answer go your way; the demon has gone out of your daughter.’ And going back to her home, she found the child lying on the bed, the demon having departed” (Mark 7:24-30).

And, as to the content of His preaching, Jesus preached the Kingdom:

He preached the same Kingdom message that John the Baptist had preached. “From that time Jesus began to preach and say, ‘Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand’” (Matt. 4:17). “And after John had been taken into custody, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of God, and saying, ‘The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand; repent and believe in the gospel’” (Mark 1:14–15). “And it came about soon afterwards, that He began going about from one city and village to another, proclaiming and preaching the kingdom of God; and the twelve were with Him” (Luke 8:1) “When John’s ministry ended by his imprisonment, it is said (Matt. 4:17): ‘From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent, for the Kingdom of heaven is at hand.’ (Comp. Mark 1:14, 15, Luke 4:23, and

8:1.)... Jesus preached the Kingdom of God in the same manner that John the Baptist did” (Peters, TTK, 1:266).

He preached, “Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand,” and that “the time is fulfilled.” “From that time Jesus began to preach and say, ‘Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand’” (Matt. 4:17) “And after John had been taken into custody, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of God, and saying, ‘The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand; repent and believe in the gospel’” (Mark 1:14-15). “‘the time is fulfilled.’... In this, as numerous writers have noticed, there is an evident allusion to the seventy weeks of Daniel (ch. 9:20-27)” (Peters, TTK, p. 390).

He preached the gospel of the Kingdom. “And Jesus was going about in all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every kind of disease and every kind of sickness among the people” (Matt. 4:23). “And Jesus was going about all the cities and the villages, teaching in their synagogues, and proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every kind of disease and every kind of sickness” (Matt. 9:35).

He preached the Kingdom of God. “But He said to them, ‘I must preach the kingdom of God to the other cities also, for I was sent for this purpose’” (Luke 4:43). “But the multitudes were aware of this and followed Him; and welcoming them, He began speaking to them about the kingdom of God and curing those who had need of healing” (Luke 9:11).

He preached that the Kingdom of God was in their midst. “nor will they say, “Look, here it is!” or, “There it is!” For behold, the kingdom of God is in your midst” (Luke 17:21). “The kingdom was offered in the person of the king. The Lord’s statement is: ‘Behold, the kingdom of God is within you’ (Luke 17:21). The Lord is not asserting that His kingdom was to be a spiritual kingdom in the hearts of men. Such is contrary to the entire tenor of the Word of God. He is asserting that the kingdom to which they were looking was already ‘at hand’ in the person of the king. The rightful king was present and all that was required was repentance on the part of the nation and a reception of Christ as the theocratic Messiah” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 452). “As to the personal presence of its King, the Kingdom was actually ‘in the midst’ of men... The King James rendering, by ‘within,’ cannot be true; for surely in no sense could the Kingdom of God have been ‘within’ the hearts of the Pharisees to whom our Lord was speaking, and who had charged blasphemously that His miracles were being accomplished through the power of the devil (Matt. 12:24). But in the Person of its divinely appointed King, visibly present in incarnate form on earth where He must eventually reign, the Kingdom was in that sense already ‘in the midst of men regardless of their attitude, whether for or against Him... That Christ so regarded the historical situation is strongly supported by His words to the disciples which immediately follow: ‘The days will come, when ye shall desire to see one of the days of the Son of man, and ye shall not see it’ (Luke 17:22)” (McClain, GK, p. 272). “The Greek adverb entos may be translated either ‘within’ or ‘among’ in the sense of ‘in the midst of.’ But the context of Luke 17:21 is decisively against ‘within.’ As Dean Alford has said, ‘The misunderstanding which rendered these words “within you” meaning this in a spiritual sense, “in your hearts,” should have been prevented by reflecting that they are addressed to the Pharisees, in whose hearts it [the Kingdom] certainly was not’ (New Testament for English Readers on Luke 17:21). With this opinion H.A.W. Meyer agrees, adding that the entire idea of a kingdom existing in the heart or soul of man is ‘modern, not historico-biblical’ (Commentary on the New Testament, Luke 17:21)” (ibid.).

He preached that He came to fulfill the Law and the Prophets. “Do not think that I came to abolish the Law or the Prophets; I did not come to abolish, but to fulfill. For truly I say to you, until heaven and earth pass away, not the smallest letter or stroke shall pass away from the Law, until all is accomplished” (Matt. 5:17-18). “Jesus and the apostles constantly appeal to this: that the Scriptures testified concerning Him, and that their testimony was true, being verified. Precisely so with this Kingdom; for it is the great theme of the prophets, and we can only know that it has really come when the predictions relating to it are realized” (Peters, TTK, 1:163). “Christ Himself never hesitated to measure His life and mission by the Old Testament (John 5). Why should the kingdom be different” (Feinberg, M, p. 275)? “The very fact that Messiah came to fulfill those covenants proves that Israel’s disobedience had not disqualified them or nullified their place in the plan of God” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 191). “In affirming the precise identification of Christ’s announced Kingdom with that predicted in the Prophets, it should be explained that, while our Lord always follows closely the Old Testament prophetic pattern, there is never any mere slavish repetition of words, phrases, and texts. Rather He unfolds and interprets the utterances of the prophets, so that meanings become deeper and richer. ‘In His doctrine of the righteousness of the kingdom, Jesus declares that He is not introducing anything absolutely new, but only unfolding the deepest spirit and teaching of law and the prophets’” [quoting Ernest F. Scott, The Kingdom of God, p. 186] (McClain, GK, p. 303). “Jesus

He taught that Jerusalem is the city of the great king. “Again, you have heard that the ancients were told, “You shall not make false vows, but shall fulfill your vows to the Lord.” But I say to you, make no oath at all, either by heaven, for it is the throne of God, or by the earth, for it is the footstool of His feet, or by Jerusalem, for it is the city of the great King” (Matt. 5:33-35). “Beautiful in elevation, the joy of the whole earth, Is mount Zion, on the sides of the north, The city of the great King” (Ps. 48:2).

He taught His followers to pray for the Kingdom to come. “Pray, then, in this way: “Our Father who art in heaven, Hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, On earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven our debtors”” (Matt. 6:9-12). “And He said to them, ‘When you pray, say: “Father, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come”” (Luke 11:2). “‘Thy Kingdom come’ cannot be prayed for by those who already possess it” (Peters, TTK, 1:643). “The prayer is given, without explanation, in view of a well-known covenanted Kingdom, generally anticipated” (ibid.). “Jesus, in teaching His disciples to pray for a future, coming Kingdom, undoubtedly taught them to pray for the same Kingdom covenanted, predicted, and which they preached” (ibid., p. 689). “They prayed for the Theocratic Kingdom to come” (ibid.). “The ‘will’ of God respecting the earth is easily read if we but direct the eye of faith either to the past or to the future, as given in the Word; in the past it is reflected before the fall, and in the future, it shines forth in the renewed earth” (ibid., p. 690). “Barnes... says... the Rabbins declared, “That prayer in which there is no mention made of the Kingdom of heaven is not a prayer”” (ibid., p. 691). “Tertullian (De Oratione) makes this prayer to be one for the coming of the Kingdom at the Advent still future, and thus urges this petition to be used: ‘Wherefore, if the appearing of God’s Kingdom belongs to the will of God and to our earnest expectation, how can some pray for a lengthening out of the age, when the Kingdom of God, for which we pray that it may come, tends to the consummation of the age? We wish to reign earlier, and not to serve longer. Even if it were not prescribed in the prayer, about praying for the coming of the Kingdom, we should, of our own accord, offer that petition, hastening to the fruition of our hope... Yes, Lord, let Thy Kingdom come with the utmost speed! The wish of Christians, the confusion of the heathen, the joy of angels, for which we struggle; yea, more, for which we pray’” (ibid.). “...denoting as it does” a well-defined (“Thy”) Kingdom, which the Father has promised most solemnly under oath, and which David's Son receives from the Ancient of Days at the allotted period" (ibid., p. 695) "Take the 'Lord's Prayer,' (Matt. 6:9-13), which is a part of the 'Sermon on the Mount.' It asks that— 'The Kingdom' may come, not that the 'Church' may increase and prosper. There is no petition for 'Salvation from sin' in it. It asks that 'God's will may be done in earth, as it is done in heaven.' It is a prayer for those who shall be living in the 'Tribulation Period' who in their persecutions will long for the return of the King, that the Kingdom may be set up, and God's will be done, as it will be done then, on earth as it is done in Heaven. At that time the 'Beast' (Antichrist) will be in power and no one shall be able to 'buy' or 'sell' except he that hath the 'Mark of the Beast,' and this explains the petition—'Give us this day our DAILY BREAD,' for unless food is supplied miraculously they will perish. And it will be a time when they shall particularly need to be delivered, not from evil, but the EVIL ONE—Satan, who will tempt them to recant and worship the Beast" (Larkin, DT, p. 87). "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.' It is probable that of the many who repeat these words but few have pondered their far-reaching significance. Not every mind can grasp so vast a theme" (Chafer, ST, 5:108). "This Universal Kingdom is not exactly identical with that Kingdom for which our Lord taught His disciples to pray... In its universal and providential sense, the Kingdom of God had already come, and the will of God was being done, in every place including even the earth" (McClain, GK, p. 34). "On the basis of mediatorial redemption it must 'come' to put down at last all rebellion with its train of evil results, thus finally bringing the Kingdom and will of God on earth as it is in heaven. When this purpose has been fully accomplished, the mediatorial phase of the Kingdom will disappear as a separate entity, being merged with the Universal Kingdom of God" (ibid., p. 35). "Those who pray intelligently, 'Thy kingdom come,' are those who will also speak a great deal about its future glories and benefits" (ibid., p. 426).

He taught His followers to seek first the Kingdom. "But seek first His kingdom and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added to you" (Matt. 6:33). "But seek for His kingdom, and these things shall be added to you" (Luke 12:31).

He taught that one must be born spiritually to enter the Kingdom. "Jesus answered and said to him [Nicodemus], Truly, truly, I say to you, unless one is born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God.' Nicodemus said to Him, 'How can a man be born when he is old? He cannot enter a second time into his mother's womb and be born, can he?' Jesus answered, Truly, truly, I say to you, unless one is born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God” (John 3:3-5). “Jesus answered and said to him, “Are you the teacher of Israel and do not understand these things” (John 3:10)? “When Nicodemus is perplexed about the way of entrance into the Kingdom, the reply of Jesus is not a definition but a rebuke: ‘Art thou the teacher of Israel, and understandest not these things?’ (John 3:10, ASV). This rebuke makes no sense at all apart from the assumption that the Kingdom announced by our Lord was in all respects the Kingdom of Old Testament Prophecy; and consequently Nicodemus, by virtue of his position as an authorized teacher in Israel, could properly be held fully responsible for understanding exactly the nature and various aspects of that Kingdom” (McClain, GK, p. 277).

He taught that Gentiles will participate in the Kingdom. “And when He had entered Capernaum, a centurion came to Him, entreating Him, and saying, ‘Lord, my servant is lying paralyzed at home, suffering great pain.’ And He said to him, ‘I will come and heal him.’ But the centurion answered and said, ‘Lord, I am not worthy for You to come under my roof, but just say the word, and my servant will be healed. For I, too, am a man under authority, with soldiers under me; and I say to this one, “Go!” and he goes, and to another, “Come!” and he comes, and to my slave, “Do this!” and he does it.’ Now when Jesus heard this, He marveled, and said to those who were following, “Truly I say to you, I have not found such great faith with anyone in Israel. And I say to you, that many shall come from east and west, and recline at the table with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven; but the sons of the kingdom shall be cast out into the outer darkness; in that place there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.’ And Jesus said to the centurion, ‘Go your way; let it be done to you as you have believed.’ And the servant was healed that very hour” (Matt. 8:5-13). We’ll discuss Gentile participation in the Kingdom in our chapters Inauguration of the Kingdom and The Millennial Kingdom.

He taught that a nobleman would travel far away to secure a Kingdom, then return. “And while they were listening to these things, He went on to tell a parable, because He was near Jerusalem, and they supposed that the kingdom of God was going to appear immediately. He said therefore, ‘A certain nobleman went to a distant country to receive a kingdom for himself, and then return’” (Luke 19:11-12) We’ll discuss this parable in detail in our chapter Postponement of the Kingdom.

He taught that “this generation” would not pass away until all things take place. “Now learn the parable from the fig tree: when its branch has already become tender, and puts forth its leaves, you know that summer is near; even so you too, when you see all these things, recognize that He is near, right at the door. Truly I say to you, this generation will not pass away until all these things take place” (Matt. 24:32–34). “Truly I say to you, this generation will not pass away until all things take place” (Luke 21:32). “[Many (i.e. preterists—ed.) claim that Matt. 24 was fulfilled in the first century] ...Because Christ ‘fixed the date of the events He referred to within that generation.’ But this is limiting the meaning of the word, and it is setting aside a vast array of scriptural testimony on the strength of a misconception of one passage. This is the slight foundation upon which a wonderful array of spiritualizing is then erected. Alas” (Peters, TTK, 2:164)! This writer suggests that “this generation” is the Tribulation generation, which will “see all these things” (Matt. 24:21, 32–34). We’ll have much more to say regarding the Tribulation period in our chapter The Great Tribulation.

He taught that in the regeneration, His disciples will sit on thrones and judge the twelve tribes of Israel. “And Jesus said to them, ‘Truly I say to you, that you who have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man will sit on His glorious throne, you also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel’” (Matt. 19:28). “Christ talked about ‘the regeneration’ of the future (Mt. 19:28)... the word translated ‘regeneration’ could be translated ‘back to Genesis’ or ‘Genesis again’ and refers to a return to the original state that existed when the earth was born and is recorded in Genesis” (Showers, M, p. 86). “and just as My Father has granted Me a kingdom, I grant you that you may eat and drink at My table in My kingdom, and you will sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel” (Luke 22:29–30). “If no earthly kingdom was in prospect, it seems strange also in view of the prevailing Jewish concept of an earthly kingdom that Christ should tell His disciples, ‘I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me; that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel’ (Luke 22:29–30)” (Walvoord, MK, p. 38).

He taught that there would be a wedding feast. “And Jesus answered and spoke to them again in parables, saying, ‘The kingdom of heaven may be compared to a king, who gave a wedding feast for his son. And he sent out his slaves to call those who had been invited to the wedding feast, and they were unwilling to come. Again he sent out other slaves saying, ‘Tell those who have been invited, Behold, I have prepared my dinner; my oxen and my fattened livestock are all butchered and everything is ready; come to the wedding feast”” (Matt. 22:1-4). While the wedding will be in heaven (i.e. Rev. 19), the wedding feast will be on earth, at the inauguration of the Millennial Kingdom. (See the The Marriage Feast of the Lamb section of our chapter Inauguration of the Kingdom.)

And, He confirmed that the Christ is the son of David. “Now while the Pharisees were gathered together, Jesus asked them a question, saying, ‘What do you think about the Christ, whose son is He?’ They said to Him, ‘The son of David’” (Matt. 22:41-42). “And He said to them, ‘How is it that they say the Christ is David’s son’” (Luke 20:41)? (See the The Davidic Covenant section of our chapter Covenants of the Kingdom.)

The Kingdom was also announced and offered by the twelve. “These twelve Jesus sent out after instructing them, saying, ‘Do not go in the way of the Gentiles, and do not enter any city of the Samaritans; but rather go to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And as you go, preach, saying, “The kingdom of heaven is at hand”” (Matt. 10:5-7). “But whenever they persecute you in this city, flee to the next; for truly I say to you, you shall not finish going through the cities of Israel, until the Son of Man comes” (Matt. 10:23). “And it came about that when Jesus had finished giving instructions to His twelve disciples, He departed from there to teach and preach in their cities” (Matt. 11:1). “And He appointed twelve, that they might be with Him, and that He might send them out to preach” (Mark 3:14) “And He summoned the twelve and began to send them out in pairs; and He was giving them authority over the unclean spirits; and He instructed them that they should take nothing for their journey, except a mere staff; no bread, no bag, no money in their belt; but to wear sandals; and He added, ‘Do not put on two tunics.’ And He said to them, ‘Wherever you enter a house, stay there until you leave town. And any place that does not receive you or listen to you, as you go out from there, shake off the dust from the soles of your feet for a testimony against them.’ And they went out and preached that men should repent. And they were casting out many demons and were anointing with oil many sick people and healing them” (Mark 6:7-13). “And He called the twelve together, and gave them power and authority over all the demons, and to heal diseases. And He sent them out to proclaim the kingdom of God, and to perform healing” (Luke 9:1-2). “...the kingdom ...its having been predicted, taught to the disciples and preached by them to the people... All this, in the nature of the case, presupposes a correct understanding of it” (Peters, TTK, 1:142). “If the Kingdom, as multitudes maintain, was not thus known; if it is correct to assert that the Jews and the disciples at first utterly misapprehended its meaning; if the announcement denoted one thing to the hearers and yet contained in itself a spiritual idea which the future was to develop—how comes it, then, that Christ could send out disciples to preach the Kingdom without previous instruction as to its real meaning; and even invite strangers (Luke 9:56, 57, 60) to ‘Go and preach the kingdom of God’” (ibid., p. 182)? “‘for the Son of Man did not come to destroy men’s lives, but to save them.’ And they went on to another village. And as they were going along the road, someone said to Him, ‘I will follow You wherever You go.’ And Jesus said to him, ‘The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man has nowhere to lay His head.’ And He said to another, ‘Follow Me.’ But he said, ‘Permit me first to go and bury my father.’ But He said to him, ‘Allow the dead to bury their own dead; but as for you, go and proclaim everywhere the kingdom of God’” (Luke 9:56-60). “The disciples sent forth by Jesus to preach this Kingdom were not ignorant of the meaning to be attached to the Kingdom” (Peters, TTK, p. 274). “Jesus instructed them, Jesus sent them, Jesus never contradicted their views of the Kingdom, Jesus approved of their preaching and rejoiced over it” (ibid.). “The request of the sons of Zebedee... such positions as they asked for are to be given to those by the Father, who have evidenced their fitness by humility and service... Luke 24:21 [‘But we were hoping that it was He who was going to redeem Israel. Indeed, besides all this, it is the third day since these things happened.’] teaches how these preachers understood their own message; so also Acts 1:6 [And so when they had come together, they were asking Him, saying, ‘Lord, is it at this time You are restoring the kingdom to Israel?’]; and Jesus, instead of telling them that they were mistaken, merely, leaving the notion of the Kingdom untouched, points to the future, the times of fulfillment being in the Father’s hands” (ibid.). “If Jesus did not tell the Jews and His disciples that they were in error respecting the Kingdom, and this already is presumptive evidence that they were correct in anticipating the Kingdom to be a restoration of the Davidic Kingdom, much more is this true, when He sends men, whom He knows to hold such a view, to preach it” (ibid.). “It is folly to suppose that we know the nature of that Kingdom better than they did, who were expressly commissioned to hold it forth as an inducement to repentance” (ibid., p. 275). “It is freely admitted that there were many things that these disciples, when preaching the Kingdom, did not then know, but it was not requisite to know them for the simple reason that, before the decided postponement of the Kingdom, it was no part of their mission to preach them. Thus e.g. they did not know that the Jewish nation would refuse to repent, that the representative men would conspire to put Jesus to death, that the Messiah would be crucified, that the Kingdom would be postponed to the Sec. Advent, that the Gentiles would be called, etc., and, more, all these things had nothing to do with their commission. They were not to preach the death of Jesus, or things then unknown to them; they were commissioned to preach the Kingdom conditioned by repentance—to offer it to the Jewish nation—and thus far they were instructed and had knowledge of the truth. This preaching of the Kingdom was necessary at that time, while a knowledge of the other things was not only unnecessary, but would have, if imparted, actually disqualified them for their important mission. This exquisite arrangement of truth in the mission of the first preachers is, to our mind, most forcible evidence of inspiration” (ibid.). “It is an unjust reflection upon these Jews and Jewish preachers to accuse them of ignorance, carnality, etc.” (ibid., p. 280) “Nast... he undertakes to correct the preachers that Jesus trained” (ibid., p. 430) “He [Jesus] never had to explain the kingdom of heaven to the disciples, but He did explain at great length (Matthew 13) the meaning of the mystery parables” (Feinberg, M, p. 274). “It is most evident that they could not have preached a gospel based on Christ’s death and resurrection when they had no understanding of these oncoming events” (Chafer, ST, 5:304). “While every detail of the manner of their [the disciples’] journey was subject to the most careful instruction by the King, there is no record of their being given instruction on the meaning of this first, or kingdom, message committed to them” (ibid., p. 342).

And, the Kingdom was announced and offered by the seventy. “Now after this the Lord appointed seventy others, and sent them two and two ahead of Him to every city and place where He Himself was going to come. And He was saying to them, ‘The harvest is plentiful, but the laborers are few; therefore beseech the Lord of the harvest to send out laborers into His harvest. Go your ways; behold, I send you out as lambs in the midst of wolves. Carry no purse, no bag, no shoes; and greet no one on the way. And whatever house you enter, first say, “Peace be to this house.” And if a man of peace is there, your peace will rest upon him; but if not, it will return to you. And stay in that house, eating and drinking what they give you; for the laborer is worthy of his wages. Do not keep moving from house to house. And whatever city you enter, and they receive you, eat what is set before you; and heal those in it who are sick, and say to them, “The kingdom of God has come near to you.” But whatever city you enter and they do not receive you, go out into its streets and say, “Even the dust of your city which clings to our feet, we wipe off in protest against you; yet be sure of this, that the kingdom of God has come near." I say to you, it will be more tolerable in that day for Sodom, than for that city. Woe to you, Chorazin! Woe to you, Bethsaida! For if the miracles had been performed in Tyre and Sidon which occurred in you, they would have repented long ago, sitting in sackcloth and ashes. But it will be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon in the judgment, than for you" (Luke 10:1-14). "His advance upon Jerusalem, which will be circuitous, deliberate, and unhurried, possibly extending over a period of five months... 'After these things the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before his face into every city and place, whither he himself would come' (Luke 10:1). The ministry of the Seventy, therefore, was more narrowly limited than that of the Twelve who earlier had been sent to all 'the lost sheep of the house of Israel' (Matt. 10:6). The Seventy are sent only where the King Himself will come on the last journey to Jerusalem. Lightfoot makes the distinction as follows: 'The Twelve apostles were sent to declare the coming of the Kingdom, these (the Seventy) the coming of the King'" (McClain, GK, p. 344).

It is an interesting and relevant fact that some caution was exercised in the preaching of the (political) Kingdom, apparently so as not to stir up unnecessary trouble with the governing authorities. "The unity of agreement also accounts for so little descriptive of the Kingdom being given in detail in the New Test. It was fully known and described in the prophets; now to have entered into a detailed statement and particularized the restored Davidic Kingdom, would unnecessarily have excited the open hostility of the jealous and persecuting Roman Empire" (Peters, TTK, 1:260). "...conspirators against the authority of the Czesars... it was this accusation that influenced Pilate to give up Jesus to crucifixion, and led to the just superscription of the cross... the greatest prudence was exercised in this matter to avoid unnecessary persecution, and when it was finally known that the Kingdom was postponed to the Second Advent, to be introduced by the power of Jesus Christ, then, in view of the prophecies which foretold their continued existence down to the Advent, believers were taught that the existing governments were ordained or appointed of God—not that they were sacred (as claimed), but allowed as a necessary requirement, etc." (ibid., p. 261). "...John doing his preaching in the wilderness—that is, east from Jerusalem in the open country, away from the large cities... large gatherings of Jews and the preaching of such a Kingdom would necessarily have excited inquiry and the pressure of Roman power. Hence (especially in view of the foreseen rejection) the utmost caution, consistent with John's mission, is observed. If the modern prevailing view of the Kingdom is the correct one, no reason can be assigned for John's avoidance of the centres of influence, as e.g. Jerusalem" (ibid.). "Three things must evidently have weighed upon the mind of Jesus, and thus shaped His style of preaching the Kingdom. 1. The fact of the existence of the Roman Government over the Jewish nation, and its jealousy of power... It was the general, universal belief that when the Messiah came to establish the Kingdom, He would overthrow Gentile domination (as He will do at the Sec. Advent). 2. Knowing, as Jesus did... that the Kingdom itself would be postponed... What was needed in addition He gave to us through John (in Apoc.), and this also in a form that it might not unnecessarily excite opposition. Christ's preaching is influenced by foreknown results. 3. Foreknowing how the Kingdom would eventually, at His Sec. Advent be established, He could accordingly shape and adapt His language, introducing other matter... purposes of mercy toward the Gentiles... promises to be realized ultimately in the Kingdom... encouragements and cautions... new details, which can only be properly apprehended when taken in their connection with the whole" (ibid., p. 270). "The peculiar surroundings required, in the nature of the case, great caution in proclaiming the Kingdom; and hence language was adopted toward the Jewish nation sufficiently precise and determinate for it, having the prophets to understand" (ibid., p. 271). "Boyle, Whately, Rogers, and others have noticed the peculiarity of the Bible in presenting an unsystematic distribution of its contents, thus calling for comparison, study, etc. In the reasons assigned for this, they altogether overlook the fact that if a strictly logical arrangement had been made, so distinctively would this idea of the Kingdom have become that the Roman Power and other nations would have been extremely hostile to it" (ibid.). "Faith and hope is confirmed in the Kingdom preached by Jesus, in the assumption of Messianic Royalty, which, not discarding, was the ground of His execution. Faith and hope rejoices over the inscription: 'Jesus, the King of the Jews.' If there was nothing substantial in this Royalty, the very Royalty to which He was entitled as David's Son and Lord, why retain it down to the very last, and leave it still speaking, silently but impressively, over His dead body on the cross" (ibid.)? "The Apocalypse is given in symbolical language, and the apostles (as Paul in Thess.) are guarded in their expressions. After the reader has passed over our entire argument, the reader will find abundant reason why the Kingdom is mentioned in the Gospels and Epistles without entering into the specific details given by the prophets, and why the same is represented under symbolic forms in the Apocalypse. Taking into consideration the nature of the Kingdom, the restored Theocratic-Davidic throne and Kingdom, which necessarily embraces a restored Jewish nation, etc., a more extended and detailed notice would unnecessarily (owing to this postponement) have excited the jealousy, hostility, and persecution of the Roman Empire” (ibid., p. 626).

The Identity of the Kingdom Announced and Offered

So, exactly what was this Kingdom that was preached first by John the Baptist, then by Jesus, then by the twelve and the seventy?

It is a curious fact that the Kingdom preached was never clearly defined by the preachers. “Ponder the language of Jesus, and you will find no definition of the Kingdom in it, but simply a declaration and encouragement of worthiness—how attained—for the Kingdom. It only tells us who are fit for it, and who will ultimately receive it” (Peters, TTK, 1:270). “John the Baptist, Jesus, and the Seventy, all proclaimed the kingdom in a way, without definition or explanation, that indicated that their hearers were acquainted with its meaning” (ibid., p. 181). “There is no record that the messengers needed or received one moment of exposition on the meaning of the message relative to the gospel of the kingdom before they were sent forth to deliver it. It was evidently Israel’s hope” (Chafer, ST, 4:173). “The kingdom was the national hope and no other objective had been introduced. It was, therefore, most unlikely that some new, unannounced divine program should be the theme of this nation-wide preaching” (ibid., p. 293). “But for all his repeated mention of the Kingdom of God, Jesus never once paused to define it. Nor did any hearer ever interrupt him to ask, ‘Master, what do these words, ‘Kingdom of God’, which you use so often, mean?’ On the contrary, Jesus used the term as if assured it would be understood, and indeed it was. The Kingdom of God lay within the vocabulary of every Jew. It was something they understood and longed for desperately” [quoting John Bright, The Kingdom of God, pp. 17-18] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 447). “The absence of any formal definition of the Kingdom in its initial announcement indicates that the Jewish hearers were expected to know exactly what Kingdom was meant” (McClain, GK, p. 276). “In the gospel records, the announcement of the Kingdom is impressively abrupt” (ibid.). “When John and Jesus began preaching that the kingdom was at hand, they did not need to explain what they meant by that since the Jewish audience already knew from the Old Testament” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 364). “Dispensationalism strongly affirms that the kingdom Jesus offered and proclaimed as being at hand was the same one described by the Old Testament prophets and for that reason Jesus, or John the Baptist before Him, never needed to explain what they meant when they spoke of the kingdom” (ibid., p. 385). “The absence of any formal definition in its announcement assumes that the Jewish hearers (readers of the Old Testament) were expected to know what it meant” (Geisler, ST, 4:478).

We contend that the Kingdom preached was the covenanted, prophesied Jewish Kingdom. “Look at the end contemplated, as predicted by the prophets (e.g. Zech. 14:9, etc.) [And Jehovah shall be King over all the earth: in that day shall Jehovah be one, and his name one.], and given in the last testimony of Jesus (Apoc. 11:15, etc.) [And the seventh angel sounded; and there arose loud voices in heaven, saying, The kingdom of the world has become the kingdom of our Lord, and of His Christ; and He will reign forever and ever.’], and this is the grand position that the Kingdom of God is to attain: absolute control over all the kingdoms of the earth—such a world-wide dominion that all nations shall bend in joyful, blessed obedience to its behests. This was the Kingdom offered to the Jewish nation” (Peters, TTK, 1:208). “We therefore hold, with the Primitive Church, until decided scriptural proof is offered to the contrary, that Jesus offered to the Jews the Theocratic-Davidic Kingdom in its Civil and Religious combination, just as predicted by the prophets” (ibid., p. 266). “Now, keeping in view the Jewish ideas of the Kingdom and the phrases in common usage expressive of the same, the promises pertaining to ‘the Kingdom of heaven,’ ‘the meek shall inherit the earth,’ ‘fulfilling the law and the prophets,’ ‘the least and great in the Kingdom of heaven,’ ‘Jerusalem the city of the great King,’ ‘thy Kingdom come,’ ‘the Kingdom of God’—these are all of a nature to impress the Jewish mind (as the result proves), that our Saviour alluded to the Theocratic-Davidic Kingdom as covenanted to the nation. It was, under the circumstances, simply impossible for the Jews to entertain any other view” (ibid., p. 364). “It can be shown that in all the preaching concerning the kingdom by John (Matt. 3:2), by Christ (Matt. 4:17), by the twelve (Matt. 10:5-7), by the seventy (Lk 10:1-12), not once is the kingdom offered to Israel anything but an earthly literal kingdom” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 109). “...the gospel records... no essential element of the Old Testament prophetic picture is missing” (McClain, GK, p. 286). “Most Dispensationalists (but not all) believe that Jesus did offer the Davidic or messianic or earthly kingdom to Israel. When Israel rejected the offer, the kingdom offer was rescinded (some Dispensationalists use the term ‘postponed’) for that generation of Israel to be reoffered to a later Jewish generation that will accept it, the Jewish generation of the Great Tribulation” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 266). “...it was the Messianic or Millennial Kingdom that was offered to Israel...” (ibid., p. 268)

It is revealing that the Kingdom message preached by John the Baptist, Jesus and Jesus’ disciples stirred up no controversy with the Jews.

“The unity of belief in the same restored Kingdom is evidenced by John’s preaching of the Kingdom raising up no disputation concerning it. Had he preached the modern view, it would inevitably have excited disputes and appeals to the prophets” (Peters, TTK, 1:260). “The preaching of the Kingdom, being in accordance with that of the predicted Kingdom, raised no controversy between the Jews and Jesus, or between the Jews and His disciples and apostles. We find no hint, not the slightest, that there was the least disagreement between the preachers of the kingdom and their hearers on the subject of the kingdom itself” (ibid., p. 280). “Neither in the New Test. nor in any of the Patristic writings, do we find the least hint given that the doctrine of the Kingdom excited any controversy with the Jews; which it undoubtedly would have done if antagonistic to the Jewish view” (ibid., p. 467). “Jews, indoctrinated into the covenants, were the first converts, and, with their faith, it would have been utterly impracticable to have influenced them to receive Jesus as ‘the Messiah,’ unless it was understood that these covenants were at some time in the future to be realized through Him” (ibid.). “Consider (1) how large numbers of the Jews were converted to Christianity, accepting of Jesus as ‘the Messiah,’ because of the fact that they were led to believe (a) that at the Sec. Advent the glorious predicted Messianic Kingdom would be established” (ibid.) “The early Jews, instead of accusing Christians of rejecting such a Kingdom, charged the primitive believers with entertaining such a view, and sought to bring them, on account of the same, into difficulties with the Roman Emperors” (ibid., p. 468). “It is to be noted in all this controversy that there is just one essential question before the nation, ‘Is not this the son of David?’ ([Matt.] 12:23)” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 459)

And, it is a noteworthy fact that the prevailing Jewish conception of the Kingdom (see our previous chapter First-Century Expectation of the Kingdom) was never “corrected” by John the Baptist, Jesus or the apostles. “It is noticeable, that in all the rebukes given to the Jews by John the Baptist, by Jesus and the apostles, not one refers to their belief and expectations concerning the Kingdom” (Peters, TTK, 1:184). “A whole nation under a mistake respecting the Messiah’s Kingdom which the Apostles were specially commissioned to preach; and yet an error so fundamental is not directly corrected, but must be inferred or implied! Is it reasonable or credible? The truth is, that no such repudiation of error was needed” (ibid., p. 641). “...the assurance is given that, strange and astonishing as it may seem to the world, He will do it... Hence Jesus, never in word or act, discounted in His followers His connection with David’s throne and Kingdom, and the necessary restoration of the nation” (ibid., 2:77). “But it appears never to have occurred to those who find fault with the disciples in their view of the kingdom, that Christ never once corrected the Jews for their belief in an earthly kingdom” (Feinberg, M, p. 133). “Our Lord never intimated that His conception of the Kingdom differed in any respect or degree from that presented by the Old Testament prophets” (McClain, GK, p. 277). “Instead of acquiescing in the errors of His contemporaries, Christ never hesitated to rebuke and correct them” (ibid., p. 278). “If the amillennial viewpoint as held in modern times is correct, it would have called for extensive correction of the prevailing idea among the Jews that an earthly kingdom was their Messianic prospect” (Walvoord, MK, p. 38). “The teaching of Christ never refutes the common expectation of the Jews and the apostles for literal fulfillment of the promises of an earthly kingdom for Israel, but rather confirms it” (ibid., p. 187).

This Kingdom message was not an accommodation to the Jews. “It would, if the Jews were in error on so fundamental a point, be simply cruel to adopt their expressive language and thus confirm them in an alleged blunder, a vital mistake” (Peters, TTK, 1:196). “...an accommodation, on the ground that the Jews were not prepared for the real truth. For, receive this, and then it logically follows: (1) John, Jesus, and the disciples must have taught error, so far, at least, as the outward form and the Jews were concerned; how else, unless in their usual acceptance, could the Jews understand their words? (2) If the Jews misunderstood them, how could they be held accountable for it, when thus tempted to a misapprehension by the ambiguous use of current language? (3) The pure character of Jesus is presented to us in an invidious and disreputable light. So long as the theory is advanced, so long a dark flaw appears, and all the apologies annexed to it cannot sustain His spotless reputation” (ibid., p. 199). “The ridicule heaped upon the Jewish faith, the early preaching of the Messianic Kingdom, the hopes entertained of the Coming again of Jesus to establish it, etc., is met, not by abject apologies or philosophical accommodation to human weakness, but by a straightforward, manly appeal to the Scriptures themselves, which give the reasons, as evidenced before us this day, why such faith has not yet been realized” (ibid., 3:503).

The message was not of a spiritual kingdom only. “The spiritualized view is that Jesus adopted the spiritual elements of the Old Testament prophets, abandoning all the political and national aspects, and offered a spiritual kingdom to all who would believe. The literal view, supported by the study of the New Testament, is that the kingdom announced and offered by the Lord Jesus was the same theocratic kingdom foretold through the Old Testament prophets” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 447). “It would make no sense for Jesus to offer Israel the Spiritual Kingdom because ‘such an announcement would have had no special significance whatever to Israel, for such a rule of God has always been recognized among the people of God” [quoting Charles C. Ryrie, Dispensationalism Today, pp. 170-173] (Frucht-enbaum, I, p. 389). “The Spiritual Kingdom in which God rules in the heart of the believer has been around since Adam; it was not new, and hardly something to be announced as being at hand” (ibid., p. 395).

The message was both soteriological and eschatological. “...the twofold work of Christ... The first work was to offer this Kingdom, on the condition of repentance, to the nation... His second work to accomplish the Redemption (by the shedding of His blood)” (Peters, TTK, 1:368) “‘the Lamb of God, who takes away the sin of the world!’ (John 1:29)... soteriological... eschatological... ‘The kingdom of heaven is near’ (Matt. 3:2)... together constituted ‘the Gospel of the kingdom’” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 194)

It was a genuine offer of the Kingdom to Israel. “What unspeakable honor, power, and glory would have resulted to the Jewish nation, if it had accepted the simple but necessary Theocratic condition of repentance annexed to the offer of the Kingdom” (Peters, TTK, 1:390). “Jesus, ‘the Christ,’ appeared and tendered the Kingdom to the elect nation which, if accepted (by a national repentance), would have broken the Roman Power with irresistible force” (ibid., 2:777). “Christ was just as infallible in offering the kingdom to Israel as at hand, as was God the Father in setting the land of Canaan before Israel to go in and possess it” (Feinberg, M, p. 257). “...that Jesus offered Himself as the Messianic King of Israel, that the offer was genuine, and therefore the nation should have accepted Him” (McClain, GK, p. 333). “‘He was teaching daily in the temple’ (19:47)... healing... the children crying hosannas in the temple (Ps. 8:1-2). These were some of the things the nation might have had without limitation or interruption if she had known the ‘time’ of her ‘visitation’ and the hearts of her people had been opened to receive the King” (ibid., p. 352). “Certainly, with His illimitable and resistless power, as already abundantly evidenced, He could have established a kingdom on earth which would have brought unimaginable blessing to the world: the abolition of war, the healing of physical diseases, the correction of social evils, the solution of economic problems. But with all these temporal blessings sinful men would have been left without eternal life; and of all the sons of men, only one, Himself ‘a Son of man’ (John 5:27, ASV), would abide. Without His death on the cross, He could indeed have set up a kingdom, but thus He would abide ‘alone,’ the solitary man in the glory of an eternal heaven. But if He dies, there can be ‘much fruit’ (John 12:24). He will bring ‘many sons unto glory’ (Heb. 2:10)” (ibid.). ““...it was the day which decided whether Jerusalem would become the blessed centre of all nations, or the terrible monument of retributive justice” [quoting J. J. Van Oosterzee, Lange’s Commentary on Luke, p. 295] (ibid., p. 354). “The tears of our Lord over the perverseness of Jerusalem are witnesses of the freedom of man’s will to resist the grace of God’ [quoting Lange’s Commentary, footnote on Matt. 23:37]... if Israel’s rejection of the King was morally genuine, so also must the offer have been” (ibid., p. 361). “O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, who kills the prophets and stones those who are sent to her! How often I wanted to gather your children together, the way a hen gathers her chicks under her wings, and you were unwilling” (Matt. 23:37). “And when He approached, He saw the city and wept over it, saying, ‘If you had known in this day, even you, the things which make for peace! But now they have been hidden from your eyes. For the days shall come upon you when your enemies will throw up a bank before you, and surround you, and hem you in on every side, and will level you to the ground and your children within you, and they will not leave in you one stone upon another, because you did not recognize the time of your visitation” (Luke 19:41-44). “The only condition was their repentance in keeping with 2 Chronicles 7:14 [if my people, who are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land.]. Because all the prophesied prerequisites had been fulfilled, this was a genuine offer of the kingdom to the covenant people” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 204). “The Old Testament, however, did not reveal that the offer of the ‘age to come’ would terminate with Israel’s rejection rather than reception, nor did it disclose that it would be necessary for the King to postpone until a future advent the blessings of His reign” (ibid., p. 219).

However, it was subject to acceptance by the Jews. “The phrase ‘nigh at hand’ is indicative of a tender, which, if necessary, can be withdrawn” (Peters, TTK, 1:363). “It was also in the Divine Purpose to bestow it upon ‘a willing people’” (ibid., p. 357) “If you do not repent, the Kingdom will be far from you; now it is nigh, within reach; then it will be distant, removed, postponed. Alas! How fearfully true this became: nationally nigh, then nationally distant” (ibid., p. 363). “God never violates moral freedom in His purposes relating to the nation” (ibid.). “Strange that so many theologians overlook the conditionality on which all hinges, and affirm (as Neander, etc.) that the Kingdom was established. The Primitive Church, taught by inspired men and their immediate successors, held to no such absurdity, but maintained in this matter a logical consistency. In view of this conditionalityty, Jesus comes in a state of poverty, in order that the moral appeal to repentance may be fairly tested. Had He come rich, loaded with honor, etc., the Jews would have been influenced by selfish, improper motives. Hence the Theocratic King, to test the nation, comes in humble circumstances” (ibid.). “The time selected for this preaching of national repentance was, humanly speaking, favorable, and the refusal to repent, under the circumstances, increases the guilt of the nation and evinces the power of depravity” (ibid., p. 364). “It being predetermined as eminently suitable to tender this Kingdom at the First Advent of Jesus, the Messiah, and it being also foreknown that it would be rejected, the matter is so guardedly presented as not to interfere with the free moral agency of the nation, and as not to be opposed to foreknown fact” (ibid., p. 365). “In view of this offer and rejection, the prophets pass on and describe more repeatedly and vividly the scenes connected with the Second Advent” (ibid.). “‘Repent, for the Kingdom of God is at hand,’ ...the non-fulfillment of the imposed condition ‘repent’” (ibid., p. 557)

Chapter 16: Rejection of the King

As we saw at the end of our previous chapter Announcement and Offer of the Kingdom, the reinstatement of the Davidic theocracy was (and is) contingent upon Israel's acceptance of Jesus as their theocratic King. Sadly, however, the first-century Jewish nation was morally unprepared for such an acceptance. So instead of accepting Him, the Jewish people, through their leaders, formally rejected Jesus' Kingship. This rejection put an end to Jesus' announcement and offer of the Kingdom and made necessary some major changes in His ministry.

A National Decision is Required

With Jesus on the scene, personally announcing and offering the Kingdom to Israel, a decision was required on the part of the nation. "And as these were going away, Jesus began to speak to the multitudes about John, 'What did you go out into the wilderness to look at? A reed shaken by the wind? But what did you go out to see? A man dressed in soft clothing? Behold, those who wear soft clothing are in kings' palaces. But why did you go out? To see a prophet? Yes, I say to you, and one who is more than a prophet. This is the one about whom it is written, "BEHOLD, I SEND MY MESSENGER BEFORE YOUR FACE, WHO WILL PREPARE YOUR WAY BEFORE YOU." Truly, I say to you, among those born of women there has not arisen anyone greater than John the Baptist; yet he who is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he. And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffers violence, and violent men take it by force. For all the prophets and the Law prophesied until John. And if you care to accept it, he himself is Elijah, who was to come. He who has ears to hear, let him hear. But to what shall I compare this generation? It is like children sitting in the market places, who call out to the other children, and say, "We played the flute for you, and you did not dance; we sang a dirge, and you did not mourn." For John came neither eating nor drinking, and they say, "He has a demon!" The Son of Man came eating and drinking, and they say, "Behold, a gluttonous man and a drunkard, a friend of tax-gatherers and sinners!" Yet wisdom is vindicated by her deeds" (Matt. 11:7–19). "Then there was brought to Him a demon-possessed man who was blind and dumb, and He healed him, so that the dumb man spoke and saw. And all the multitudes were amazed, and began to say, "This man cannot be the Son of David, can he?" But when the Pharisees heard it, they said, "This man casts out demons only by Beelzebul the ruler of the demons.' And knowing their thoughts He said to them, 'Any kingdom divided against itself is laid waste; and any city or house divided against itself shall not stand. And if Satan casts out Satan, he is divided against himself; how then shall his kingdom stand? And if I by Beelzebul cast out demons, by whom do your sons cast them out? Consequently they shall be your judges. But if I cast out demons by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God has come upon you. Or how can anyone enter the strong man's house and carry off his property, unless he first binds the strong man? And then he will plunder his house. He who is not with Me is against Me; and he who does not gather with Me scatters. Therefore I say to you, any sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven men, but blasphemy against the Spirit shall not be forgiven. And whoever shall speak a word against the Son of Man, it shall be forgiven him; but whoever shall speak against the Holy Spirit, it shall not be forgiven him, either in this age, or in the age to come. Either make the tree good, and its fruit good; or make the tree bad, and its fruit bad; for the tree is known by its fruit. You brood of vipers, how can you, being evil, speak what is good? For the mouth speaks out of that which fills the heart. The good man out of his good treasure brings forth what is good; and the evil man out of his evil treasure brings forth what is evil. And I say to you, that every careless word that men shall speak, they shall render account for it in the day of judgment. For by your words you shall be justified, and by your words you shall be condemned" (Matt. 12:22–37). "And the Father who sent Me, He has borne witness of Me. You have neither heard His voice at any time, nor seen His form. And you do not have His word abiding in you, for you do not believe Him whom He sent. You search the Scriptures, because you think that in them you have eternal life; and it is these that bear witness of Me; and you are unwilling to come to Me, that you may have life. I do not receive glory from men; but I know you, that you do not have the love of God in yourselves. I have come in My Father's name, and you do not receive Me; if another shall come in his own name, you will receive him. How can you believe, when you receive glory from one another, and you do not seek the glory that is from the one and only God? Do not think that I will accuse you before the Father; the one who accuses you is Moses, in whom you have set your hope. For if you believed Moses, you would believe Me; for he wrote of Me. But if you do not believe his writings, how will you believe My words" (John 5:37–47)? "This widespread knowledge [of the preaching of John the Baptist, Jesus, the 12, and the 70, and of Christ's teaching and miracles, etc.] placed a responsibility on the nation to weigh the evidence and to make a decision about Jesus and His offer of His kingdom” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 208). “Having been taught that they were sheep who should follow the shepherds, the people at large could not conceive of accepting Christ apart from the approval of the leaders” (ibid., p. 209). “In [Matt. 12] verse 22, Jesus was able to exorcise a dumb demon. In verse 23, this caused the people to begin asking the question, ‘Can Jesus really be the Messiah?’ This was one of the key purposes of this miracle, to get them to see that He indeed was the Son of David. However, the people were not willing to come to a decision by themselves, but were looking to their religious leaders, the Pharisees, to reach a verdict for them. They were waiting for the Pharisees to conclude either that He was the Messiah or that He was not the Messiah. These were the only two options the Pharisees had... In verse 24, the Pharisees made their choice” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 295). (See also our discussion of the fact that the Kingdom was subject to acceptance by the Jews in our previous chapter Announcement and Offer of the Kingdom.)

The Jews are Morally Unprepared

But alas, the first-century Jews were morally unprepared to make the correct decision. “But when he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees coming for baptism, he said to them, You brood of vipers, who warned you to flee from the wrath to come” (Matt. 3:7)? “But to what shall I compare this generation? It is like children sitting in the market places, who call out to the other children, and say, ‘We played the flute for you, and you did not dance; we sang a dirge, and you did not mourn.’ For John came neither eating nor drinking, and they say, ‘He has a demon!’ The Son of Man came eating and drinking, and they say, ‘Behold, a gluttonous man and a drunkard, a friend of tax-gatherers and sinners’” (Matt. 11:16–19)! “You brood of vipers, how can you, being evil, speak what is good? For the mouth speaks out of that which fills the heart” (Matt. 12:34). “And he sent out his slaves to call those who had been invited to the wedding feast, and they were unwilling to come” (Matt. 22:3). “But woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, because you shut off the kingdom of heaven from men; for you do not enter in yourselves, nor do you allow those who are entering to go in. [Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, because you devour widows’ houses, even while for a pretense you make long prayers; therefore you shall receive greater condemnation.] Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, because you travel about on sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he becomes one, you make him twice as much a son of hell as yourselves. Woe to you, blind guides, who say, “Whoever swears by the temple, that is nothing; but whoever swears by the gold of the temple, he is obligated.” You fools and blind men; which is more important, the gold, or the temple that sanctified the gold? And, “Whoever swears by the altar, that is nothing, but whoever swears by the offering upon it, he is obligated.” You blind men, which is more important, the offering or the altar that sanctifies the offering? Therefore he who swears by the altar, swears both by the altar and by everything on it. And he who swears by the temple, swears both by the temple and by Him who dwells within it. And he who swears by heaven, swears both by the throne of God and by Him who sits upon it. Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! For you tithe mint and dill and cummin, and have neglected the weightier provisions of the law: justice and mercy and faithfulness; but these are the things you should have done without neglecting the others. You blind guides, who strain out a gnat and swallow a camel! Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! For you clean the outside of the cup and of the dish, but inside they are full of robbery and self-indulgence. You blind Pharisee, first clean the inside of the cup and of the dish, so that the outside of it may become clean also. Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! For you are like whitewashed tombs which on the outside appear beautiful, but inside they are full of dead men’s bones and all uncleanness. Even so you too outwardly appear righteous to men, but inwardly you are full of hypocrisy and lawlessness. Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! For you build the tombs of the prophets and adorn the monuments of the righteous, and say, “If we had been living in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partners with them in shedding the blood of the prophets.” Consequently you bear witness against yourselves, that you are sons of those who murdered the prophets. Fill up then the measure of the guilt of your fathers. You serpents, you brood of vipers, how shall you escape the sentence of hell? Therefore, behold, I am sending you prophets and wise men and scribes; some of them you will kill and crucify, and some of them you will scourge in your synagogues, and persecute from city to city, that upon you may fall the guilt of all the righteous blood shed on earth, from the blood of righteous Abel to the blood of Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, whom you murdered between the temple and the altar. Truly I say to you, all these things shall come upon this generation. O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, who kills the prophets and stones those who are sent to her! How often I wanted to gather your children together, the way a hen gathers her chicks under her wings, and you were unwilling. Behold, your house is being left to you desolate! For I say to you, from now on you shall not see Me until you say, “BLESSED IS HE WHO COMES IN THE NAME OF THE LORD”” (Matt. 23:13–39)! “He therefore began saying to the multitudes who were going out to be baptized by him, ‘You brood of vipers, who warned you to flee from the wrath to come’” (Luke 3:7)? “And the Father who sent Me, He has borne witness of Me. You have neither heard His voice at any time, nor seen His form. And you do not have His word abiding in you, for you do not believe Him whom He sent. You search the Scriptures, because you think that in them you have eternal life; and it is these that bear witness of Me; and you are unwilling to come to Me, that you may have life. I do not receive glory from men; but I know you, that you do not have the love of God in yourselves. I have come in My Father’s name, and you do not receive Me; if another shall come in his own name, you will receive him. How can you believe, when you receive glory from one another, and you do not seek the glory that is from the one and only God? Do not think that I will accuse you before the Father; the one who accuses you is Moses, in whom you have set your hope. For if you believed Moses, you would believe Me; for he wrote of Me. But if you do not believe his writings, how will you believe My words” (John 5:37–47)? “How utterly unprepared, morally, they were for a restored Theocratic-Davidic Kingdom under the Messiah” (Peters, TTK, 1:375). “An exaltation to such supremacy and honor, unless previously prepared for it, would only have excited the pride, the selfishness, the arrogance, and ambition of the Jewish nation” (ibid.). “The desire for salvation was only such as wicked men now possess, viz.: a willingness to be saved in, and not from, their sins” (ibid., p. 377). “Time, regular descent, place, offices, preaching, works, public entry into the city, etc., are mingled with the price of betrayal, the spitting, reviling, vinegar and gall, unbroken bones, pierced side, dying with malefactors but honorable burial, etc... why, then, did not the nation that witnessed these coincidences receive Jesus as the Messiah... The ground of objection was the unpalatable doctrine of repentance by which the Kingdom was conditioned” (ibid., 3:419). “The reason Israel did not accept Him was not because of their misunderstanding of the kind of kingdom He offered, but because they were unwilling to repent and believe (John 5:40)” (Feinberg, M, p. 275). “The fact of the matter is that they who accepted Him had the same view of the kingdom as the multitude who refused and rejected Him” (ibid., p. 276). “At heart, the common people were no more ready for the Kingdom of Christ than their rulers” (McClain, GK, p. 309).

The King is Rejected

Ultimately, the nation chose to reject Jesus as King. “And I say to you, that many shall come from east and west, and recline at the table with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven; but the sons of the kingdom shall be cast out into the outer darkness; in that place there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth” (Matt. 8:11-12). “But when the Pharisees heard it, they said, ‘This man casts out demons only by Beelzebul the ruler of the demons’” (Matt. 12:24). “Listen to another parable. There was a landowner who planted a vineyard and put a wall around it and dug a wine press in it, and built a tower, and rented it out to vine-growers, and went on a journey. And when the harvest time approached, he sent his slaves to the vine-growers to receive his produce. And the vine-growers took his slaves and beat one, and killed another, and stoned a third. Again he sent another group of slaves larger than the first; and they did the same thing to them. But afterward he sent his son to them, saying, ‘They will respect my son.’ But when the vine-growers saw the son, they said among themselves, ‘This is the heir; come, let us kill him, and seize his inheritance.’ And they took him, and threw him out of the vineyard, and killed him. Therefore when the owner of the vineyard comes, what will he do to those vine-growers?’ They said to Him, ‘He will bring those wretches to a wretched end, and will rent out the vineyard to other vine-growers, who will pay him the proceeds at the proper seasons.’ Jesus said to them, ‘Did you never read in the Scriptures, The stone which the builders rejected, This became the chief corner stone; This came about from the Lord, And it is marvelous in our eyes? Therefore I say to you, the kingdom of God will be taken away from you, and be given to a nation producing the fruit of it. And he who falls on this stone will be broken to pieces; but on whomever it falls, it will scatter him like dust.’ And when the chief priests and the Pharisees heard His parables, they understood that He was speaking about them. And when they sought to seize Him, they feared the multitudes, because they held Him to be a prophet” (Matt. 21:33-46). “The vineyard is Israel” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 822). “He sent three sets of servants: the pre-exilic prophets, the post-exilic prophets, and then John the Baptist and his disciples” (ibid.). “And Jesus answered and spoke to them again in parables, saying, ‘The kingdom of heaven may be compared to a king, who gave a wedding feast for his son. And he sent out his slaves to call those who had been invited to the wedding feast, and they were unwilling to come. Again he sent out other slaves saying, ‘Tell those who have been invited, Behold, I have prepared my dinner; my oxen and my fattened livestock are all butchered and everything is ready; come to the wedding feast.” But they paid no attention and went their way, one to his own farm, another to his business, and the rest seized his slaves and mistreated them and killed them. But the king was enraged and sent his armies, and destroyed those murderers, and set their city on fire. Then he said to his slaves, “The wedding is ready, but those who were invited were not worthy”” (Matt. 22:1-8). “And He began to speak to them [the chief priests, and scribes, and elders, Mark 11:27] in parables: ‘A man planted a vineyard, and put a wall around it, and dug a vat under the wine press, and built a tower, and rented it out to vine-growers and went on a journey. And at the harvest time he sent a slave to the vine-growers, in order to receive some of the produce of the vineyard from the vine-growers. And they took him, and beat him, and sent him away empty-handed. And again he sent them another slave, and they wounded him in the head, and treated him shamefully. And he sent another, and that one they killed; and so with many others, beating some, and killing others. He had one more to send, a beloved son; he sent him last of all to them, saying, “They will respect my son.” But those vine-growers said to one another, “This is the heir; come, let us kill him, and the inheritance will be ours!” And they took him, and killed him, and threw him out of the vineyard. What will the owner of the vineyard do? He will come and destroy the vine-growers, and will give the vineyard to others. Have you not even read this Scripture: “The stone which the builders rejected, This became the chief corner stone; This came about from the Lord, And it is marvelous in our eyes”?’ And they were seeking to seize Him; and yet they feared the multitude; for they understood that He spoke the parable against them. And so they left Him, and went away” (Mark 12:1-12). “And while they were listening to these things, He went on to tell a parable, because He was near Jerusalem, and they supposed that the kingdom of God was going to appear immediately. He said therefore, ‘A certain nobleman went to a distant country to receive a kingdom for himself, and then return. And he called ten of his slaves, and gave them ten minas, and said to them, “Do business with this until I come back.” But his citizens hated him, and sent a delegation after him, saying, “We do not want this man to reign over us.” And it came about that when he returned, after receiving the kingdom, he ordered that these slaves, to whom he had given the money, be called to him in order that he might know what business they had done. And the first appeared, saying, “Master, your mina has made ten minas more.” And he said to him, “Well done, good slave, because you have been faithful in a very little thing, be in authority over ten cities.” And the second came, saying, "Your mina, master, has made five minas." And he said to him also, "And you are to be over five cities." And another came, saying, "Master, behold your mina, which I kept put away in a handkerchief; for I was afraid of you, because you are an exacting man; you take up what you did not lay down, and reap what you did not sow." He said to him, "By your own words I will judge you, you worthless slave. Did you know that I am an exacting man, taking up what I did not lay down, and reaping what I did not sow? Then why did you not put the money in the bank, and having come, I would have collected it with interest?" And he said to the bystanders, "Take the mina away from him, and give it to the one who has the ten minas." And they said to him, "Master, he has ten minas already." I tell you, that to everyone who has shall more be given, but from the one who does not have, even what he does have shall be taken away. But these enemies of mine, who did not want me to reign over them, bring them here and slay them in my presence" (Luke 19:11-27). "He is the STONE WHICH WAS REJECTED by you, THE BUILDERS, but WHICH BECAME THE VERY CORNER stone" (Acts 4:11). "And Paul and Barnabas spoke out boldly and said, 'It was necessary that the word of God should be spoken to you first; since you repudiate it, and judge yourselves unworthy of eternal life, behold, we are turning to the Gentiles'" (Acts 13:46). "However excited in individuals, the nation by its sinfulness showed itself unworthy of it" (Peters, TTK, 1:223). "The Jews did not find fault with the Kingdom, but in the King as believed in by believing Jews and Gentiles" (ibid., p. 281). "Many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob in the Kingdom of heaven, but the children of the Kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness.' Thus predicting the rejection of His offer, and the subsequent call of the Gentiles" (ibid., p. 357). "Nationally, through the nation's highest officials and council, the Kingdom was rejected on account of the imposed condition, repentance, although individual Jews repenting were received as believers" (ibid., p. 375). "The Kingdom... it is conditioned only by a repentance of the nation, and this being rejected by the representative, ruling men of the nation, Jesus censures them and predicts their continued and increasing fall" (ibid., p. 421) "The Stone appears, but we are taught is rejected by the very nation to whom the Kingdom appertains; but this same Stone thus rejected is the chosen one, held in abeyance until the period of its manifestation" (ibid., p. 676). "Let it be considered that nowhere is it asserted in direct terms that the nation shall be driven from the land and scattered among the nations for the rejection of the Messiah, but this is directly predicted as a result of their rejection of God as their Ruler, etc... If the Jewish theory (or rather Rabbinical) is correct, then the rejection of an alleged impostor ought to have brought them the favor and blessing of God, but instead of this the exact reverse—as predicted by this Messiah—has occurred. To what conclusion can we come excepting that in this Messiah they rejected God Himself, the Theocratic King” (ibid., 3:417). “Never was there a clearer case of national guilt” (Anderson, SOG, p. 74). “The fault of Israel is that of all unbelievers: They did not believe all God had said (Luke 24:25-26)” (Feinberg, M, p. 267). “And He said to them, ‘O foolish men and slow of heart to believe in all that the prophets have spoken! Was it not necessary for the Christ to suffer these things and to enter into His glory’” (Luke 24:25-26)? “The crown of thorns had no significance in relation to His sacrificial death for sin: it was the emblem of the nation’s derision for His kingship claim” (Chafer, G, 39%). “The rulers of the nation who demanded His death were not personally rejecting a Saviour, as sinners are rejecting Him now; they were rejecting their King. They did not say, ‘We will not believe on the Saviour to the salvation of our souls’; they said, ‘We have no king but Caesar’” (ibid.). “The unbelieving rejection of her Messianic King by the authorized leaders of Israel—an infection which finally spread throughout the nation” (McClain, GK, p. 357) “It must be observed here that, if the teaching of [Matt. 23] verse 13 [‘But woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, because you shut off the kingdom of heaven from men; for you do not enter in yourselves, nor do you allow those who are entering to go in.’] were limited to the matter of personal salvation through Christ, it could hardly be true. For in this sense the Pharisees could shut no one out of the Kingdom of God. But they could and did, by their obstinate rejection of the Messianic King, shut both themselves and all the Israel of that generation out of His promised Kingdom, in the sense that its establishment is now, by the course of events, set at a second advent of the King” (ibid., p. 358). “The answer of Ellicott [in C. J. Ellicott, Commentary] has merit: ‘Men make the guilt of past ages their own, reproduce its atrocities, identify themselves with it; and so, what seems at first an arbitrary decree, visiting upon the children the sin of the fathers, becomes in such cases a righteous judgment.’ But there is, I feel, a still more specific connection between crimes, such as the murder of Abel, and the responsibility of the generation which rejected the Messianic King. For the establishment of His Kingdom on earth would, according to Old Testament prophecy, put an end to all such crimes of violence and injustice. In that glad day the value of human life will have its long-delayed recognition: The King ‘shall redeem their soul from deceit and violence: and precious shall their blood be in his sight’ (Ps. 72:14). ‘They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, saith the LORD' (Isa. 65:25). Viewed from this standpoint, Israel's sin in rejecting the Messianic King becomes a gigantic crime against all humanity, the cause celebre of the ages. For it was not only the crimes of the past (Matt. 23:35) ['that upon you may fall the guilt of all the righteous blood shed on earth, from the blood of righteous Abel to the blood of Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, whom you murdered between the temple and the altar.'], but also the crimes of the future (vs. 34) ['Therefore, behold, I am sending you prophets and wise men and scribes; some of them you will kill and crucify, and some of them you will scourge in your synagogues, and persecute from city to city'], which Christ was now charging against the 'generation' which rejected His rule: 'All the righteous blood shed upon the earth' (vs. 35). What a fearful responsibility" (ibid., p. 359)! "Matthew says that the chief priests and elders 'persuaded the multitude' to ask Pilate for the release of Barabbas and the execution of Jesus (27:20) [But the chief priests and the elders persuaded the multitudes to ask for Barabbas, and to put Jesus to death.]... Does anyone suppose that the astute and highly intelligent Jewish leaders would fail to exploit the situation to their own advantage with the crowd? How easy now to point out the appalling incongruity before their eyes—the King of the Jews wearing a crown of thorns! Did the applause of the people, disappointed in their 'hero,' turn swiftly into vicious anger? If so, nothing could have been more plausible psychologically. History has shown more than once that the disappointment of the 'people' can easily become a very terrible and violent thing" (ibid., p. 384). "The people professed a willingness to accept Christ if the leaders would also approve, but they felt they must reject Him since the leaders disapproved" (Pentecost, TKC, p. 209). "In an unthinkable mockery of God's perfect kingdom program, the religious leaders attributed the works of God's promised King to the ruler of the false kingdom of darkness, Satan. It was an explanation that not only revealed the religious leaders' unrepentant, darkened hearts, but one that also ultimately sealed the fate of that generation of Israel" (ibid.). "Chafer [in Dispensationalism, pp. 25-28] concludes that it was predicted that Israel would reject her Messiah and this rejection could not possibly be 'the personal rejection of a crucified and risen Savior' since these events had not yet happened when He was rejected. Jesus came to Israel as a nation and offered Himself to them as the 'Messiah King' and it is this that Israel rejected" (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 386). "The kingdom that Jesus offered was the Messianic Kingdom which is a national issue and was something that could be nationally rejected" (ibid., p.

The Pharisees ascribed Jesus' powers to Satan; they sinned against the Holy Spirit. "Then there was brought to Him a demon-possessed man who was blind and dumb, and He healed him, so that the dumb man spoke and saw. And all the multitudes were amazed, and began to say, 'This man cannot be the Son of David, can he?' But when the Pharisees heard it, they said, 'This man casts out demons only by Beelzebul the ruler of the demons.' And knowing their thoughts He said to them, 'Any kingdom divided against itself is laid waste; and any city or house divided against itself shall not stand. And if Satan casts out Satan, he is divided against himself; how then shall his kingdom stand? And if I by Beelzebul cast out demons, by whom do your sons cast them out? Consequently they shall be your judges. But if I cast out demons by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God has come upon you. Or how can anyone enter the strong man's house and carry off his property, unless he first binds the strong man? And then he will plunder his house. He who is not with Me is against Me; and he who does not gather with Me scatters. Therefore I say to you, any sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven men, but blasphemy against the Spirit shall not be forgiven. And whoever shall speak a word against the Son of Man, it shall be forgiven him; but whoever shall speak against the Holy Spirit, it shall not be forgiven him, either in this age, or in the age to come. Either make the tree good, and its fruit good; or make the tree bad, and its fruit bad; for the tree is known by its fruit. You brood of vipers, how can you, being evil, speak what is good? For the mouth speaks out of that which fills the heart. The good man out of his good treasure brings forth what is good; and the evil man out of his evil treasure brings forth what is evil. And I say to you, that every careless word that men shall speak, they shall render account for it in the day of judgment. For by your words you shall be justified, and by your words you shall be condemned.' Then some of the scribes and Pharisees answered Him, saying, 'Teacher, we want to see a sign from You.' But He answered and said to them, 'An evil and adulterous generation craves for a sign; and yet no sign shall be given to it but the sign of Jonah the prophet; for just as Jonah was three days and three nights in the belly of the sea monster, so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. The men of Nineveh shall stand up with this generation at the judgment, and shall condemn it because they repented at the preaching of Jonah; and behold, something greater than Jonah is here. The Queen of the South shall rise up with this generation at the judgment and shall condemn it, because she came from the ends of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and behold, something greater than Solomon is here. Now when the unclean spirit goes out of a man, it passes through waterless places, seeking rest, and does not find it. Then it says, “I will return to my house from which I came”; and when it comes, it finds it unoccupied, swept, and put in order. Then it goes, and takes along with it seven other spirits more wicked than itself, and they go in and live there; and the last state of that man becomes worse than the first. That is the way it will also be with this evil generation” (Matt. 12:22-45). “By means of the preaching of John [the Baptist], that generation was swept and garnished” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 299). “So, indeed, the last state of that generation became worse than the first. They went from bondage to worldwide dispersion” (ibid.). “And the scribes who came down from Jerusalem were saying, ‘He is possessed by Beelzebul,’ and ‘He casts out the demons by the ruler of the demons.’ And He called them to Himself and began speaking to them in parables, ‘How can Satan cast out Satan? And if a kingdom is divided against itself, that kingdom cannot stand. And if a house is divided against itself, that house will not be able to stand. And if Satan has risen up against himself and is divided, he cannot stand, but he is finished! But no one can enter the strong man’s house and plunder his property unless he first binds the strong man, and then he will plunder his house. Truly I say to you, all sins shall be forgiven the sons of men, and whatever blasphemies they utter; but whoever blasphemes against the Holy Spirit never has forgiveness, but is guilty of an eternal sin’ — because they were saying, ‘He has an unclean spirit”” (Mark 3:22-30). “And He was casting out a demon, and it was dumb; and it came about that when the demon had gone out, the dumb man spoke; and the multitudes marveled. But some of them said, ‘He casts out demons by Beelzebul, the ruler of the demons.’ And others, to test Him, were demanding of Him a sign from heaven. But He knew their thoughts, and said to them, ‘Any kingdom divided against itself is laid waste; and a house divided against itself falls. And if Satan also is divided against himself, how shall his kingdom stand? For you say that I cast out demons by Beelzebul. And if I by Beelzebul cast out demons, by whom do your sons cast them out? Consequently they shall be your judges. But if I cast out demons by the finger of God, then the kingdom of God has come upon you. When a strong man, fully armed, guards his own homestead, his possessions are undisturbed; but when someone stronger than he attacks him and overpowers him, he takes away from him all his armor on which he had relied, and distributes his plunder. He who is not with Me is against Me; and he who does not gather with Me, scatters. When the unclean spirit goes out of a man, it passes through waterless places seeking rest, and not finding any, it says, "I will return to my house from which I came." And when it comes, it finds it swept and put in order. Then it goes and takes along seven other spirits more evil than itself, and they go in and live there; and the last state of that man becomes worse than the first" (Luke 11:14-26). "A form of unforgiven sin is seen in the case of the unpardonable sin, which was committed only when Christ was here on earth, and which sin is not now possible" (Chafer, ST, 2:269). "There cannot be an unpardonable sin and a whosoever-will gospel at the same time" (ibid.). "Since God the Father sent the Messiah to be 'the Saviour of men,' in the Messiah 'all sin can be forgiven without limitation.' On the other hand, 'outside of Him nothing can be forgiven.' Therefore, the 'sinful resistance to the Holy Spirit,' Who testifies as to Jesus' Messiahship, puts the rejecter outside the Messiah. Since it is 'morally impossible for God to forgive sin outside of Christ,' this rendered the sin unpardonable" [quoting McClain, The Greatness of the Kingdom, p. 313] (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 407). "The purpose of His miracles and His whole ministry underwent a radical change in chapter 12. The rejection of His Messiahship occurred in Matthew 12:22-37" (ibid., p. 616). "The people were not willing to come to a decision by themselves, but were looking to their religious leaders, the Pharisees, to reach a verdict for them. They were waiting for the Pharisees to conclude either that He was the Messiah or that He was not the Messiah. These were the only two options the Pharisees had: to accept Him or to reject Him. If they were to conclude that He was not the Messiah, the Pharisees would also have to be able to explain how Jesus was able to perform His many unique miracles" (ibid.). "This then became the basis of the rejection of the Messiahship of Jesus: He is not the Messiah on the grounds of being demon possessed. In verses 25-29, Christ responded by stating that this could not be true because it would mean a division in Satan's kingdom (vv. 25-26); they themselves long recognized that the gift of exorcism is a gift of the spirit and so this accusation makes them inconsistent with their own theology (v. 27)" (ibid., p. 617). "That generation had committed the unpardonable sin: the blasphemy of the Holy Spirit. The unpardonable sin was not an individual sin but a national sin. It was committed by that generation of Israel in Jesus' day and cannot be applied to subsequent Jewish generations. The content and definition of the unpardonable sin is the national rejection of the Messiahship of Jesus by Israel while He was physically present on the basis that He was demon possessed. This sin was unpardonable, and judgment was set” (ibid.). “For that generation the sin was unpardonable. From this point on a special emphasis is placed on this generation in the gospels, for it was guilty of a very unique sin. At this point, His offer of the Messianic Kingdom was rescinded. It will not now be established in their day because of the unpardonableness of that sin” (ibid.). “When that generation began, it was under Roman domination and had to pay annual tribute to Rome... Indeed, the last state of that generation became worse than the first. They went from bondage to world-wide dispersion” (ibid., p. 620). “The Pharisees are held accountable not only for their rejection of the Messiahship of Jesus, but also for leading the nation to the same rejection as well” (ibid., p. 623). “...thus ascribing wickedness to their own incarnate Messiah—this was something new and terrible among the many sins of the chosen nation. And the charge provoked from the Son of God an ultimatum of such unparalleled severity that it stands alone in the gospel records as an appropriate witness to the awful possibilities of human sin in the face of the light of God’s grace” (McClain, GK, p. 313). “Hemmed in by only two possible alternatives, either to accept Him as their King or to charge that His works were not of God, they chose the latter, saying that the miracle was done ‘by Beelzebub the prince of the demons’ (Matt. 12:24, ASV)” (ibid., p. 314). “Thus the great miracles of our Lord, which attested to His person and Messiahship, were actually the direct testimony of the Holy Spirit... the speakers had identified the Third Person of the Godhead with Satan” (ibid., p. 315) “The Pharisees rejected Christ as the Son of God, claiming that He was the son of Satan and that He got His power not from heaven but from hell. Christ warned that if they persisted in this belief that generation would be guilty of a sin for which there could be no forgiveness, and judgment would be inescapable... The form of that judgment was revealed in Luke 21:24 where Christ said, ‘Jerusalem will be trampled on by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled’” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 120). “Because that generation—through their leaders—finally rejected Jesus Christ as the Messiah, judgment was certain” (ibid., p. 121). “What is the blasphemy against the Spirit for which there is no forgiveness?... the word of His Father, who authenticated the person of Christ (John 14:10) [“Do you not believe that I am in the Father, and the Father is in Me? The words that I say to you I do not speak on My own initiative, but the Father abiding in Me does His works.”]. Christ’s works were the Father’s works, and these works supported the Father’s word given at Christ’s baptism that the Father was well pleased with the life of His Son... If, however, one rejected the word of Christ and the word of the Father, he might still be brought to faith in the person of Christ by the witness of the Holy Spirit. The miracles were the Spirit's witness to Christ. The Spirit bore the final witness to both the person and word of Christ —and if one rejected this final witness, there was no further witness God had to offer... This sin of blasphemy against the Holy Spirit could only be committed while Christ was personally present on earth. The sin could only be committed when the nation was being given evidence concerning the person of Christ through the miracles which He performed by the power of the Holy Spirit. Those essential circumstances do not exist today; consequently, this same sin simply cannot be committed today” (ibid., p. 211). “It is important to recognize that this sin of rejecting the covenanted Davidic king was not viewed as the sin of an individual, but rather as the sin of the nation. It was a sin that was committed by that generation of Israel through its religious leaders, thus bringing the whole generation under divine judgment” (ibid., p. 212). “This generation of Israel through their rejection and crucifixion of Christ had committed that sin for which Christ said there would be no forgiveness ([Matt.12] v. 32). That generation consequently had come under a physical, temporal judgment that would eventually be carried out through Titus in his invasion and destruction of Jerusalem. But while the nation as a whole could not escape that judgment, individuals by faith in Jesus Christ could separate themselves from that nation and thus escape the judgment that had been pronounced on the nation... That’s why Peter exhorted them, ‘Save yourselves from this corrupt generation’ (Acts 2:40)” (ibid., p. 273).

Jesus’ Ministry Changes

First, Jesus’ self-identification changed. It changed from Messiah to silence (then later back to Messiah). “And the angel said to them, ‘Do not be afraid; for behold, I bring you good news of a great joy which shall be for all the people; for today in the city of David there has been born for you a Savior, who is Christ the Lord” (Luke 2:10–11). “He found first his own brother Simon, and said to him, ‘We have found the Messiah’ (which translated means Christ)” (John 1:41). “The woman said to Him, ‘I know that Messiah is coming (He who is called Christ); when that One comes, He will declare all things to us.’ Jesus said to her, ‘I who speak to you am He.’” (John 4:25–26) “Then He warned the disciples that they should tell no one that He was the Christ” (Matt. 16:20). “And Jesus went out, along with His disciples, to the villages of Caesarea Philippi; and on the way He questioned His disciples, saying to them, ‘Who do people say that I am?’ And they told Him, saying, ‘John the Baptist; and others say Elijah; but others, one of the prophets.’ And He continued by questioning them, ‘But who do you say that I am?’ Peter answered and said to Him, ‘Thou art the Christ.’ And He warned them to tell no one about Him...” (Mark 8:27–30) “But He kept silent, and made no answer. Again the high priest was questioning Him, and saying to Him, ‘Are You the Christ, the Son of the Blessed One?’ And Jesus said, ‘I am; and you shall see the Son of Man sitting at the right hand of Power, and coming with the clouds of heaven’” (Mark 14:61-62). “Another indication of coming change in Matthew 16 was Jesus’ charge to the apostles ‘that they should tell no man’ that He was the Messiah (v. 20). Earlier they had proclaimed Him to be the Messiah (Jn. 1:41), but now they were forbidden to do so” (Showers, M, p. 238).

Second, the purpose of His miracles changed. It changed from authenticating His messiahship to training His apostles. “Then there was brought to Him a demon-possessed man who was blind and dumb, and He healed him, so that the dumb man spoke and saw. And all the multitudes were amazed, and began to say, ‘This man cannot be the Son of David, can he?’” (Matt. 12:22)? “But many of the multitude believed in Him; and they were saying, ‘When the Christ shall come, He will not perform more signs than those which this man has, will He?’” (John 7:31) “Then some of the scribes and Pharisees answered Him, saying, ‘Teacher, we want to see a sign from You.’ But He answered and said to them, ‘An evil and adulterous generation craves for a sign; and yet no sign shall be given to it but the sign of Jonah the prophet; for just as Jonah was three days and three nights in the belly of the sea monster, so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth” (Matt. 12:38–40). “And the Pharisees and Sadducees came up, and testing Him asked Him to show them a sign from heaven. But He answered and said to them, ‘When it is evening, you say, “It will be fair weather, for the sky is red.” And in the morning, “There will be a storm today, for the sky is red and threatening.” Do you know how to discern the appearance of the sky, but cannot discern the signs of the times? An evil and adulterous generation seeks after a sign; and a sign will not be given it, except the sign of Jonah.’ And He left them, and went away” (Matt. 16:1-4). “But Peter said, ‘I do not possess silver and gold, but what I do have I give to you: In the name of Jesus Christ the Nazarene — walk’” (Acts 3:6)! “After the rejection in Matthew 12, because of the nature of the unpardonable sin, the ministry of Jesus changed radically in four areas. The first change was the purpose of His miracles in that they were no longer for the purpose of serving as signs of His Messiahship to Israel, but were for the purpose of training the apostles for their ministry in the Book of Acts (Matt. 16:1-4)” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 625). “Matthew 12:22-45... He performed many miracles, and the purpose of all His miracles between chapters four and twelve was to authenticate His Person (that He is the Messiah) and His message (the gospel of the Kingdom). These miracles were to serve as signs to the nation of Israel to force them to come to a decision about Him. But the purpose of His miracles and His whole ministry underwent a radical change in chapter twelve” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 294). “In [Matt. 12] verse 39, there is a change of policy regarding His signs. From now on, there would be no more signs for the nation except one... No longer were they for the purpose of authenticating His Person and His message to the nation in order to get the nation to come to a decision. That decision had now been made, and made irrevocably. Rather, His miracles would be for the purpose of training the Twelve Apostles for the new kind of ministry they would need to conduct as a result of the rejection of His Messiahship. It is the ministry the Apostles performed in the Book of Acts. For that generation there would be no sign but one: the sign of Jonah, which is the sign of resurrection. It is a sign that would come for Israel on three occasions: first, at the resurrection Lazarus; second, at Jesus’ own resurrection; and third, at the resurrection of the Two Witnesses in the Tribulation. The first two were rejected. The third will be accepted, for the resurrection of the Two Witnesses will lead to the salvation of the Jews of Jerusalem” (ibid., p. 297). “...the sign of Jonah, which is the sign of resurrection... the resurrection of Lazarus... in [John 11] verses 45-46, there is the response of the Jews: Many therefore of the Jews, who came to Mary and beheld that which he did, believed on him. But some of them went away to the Pharisees, and told them the things which Jesus had done. Some Jews responded correctly to this first sign of Jonah and believed that Jesus was Who He claimed to be. But the others still wanted some kind of word or judgment from their leaders, and so they reported to the Pharisees what Jesus had done. Since this was the sign Jesus had promised them, they responded to the challenge in verses 47-50 and 53: The chief priests therefore and the Pharisees gathered a council... they took counsel that they might put him to death. The Pharisees responded in keeping with their original verdict of Matthew 12... The rejection of the Messiahship of Jesus that occurred in Matthew 12 culminated in John 11 with a decree of death hanging over the Person of Jesus. The first sign of Jonah, the resurrection of Lazarus, was rejected” (ibid., p. 299).

Third, the people for whom He performed His miracles changed. They changed from the masses to those with faith. “And there were five thou- sand men who ate the loaves...” (Mark 6:44) “And his ears were opened, and the impediment of his tongue was removed, and he began speaking plainly. And He gave them orders not to tell anyone; but the more He ordered them, the more widely they continued to proclaim it” (Mark 7:35-36). “And her spirit returned, and she got up immediately; and He gave orders for something to be given her to eat. And her parents were amazed; but He instructed them to tell no one what had happened” (Luke 8:56). “The second change concerned the people for whom He performed these miracles. Until the events of Matthew 12, Jesus performed miracles for the benefit of the masses without requiring them to have faith first. After Matthew 12, He performed miracles only in response to needs of individuals and began requiring them to have faith first. Furthermore, before Matthew 12, those He healed were free to proclaim what had been done for them; but after Matthew 12, Jesus initiated a policy of silence and forbade those He healed to tell anyone about it (Mark 7:36; Luke 8:56; et al.)” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 625)

Fourth, the people whom He invited changed. They changed from the nation Israel to individual tax-gatherers and harlots. “From that time Jesus began to preach and say, ‘Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.’” (Matt. 4:17) “Which of the two did the will of his father?’ They said, ‘The latter.’ Jesus said to them, ‘Truly I say to you that the tax-gatherers and harlots will get into the kingdom of God before you [the chief priests and elders, vs. 23]” (Matt. 21:31). “Listen to another parable. There was a landowner who planted a vineyard and put a wall around it and dug a wine press in it, and built a tower, and rented it out to vine-growers, and went on a journey. And when the harvest time approached, he sent his slaves to the vine-growers to receive his produce. And the vine-growers took his slaves and beat one, and killed another, and stoned a third. Again he sent another group of slaves larger than the first; and they did the same thing to them. But afterward he sent his son to them, saying, “They will respect my son.” But when the vine-growers saw the son, they said among themselves, “This is the heir; come, let us kill him, and seize his inheritance.” And they took him, and threw him out of the vineyard, and killed him. Therefore when the owner of the vineyard comes, what will he do to those vine-growers?’ They said to Him, ‘He will bring those wretches to a wretched end, and will rent out the vineyard to other vine-growers, who will pay him the proceeds at the proper seasons.’ Jesus said to them, ‘Did you never read in the Scriptures, The stone which the builders rejected, This became the chief corner stone; This came about from the Lord, And it is marvelous in our eyes?’

Therefore I say to you, the kingdom of God will be taken away from you, and be given to a nation producing the fruit of it. And he who falls on this stone will be broken to pieces; but on whomever it falls, it will scatter him like dust.’ And when the chief priests and the Pharisees heard His parables, they understood that He was speaking about them. And when they sought to seize Him, they feared the multitudes, because they held Him to be a prophet” (Matt. 21:33-46). “But He said to him, ‘A certain man was giving a big dinner, and he invited many; and at the dinner hour he sent his slave to say to those who had been invited, “Come; for everything is ready now.” But they all alike began to make excuses. The first one said to him, “I have bought a piece of land and I need to go out and look at it; please consider me excused.” And another one said, “I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I am going to try them out; please consider me excused.” And another one said, “I have married a wife, and for that reason I cannot come.” And the slave came back and reported this to his master. Then the head of the household became angry and said to his slave, “Go out at once into the streets and lanes of the city and bring in here the poor and crippled and blind and lame.” And the slave said, “Master, what you commanded has been done, and still there is room.” And the master said to the slave, “Go out into the highways and along the hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled. For I tell you, none of those men who were invited shall taste of my dinner”” (Luke 14:16–24). “The calling of other guests now (still going on) takes the place of the first invitation—a new exigency and preparation being evolved—and the supper, until these guests are obtained is postponed to the Sec. Advent” (Peters, TTK, 1:379). “In Matt. 21, after the chief priests and scribes and elders manifested their opposition to Him, and after He had told (v. 31) them, ‘Verily I say unto you, that the publicans and the harlots go into the Kingdom of God before you’ (i.e. in view of their repentance and faith, they became heirs of the Kingdom)...” (ibid., p. 386) “...therefore (i.e. on account of their refusing to receive Him), I say unto you, the Kingdom of God shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof” (ibid.).

Fifth, His message changed. It changed from “The Kingdom is at hand” to silence regarding His Messiahship (then later to “I am the Son of Man”). “From that time Jesus began to preach and say, ‘Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand’” (Matt. 4:17). (Then, after Matthew chapter 12,) “Then He warned the disciples that they should tell no one that He was the Christ” (Matt. 16:20). “And as they were coming down from the mountain, Jesus commanded them, saying, Tell the vi- sion to no one until the Son of Man has risen from the dead” (Matt. 17:9). “Therefore I say to you, the kingdom of God will be taken away from you, and be given to a nation producing the fruit of it” (Matt. 21:43). “Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites!... Therefore, behold, I am sending you prophets and wise men and scribes; some of them you will kill and crucify, and some of them you will scourge in your synagogues, and persecute from city to city, that upon you may fall the guilt of all the righteous blood shed on earth, from the blood of righteous Abel to the blood of Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, whom you murdered between the temple and the altar. Truly I say to you, all these things shall come upon this generation” (Matt. 23:29–36). “Matthew 23:29–36... In the Jewish order of the books of the Old Testament, which is what Jesus used, the first book of the Bible is Genesis, where Abel is mentioned. The last book is II Chronicles, where Zechariah is mentioned. Jesus declared that they were guilty of all the blood from Genesis to 2 Chronicles, much as people today would say from Genesis to Revelation... they rejected His Messiahship, following the example of their leaders. For this reason they would be held accountable for the blood of all the prophets who spoke about the Messiah. This is something unique for that generation, as declared in verse 36: Verily I say unto you, All these things shall come upon this generation. It is the judgment for the unpardonable sin” (Fruchtenbaum, FM, p. 302). “But Jesus kept silent. And the high priest said to Him, ‘I adjure You by the living God, that You tell us whether You are the Christ, the Son of God.’ Jesus said to him, ‘You have said it yourself; nevertheless I tell you, hereafter you shall see THE SON OF MAN SITTING AT THE RIGHT HAND OF POWER, and COMING ON THE CLOUDS OF HEAVEN” (Matt. 26:63–64). “To strangers, as to the woman of Samaria, the Centurion, Zaccheus, He revealed from the first more concerning the future purposes of God pertaining to the rejection of the Jews and the calling of the Gentiles, than He did to His own disciples before the conspiracy of the Jews, thus evincing both His Divine foreknowledge and His wonderful tact in keeping His disciples in the most favorable position and mental condition to preach the offer of the Kingdom. This entire procedure, as related in the Gospels, is one of those unintentional but most forcible evidences of divine inspiration” (Peters, TTK, 1:383). Dr. Pentecost observes, “...the Lord’s word... constitutes the announcement of the withdrawal of the offer of the kingdom to Israel at that time because of their rejection of Him as Messiah. Peters [in The Theocratic Kingdom, 1:379–83] observes: ‘Jesus, toward the close of His ministry, preached that the Kingdom was not nigh... Just so soon as the representatives of the nation met in council and conspired to put Jesus to death, then, released from the first part of His mission, His style of preaching also changed. Instead of proclaiming that the Kingdom was nigh to the nation, He now directly intimates and declares that it was not nigh. Matt. 21:43, “The kingdom of God shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof,” is already conclusive... But we have more explicit announcements. Thus, Luke 19:41-44 [And when He approached, He saw the city and wept over it, saying, “If you had known in this day, even you, the things which make for peace! But now they have been hidden from your eyes. For the days shall come upon you when your enemies will throw up a bank before you, and surround you, and hem you in on every side, and will level you to the ground and your children within you, and they will not leave in you one stone upon another, because you did not recognize the time of your visitation.”]... instead of a Kingdom, is presented a direful threatening of fearful incoming evils. Again: in Matt. 23:37, 38 [“O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, who kills the prophets and stones those who are sent to her! How often I wanted to gather your children together, the way a hen gathers her chicks under her wings, and you were unwilling. Behold, your house is being left to you desolate!”]... instead of a Kingdom coming then to them, dispersion and the destruction of the city is determined, owing to their unrepentant state... In Luke 21:31 [“Even so you, too, when you see these things happening, recognize that the kingdom of God is near.”]... since His death was actually contemplated by the representatives of the nation, the offer is withdrawn, and the postponement of the Kingdom, its not being nigh to them, is directly stated by an enumeration of certain events which are previously to take place before it is nigh again... none of them took place between their utterance and the day of Pentecost; hence the Kingdom was not established... Luke 19:11-27 [And while they were listening to these things, He went on to tell a parable, because He was near Jerusalem, and they supposed that the kingdom of God was going to appear immediately. He said therefore, “A certain nobleman went to a distant country to receive a kingdom for himself, and then return... But these enemies of mine, who did not want me to reign over them, bring them here and slay them in my presence.”] forcibly demonstrates our Proposition. Jesus uttered this parable “because they thought that the Kingdom of God should immediately appear”... the parable is given to... indicate that it would not soon appear, but only after an undefined period of time had elapsed... Christ only openly predicted His sufferings and death toward the close of His ministry, Matt. 20:17-20 [“And as Jesus was about to go up to Jerusalem, He took the twelve disciples aside by themselves, and on the way He said to them, ‘Behold, we are going up to Jerusalem; and the Son of Man will be delivered to the chief priests and scribes, and they will condemn Him to death, and will deliver Him to the Gentiles to mock and scourge and crucify Him, and on the third day He will be raised up.’”], John 12:32-34 [“And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men to Myself.” But He was saying this to indicate the kind of death by which He was to die. The multitude therefore answered Him, “We have heard out of the Law that the Christ is to remain forever; and how can You say, ‘The Son of Man must be lifted up’? Who is this Son of Man?”], etc. This was designedly done... When He was rejected, and efforts were made to destroy Him, then He was free to unfold what God had further purposed in view of, and to overrule, this rejection” (TTC, p. 466). “The third change concerned the message that Jesus and the apostles would now proclaim. Until Matthew 12 both He and they went throughout the land of Israel proclaiming Jesus to be the Messiah. In Matthew 10 the apostles were sent out two by two to do just that. After Matthew 12, the apostles were also ordered to follow the new policy of silence, and they were forbidden to tell anyone that Jesus was the Messiah. In Matthew 16, after Peter made his famous confession, Thou art the Christ (Messiah) the Son of the living God, Jesus ordered Peter to tell no one that He was the Messiah (Matt. 16:20 [Then He warned the disciples that they should tell no one that He was the Christ.]). They were to follow the policy of silence (Matt. 17:9 [And as they were coming down from the mountain, Jesus commanded them, saying, ‘Tell the vision to no one until the Son of Man has risen from the dead.’]) until it was rescinded with the Great Commission (Matt 28:18-20 [And Jesus came up and spoke to them, saying, ‘All authority has been given to Me in heaven and on earth. Go therefore and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all that I commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the age.’])” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 625).

His message also changed from the announcement and offer of the Messianic Kingdom to the formation of the church (then later to His return and the accompanying fulfillment of Israel’s covenants). “Upon His rejection, He began to speak, in anticipation of His death, of the formation of His Church [i.e. Matt. 16:18—ed.], and of His coming back again to the earth. He likewise related the sure fulfillment of every covenant with Israel to the time of His return” (Chafer, G, 40%).

Sixth, His style of preaching changed. It changed from blessing to rebuking. “Blessed are the gentle, for they shall inherit the earth” (Matt. 5:5). “And they were bringing children to Him so that He might touch them; and the disciples rebuked them. But when Jesus saw this, He was indignant and said to them, ‘Permit the children to come to Me; do not hinder them; for the kingdom of God belongs to such as these. Truly I say to you, whoever does not receive the kingdom of God like a child shall not enter it at all.’ And He took them in His arms and began blessing them, laying His hands upon them...” (Mark 10:13–16) “Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, because you travel about on sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he becomes one, you make him twice as much a son of hell as yourselves” (Matt. 23:15). “Just so soon as the representatives of the nation met in council and conspired to put Jesus to death, then, released from the first part of His mission, His style of preaching also changed” (Peters, TTK, 1:379). “He sternly rebuked and denounced His opponents. This is artfully represented as a deterioration of character—an indication of human frailty. The reader will observe, however, that the unity of character was preserved to the end, as witnessed e.g. in His weeping over Jerusalem and lamenting its doom, and in the utterances at His apprehension, trial, and crucifixion, when grossly insulted and deeply suffering. The alleged sternness and reproof was based on the rejection of the Kingdom by the representative men of the nation, who refused the condition of repentance and delighted in their sins. He, therefore, as was requisite to His position and tender, portrays their corruption and unfitness for the Kingdom” (ibid., p. 630).

And seventh, His method of teaching changed. It changed from plain speech to parables. “From that time Jesus began to preach and say, ‘Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand’” (Matt. 4:17). “Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are those who mourn, for they shall be comforted. Blessed are the gentle, for they shall inherit the earth. Blessed are those who hunger and thirst for righteousness, for they shall be satisfied. Blessed are the merciful, for they shall receive mercy” (Matt. 5:3–7). “The result [of the Sermon on the Mount] was that when Jesus had finished these words, the multitudes were amazed at His teaching; for He was teaching them as one having authority, and not as their scribes...” (Matt. 7:28–29) “On that day Jesus went out of the house, and was sitting by the sea. And great multitudes gathered to Him, so that He got into a boat and sat down, and the whole multitude was standing on the beach. And He spoke many things to them in parables, saying, ‘Behold, the sower went out to sow’” (Matt. 13:1-3) “And the disciples came and said to Him, ‘Why do You speak to them in parables?’ And He answered and said to them, ‘To you it has been granted to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it has not been granted. For whoever has, to him shall more be given, and he shall have an abundance; but whoever does not have, even what he has shall be taken away from him. Therefore I speak to them in parables; because while seeing they do not see, and while hearing they do not hear, nor do they understand. And in their case the prophecy of Isaiah is being fulfilled, which says, “You will keep on hearing, but will not understand; And you will keep on seeing, but will not perceive; For the heart of this people has become dull, And with their ears they scarcely hear, And they have closed their eyes Lest they should see with their eyes, And hear with their ears, And understand with their heart and return, And I should heal them.” But blessed are your eyes, because they see; and your ears, because they hear” (Matt. 13:10-16). “All these things Jesus spoke to the multitudes in parables, and He did not speak to them without a parable, so that what was spoken through the prophet might be fulfilled, saying, ‘I will open My mouth in parables; I will utter things hidden since the foundation of the world’” (Matt. 13:34-35). “And as soon as He was alone, His followers, along with the twelve, began asking Him about the parables. And He was saying to them, ‘To you has been given the mystery of the kingdom of God; but those who are outside get everything in parables, in order that while seeing, they may see and not perceive; and while hearing, they may hear and not understand lest they return and be forgiven’” (Mark 4:10-12). “And with many such parables He was speaking the word to them as they were able to hear it; and He did not speak to them without a parable; but He was explaining everything privately to His own disciples” (Mark 4:33-34). “And His disciples began questioning Him as to what this parable might be. And He said, ‘To you it has been granted to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God, but to the rest it is in parables, in order that seeing they may not see, and hearing they may not understand’” (Luke 8:9-10). “Christ first taught without a parable, and only when met with unbelief and scorn does He teach in a parabolic manner” (Peters, TTK, 2:18). “The parables are like the pillar of the cloud and of fire, when darkness was presented to the Egyptians, but light and brightness to the Covenant people” (ibid.). “The fore-known and actually realized rejection of the tender of the Kingdom, conditioned by repentance, making a new ordering requisite in order to prepare for the Kingdom, gives that peculiar and distinctive aspect to the parables which was so perplexing to the Jewish hearers who anticipated an immediate setting up of the Messianic Kingdom, a hope from which even the disciples could not at once divest themselves" (ibid., p. 19). "The change from the direct form of teaching to the parabolic which excited the astonishment of the disciples is readily accounted for in view of this contemplated postponement" (ibid., p. 21). "...'blindness in part' has fallen upon Israel, (Rom. 11:25), and a clear revelation would only discourage them or drive them further into unbelief" (Larkin, DT, p. 88). "It was a crisis akin to that which marked the ministry of our blessed Lord Himself when the Council at Jerusalem decreed His destruction. From that time He enjoined silence respecting His miracles, and His teaching became veiled in parables" (Anderson, SOG, p. 55). "...the stated purpose of these parables about the 'mysteries of the kingdom of heaven.'... their purpose was to hide rather than to reveal... 'Because to them it is not given' to know the mysteries of the kingdom (Matt. 13:10-11)" (McClain, GK, p. 322). "The giving of these parables, therefore, must be regarded as a divine judgment upon the nation of Israel. Because they had not received the simple announcement of the Kingdom, they now are given something they cannot understand" (ibid.). "All this does not deny that these mystery parables of the Kingdom had a beneficent purpose... double purpose, both beneficent and penal... 'For whosoever hath, to him shall be given,... but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath' (Matt. 13:12)" (ibid., p. 323). "...Christ's rejection of that generation of the nation of Israel (Matt. 12). Jesus then withdrew Himself from the house where these incidents took place and retired to the seashore... Previously Christ had used parables infrequently in His teaching. His use of them on this occasion was so significant that when an opportunity presented itself, 'the disciples came to Him and asked, "Why do You speak to the people in parables?"' ([Matt. 13] v.10)" (Pentecost, TKC, p. 215) "In response to the disciples' questions, then, concerning why He spoke in parables, Christ replied that He used parables first to reveal truth to some and, second, to hide truth from others (Matt. 13:11-15). Christ's answer would be unintelligible if we did not understand the historical situation. Through the course of His ministry Jesus had offered Himself to the nation as Saviour and Sovereign. The nation had seen that offer authenticated before them by the miracles Christ performed, and the nation was called on to respond to the evidence presented. The religious leaders, as representatives of the nation, indicated their purpose to reject the person of Christ and to discount His miracles, insisting His miracles were done by Satan's power. Therefore Christ had no further word for those who rejected and spurned Him and persisted in their unbelief. On the other hand, some had believed His word and accepted His person, and these needed instruction. In short, Jesus was confronted by a mixed multitude comprising both believers and unbelievers—those who had received Him and those who had rejected Him. We see that He did not attempt to separate the unbelievers from the believers and then instruct only the believers. Rather, He constructed His teaching in such a way that those who had believed would understand, and those who had rejected—even though they heard—would not understand. Believers have the key to knowledge and can interpret His teaching. Unbelievers do not possess that key and, therefore, cannot understand His word. The one who has the key of knowledge will use that key to gain more knowledge, but the one who does not have that key will lose such knowledge as he once possessed. This was the explanation Christ gave the disciples concerning why He used parables in His teaching” (ibid., p. 216). “...one third of what our Lord taught He taught through parables” (ibid., p. 220) “From the parables we can develop an understanding of the theocratic kingdom, tracing the offer by Messiah, its rejection by Israel, its consequent postponement to a future time, the resultant judgment on the generation that rejected His offer, the new form of the theocracy to be developed in the present age, the events preceding the establishment of the coming messianic kingdom, and the characteristics of those who are in the kingdom” (ibid., p. 245). “The Mystery Kingdom of Matthew 13... Walvoord [in The Church in Prophecy, pp. 24-27] points out that it ‘is a major error to make the word kingdom... always mean the same in all its uses,’ for that term ‘must be interpreted by its context.’ The very fact that the kingdom of Matthew 13 is called a ‘mystery’ shows that this facet of the kingdom program was ‘hidden’ in the Old Testament but revealed in the New, and the term signifies that it is ‘specifically New Testament truth.’ The ‘truths contained in the mysteries of the kingdom... are not an exposition of the Old Testament doctrine of the kingdom as it will be fulfilled in the millennium, but rather a presentation of truth as it relates to the kingdom in the present age’” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 391). “The fourth change concerned His teaching method. Until Matthew 12, whenever Jesus taught the masses, He did so in terms that they could and did understand. One example is the Sermon on the Mount in Matthew 5-7. Matthew points out at the end that not only did the people understand what He was saying, but also where He differed from the Scribes and the Pharisees. In Matthew 12, Jesus began teaching with a new method, the parabolic method, the purpose of which was to hide the truth from the masses. The very act of teaching in parables was a sign of judgment against them. The first series of parables Jesus taught was on the Mystery Kingdom, the facet of God's kingdom program which was inaugurated as a result of the rejection of the Messiahship of Jesus and rescinding of the offer of the Messianic Kingdom. To clearly comprehend what is happening in Matthew 13, one must understand the relationship between Matthew 12 and 13. Matthew 12 records the national rejection of the Messiahship of Jesus. Jesus was officially rejected by the leadership of Israel. By so doing, they were guilty of the unpardonable sin. From that point on they were under the judgment of A.D. 70, the year in which Jerusalem and the Temple were destroyed. In Matthew 13, Jesus taught a series of parables. These parables were spoken on the very same day as the rejection by the nation of the Messiahship of Jesus occurred (Matt. 13:1-3). On that same day the parabolic method of teaching began as a result of the rejection of the Messiahship of Jesus" (ibid., p. 626). "Matthew 13:10-18 states the purpose of these parables. Verse 10 records: And the disciples came, and said unto him, Why speakest thou unto them in parables? The question on the part of His disciples indicates that this was the beginning of the parabolic method of teaching. As a result of the rejection in Matthew 12, in Matthew 13 Jesus began teaching the Jewish masses in parables. This, of course, surprised the disciples because they themselves knew that Jesus, up until that point, had taught them clearly" (ibid.). "Since the nation had rejected the light they had, no more light would be given" (ibid., p. 627). "There is a literal mystery involved in the transition from Christ's offer of the messianic kingdom (to Israel) and the spiritual form that followed. The kingdom parables seem to be a crucial turning point; as already noted, before Matthew 13 the Jewish King had been officially present to the Jewish nation. After they rejected Him (Matt. 3-12), Jesus told parables in which a kingdom was established that would grow rapidly and contain both good and evil; in the end, the saved would be separated from the lost, each sent to their final destiny" (Geisler, ST, 4:492). (See our discussion of the Matthew chapter thirteen "mystery" parables in our chapter The Mystery Kingdom (The Church).)

Chapter 17: Postponement of the Kingdom

It is a generally undisputed fact of history that the first-century Jewish community in Israel rejected Jesus as their Messiah and King (see our previous chapter, Rejection of the King). That being the case, following Jesus' rejection, what happened to the covenanted and prophesied (and announced and offered) Kingdom? Did God at that point cancel the entire Kingdom program? Many Christians would answer that no, the Kingdom program was not then cancelled, but that it was instead transformed in some way. Our contention, however, is that the theocratic Kingdom program was neither cancelled nor transformed, but rather only postponed until Jesus' Second Coming.

It is our contention that if we are to have a correct conception of the overall Kingdom program, the postponement of the Kingdom must be clearly understood. Without this understanding firmly in place, many common misconceptions concerning the Kingdom will have fertile soil in which to germinate and grow. "The postponement of the Kingdom is the key to the understanding of the meaning of this dispensation" (Peters, TTK, 1:590). "Some few, however, properly discriminate, and realize the importance of this postponement" (ibid., p. 628). Without an understanding of the Kingdom's postponement, much of Scripture will simply not make sense. For example, "Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and he shall reign as king and deal wisely, and shall execute justice and righteousness in the land. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called: Jehovah our righteousness. Therefore, behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that they shall no more say, As Jehovah liveth, who brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but, As Jehovah liveth, who brought up and who led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all the countries whither I had driven them. And they shall dwell in their own land" (Jer. 23:5–8). "Thousands of volumes attest to the fact that, with this link missing, it is in vain to form a complete, perfect chain in the Divine Purpose, and at the same time preserve the integrity of the preaching of John, Jesus, and the disciples" (Peters, TTK, 1:622). "The rejection of the postponement of the Kingdom, is a rejection of the only key that can unlock the singular and otherwise mysterious sayings of Jesus" (ibid.). Without incorporating the postponement of the Davidic Kingdom into our eschatology, Scripture intended for application to the Tribulation or to the Millennial Kingdom dispensation will likely be incorrectly ap- plied to this Church dispensation. For example, “And the angel said to her, ‘Do not be afraid, Mary; for you have found favor with God. And behold, you will conceive in your womb, and bear a son, and you shall name Him Jesus. He will be great, and will be called the Son of the Most High; and the Lord God will give Him the throne of His father David; and He will reign over the house of Jacob forever; and His kingdom will have no end” (Luke 1:30–33). “If our position is correct (and we deem it, as the early church did, impregnable) then it follows, as a matter of course, that many things now applied by divines to this dispensation have no relation, whatever to it” (Peters, TTK, 1:590). “Volumes, otherwise containing valuable matter, are vitiated by bringing nearly all Scripture to be applicable to the present time, or dispensation” (ibid.). “When His kingdom was rejected and its realization delayed until the return of the King, the application of all Scripture which conditions life in the kingdom was delayed as well, and will be delayed as long as the King tarries” (Chafer, ST, 4:178). When we overlook the postponement, and deny the future, literal fulfillment of the Jewish Kingdom prophecies, we are forced to “spiritualize” (alter) Scripture in order to maintain its truthfulness. “The definite postponement of the Kingdom, once entertained, preserves us from this free and plastic moulding of Scripture to suit our own ideas of the fitness of things” (Peters, TTK, 1:590). “Overlooking the postponement of the Kingdom, and assuming that a Kingdom was somehow established... every passage not in harmony with it must be spiritualized until it is forced into an agreement” (ibid., p. 621). This destroys the precision of Scripture. As a result, the biblical, Old Testament idea of the covenanted and prophesied Kingdom is lost. “It is impossible to comprehend the Kingdom without going back to the Old Test. idea of it, which conception once received and entertained prevents an improper view of the present dispensation” (ibid., p. 590). “Passages which refer exclusively to a still future dispensation are thus constantly applied to this one, without the least attempt to show that they are properly used” (ibid., p. 648).

It should be recognized that it was not disclosed in the Old Testament that Christ would have two advents. Instead, the events of both advents were combined in the messianic prophecies. For example, “For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of Jehovah of hosts will perform this” (Isa. 9:6–7). “The Spirit of the Lord Jehovah is upon me; because Jehovah hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound; to proclaim the year of Jehovah’s favor, and the day of vengeance of our God; to comfort all that mourn” (Isa. 61:1–2) “In the Old Test., so far as the Kingdom is concerned, there is no discrimination between the First and Second Advents” (Peters, TTK, 1:626). “One of the most determining factors in the right apprehension of Old Testament prophecy is the recognition of the truth that to no individual in that vast period from Adam to Christ was any intimation revealed respecting the fact that there would be two advents of Christ. Moses did say with regard to the future regathering of Israel that it would be at the time of Jehovah’s return— ‘and will return and gather thee from all the nations, whither the Lord thy God hath scattered thee’ (Deut. 30:3); but no attention seems to have been centered on this promise, as clear as it seems now in the light of subsequent disclosures” (Chafer, ST, 4:303). In a similar manner, we suggest that neither was the postponement of the Kingdom, which was to span the same period of time as that transpiring between these two advents, disclosed in the Old Testament.

The idea of postponement of prophetic fulfillment is not foreign to the Bible; there were prior postponements, for instance, the Israelites’ forty-year delay in occupying the promised land. “This postponement is considered no more difficult than the delay of forty years in entering the promised land” (Walvoord, MK, p. 136).

The Kingdom Has Not Yet Come

If the Kingdom was postponed at Jesus’ First Advent, as we contend, then the Kingdom obviously could not have come prior to the first century. In this section we’ll demonstrate that the Kingdom had not come prior to Jesus’ First Advent, during Jesus’ First Advent, just prior to Jesus’ ascension, just after Jesus’ ascension, in the epistles, or even yet today.

The Kingdom had not yet come prior to Jesus’ First Advent. “until the Ancient of Days came, and judgment was passed in favor of the saints of the Highest One, and the time arrived when the saints took possession of the kingdom” (Dan. 7:22). “The least reflection will show that the Jewish [remnant] had not the covenanted characteristics of the Kingdom, for as Daniel (7:22) says, the time had not yet come that the saints possessed the Kingdom, etc.” (Peters, TTK, 1:606).

It did not come during Jesus' First Advent. "From that time Jesus began to preach and say, 'Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand'" (Matt. 4:17). "Pray, then, in this way: 'Our Father who art in heaven, Hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, On earth as it is in heaven'" (Matt. 6:9-10). "And Jesus said to them, 'Truly I say to you, that you who have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man will sit on His glorious throne, you also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel'" (Matt. 19:28). "But I say to you, I will not drink of this fruit of the vine from now on until that day when I drink it new with you in My Father's kingdom" (Matt. 26:29). "Truly I say to you, I shall never again drink of the fruit of the vine until that day when I drink it new in the kingdom of God" (Mark 14:25). "And He said to them, 'When you pray, say: 'Father, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come'" (Luke 11:2). "that you may eat and drink at My table in My kingdom, and you will sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel" (Luke 22:30). "Jesus nowhere declared 'that the Kingdom of God has come'" (Peters, TTK, 1:366) "Matt 26:29... Mark 14:25... 'until that day'... 'until the Kingdom of God shall come.' If the Kingdom already existed, such phraseology would be entirely out of place, but with our view it is consistent and significant" (ibid., p. 372). "Christ never stated that the kingdom was a present reality" (Feinberg, M, p. 264). "Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?"... the Kingdom had not yet been established, and therefore the time had not arrived for Him to begin His regal work of judging" (McClain, GK, p. 291). "But He said to him, 'Man, who appointed Me a judge or arbiter over you'" (Luke 12:14)? "And if anyone hears My sayings, and does not keep them, I do not judge him; for I did not come to judge the world, but to save the world" (John 12:47). "John the Baptist preached the messianic kingdom as a future but impending event: 'Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is near' (Matt. 3:2; 4:17)... That the kingdom is still future is further shown in Jesus' model prayer: 'Our Father... your kingdom come, your will be done on earth as it is in heaven' ([Matt.] 6:9-10; Luke 11:2). This is plainly about a kingdom that had not yet come and that was not only spiritual but would be accomplished 'on earth'" (Geisler, ST, 4:479).

It had not yet come just prior to Jesus' ascension. "To these He also presented Himself alive, after His suffering, by many convincing proofs, appearing to them over a period of forty days, and speaking of the things concerning the kingdom of God" (Acts 1:3). "And so when they had come together, they [the apostles, vs. 2] were asking Him, saying, ‘Lord, is it at this time You are restoring the kingdom to Israel?’ He said to them, ‘It is not for you to know times or epochs which the Father has fixed by His own authority; but you shall receive power when the Holy Spirit has come upon you; and you shall be My witnesses both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and even to the remotest part of the earth.’ And after He had said these things, He was lifted up while they were looking on, and a cloud received Him out of their sight. And as they were gazing intently into the sky while He was departing, behold, two men in white clothing stood beside them; and they also said, ‘Men of Galilee, why do you stand looking into the sky? This Jesus, who has been taken up from you into heaven, will come in just the same way as you have watched Him go into heaven’” (Acts 1:6-11). “The conversation between Jesus and the disciples pertaining to the Kingdom, and the question of the latter just before the ascension, most effectually disproves the assertions of eminent writers that the Kingdom was already established sometime in the ministry or life of Jesus” (Peters, TTK, 1:431).

It did not come soon after Jesus’ ascension. “The apostles, after the res. and ascension of Jesus, never used the formula ‘the Kingdom of heaven is at hand;’—thus accepting of the change in the manner of Christ’s teaching, and linked by the phraseology adopted, the Kingdom with the Sec. Advent. For, instead of the previous formula, they now tell us that ‘the Coming of the Lord draweth nigh,’ ‘the Lord is at hand,’ etc. They guard us thus, by the very choice of words, against the notion that the Kingdom was already established, or that it possibly could be set up during the absence of the King. Under the former preaching, Jesus being present, the Kingdom was announced; under the apostolic, Jesus being absent and the Kingdom postponed, His Coming again, as the requisite prelude, is prominently proclaimed” (Peters, TTK, 1:478). “We admit that if Jesus or His Apostles had proclaimed the establishment of the Kingdom, as covenanted immediately or shortly after His death, then indeed a powerful argument, owing to the patent dissimilarity between the two, would be presented, but such an establishment (which the primitive Church totally ignored) is taken for granted, and from a premise thus falsely grounded the most adverse conclusions respecting Jesus are entertained and promulgated” (ibid., 3:295).

It had not yet come in the epistles. “For I am already being poured out as a drink offering, and the time of my departure has come. I have fought the good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith; in the future there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will award to me on that day; and not only to me, but also to all who have loved His appearing" (2 Tim. 4:6-8). "This futurity of the Kingdom is the basis of the numerous exhortations to obtain it, to walk worthily of it, to look, seek, and pray for it" (Peters, TTK, 1:413). "There is no critically undisputed passage in the Scriptures which declares, or necessarily implies, even a partial establishment [of the Kingdom] in New Testament times" [quoting E.R. Craven, 'Excursus on the Basileia,' Lange's Commentary on Revelation, p. 94] (McClain, GK, p. 431). "There is no epistle of the New Testament addressed to the saints in 'the kingdom of heaven'" (ibid.).

And, in fact, the Kingdom still has not yet come. "And it shall come to pass in the latter days, that the mountain of Jehovah's house shall be established on the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it. And many peoples shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of Jehovah, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of Jehovah from Jerusalem. And he will judge between the nations, and will decide concerning many peoples; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more" (Isa. 2:2-4). "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, On earth as it is in heaven" (Matt. 6:10). "Not everyone who says to Me, 'Lord, Lord,' will enter the kingdom of heaven; but he who does the will of My Father who is in heaven. Many will say to Me on that day, 'Lord, Lord, did we not prophesy in Your name, and in Your name cast out demons, and in Your name perform many miracles'" (Matt. 7:21-22)? "And so when they had come together, they were asking Him, saying, 'Lord, is it at this time You are restoring the kingdom to Israel'" (Acts 1:6)? "For He did not subject to angels the world to come, concerning which we are speaking. But one has testified somewhere, saying, 'What is man, that Thou rememberest him? Or the son of man, that Thou art concerned about him? Thou hast made him for a little while lower than the angels; Thou hast crowned him with glory and honor, And hast appointed him over the works of Thy hands; Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet.' For in subjecting all things to him, He left nothing that is not subject to him. But now we do not yet see all things subjected to him" (Heb. 2:5-8). "The significant fact that our opponents cannot tell when this promised Kingdom was set up, although professing that it was established, is corroborative evidence in our favor" (Peters, TTK, 1:308). "If no such Kingdom exists now, certainly it is no more than simple justice demands to permit Scripture to assign its reasons for the same” (ibid., p. 372). “The leading essential element, that which constituted a Theocracy, was the fact that God condescended to act as an earthly Ruler. Now it is self-evident that no such distinctive feature was inaugurated at the First Advent” (ibid., p. 423). “Jesus, after He announced the postponement, gives an epitome of Jewish destiny (Matt. 24, Mark 13, Luke 21), and only when the Sec. Advent arrives does Jewish tribulation cease” (ibid., p. 629). “Nowhere is a Theocracy at present existing on earth, because God refuses to act now, for any nation or people, in the capacity of an earthly Ruler” (ibid., 3:583). “In a day when the minds of men are occupied with thoughts of war, as they have been for years, how can anyone logically reconcile that with what Isaiah, or Jeremiah, or Ezekiel foretold of the reign of peace on the earth during the kingdom age? Where is the renovated earth? Since when is Satan bound, no longer to tempt me” (Feinberg, M, p. 254). “In the period between the advents the Gentile colossus will still be standing, whereas the kingdom age begins with the utter and complete destruction of the colossus, according to the prophecy of Daniel 2” (ibid., p. 255). “Premillennialists claim that the Messianic Kingdom is not now in existence, but they do recognize the mystery form of the kingdom (a provisional arrangement not seen in the Old Testament, but revealed in Matthew 13); and furthermore, they believe all believers are immediately admitted to the kingdom of God (John 3:3)” (ibid., p. 264). “If when our Lord was on earth He proclaimed the Kingdom and His Person as inseparable, and if the future manifestation of the Kingdom will depend on His personal presence, it is not easy to understand how there could be today any genuine Kingdom of God on earth in the Mediatorial sense” (McClain, GK, p. 305). “...a future Kingdom, toward which as a glorious goal all the labors of the Church are directed” (ibid., p. 436).

The Kingdom Was Postponed

The Kingdom was offered to Israel by Jesus at His First Advent, but due to Jewish unbelief, it was postponed until Jesus’ Second Advent.

Statement of the Postponement

The postponement of the Kingdom is stated and/or indicated in numerous passages of Scripture. “Therefore I say to you [the chief priests and Pharisees, leaders of Israel], the kingdom of God will be taken away from you, and be given to a nation producing the fruit of it” (Matt. 21:43). “The Kingdom... the nation, therefore, must have sustained a peculiar, special relation to it, or else it could not have been taken from them” (Peters, TTK, 1:389). “The gospel with its blessings is just as freely offered to the Jews, and the privileges of the Church just as graciously extended to them as to the Gentiles. Hence it follows: that the Kingdom of God taken from them is not the gospel, or admission into the Church, or enjoyment of Church blessings, or the privileges of this dispensation, because none of these things were taken from them. What they lost is the Kingdom itself, just as covenanted, and not the after provisional appointments to still secure the Kingdom in the future. Is it not surprising that so plain a feature is so much ignored” (ibid.)? “‘The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.’... This text does not affirm that the Kingdom will be taken from the nation of Israel and given to a nation which is another nation racially and politically. When our Lord said the Kingdom would be taken away ‘from you,’ He was speaking to the ‘chief priests and the elders’ (Matt. 21:23)... ‘they perceived that he spake of them’ (Matt. 21:45)” (McClain, GK, p. 295). “But this Kingdom, as foreseen by the prophets and announced by our Lord, is not therefore metamorphosed into something else. The same Kingdom shall yet be ‘given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof’ (Matt. 21:43). Now the question is, What nation? Here the Greek noun ethnos must not be pressed to mean Gentile, for the same term is often used by John and Paul in referring to the nation of Israel (John 11:51; Acts 24:17). And according to the uniform testimony of Scripture, the covenants and rights of this people are irrevocable (Jer. 33:24-26; Rom. 9:3-5). The fulfillment of these divine promises may indeed be interrupted temporarily, and certain individuals or even a whole generation may be cut off from the benefits, but the promises to Israel cannot be abrogated. And although God cannot bestow His covenanted blessing upon ‘a disobedient and gainsaying people’ (Rom. 10:21), He can and will purge and purify this very people so that it may once more be a nation before Him. There is to be a future restoration (Rom. 11:11-15), a new birth for this nation (Isa. 66:5-13). Just as the resurrection body is in one sense a new body and yet in another sense the same body, even so the Israel to whom the Kingdom shall be given will be a new nation spiritually but also the same nation historically which came from the loins of Abraham. This is nothing unusual in the manner of human speech. We may and do speak of the German nation today as something radically different from the nation of Hitler’s terrible years, yet the historical and vital connection between the two has never been broken” (ibid., p. 296). “Just as in the case of a regenerated individual, it is wholly proper to contrast the new man with the old man without any implication of two separate persons; even so the nation which shall receive the Kingdom will be spiritually a new nation but, at the same time, racially and politically the Israel of history” (ibid., p. 297). “Gaebelein [in The Gospel of Matthew, II. 138] suggests that the ‘nation’ which will take their place will be other Israelites: ‘The nation to whom the Lord promises the Kingdom is not the Church. The Church is called the Body of Christ, the Bride of Christ, the Habitation of God by the Spirit, the Lamb’s Wife, but never a nation. The nation is Israel still, but that believing remnant of the nation, living when the Lord comes’” (Walvoord, MK, p. 172). “...withdrawal of the offer of the kingdom and its postponement until the King’s future return. In Matthew 21:43 Christ said, ‘The kingdom of God will be taken away from you and given to a people who will produce its fruits.’ While some see the nation of whom Christ spoke as a reference to Gentiles in this present age, it seems better to understand it as a future generation in Israel which will repent as the Davidic form of the kingdom is instituted by the returning Messiah. Regardless, this passage clearly indicates a withdrawal of the offer of the kingdom to that generation” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 226). “O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, who kills the prophets and stones those who are sent to her! How often I wanted to gather your children together, the way a hen gathers her chicks under her wings, and you were unwilling. Behold, your house is being left to you desolate! For I say to you, from now on you shall not see Me until you say, ‘Blessed is He who comes in the name of the Lord’” (Matt. 23:37-39)! “...the 118th Psalm... The Lord Jesus Himself put its Messianic reference beyond all dispute when, immediately after His Triumphal Entry and in the face of the opposition from the Jewish leaders, He quoted from this psalm and applied its prophetic words to His own career: ‘Did ye never read in the scriptures, The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner: this is the Lord’s doing, and it is marvelous in our eyes?’ (Matt. 21:42 with Ps. 118:22-23). And again, later, as He pronounced the judgment of desolation upon the rebellious nation, He graciously quoted from the same psalm to indicate the joyous words which will be spoken sincerely by a future repentant Israel in the day when He will come back from heaven to establish and reign in His glorious Kingdom: ‘Behold, your house is left unto you desolate. For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord’ (Matt. 23:38-39 with Ps. 118:26)” (McClain, GK, p. 349). “The stone which the builders rejected Is become the head of the corner. This is Jehovah’s doing; It is marvellous in our eyes. This is the day which Jehovah hath made; We will rejoice and be glad in it. Save now, we beseech thee, O Jehovah: O Jehovah, we beseech thee, send now prosperity. Blessed be he that cometh in the name of Jehovah: We have blessed you out of the house of Jehovah” (Ps. 118:22-26). “The judgment of [Matt. 23] verse 38, ‘Behold, your house is left unto you desolate,’ must refer primarily to the temple, for the lament of Matthew 23:37-39 is followed immediately by the statement, ‘And Jesus went out, and departed from the temple’ (Matt. 24:1)” (McClain, GK, p. 361). “...the Shekinah-Glory... Now once again for a brief season, the Glory of God in the Person of the Messianic King had been present in the temple (Luke 19:47; John 12:41). But the nation had rejected Him; and as He leaves this temple, it is no longer named ‘my house’ (Matt. 21:13), but ‘your house’ (Matt. 23:38). And by reason of His rejection and withdrawal, Israel’s house is left ‘desolate.’ With a proper feeling for the historical importance of our Lord’s word and action, Lange [in J. P. Lange, Lange’s Commentary, footnote on Matt. 23:37] remarks, ‘The word marks the moment at which Jesus leaves the temple, and leaves it for a sign that it was abandoned by the Spirit of the theocracy.’... The desolation, thus inaugurated by our Lord’s judicial departure, will reach its dreadful climax in something named by Him ‘the abomination of desolation’ (Matt. 24:15), when the Jewish temple will once more have a regal occupant—this time, Satan’s own great pretender and usurper whose presence there will loose upon the nation its most terrible ‘time of trouble’ (Matt. 24:21-22; 2 Thess. 2:3-4)” (ibid.). “The nation which is left ‘desolate’ will some day acclaim the same rejected King with joyous cry, ‘Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord’ (Matt. 23:39). These words cannot refer to any other future time except the second advent of Christ and the conversion of Israel. In this final and ‘exquisite’ utterance of our Lord, therefore, we have the inspired refutation of the modern and popular theory that God is done with the na-tion of Israel” (ibid., p. 362). “It is like a man, away on a journey, who upon leaving his house and putting his slaves in charge, assigning to each one his task, also commanded the doorkeeper to stay on the alert. Therefore, be on the alert — for you do not know when the master of the house is coming, whether in the evening, at midnight, at cockcrowing, or in the morning — lest he come suddenly and find you asleep. And what I say to you I say to all, “Be on the alert”” (Mark 13:34-37)! “And be like men who are waiting for their master when he returns from the wedding feast, so that they may immediately open the door to him when he comes and knocks. Blessed are those slaves whom the master shall find on the alert when he comes; truly I say to you, that he will gird himself to serve, and have them recline at the table, and will come up and wait on them. Whether he comes in the second watch, or even in the third, and finds them so, blessed are those slaves. And be sure of this, that if the head of the house had known at what hour the thief was coming, he would not have allowed his house to be broken into. You too, be ready; for the Son of Man is coming at an hour that you do not expect” (Luke 12:36-40). “And the Lord said, ‘Who then is the faithful and sensible steward, whom his master will put in charge of his servants, to give them their rations at the proper time? Blessed is that slave whom his master finds so doing when he comes. Truly I say to you, that he will put him in charge of all his possessions. But if that slave says in his heart, “My master will be a long time in coming,” and begins to beat the slaves, both men and women, and to eat and drink and get drunk; the master of that slave will come on a day when he does not expect him, and at an hour he does not know, and will cut him in pieces, and assign him a place with the unbelievers. And that slave who knew his master’s will and did not get ready or act in accord with his will, shall receive many lashes, but the one who did not know it, and committed deeds worthy of a flogging, will receive but few. And from everyone who has been given much shall much be required; and to whom they entrusted much, of him they will ask all the more” (Luke 12:42-48). “O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, the city that kills the prophets and stones those sent to her! How often I wanted to gather your children together, just as a hen gathers her brood under her wings, and you would not have it! Behold, your house is left to you desolate; and I say to you, you shall not see Me until the time comes when you say, “Blessed is He who comes in the name of the Lord”” (Luke 13:34-35)! “And while they were listening to these things, He went on to tell a parable, because He was near Jerusalem, and they supposed that the kingdom of God was going to appear immediately. He said therefore, ‘A certain nobleman went to a distant country to receive a kingdom for himself, and then return. And he called ten of his slaves, and gave them ten minas, and said to them, “Do business with this until I come back.” But his citizens hated him, and sent a delegation after him, saying, “We do not want this man to reign over us.” And it came about that when he returned, after receiving the kingdom, he ordered that these slaves, to whom he had given the money, be called to him in order that he might know what business they had done. And the first appeared, saying, “Master, your mina has made ten minas more.” And he said to him, “Well done, good slave, because you have been faithful in a very little thing, be in authority over ten cities.” And the second came, saying, “Your mina, master, has made five minas.” And he said to him also, “And you are to be over five cities.” And another came, saying, “Master, behold your mina, which I kept put away in a handkerchief; for I was afraid of you, because you are an exacting man; you take up what you did not lay down, and reap what you did not sow.” He said to him, “By your own words I will judge you, you worthless slave. Did you know that I am an exacting man, taking up what I did not lay down, and reaping what I did not sow? Then why did you not put the money in the bank, and having come, I would have collected it with interest?” And he said to the bystanders, “Take the mina away from him, and give it to the one who has the ten minas.” And they said to him, “Master, he has ten minas already.” I tell you, that to everyone who has shall more be given, but from the one who does not have, even what he does have shall be taken away. But these enemies of mine, who did not want me to reign over them, bring them here and slay them in my presence.’ And after He had said these things, He was going on ahead, ascending to Jerusalem” (Luke 19:11-28). “...during His absence there was no Kingdom, being gone to receive the power to reign; ...He would return and then manifest His acquired power” (Peters, TTK, p. 382). “Subordinate kings went to Rome to receive the investiture to their kingdoms from the Roman Emperor, and then returned to occupy them and reign. So Christ received from his Father, after his ascension, the investiture to his kingdom; but with the intention not to occupy it, till his return at his second coming. In token of this investiture he takes his seat as the Lamb on the divine throne” [quoting E. B. Elliott, Horae Apocalypticae, on Rev. 5:6-8] (McClain, GK, p. 340). “...the parable in Luke 19:11-28... ‘thought that the kingdom of God was going to appear at once’ (vs. 11)... In this parable (Luke 19), a man of noble birth... In this parable Christ taught that He who possesses the right to rule would be absent from the place over which He was appointed to rule... The nation Israel was appointed as the King’s stewards but proved to be unfaithful. Only those found faithful to Him from among the nation will be admitted at the King’s coming into His kingdom” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 226). “The parable of the talents (Luke 19:11-27)... the nobleman (Christ) goes into a far country (heaven) for two purposes: to receive a kingdom and to return... servant (Gentile [?—ed.])... citizens (Jews)” (Geisler, ST, 4:483) “and they will fall by the edge of the sword, and will be led captive into all the nations; and Jerusalem will be trampled under foot by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled” (Luke 21:24). “The times of the Gentiles’ are indeed preordained, but only in view of this foreordained number of the elect. The foreknowledge of God comprehended the delay in gathering out, and determines the end accordingly” (Peters, TTK, 1:402). “Luke records a section which has no exact parallel in the other two Gospels. It is, in fact, a literary parenthesis inserted in Luke’s account of coming events. This parenthetical section begins with the words, ‘But before all these things’ (21:12, ASV), i.e., the things already referred to which will mark the beginning of the ‘end.’ The section ends with the words, ‘And Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled’ (21:24)” (McClain, GK, p. 364) “Only Luke gives the panoramic reference to the ‘times of the Gentiles’ which are conterminous with the subjection of Jerusalem to Gentile power. This should not be surprising, for careful students have noted that, of the three Synoptic writers, Luke (a Gentile) has the more universal outlook” (ibid., p. 365). “The very word until means that the Gentile trampling of Jerusalem is temporary” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 202). “... ‘Jerusalem will be trampled on by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled’ (Luke 21:24). Israel rejected her Messiah, and the Kingdom was taken from Israel temporarily” (Geisler, ST, 4:481). “And He told them a parable: Behold the fig tree and all the trees; as soon as they put forth leaves, you see it and know for yourselves that summer is now near. Even so you, too, when you see these things happening, recognize that the kingdom of God is near. Truly I say to you, this generation will not pass away until all things take place. Heaven and earth will pass away, but My words will not pass away” (Luke 21:29-33). “Jesus answered, My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence” (John 18:36, ASV). “John 18:36: ‘Not of This World’... Jesus said, ‘My kingdom is not of this world. If it were, my servants would fight to prevent my arrest by the Jews. But now my kingdom is from another place.’ It is difficult to square this with earlier statements by John the Baptist and Jesus that the hoped-for messianic kingdom was ‘at hand’ (i.e. ‘near’—Matt. 3:2; 4:17) unless one recognizes that when Jesus’ offer was rejected, an interregnum period was enacted (to accomplish God’s eternal purpose to save the Gentiles) between the Advent and the Second Coming, when all prophecies of the messianic kingdom will be fulfilled (25:31-45)” (Geisler, ST, p. 493). “John 18:36... Christ’s words were a clear and emphatic denial that He had any intentions of setting up such a kingdom—then. Jesus is only the King of a ‘spiritual’ kingdom—now” (ibid., p. 583). “And so when they had come together, they were asking Him, saying, ‘Lord, is it at this time You are restoring the kingdom to Israel?’ He said to them, ‘It is not for you to know times or epochs which the Father has fixed by His own authority’” (Acts 1:6-7)

Considered collectively, the above passages, especially when examined in conjunction with all the Old Testament covenants and prophecies, clearly indicate the fact of a postponement of the Kingdom. “The Kingdom is nowhere (although it is currently believed) directly asserted to be a resultant of the First Advent, but in the declarations of Christ and the apostles it is distinctly linked with the Sec. Advent, as e.g. Matt. 25:34, 2 Tim. 4:1, etc.” (Peters, TTK, 1:244) “Then the King will say to those on His right, ‘Come, you who are blessed of My Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world’” (Matt. 25:34). “I solemnly charge you in the presence of God and of Christ Jesus, who is to judge the living and the dead, and by His appearing and His kingdom” (2 Tim. 4:1) “We see no such Kingdom yet established which meets the requirements of covenant and prophecy, if the latter are received in their plain grammatical sense” (Peters, TTK, 1:598). “Can it be possible that David’s Son has a real Kingdom here on earth, when David’s throne and Kingdom are overthrown? When Jerusalem is dntrodden? When Jesus declared (Matt. 23:39, Luke 13:34) that He would be absent from it, leaving it desolate, until a certain return? Alas! Men by ignoring the express language of the covenant, and by an unwarranted substitution, set up another as the Messianic Kingdom, overlooking the simple fact that no Kingdom (so called) can possibly be acknowledged unless it restores (as e.g. Isa. 1:26, 27, etc. [“Then I will restore your judges as at the first, And your counselors as at the beginning; After that you will be called the city of righteousness, A faithful city. Zion will be redeemed with justice, And her repentant ones with righteousness.’]) the identical Theocracy withdrawn. It is self-evident—as we have shown in detail—that the twelve and the seventy, who were preachers of the Kingdom, had not the remotest idea of such extraordinary transmutations as have appeared engrafted, by human reason, on the doctrine of the Kingdom” (ibid., p. 664). “The advocates of the Church Kingdom idea... [and]... The Rationalists... a false premise... The thing taken for granted is, that the Kingdom immediately followed the ministry of Jesus; the deduction made is, that being diverse from the one predicted by the grammatical sense, either a change was made in the Plan, or the predictions themselves must be interpreted in a sense to make them correspond with the changes introduced; the error of both is, that neither one nor the other pay any attention to the positive declarations of this same Jesus (after the representative men of the nation conspired to put Him to death) that, owing to the non-repentance of, and His rejection by, the nation, this identical Kingdom—the burden of prophecy, the subject of early preaching, the one bound in covenant relationship with the Jewish nation—is postponed to a future period” (ibid., 3:484). “The essential point, which cannot be reasonably disputed is this: the Mediatorial Kingdom of Old Testament prophecy, which was announced in our Lord’s early ministry as “at hand,” was not established because of Jewish unbelief, and its arrival is now set definitely at the second advent of the King” [quoting McClain, The Greatness of the Kingdom, p. 355] (Feinberg, M, p. 147). “In conclusion, Israel is not the church, and the church is not the kingdom of Old Testament prophecy. That kingdom, offered and rejected by Israel, is postponed for future complete, literal fulfillment. Such a view is falsely accused of bypassing or minimizing the cross, but that charge is unsubstantiated. Daniel 9:26 [‘And after the threescore and two weeks shall the anointed one be cut off, and shall have nothing: and the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and even unto the end shall be war; desolations are determined.’] alone connects the cross with the postponement of the kingdom. ‘Cut off’ surely signifies the death of the Messiah. ‘Have nothing’ must mean that He does not get the kingdom. Note the gender of ‘his own’ in John 1:11 [‘He came to His own, and those who were His own did not receive Him.’]. It cannot mean only a spiritual kingdom in the hearts of men, for in that sense He did have numerous disciples even in His earthly ministry. The King was rejected and His kingdom postponed for the second advent until realization in the millennial reign” (ibid., p. 280). “...the interregnum which will intervene between His death and His return from heaven in glory to establish the Kingdom on earth” (McClain, GK, p. 321). “During the present Church age, from Pentecost to the second coming of Christ, the Mediatorial Kingdom must be said to be in abeyance, in the sense of its actual establishment on earth” (ibid., p. 439). “When the nation’s response of rejection was clear, Christ set aside the nation—those related to Him by blood—and declared that He would accept only those related to Him by faith ([Matt. 12] vv. 48-50). In the mind of Christ, the destiny of the nation was sealed. Christ later would announce that the kingdom of God had been taken from Israel and would be given to a people who would produce the fruit of righteousness (21:43). Jerusalem would come under judgment (24:37-39) and would fall to the Gentiles (Luke 21:24). From this point on Christ no longer publicly announced that the kingdom was at hand; instead, He indicated that the kingdom had been postponed. He was not anticipating a throne, but instead foresaw a cross. What He had originally come to fulfill in God’s covenant program for Israel had been postponed until another coming” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 219). “Matthew wrote not to prove to the Jews that Jesus actually was the Messiah—as his Gospel is so frequently interpreted. Rather, he wrote to explain why—after the true Messiah came and was introduced to Israel by the appointed forerunner and authenticated Himself and His offer of the kingdom by the miracles that He performed—the kingdom He came to establish was not instituted in fulfillment of the covenants and promises” (ibid., p. 265). “...the offer of the kingdom was rescinded with Israel’s rejection to be reoffered to a later Jewish generation which will accept it and, in turn, bring in the establishment of the kingdom” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 272). “As a result of Israel’s rejection of the Messiah, the offer of the kingdom was rescinded, or withdrawn and, therefore, postponed. After the rejection in Matthew 12, Jesus proclaimed a new facet of God’s kingdom program in Matthew 13” (ibid., p. 396). “With the withdrawal of the kingdom, Christ announces ‘woes upon the leaders of the nation’ and the coming of judgment in A.D. 70 when Jerusalem and the temple will be destroyed” [quoting Pentecost, Things to Come, p. 466] (ibid., p. 397). “The guilt is limited to ‘that generation of Israel’ of Jesus’ day, and the judgment that Jesus pronounced came upon that generation in A.D. 70” [quoting McClain, The Greatness of the Kingdom, pp. 356-359] (ibid., p. 411). “Feinberg points out that the concept of ‘postponement’ is purely from the human perspective, for Scripture views events from the divine perspective as well as the human standpoint. So, as far as God is concerned, who knows the end from the beginning, nothing is postponed” (ibid., p. 413). “Again, Christ’s kingdom parables introduced the previously unknown plan (mystery) of God by which plans for the messianic kingdom (Israel’s final restoration) would be put on hold in favor of the mystery form (cf. [Matt.] 21:43). Since the chosen nation would completely reject and then crucify her Messiah, the freight train of Israel would be temporarily sidetracked (Rom. 11:15) in order to allow the express train of the church to come through on the main tracks (v. 25). Only then, provoked by Gentile salvation (v. 11), will Israel finally (at the Second Coming) embrace her Messiah, when Christ returns to judge the nations and separate good from evil” (Geisler, ST, 4:493).

The Cause of the Postponement

The cause of the postponement was, generally speaking, Israel’s sinfulness and refusal to repent, and specifically, the nation’s rejection of Jesus as Messiah.

Israel was sinful and refused to repent. “Then He began to reproach the cities in which most of His miracles were done, because they did not repent” (Matt. 11:20). “...the Jewish nation... on its refusal (through its representative men) to repent, the Kingdom is postponed” (Peters, TTK, 2:42). “The Jews themselves, in e.g. ‘The Liturgy of the Jews’ (Art. on, Littell’s Liv. Age, Oct. 7th, 1876), acknowledge their sinfulness: ‘We acknowledge that we have sinned; that we have acted wickedly, O Lord, according to all Thy righteousness, we beseech Thee, let Thy anger and Thy wrath be turned away from Jerusalem, Thy City and Thy Holy Mountain; for it is on account of our sins and the iniquities of our ancestors that Jerusalem and Thy people are become objects of reproach to all around us,’ etc.” (ibid., 1:225)

This sinfulness and refusal to repent led ultimately to Israel’s rejection of Jesus as Messiah. “And while they were listening to these things, He went on to tell a parable, because He was near Jerusalem, and they supposed that the kingdom of God was going to appear immediately. He said therefore, ‘A certain nobleman went to a distant country to receive a kingdom for himself, and then return. And he called ten of his slaves, and gave them ten minas, and said to them, “Do business with this until I come back.” But his citizens hated him, and sent a delegation after him, saying, “We do not want this man to reign over us”’” (Luke 19:11-14). “But you disowned the Holy and Righteous One, and asked for a murderer to be granted to you” (Acts 3:14) “Leila Ada (a converted Jewess)... Leila Ada. p. 59, asks what terrible sin her ancestors had committed which called for eighteen centuries of removal from the land, when her fathers, guilty of idolatry—the greatest sin against God—had only seventy years of captivity enforced, etc... ‘What can that crime be, which was committed by our ancestors, and of which to this day we have not repented? Whatever it is, it must be some act or deed of a most atrocious character, an act or deed in the approval of which we have steadfastly persisted, and the guilt of which we have obstinately refused to acknowledge’” (Peters, TTK, 3:421).

Consequences of the Postponement

Consequences of the Kingdom’s postponement include Israel’s blindness and trampling, the destruction of Jerusalem, the scattering of the Jews throughout the world, the nation’s dormancy, and an extension of the times of the Gentiles.

First, Israel was blinded. “And He said, ‘Go, and tell this people: “Keep on listening, but do not perceive; Keep on looking, but do not understand.” Render the hearts of this people insensitive, Their ears dull, And their eyes dim, Lest they see with their eyes, Hear with their ears, Understand with their hearts, And return and be healed” (Isa. 6:9-10). “And Jesus said, ‘For judgment I came into this world, that those who do not see may see; and that those who see may become blind’” (John 9:39). “For I do not want you, brethren, to be uninformed of this mystery, lest you be wise in your own estimation, that a partial hardening has happened to Israel until the fulness of the Gentiles has come in” (Rom. 11:25) “It is meet that the Jews should remain in unbelief as long as the Gentiles did. The Gentiles remained excluded from the ordinances of the true religion for 2000 years, from the call of Abraham to the coming of Christ... And yet, for all we know, the time may be shortened or lengthened as best suits the Divine pleasure” (Peters, TTK, 1:420). “It will be recalled that there is a peculiar blindness upon Israel respecting the gospel” (Chafer, ST, 3:305) “‘The blindness is represented as judicial—a punishment inflicted by God on disobedience and hardness of heart’” [quoting S. G. Green, Handbook to the Grammar of the New Testament, pp. 321-322] (McClain, GK, p. 323). “Because of Israel’s rejection of the Messiahship of Jesus, Israel’s present relationship to God is different than the relationship prior to the rejection. Spiritually, Israel is now under a special judicial blindness” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 415) “Walvoord [in The Millennial Kingdom, pp. 165-168] concludes that... ‘Israel in unbelief is blinded,’ but ‘this blinded condition is temporary, not final’” (ibid., p. 462). “The meaning of the ‘blindness in part’ is not ‘that all Israel has been partially blinded... nor does it imply that the blindness is partial as to time.’ What it does mean is that ‘there will be some in Israel who will not be blinded,’ and these make up the Remnant of Israel. For this very reason, those ‘who try to discourage Jewish evangelization’ are wrong and are guilty of ignorance and ‘false notions’” [quoting Feinberg, Israel, pp. 156-158] (ibid., p. 551). “Feinberg [Israel, pp. 159-160], like the majority of Dispensationalists, distinguishes between the fulness of the Gentiles and the times of the Gentiles. The former is an ‘ecclesiastical designation’ which began with Pentecost in Acts two and will end at the Rapture. The latter is a ‘political designation’ which began with Nebuchadnezzar and the Babylonian Captivity and will end with the Antichrist and the second coming” (ibid.). (See also our discussion of the removal of Israel’s blindness in the Events of the Last Half (3.5 Yrs.) of the Tribulation section of our chapter The Great Tribulation.)

Second, Israel was trampled. “and they will fall by the edge of the sword, and will be led captive into all the nations; and Jerusalem will be trampled under foot by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled” (Luke 21:24). “The rejection of Him and of His sacrifice was followed by a terrible overthrow of the nation and a continued subjection, as He and the prophets predicted, under Gentile domination, down to the present day. It confirms the validity of His Theocratic Kingship, and the preciousness of His sacrifice” (Peters, TTK, 3:420). (See also the section The Times of the Gentiles of our chapter The Fall of the Kingdom.)

Third, Jerusalem was destroyed. “Seventy weeks are decreed upon thy people and upon thy holy city, to finish transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up vision and prophecy, and to anoint the most holy. Know therefore and discern, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem unto the anointed one, the prince, shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks: it shall be built again, with street and moat, even in troublous times. And after the threescore and two weeks shall the anointed one be cut off, and shall have nothing: and the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and even unto the end shall be war; desolations are determined. And he shall make a firm covenant with many for one week: and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease; and upon the wing of abominations shall come one that maketh desolate; and even unto the full end, and that determined, shall wrath be poured out upon the desolate” (Dan. 9:24–27). “But when you see Jerusalem surrounded by armies, then recognize that her desolation is at hand. Then let those who are in Judea flee to the mountains, and let those who are in the midst of the city depart, and let not those who are in the country enter the city; because these are days of vengeance, in order that all things which are written may be fulfilled. Woe to those who are with child and to those who nurse babes in those days; for there will be great distress upon the land, and wrath to this people, and they will fall by the edge of the sword, and will be led captive into all the nations; and Jerusalem will be trampled under foot by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled” (Luke 21:20–24). “Then, joining with seven other spirits, more evil than himself, they enter the man; and his last state is worse than the first. ‘Even so,’ Christ declares, ‘shall it be also unto this wicked generation’ (Matt. 12:43–45)... As Ellicott [C.J. Ellicott, Commentary, on Matt. 12:45] has said, ‘We must turn to the picture drawn by the Jewish historian of the crimes, frenzies, insanities of the final struggle that ended in the destruction of Jerusalem, if we would take an adequate measure of the “last state” of that “wicked generation.”’” (McClain, GK, p. 318).

Fourth, Israel was scattered. “You only have I known of all the families of the earth: therefore I will visit upon you all your iniquities” (Amos 3:2). “Awake, O sword, against my shepherd, and against the man that is my fellow, saith Jehovah of hosts: smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered; and I will turn my hand upon the little ones. And it shall come to pass, that in all the land, saith Jehovah, two parts therein shall be cut off and die; but the third shall be left therein. And I will bring the third part into the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried. They shall call on my name, and I will hear them: I will say, It is my people; and they shall say, Jehovah is my God” (Zech. 13:7-9). “God’s Shepherd, the Messiah, was smitten and so His sheep, Israel, were scattered throughout the world” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 787). “But when you see Jerusalem surrounded by armies, then recognize that her desolation is at hand. Then let those who are in Judea flee to the mountains, and let those who are in the midst of the city depart, and let not those who are in the country enter the city; because these are days of vengeance, in order that all things which are written may be fulfilled. Woe to those who are with child and to those who nurse babes in those days; for there will be great distress upon the land, and wrath to this people, and they will fall by the edge of the sword, and will be led captive into all the nations; and Jerusalem will be trampled under foot by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled” (Luke 21:20–24). “The punishment, the scattering and desolation, of the Jewish nation is itself proof of their election as, e.g. Amos (ch. 3:2), declares: ‘You only have I known of all the families of the earth: therefore I will punish you for all your iniquities.’ This casting off is only temporary, as evidence e.g. Zech. 10:6, etc.” (Peters, TTK, 1:215). “And I will strengthen the house of Judah, and I will save the house of Joseph, and I will bring them back; for I have mercy upon them; and they shall be as though I had not cast them off: for I am Jehovah their God, and I will hear them” (Zech. 10:6). “...the fulfillment of prophecy, down to the present day, with the abundant assurances that this cast-away condition of the nation is only temporary and not perpetual” (Peters, TTK, 2:49).

Fifth, Israel as a nation became dormant. “And He said, ‘Go, and tell this people: “Keep on listening, but do not perceive; Keep on looking, but do not understand.” Render the hearts of this people insensitive, Their ears dull, And their eyes dim, Lest they see with their eyes, Hear with their ears, Understand with their hearts, And return and be healed” (Isa. 6:9-10). “Jesus said to them, ‘Did you never read in the Scriptures, “THE STONE WHICH THE BUILDERS REJECTED, THIS BECAME

THE CHIEF CORNER stone; THIS CAME ABOUT FROM THE LORD, AND IT IS MARVELOUS IN OUR EYES”? Therefore I say to you, the kingdom of God will be taken away from you, and be given to a nation producing the fruit of it” (Matt. 21:42–43). “From the standpoint of the gospel they are enemies for your sake, but from the standpoint of God’s choice they are beloved for the sake of the fathers; for the gifts and the calling of God are irrevocable. For just as you once were disobedient to God, but now have been shown mercy because of their disobedience, so these also now have been disobedient, in order that because of the mercy shown to you they also may now be shown mercy. For God has shut up all in disobedience that He might show mercy to all” (Rom. 11:28–32). “God for a time leaving the nation first bidden, and treating the Jews as individuals (i.e. not in their national relationship)” (Peters, TTK, 1:413) “Chafer [in Systematic Theology, 6:83] states: Now Israel is dormant and all that is related to her covenants and promises is in abeyance. To them—not as a nation, but as individuals—the privilege of being saved unto heavenly glory along with individual Gentiles is extended in this day of God’s heavenly purpose. No Jewish covenants are now being fulfilled; they are ‘scattered,’ ‘peeled,’ ‘broken off,’ and yet to be ‘hated of all nations’ for Christ’s name’s sake. This is the one peculiar age in which there is ‘no difference’ between Jew and Gentile, though in former times God Himself had instituted the most drastic distinction between these two classes of people” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 419). “Chafer notes that Israel is now ‘scattered,’ ‘peeled,’ ‘broken off,’ etc., but these key elements are part of the Palestinian Covenant. While it is true that God is dealing today with Jews and Gentiles as individuals, this is not to deny that God is still working with Israel as a nation as well” (ibid.).

And sixth, the times of the Gentiles were extended. “and they will fall by the edge of the sword, and will be led captive into all the nations; and Jerusalem will be trampled under foot by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled” (Luke 21:24). “Down to the present the covenant remains unfulfilled, and the Kingdom continues postponed until the times of the Gentiles have elapsed. The investiture, visible, is delayed for wise, and, to us accounted worthy to reign, glorious purposes” (Peters, TTK, 1:578). See also the section The Times of the Gentiles of our chapter The Fall of the Kingdom.

Objectives of the Postponement

God’s objectives of the postponement include Jesus’ vindication, Israel’s punishment, the introduction of an interim facet of the Kingdom (the church) and the gathering of the members of the church. “Renan and his class totally ignore the abundance of Scripture assigning the reasons for postponement, just as if they had no existence” (Peters, TTK, 1:384). “...the reason for its delay, viz., in punishment of the nation with which it is connected... a long period of Gentile dominion during which it cannot exist. God... during this season of delay is gathering out the material, i.e. the saints, who, as co-heirs, joint-rulers with ‘the man ordained,’ shall form such an illustrious, all powerful body identified and incorporated with this Theocratic-Davidic Kingdom, that re-erected it will be sustained with purity, dignity and stability. God’s ways are marvellous in preparing for His own government, overruling the freedom of man and his bias for sin, and constantly, slowly but surely, advancing toward His intended goal... the Jewish nation and the race itself will after so long a trial of Gentile domination and its historical results, especially as witnessed at the time of the end in its confederated wickedness, be the better prepared to acknowledge the incomparable superiority of God’s form of government” (ibid., 2:126). “The reasons for this postponement of inheriting have been given (1) as a punishment to the Jewish nation for its sinfulness; (2) as a means of grace and mercy to Gentiles for engrafting; (3) as a measure by which to obtain the allotted number of the elect to sustain the Kingdom, etc. Hence, a present non-fulfillment should only confirm our hope in a future fulfillment” (ibid., p. 203).

Through the postponement, Jesus has been vindicated, is being vindicated even now, and will be further vindicated in the future. “But when you see Jerusalem surrounded by armies, then recognize that her desolation is at hand. Then let those who are in Judea flee to the mountains, and let those who are in the midst of the city depart, and let not those who are in the country enter the city; because these are days of vengeance, in order that all things which are written may be fulfilled. Woe to those who are with child and to those who nurse babes in those days; for there will be great distress upon the land, and wrath to this people, and they will fall by the edge of the sword, and will be led captive into all the nations; and Jerusalem will be trampled under foot by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled” (Luke 21:20–24). “...the dispersion... a standing proof of inspiration” (Peters, TTK, 1:420) “It is in view of this very postponement of the Kingdom—the Jewish nation having shown itself unworthy to receive at that time the re-establishment of the Theocracy—that Jesus foretells the temporary rejection and overthrow of the nation, the down-treading of Jerusalem by the Gentiles during an allotted period, the calling of the Gentiles, a continued national unbelief during a determined time, the dispersed and yet preserved condition of the nation, the establishment of the Christian Church to secure a seed unto Abraham... Since a delay of fulfillment, established by expressly foretelling it and by resultant existing facts, is no proof of a nonfulfillment, but rather indicative of the wonderful knowledge, power, and consistency of the Person through whom they are given, it follows that the changes, introduced for a time, instead of being antagonistic to the inspiration of the Word and the claims of Christ astonishingly confirm the same. The longer the postponement the more cumulative the evidence, seeing that eighteen centuries of continuous fulfillment of introduced change only increases the display of Christ's wonderful foreknowledge. The postponement thus presented by Jesus forms the only true consistent answer to many of the objections urged against the inspiration of the Bible, for instead of leading us to discard the obvious teachings of the Old Test., the preaching of the disciples and apostles, the faith of the churches, both Jewish and Gentile, just organized, and, above all, instead of placing Jesus in a false position of sending out disciples to preach what was not true, of holding out inducements which were vain, of professing that which He could not perform, of predicting that which can never be realized, and of shifting His plans to accommodate His own inability to give them success, it binds these together into a firm union, meets with a valid reason each point, and fairly vindicates the nature and character of the Messiah" (ibid., 3:485).

Also through the postponement, Israel is being punished. "God, foreseeing this defection of the large portion of the nation, postpones this Kingdom, both as a punishment to the nation and as a merciful provision, that He may gather out from among the Jews and Gentiles the people necessary for its re-establishment upon a glorious and triumphant basis" (Peters, TTK, 1:180).

The postponement facilitated the introduction of an interim facet of the Kingdom program (the church). "And I also say to you that you are Peter, and upon this rock I will build My church; and the gates of Hades shall not overpower it" (Matt. 16:18). "I say then, they did not stumble so as to fall, did they? May it never be! But by their transgression salvation has come to the Gentiles, to make them jealous. Now if their transgression be riches for the world and their failure be riches for the Gentiles, how much more will their fulfillment be" (Rom. 11:11–12)! "The postponement forms the basis of the call of the Gentiles, the establishment of the Ch. Church, and the distinctive Chiliastic views of the early Church (referring the Kingdom, etc., to the Sec. Advent)" (Peters, TTK, 1:621). "...future... 'I will build.'... the Day of Pentecost" (McClain, GK, p. 326) "The

And, during the postponement, God has been gathering the members of the church. “And Peter said to them, ‘Repent, and let each of you be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of your sins; and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. For the promise is for you and your children, and for all who are far off, as many as the Lord our God shall call to Himself” (Acts 2:38–39). “Simeon has related how God first concerned Himself about taking from among the Gentiles a people for His name” (Acts 15:14). “For I do not want you, brethren, to be uninformed of this mystery, lest you be wise in your own estimation, that a partial hardening has happened to Israel until the fulness of the Gentiles has come in” (Rom. 11:25) “...that Kingdom, as covenanted and predicted... its postponement until a Seed—the elect, chosen ones—of Abraham is gathered out” (Peters, TTK, 1:384). “The Kingdom is held in postponement until a certain predetermined number of elect are gathered” (ibid., p. 593).

All things considered, with all these divine objectives being met, it should be evident that the postponement of the Kingdom was not failure. “A postponement for the wisest of purposes, is no failure” (Peters, TTK, 3:544). “Shall this ever be said of God, that He undertook a work that He cannot accomplish, or that the sinfulness of man defeated His ultimate purpose, or that, unable to proceed in a set purpose, He changed His Plan to accommodate Himself to human imperfection. No! When God undertakes a work, we may well abide His own time for its accomplishment” (ibid., p. 545).

The Kingdom Was Not Transformed

Contrary to much popular opinion, the Kingdom was not transformed at Jesus’ First Advent. The theocratic Jewish Kingdom was not transformed into a spiritual kingdom, or the intermediate state (of the dead), or the church, or anything else. “The calling of the Gentiles resulted, not from a change in the Kingdom (God forbid), but, from the posture of the Jewish nation, viz.: its deliberate rejection of the King and tendered Kingdom. To argue that the Kingdom itself was changed to accommodate it to the Gentiles, is to violate the covenants, to annul God’s oath to David, to make the Gentiles another separate and superior elect nation” (Peters, TTK, 1:411). “We are, therefore, not at liberty to change the nature of the Kingdom in order to accommodate it to the state of things existing during this period of postponement” (ibid., p. 626). “...theological alchemy” (Walvoord, MK, p.

298) “The assertion that Israel does not mean Israel, and that literal kingdom-prophecies can be made to mean a spiritual kingdom, leads at once and inevitably to amillennialism. (It also leads to ‘confusionism.’)” (Geisler, ST, 4:586)

Any such transformation of the Kingdom would have been loudly protested by the Jews. “How exceeding difficult it would be to eradicate or change the notion of the Kingdom entertained at the time of the First Advent by substituting another without at once entailing a fierce and widespread controversy between unbelieving and believing Jews; and which was evidently averted, as the early Church belief indicates, by the retention of the idea but postponing its realization to the period of the Sec. Advent” (Peters, TTK, 3:485). (See our discussion of the fact that the Kingdom message preached by Jesus, etc., stirred up no controversy with the Jews in our chapter Announcement and Offer of the Kingdom.)

Before confirming again what the Kingdom is, we’ll first outline what it is not.

The Kingdom is not the gospel of the Kingdom. “We must discriminate between the means employed by which the Kingdom can be obtained—which is also Gospel or glad tidings—and the Kingdom itself—which proclaimed is the Gospel in its fullest sense” (Peters, TTK, 1:152). “If the Gospel in the past, if the most eminent piety and devotion, has not removed the ills incident to life, how will it do this in the future” (ibid., 2:154). “The ‘Appeal’... for the direct agency by which peace is to be secured and wars ended, it substitutes the Gospel (only designed to save ‘them that believe’) in the place of Jesus Christ and His army” (ibid., p. 770).

The Kingdom is not repentance, faith, obedience or union with Christ. “Repentance, faith, obedience, union with Christ, etc., are essential for inheriting, but do not constitute the Kingdom itself. The covenant forbids it” (Peters, TTK, 1:617).

The Kingdom is not personal, present salvation. “The error of some writers consists in this: having no proper conception of another and coming dispensation here on the earth, in which salvation is to be realized, they make the faith, hope, and earnest of salvation the salvation itself, and under the influence of this misapprehension indulge themselves in corresponding laudatory flights, opposed alike to fact and the Word” (Peters, TTK, 1:377).

The Kingdom is not a spiritual reign of God in the heart. “nor will they say, “Look, here it is!” or, “There it is!” For behold, the kingdom of God is in your midst [i.e. “within you”]” (Luke 17:21). “‘the Kingdom of God is within you,’ forgetting that this was addressed to the wicked Pharisees” (Peters, TTK, 1:613) “If piety, religion, God’s reign in the heart, etc., is the Messianic Kingdom, we may well ask what need of such promises of the Kingdom in the Davidic line and why not then date the Kingdom from Adam down to the present, seeing that ‘piety’ or ‘religion,’ or ‘God’s reign in the heart,’ has existed continuously?... Piety, religion, etc., are prerequisites to attain to this Kingdom, and are to exist in the Kingdom itself, but are far from constituting the Kingdom” (ibid., p. 583). “There is nothing that our opponents allege concerning Christ’s reign in the heart and Headship over the Church, which we cannot, and do not, cordially receive, claiming, however, that all this does not constitute a Kingdom, but is purely a provisional, spiritual, and providential oversight and rule tending toward the ultimate realization of the Kingdom itself. We distinguish between the means and the end; those who oppose us either blend the two together, or assume the former to be the latter” (ibid.). “Neither Abraham, nor his engrafted seed have as yet inherited the Kingdom: hence the Kingdom must be something different from ‘piety,’ ‘religion,’ and ‘God’s reign in the heart’” (ibid., p. 585). “If the Kingdom is what Dr. McCosh, and others, inform us, ‘God’s rule in the hearts of men,’... then covenant language has no definite meaning; then the Prophets and the early Preachers miserably mistook this Kingdom, promising as in the future what learned men tell us ever existed. No” (ibid., p. 605)! “‘God’s reign in the heart,’... Such definitions, however well meaning, are virtually a lowering of Scripture promise and of the intelligence of ancient worthies. Feeling this deeply, sadly, we write plainly for the sake of the truth” (ibid.). “...the notion of an existing Kingdom ‘within man,’ and adds, ‘and yet this opinion gains ground.’ Alas! This is but too true that it is gaining ground, rooting out the early Church belief, and preparing both the Church and the world for the predicted state of unbelief on this very subject” (ibid., 2:40). “‘God’s reign in the hearts,’... is not the Jewish conception and usage, thus violating the general analogy of Scripture on the subject” (ibid., p. 43). “...the view of Chrysostom, Luther, etc., that ‘within you’ means ‘in your hearts,’... Spiritualize it, and then ask whether such spiritualisms can explain either the language of the prophets as to its world-dominion, or what Kingdom was really taken from the Jews” (ibid., p. 45). “Like all the great preachers of the Word, Christ fought many of His battles over neglected truth. It is possible today, were He standing in some pulpits, that He might stress other aspects of the Kingdom which are currently ignored and even denied. We may also add that if the Kingdom, announced as ‘at hand’ by the Lord, had been exclusively a ‘spiritual kingdom,' or as some have defined it, 'the rule of God in the heart,' such an announcement would have had no special significance whatever to Israel, for such a rule of God had always been recognized among the people of God. Compare the psalmist's affirmation concerning the righteous, 'The law of his God is in his heart' (37:31). Any denial of this would certainly be a new kind of dispensationalism" (McClain, GK, p. 303). "What Ladd does not explain is, if Christ only offered an intangible spiritual kingdom which was God's reign in the heart, how could such a thing be 'taken away' from Israel and given to the Church? Such a spiritual reign of God in the heart of the believer was always true, even before Christ came, so what was so new about Christ's offer" (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 267)? "The relationship of Israel to the spiritual kingdom has not changed; there was a remnant before Christ, and there is a remnant after Christ. What was really unique with Christ's offer that Israel rejected so that the kingdom was taken away? It appears that whatever it was, it had to be more than just a spiritual kingdom by which God reigns in the heart of the believer. That type of reign is still true among many Jews" (ibid.). "Something far more tangible and unique had to be offered to Israel to cause such a decisive act of taking the kingdom away from Israel" (ibid.).

The Kingdom is not a spiritual kingdom. "Jesus answered, 'My kingdom is not of this world. If My kingdom were of this world, then My servants would be fighting, that I might not be delivered up to the Jews; but as it is, My kingdom is not of this realm'" (John 18:36). "Again: this teaches us how to regard the view that in order to found another (spiritual) Kingdom, Jesus, in opposition to the Pharisees, cuts Himself loose 'from all connection with the Theocracy' (so Shenkel, quoted by Christlieb, Mod. Doubt., p. 374). Well may we ask, what Theocracy was then in existence, when even James (Acts 15:[13-]16 ['And after they had stopped speaking, James answered, saying, "Brethren, listen to me. Simeon has related how God first concerned Himself about taking from among the Gentiles a people for His name. And with this the words of the Prophets agree, just as it is written, 'AFTER THESE THINGS I will return, AND I WILL REBUILD THE TABERNACLE OF DAVID WHICH HAS FALLEN, AND I WILL REBUILD ITS RUINS, AND I WILL RESTORE IT'"']) informs us that the Theocratic Kingdom was in ruins? The truth is, none existed as none now exists, although writers, against the meaning of the word (denoting God's condescending to act in the capacity of earthly ruler) now apply it to the Romish, Greek, and Protestant Churches. It was the Theocratic Kingdom that was offered to the Jews, because, owing to sin, it had been withdrawn from them, and when this tender was refused Jesus positively declared that this Theocracy should not be established until at His Sec. Advent. Again: this enables us to see how unwarranted Strauss (Life of Jesus, vol. 1, p. 520) is in asserting that Jesus at the First Advent hoped to restore the Davidic Kingdom by the Supernatural interference of God, and that the disciples had this idea of restoration ‘gives us a very small idea of their powers of comprehension.’ The answer is plain: the conditional tender of the Kingdom, and the repeated predictions of Jesus concerning its postponement, amply sustain the Messianic position of Jesus, and that He entertained no false hopes. As to the disciples, so long as the Kingdom was preached, and until they were fully enlightened to its postponement it would have been derogatory to their faith in the Kingdom, in the covenant and predictions, yea, in the Messiah Himself if they did not believe in the restored Davidic throne and Kingdom, that being the only Kingdom promised to David’s Son. The lack of comprehension in this case is not in the disciples, but in unbelievers, who are blinded by its present non-establishment, which they parade as proof that it never will be” (Peters, TTK, 3:520).

The Kingdom is not Jesus’ present authority. “And Jesus came up and spoke to them, saying, ‘All authority has been given to Me in heaven and on earth’” (Matt. 28:18). “To refer to the Divine attributes lodged with Jesus (such as His power over the angels, etc.), and from thence infer that He then exerted regal power, is evidence that the party making such an inference has no idea of the Scriptural difference existing between the Divine Sovereignty and the Kingdom (through which that Sovereignty will be gloriously displayed) distinctively promised to David’s Son” (Peters, TTK, 1:584).

Jesus is not reigning as King now. “He is never mentioned as King of the church, nor even King of the nations until He comes again as ‘King of Kings and Lord of Lords’ (Rev. 19:16)” (Chafer, ST, 5:341). (See also our discussion of the fact that Jesus is not king of the church in the section The Kingdom is Not the Church below, and our discussion of Jesus’ ruling the world as one of the purposes of the Second Coming in our chapter The Second Coming of the King.)

Jesus is not sitting on David’s throne now. “He who overcomes, I will grant to him to sit down with Me on My [Jesus] throne, as I also overcame and sat down with My Father on His throne” (Rev. 3:21). “At present He is engaged in His High Priestly functions, and is seated on His Father’s Throne and not on His own Throne” (Larkin, DT, p. 88). “The New Testament has in all fifty-nine references to David. It also has many references to the present session of Christ. A search of the New Testament reveals that there is not one reference connecting the present session of Christ with the Davidic throne... The inference is plain that Christ is seated on the Father's throne, but that this is not at all the same as being seated on the throne of David" [quoting John F. Walvoord, Millennial Series, Bibliotheca Sacra, 109:110] (Pentecost, TTC, p. 109). "The New Testament never relates the kingdom promised to David to Christ's present session" (ibid.). "...this present age is definitely not a development of the Davidic form of the kingdom" (Pentecost, TKC, p. 269). "While there is no question that Christ is sitting on a throne today, according to Revelation 3:21 He is sitting on His Father's throne and not on His own throne. Nor can they claim it is the same throne, for the Bible identifies the Messiah's throne as the Throne of David. Obviously, David never sat on God the Father's throne" (Frucht-enbaum, I, p. 414). (See also our discussion of the fact that David's throne is not God's heavenly throne in the The Davidic Covenant section of our chapter Covenants of the Kingdom.)

The Kingdom is not the Watchtower Society. Jehovah's Witnesses believe that Jesus (a.k.a. Michael the archangel) returned invisibly in the year 1914, and that he at that time sat on David's throne (in heaven) and began ruling the earth, with the Watchtower Society serving (at least since 1918 or 1919) as God's visible earthly organization. The facts that Jesus did not return in 1914 (Rev. 1:7) and that the Watchtower Society preaches a false and unbiblical gospel (that of "Jehovah's established [since 1914] kingdom") (Gal. 1:8-9) prove their "present kingdom" belief unfounded. Instead, the Watchtower kingdom is no more secure than any of the other Christ-rejecting kingdoms that are in line for crushing by the stone of Dan. 2:44 at the conclusion of the Great Tribulation, in preparation for the genuine messianic, Davidic Kingdom.

The Kingdom is not the intermediate state of the dead; it is not "going to heaven when we die." "Whatever the intermediate state may be, whether in Hades simply (as some assert), or in Paradise in Hades (as others claim), or in the third heaven (as some announce), etc., one thing is clearly demonstrable, viz.: that the inheriting of the Kingdom, the receiving of the crown, the obtaining of the distinctive reward as allied with covenanted promises, are all still future, always linked with the future resurrection of the just or allied with the Sec. Advent of Jesus Christ. The Bible is explicit on this point, and the covenants absolutely require this to preserve the requisite unity" (Peters, TTK, 1:413). "So little, indeed, did the first Christians hold the notion that the church is the Kingdom, that they refused even to allow the saints after death to have ascended into the third heaven (see Brooks' El. Proph. Inter., Bickersteth's Guide, etc.), and be in the enjoyment of it, placing them in an intermediate state, awaiting in Hades the coming of the Kingdom (so, e.g., Justin Martyr explicitly declares). And even down to Tertullian, who is willing to make an exception in behalf of the Patriarchs, Prophets, and Martyrs, this intermediate state or Paradise ‘is not, properly speaking, the Kingdom of heaven, into which they will not enter until after Christ’s Advent.’ (So Neander, Ms. of Dogmas, p. 252, vol. 1.)” (ibid., p. 643) “The early church had no idea that this Kingdom was received at or after death” (ibid., p. 669). “That interpretation of the Scriptures is the only correct one, which can truly and freely accept of all the divine utterances without the least attempt to soften them, or to explain them away, or to receive them with a sort of mental reservation. The test in this case is the incorporation of and using without contradiction, the identical phraseology of the Bible. Any theory which cannot do this, is most certainly defective, and open to the gravest objection; especially is this true of the last things in view of the mighty issues resulting therefrom. An Eschatology which leaves out the biblical exhortations respecting the nearness of the day of the Lord Jesus Christ, and our duty to watch for it, really takes the life out of the subject, and gives us but a cold dead body for faith and hope to grasp. Those who do this, strive to make amends by so exalting the intermediate state and the condition of the saints, that if we were to credit them, the Advent itself is of comparatively little consequence so far as the increased happiness and honor of the saints is concerned. This however is anti-scriptural, and hence we reject all theories which would disparage or lower, or set aside ‘the blessed hope,’ and the language employed in reference to it” (ibid., 3:105). (See our discussion of the intermediate state of the dead in our chapter Inauguration of the Kingdom.)

The Kingdom is Not the Church

And finally, the Kingdom is not the church. Because over the centuries this is idea that the church is the Kingdom has been such a common and deeply-seated misconception within Christendom, we’ll examine it in some detail here.

Our arguments as to why the church is not the Kingdom are as follows:

First, the Bible nowhere states that the church is the Kingdom. “Is there a single passage which directly teaches that the Christian church is the Kingdom? No such declaration or passage is to be found in all the apostolical writings” (Peters, TTK, 1:437). “If the church is the predicted Kingdom of God, we certainly ought to find some direct passage teaching this, either in the writings of the Apostles or their immediate successors. But such an one cannot be found” (ibid., p. 641).

Second, Jesus’ farewell discourse does not mention the Kingdom. “Although during the supper the Kingdom had been mentioned specifically at least five times, there is no reference at all to it in the much longer record of the farewell discourse which followed. This omission would be very strange if, as some claim, our present age is the period of the Messianic Kingdom. But if in His discourse to the Eleven He was preparing all His disciples for an interim between His departure and His return to establish the Kingdom, then His silence as to the latter becomes understandable. And this undoubtedly was the main purpose of the discourse” (McClain, GK, p. 373).

Third, Jesus is not King of the church. “The church is represented as Christ’s body, simply because that body are ‘co-heirs,’ joint inheritors with Him in the Kingdom, and therefore they are purposely never called ‘the subjects of the Kingdom’—a phrase coined by man and contradictory to both the honor and position of the body, which takes a much higher rank. It is inconsistent, to say the least, to call ‘inheritors’ of a Kingdom, the subjects of it... Jesus is called, and by right, and in the covenanted manner, is, ‘the King of the Jews,’ ‘King of Nations,’ ‘King of the World,’ but is never called ‘the King of the Church.’... they being also kings with Him, it is rightfully His title to be styled ‘King of Kings’” (Peters, TTK, 1:597) “The reader will of course discriminate here: the Church is subject (Eph. 5:24, etc.) to Christ, and this, in the very nature of the case, is indispensable, but this subjection is preparatory to the future glorification and exaltation of the Church, for when allied with Him in glory, this subjection is swallowed up in joint rulership, etc. with Christ, though still subordinate, as David’s Son is to the Father; and hence our argument merely is, that believers, in view of their future position, are never called ‘the subjects of the Kingdom,’ which is opposed to their being ‘kings and priests reigning with Christ’ in the Kingdom. Believers are ‘heirs,’ and not the subjects of the covenanted Kingdom. Origen (Ag. Celsus, B. 4, oh. 10) refers ‘the Kingdom of God,’ as ‘reserved for those who are worthy of becoming its subjects;’ we prefer the Scriptural phraseology, if it were only to remind us of future exaltation and glory” (ibid.). “...the church a Kingdom... it infers such a Kingdom, being utterly unable to produce a decisive passage which declares either that the Son of man now reigns as predicted or that the church is at present His Kingdom” (ibid., p. 615). “...the exceeding slight foundation upon which the prevailing view rests. A direct passage in favor of the Augustinian view cannot be produced... now, we cannot, for a moment, allow that a Kingdom the subject of covenant and prophecy, the object of faith, hope, and joy, can be left, if really established, to mere inference. And more, we cannot believe, that if set up as many theologians tell us, the early church for several centuries would be unconscious of the same” (ibid.). “Christ is the ‘Head’ of His Church (Eph. 1:22; 4:15; Col. 1:18), but He is never spoken of as its King”

(Larkin, DT, p. 74). “And He put all things in subjection under His feet, and gave Him as head over all things to the church” (Eph. 1:22) “but speaking the truth in love, we are to grow up in all aspects into Him, who is the head, even Christ” (Eph. 4:15) “He is also head of the body, the church; and He is the beginning, the first-born from the dead; so that He Himself might come to have first place in everything” (Col. 1:18). “There is a sense, of course, in which Christ today rules in the Church. But the nature of this rule is very different from that of the Mediatorial Kingdom. ‘It is as its Head that He rules over it [the Church], not as its King; for this latter title is never used of this relation. Nor is His rule over His Church legal and external, like that of an earthly king... The relation between Him, the Head, and the Church, His Body, is a living one, such as nowhere else exists, or can exist; His will is the law, not merely of its action, but of its life... He rules in the Church through the law of a common life...’” [quoting S. J. Andrews, God’s Revelations of Himself to Men, pp. 284-285] (McClain, GK, p. 437) “The problem Amillennialism faces is that while the Bible portrays the relationship between Christ and the Church in various metaphors (head and body, groom and bride, vine and branches, foundation and stones of the building, etc.), king and kingdom is not one of them” (Fruchtenbaum, I, p. 190). “Christ is indeed referred to as the head of the Church, but never its king” (ibid.).

Fourth, the church does not fulfill Israel’s covenants. It is especially evident that the church does not fulfill the Davidic Covenant. “The church possesses none of the characteristics of the kingdom promised to David’s Son. The Theocratic relationship, the throne and kingdom of David, are lacking” (Peters, TTK, 1:609). “Let the student but consider the Kingdom covenanted to David’s Son, a real, visible, external Theocracy here on the earth, and he will see at once that to transmute this into an invisible, indefinite Kingdom is to take undue liberty with the Divine Record, and to introduce an element perverting the proper application of much Scripture” (ibid., p. 655). (See our discussions of Israel’s covenants in our chapter Covenants of the Kingdom.)

Fifth, the church does not fulfill Israel’s promises. First, the church has never been authorized to fulfill the Kingdom promises. Churches can only assume and attempt to usurp Kingdom power in this dispensation by allegorizing the Kingdom promises. And second, the church is not capable of fulfilling Israel’s promises. “the Church cannot do it, since the most moral and pious fall beneath the curse, experiencing disease, sorrow, death, the grave, and corruption” (Peters, TTK, 2:156). “When men ignore God’s Plan and mode of fulfillment, and attempt to make their own and realize it, the consequences, owing to human weakness and depravity, are always disastrous, no matter how good the men, or sincere the motives, originating them. Under the specious plea of honoring God and exalting Christ, man has been crushed under a despotism, which persecuted to the death. The blood of many, many martyrs still keeps up the unceasing cry, 'How long, O Lord'" (ibid., 3:551).

Sixth, the church lacks an ordered and duly recognized Kingdom government. "The idea of a stable, well-ordered, acknowledged, and duly enforced government is connected by all the prophets with the Messianic Kingdom, but if the church is it, what party can rightfully claim it?" (Peters, TTK, 1:639). "Can we imagine that when Christ's Kingdom as covenanted and predicted is once truly set up, that it will be in a shape so undecisive and peculiar, that men will contend with each other as to its nature and form? No! Never" (ibid.)!

Seventh, the church was established in a time of peace, not in a time of (as prophesied for the establishment of the Kingdom) upheaval. "Behold, a day of Jehovah cometh, when thy spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee. For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city. Then shall Jehovah go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle. And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east; and the mount of Olives shall be cleft in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south. And ye shall flee by the valley of my mountains; for the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azel; yea, ye shall flee, like as ye fled from before the earthquake in the days of Uzziah king of Judah; and Jehovah my God shall come, and all the holy ones with thee. And it shall come to pass in that day, that there shall not be light; the bright ones shall withdraw themselves: but it shall be one day which is known unto Jehovah; not day, and not night; but it shall come to pass, that at evening time there shall be light. And it shall come to pass in that day, that living waters shall go out from Jerusalem; half of them toward the eastern sea, and half of them toward the western sea: in summer and in winter shall it be. And Jehovah shall be King over all the earth: in that day shall Jehovah be one, and his name one" (Zech. 14:1-9). "for then there will be a great tribulation, such as has not occurred since the beginning of the world until now, nor ever shall. And unless those days had been cut short, no life would have been saved; but for the sake of the elect those days shall be cut short.... But immediately after the tribulation of those days THE SUN WILL BE DARKENED, AND THE MOON WILL NOT GIVE ITS LIGHT, AND THE STARS WILL FALL from the sky, and the powers of the heavens will be shaken, and then the sign of the Son of Man will appear in the sky, and then all the tribes of the earth will mourn, and they will see the SON OF MAN COMING ON THE CLOUDS OF THE SKY with power and great glory. And He will send forth His angels with A GREAT TRUMPET and THEY WILL GATHER TOGETHER His elect from the four winds, from one end of the sky to the other” (Matt. 24:21–31). “And the seventh angel sounded; and there arose loud voices in heaven, saying, ‘The kingdom of the world has become the kingdom of our Lord, and of His Christ; and He will reign forever and ever.’ And the twenty-four elders, who sit on their thrones before God, fell on their faces and worshiped God, saying, ‘We give Thee thanks, O Lord God, the Almighty, who art and who wast, because Thou hast taken Thy great power and hast begun to reign. And the nations were enraged, and Thy wrath came, and the time came for the dead to be judged, and the time to give their reward to Thy bond-servants the prophets and to the saints and to those who fear Thy name, the small and the great, and to destroy those who destroy the earth” (Rev. 11:15–18). “...the Jews... they expected the Messiah to come in a time of great trial; this derived from the declaration of the Prophets, as e.g. Zech. 14; Dan. 7 and 12; this the language also of Jesus to the Pharisees, Luke 17, Matt. 24; but instead of war, etc., as portrayed by Zech. and others, the Christian Church was established in a time of peace” (Peters, TTK, 1:618). “The time when this Kingdom is set up is a time of dire vengeance, as the slaying of the beast, giving his body to the burning flame indicates” (ibid., p. 674).

Eighth, the church is preparatory to the Kingdom. “How sad it is, to see excellent men, who desire to honor Jesus, make that which is preparatory to be the full realization of covenant and prophecy. The simple truth, that the apostles showed that this Jesus, once dead, but risen and exalted, was the Messiah promised, and that at His Sec. Advent—not before—this covenanted and predicted Christship would be manifested in power and glory, is completely overshadowed by a preconceived theory to which all Scripture must bend. Do we need to be surprised at the lack of faith in the Church, when good men, in vast numbers, lend themselves to such a work” (Peters, TTK, 1:442). “The church’s relation to this Kingdom is a subordinate and preparatory one” (ibid., p. 593). “Many, impelled by the idea that if the church is a Kingdom there ought, of necessity, to be a unity, have sought for this in various ways—in an outward union of believers, in an exact agreement of doctrine, in some form of church government, etc. Whereas, if they had retained the belief of the earliest age respecting the church, they would have seen that the uniformity they sought after is not a prerequisite. Diversity, as seen in the Apostolic Churches by contrasting the Jewish and Gentile, is not opposed to the Scriptural idea of the church. For, not being regarded as a Kingdom but as a preparatory stage for the Kingdom, some latitude was allowed in its external manifestation and even in non-essential doctrine and practice (see e.g. decision of Council at Jerusalem, Acts 15:19, 28) while unity was based on fellowship with Christ and consequent adoption as Abraham’s seed” (ibid., p. 594). “The church leads to, or is appointed as a means to attain unto, the Kingdom” (ibid., p. 602). “The means by multitudes mistaken for the end” (ibid., p. 607)

Ninth, church members today are heirs, not possessors or reigning kings of the Kingdom. “and if children, heirs also, heirs of God and fellow heirs with Christ, if indeed we suffer with Him in order that we may also be glorified with Him” (Rom. 8:17). “And if you belong to Christ, then you are Abraham’s offspring, heirs according to promise” (Gal. 3:29). “to be specific, that the Gentiles are fellow heirs and fellow members of the body, and fellow partakers of the promise in Christ Jesus through the gospel” (Eph. 3:6) “You are already filled, you have already become rich, you have become kings without us; and I would indeed that you had become kings so that we also might reign with you” (1 Cor. 4:8). “This is a plain indication of God’s righteous judgment so that you may be considered worthy of the kingdom of God, for which indeed you are suffering” (2 Thes. 1:5). “The Lord will deliver me from every evil deed, and will bring me safely to His heavenly kingdom; to Him be the glory forever and ever. Amen” (2 Tim. 4:18). “that being justified by His grace we might be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life” (Titus 3:7). “Listen, my beloved brethren: did not God choose the poor of this world to be rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom which He promised to those who love Him” (James 2:5)? “for in this way the entrance into the eternal kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ will be abundantly supplied to you” (2 Pet. 1:11). “If the church is the Kingdom, and believers are now in it, why designate them ‘heirs,’ etc., of a Kingdom” (Peters, TTK, 1:600)? “The early Church view is content, and so are we, to receive the language unchanged as confirmatory of our doctrine, so that, as Clement (sec. Epis.), it exhorts all that ‘all may attain to the Kingdom of God,’ asserting that in the future ‘we shall enter into His Kingdom, and shall receive the promises’” (ibid.). “...the appointed time of inheriting, specifically located at the Sec. Advent” (ibid.) “Barnabas (Epis. ch. 6) declares, that saints do not rule now; and speaking of the promised dominion adds: ‘We ought to perceive that to govern implies authority, so that one should command and rule. If therefore, this does not exist at present, yet still He has promised it to us. When? When we ourselves also have been made perfect (so as) to become heirs of the covenant of the Lord’” (ibid., p. 601). “Flesh and blood cannot inherit (i.e. to become a ruler in it) this Kingdom, 1 Cor. 15:50” (ibid., p. 602). “The church, then, instead of possessing a Kingdom, as actually existing according to promise, only possesses it in anticipation, in looking for and expecting its arrival” (ibid.). “...the disclaimer that Paul made of now reigning” (ibid., 1:670) “The Christian era has been no golden age of righteousness nor has the church conquered the world. It is more accurate to recognize that the world has to a large degree possessed the church” (Walvoord, MK, p. 53).

Tenth, church members today are suffering, not reigning. “If the world hates you, you know that it has hated Me before it hated you. If you were of the world, the world would love its own; but because you are not of the world, but I chose you out of the world, therefore the world hates you” (John 15:18-19). “These things I have spoken to you, that you may be kept from stumbling. They will make you outcasts from the synagogue, but an hour is coming for everyone who kills you to think that he is offering service to God. And these things they will do, because they have not known the Father, or Me. But these things I have spoken to you, that when their hour comes, you may remember that I told you of them. And these things I did not say to you at the beginning, because I was with you” (John 16:1-4). “Truly, truly, I say to you, that you will weep and lament, but the world will rejoice; you will be sorrowful, but your sorrow will be turned to joy. Whenever a woman is in travail she has sorrow, because her hour has come; but when she gives birth to the child, she remembers the anguish no more, for joy that a child has been born into the world. Therefore you too now have sorrow; but I will see you again, and your heart will rejoice, and no one takes your joy away from you. And in that day you will ask Me no question. Truly, truly, I say to you, if you shall ask the Father for anything, He will give it to you in My name” (John 16:20-23). “The night is almost gone, and the day is at hand. Let us therefore lay aside the deeds of darkness and put on the armor of light” (Rom. 13:12). “You are already filled, you have already become rich, you have become kings without us; and I would indeed that you had become kings so that we also might reign with you” (1 Cor. 4:8). “For just as the sufferings of Christ are ours in abundance, so also our comfort is abundant through Christ” (2 Cor. 1:5). “Now I rejoice in my sufferings for your sake, and in my flesh I do my share on behalf of His body (which is the church) in filling up that which is lacking in Christ’s afflictions” (Col. 1:24). “therefore, we ourselves speak proudly of you among the churches of God for your perseverance and faith in the midst of all your persecutions and afflictions which you endure” (2 Thes. 1:4). “Therefore do not be ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, or of me His prisoner; but join with me in suffering for the gospel according to the power of God” (2 Tim. 1:8) “If we endure, we shall also reign with Him; If we deny Him, He also will deny us” (2 Tim. 2:12) “The church, instead of being represented as a Kingdom, is held up to us as a struggling, suffering people” (Peters, TTK, 1:617). “Jesus, too, nowhere says that His followers must endure tribulation in His Kingdom” (ibid., p. 626). “Paul himself professes not yet to reign” (ibid., 2:37). “Persecution, trial, suffering, etc., have, more or less, characterized the Church’s history” (ibid., p. 149). “The time of trial, fighting, struggling, pilgrimage, absence from the bridegroom, mixture of tares and wheat, tribulation, sorrow, death, etc., is forcibly designated as ‘the night’” (ibid., p. 414). “For whatever Christian experience we have here, it is an experience, an earnest given in the night” (ibid., p. 415). “...the theory that saints are now reigning in the Church... This is an opinion indorsed by many, and in the past has led even to many a deed of violence and blood” (ibid., p. 572). “While ‘God is in History,’ and the order of events are under His supervision and control, it is also true that no such alleged Theocratic rule exists, for that Theocratic relationship is confined to the Jewish nation and to the future” (ibid., 3:15). “Sorrow, trial, tears, etc., are our common lot until He comes... contrasting... our present imperfectly experienced salvation with completed Redemption, our present tempted, suffering condition with appearing with Him in glory” (ibid., p. 316) “The theory that Christ and the saints are now reigning in a present kingdom of God on earth, is specifically refuted by the Apostle Paul” [quoting McClain, The Greatness of the Kingdom, p. 433] (Feinberg, M, p. 147) “We are not to forget that this period of Christ’s absence, so glorious in many respects, is also a time of humiliation, persecution, and suffering. If the world hates them, the Lord’s people are not to think it strange: ‘ye know that it hated me before it hated you.’ It is because they belong to Him and are ‘not of the world’ that the world will hate them (John 15:18-19). When they are expelled from their places of worship, even put to death as an act of religious piety, they are not to let such experiences cause them to stumble, since they have been warned in advance (John 16:1-4). These things will not be easy to bear: they will often be weeping while the world rejoices; but eventually their sorrow shall be turned into joy (vss. 20-23), a possible reference to that coming 'day' of the Church's deliverance at the Lord's coming. All that He has said, therefore, is intended to give them His 'peace' in the midst of suffering. And His final word is very comforting: 'In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world' (vs. 33)" (McClain, GK, p. 376). "...the present age of the Christian witness against the world... that future glorious age when all nations will be enjoying the incomparable benefits of the reign of the Son of man with His glorified Bride" (ibid., p. 378). "Andrews has well said [in S. J. Andrews, God's Revelations of Himself to Men, pp. 284-285], 'To affirm that mortal and sinful men are already admitted to have part in His functions of universal rule, and are empowered by Him to govern the nations, is a proud and presumptuous antedating of the Kingdom. His kings must be first made like Him, immortal and incorruptible. When the earthly in them is changed into the heavenly, then can they exercise His heavenly authority'" (ibid., p. 438). "The basic assumption is always the same: The Church in some sense is the Kingdom, and therefore has a divine right to rule; or it is the business of the Church to 'establish' fully the Kingdom of God among men. Thus the Church loses its 'pilgrim' character and the sharp edge of its divinely commissioned 'witness' is blunted. It becomes an ekklesia which is not only in the world, but also of the world. It forgets that just as in the regeneration of the individual soul only God can effect the miracle, even so the 'regeneration' of the world can only be wrought by the intrusion of regal power from on high (Matt. 19:28)" (ibid., p. 439). "And Jesus said to them, 'Truly I say to you, that you who have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man will sit on His glorious throne, you also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel" (Matt. 19:28).

Eleventh, the church cannot be reigning during these "times of the Gentiles." "and they will fall by the edge of the sword, and will be led captive into all the nations; and Jerusalem will be trampled under foot by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled" (Luke 21:24). "Give no offense either to Jews or to Greeks or to the church of God" (1 Cor. 10:32) "As the 'Times of the GENTILES' is still running, the Church cannot be in this Dispensation a governing or Kingdom power" (Larkin, DT, p. 19). (See our discussion of the times of the Gentiles in the The Times of the Gentiles section of our chapter The Fall of the Kingdom.)

Twelfth, the church's gospel is not the gospel of the Kingdom. "From that time Jesus began to preach and say, 'Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand'" (Matt. 4:17). "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in the whole world for a witness to all the nations, and then the end shall come” (Matt. 24:14). “And Jesus came up and spoke to them, saying, ‘All authority has been given to Me in heaven and on earth. Go therefore and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all that I commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the age” (Matt. 28:18-20). “but you shall receive power when the Holy Spirit has come upon you; and you shall be My witnesses both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and even to the remotest part of the earth” (Acts 1:8). “Now I make known to you, brethren, the gospel which I [Paul] preached to you, which also you received, in which also you stand, by which also you are saved, if you hold fast the word which I preached to you, unless you believed in vain. For I delivered to you as of first importance what I also received, that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and that He was buried, and that He was raised on the third day according to the Scriptures” (1 Cor. 15:1-4) “The new command of Christ, ‘Ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth’ (Acts 1:8) does not coincide with the gospel of the kingdom which must precede the institution of the kingdom” (Pentecost, TTC, p. 469). “When men are invited to receive the grace of God in salvation today, they are not urged, ‘Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand’” (Feinberg, M, p. 266). (See our discussion of the preaching of ‘this good news of the kingdom’ in the Events of the Last Half (3.5 yrs.) of the Tribulation section of our chapter The Great Tribulation.)

And thirteenth, the church does not establish the Kingdom in the world. “Those modern phrases of ministers and people, ‘of extending, enlarging, building up, etc., Christ’s Kingdom’ are not to be found in the New Test. They are the result of viewing the church as the Kingdom... Christ Himself personally, and not men, can build up this Kingdom at the appointed time” (Peters, TTK, 1:618). “The believer certainly carries on a warfare, constantly and unremittingly, if faithful, against temptation and evil, and in behalf of the truth and God’s appointments, but never in behalf of an existing Kingdom” (ibid.). (See our discussion of the church’s purpose in this age in the Purposes of the Church section of our chapter The Mystery Kingdom (The Church). See our discussion of the restoration of the Theocratic Kingdom in the Purposes of the Second Coming section of our chapter The Second Coming of the King.)

What the Kingdom Is

So then, if the Kingdom is not the gospel, repentance, faith, obedience, personal and/or present salvation, union with Christ, the reign of God in the heart, a spiritual kingdom, Jesus' present authority, the Watchtower Society, the intermediate state of the dead, or the church, then what is it? We contend that the Kingdom is today what it has always been, namely, a (future) literal, earthly, theocratic, Jewish Kingdom. Again, the Kingdom has not been transformed, but merely postponed. "There is one Kingdom under the Messiah, David's Son and Lord, in some way linked with the election of the Jewish nationality, which is the great burden of prophecy. This Kingdom, too, according to the grammatical sense, is one here on the earth, not somewhere else, as e.g. in the third heaven or the Universe. Take the most vivid descriptions, such as are contained in Isa. 60, or Dan. 7, etc., and they refer this Kingdom exclusively to this earth, which, of course, follows naturally from the relation that this Kingdom sustains to the Jewish nation and Davidic throne. Any other portraiture of it would be incongruous, and hostile to covenant and fact" (Peters, TTK, 1:245). "Indeed, all the particulars needed for a full identification of the identical Kingdom, once established but now overthrown, are thus given in the most simple language. Why, following the Origenistic method, change this language, and make David's throne and kingdom, Jewish restoration, Jerusalem, etc., mean something else than the words plainly convey, without a direct revelation from God that such a change is intended" (ibid.)? (For a full description of the Kingdom to come, see the 4. The Messianic or Millennial Kingdom section of our chapter Five Facets of the Kingdom, and our chapter The Millennial Kingdom.)

Chapter 18: Reaffirmation of the Kingdom

In our previous chapter, Postponement of the Kingdom, we presented evidence that at Jesus' First Advent the theocratic, Davidic Kingdom of Israel was neither annulled nor transformed, but rather only temporarily postponed. If it be true that the Theocratic Kingdom as described in the Old Testament was merely postponed, and that it is still very much to be realized in the future, we would expect to find reaffirmation of this fact in the New Testament; reaffirmation recorded within the New Testament narrative subsequent to the Kingdom's postponement. This reaffirmation of the Kingdom is the subject of this chapter. In this chapter, we will present evidence of the future Theocratic Kingdom's reaffirmation in the Gospels, in the Acts of the Apostles, in the Epistles and in Revelation.

Examination of this evidence found throughout the remainder of the New Testament reveals that a future earthly, theocratic, Davidic Kingdom continued to be the expectation of Jesus and His followers (and also of the Jews who rejected Jesus, for that matter), even after Jesus' rejection (in Matthew chapter 12) and the subsequent postponement of the Kingdom. "Let any one carefully consider the phraseology of the New Test. in reference to the coming again of Jesus, and observe how there is united with it all the Jewish hopes of kingdom, restitution, redemption, dominion, reigning, crowning, destruction of enemies, deliverance of His people, etc., and he will clearly see that the distinctive Messianic hopes, the hopes that centre in the official Christ, are postponed to the expected, precious Sec. Advent of the Messiah" (Peters, TTK, 1:440). "Now all this employing Jewish phraseology without any indication of change of meaning, can only be reconciled with the postponement of the Kingdom to the Sec. Advent. The careful student of Scripture must have been arrested by this additional peculiarity, corroborative of our argument, that in many places (as e.g. 1 Cor. 1:7, 8 [so that you are not lacking in any gift, awaiting eagerly the revelation of our Lord Jesus Christ, who shall also confirm you to the end, blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ.]), etc. the apostles rapidly pass from the present to the Advent, the intervening period being not worthy to be compared, owing to the absence of the King and Kingdom, to what transpires at the Messiah's return" (ibid., p. 442). "Christianized Jews, in their respective congregations, held both to this Sec. Advent (having received Jesus as the Messiah), and to the restoration of the Davidic throne and Kingdom at the second appearing of Jesus" (ibid., p. 445). "The apostles, in their writings, constantly speak of the Kingdom as something that was well understood and fully comprehended as to meaning. Nowhere do we find the modern explanation and definition given to it; and, according to our argument, being covenanted and fully described by the prophets, it needed no such additions, being already clearly apprehended” (ibid., p. 448). “Every writer of ability and learning—whatever theory he may adopt respecting the Kingdom—acknowledges the apostolic and early belief in a speedy Sec. Advent... Donaldson (editor of Ante-Nicene Library), in his His. Ch. Doc. And Lit., vol. 2, p. 261, declares, respecting the Pre-Mill. doctrine advocated by Justin... ‘All expected Christ to appear on earth, to raise His saints, to grant them the possession of the earth, and to bless them with uninterrupted happiness’” (ibid., p. 470). “The reader will carefully notice how in view of such predictions the Jews were accustomed to call this period of the Messianic reign ‘the Salvation.’ This is an additional argument in our favor, seeing that the Apostles use the phrase just as the Jews did without explanation and refer it to the Sec. Advent” (ibid., 2:143). “If the Jewish expectation was erroneous, as moderns now say, then it was wrong for inspired men to employ such confirmatory phraseology without appending a suitable correction or definition, etc.” (ibid., p. 183) “The idea of ‘the end of time’ never entered into the views of the disciples, who, instead, looked for the restoration of the Theocratic-Davidic Kingdom” (ibid., p. 424). “We believe that these disciples knew more accurately, owing to their facilities and that the subject was made a speciality, the things pertaining to the Kingdom than any men that have lived since their day” (ibid., 3:528). “Though the Davidic form of the covenanted kingdom was postponed until the second advent of Christ because of Israel’s rejection, the New Testament writers make frequent reference to the kingdom of God. At times it is used in reference to the coming Davidic kingdom, sometimes in reference to the eternal kingdom, but most frequently it is used in reference to the new form of the theocracy predicted by Christ in Matthew 13. The Old Testament covenants are referred to, to show that the spiritual blessings that are ours stem from the universal aspects of the covenants that God gave to Israel. While God’s program would be administered by the nation Israel and flow through them to those in the nations of the earth, yet God had provided for blessing for the world through His covenant people. We thank God for the blessings that are ours while we anticipate blessings the covenant people will experience in the future when they turn by faith to Him in repentance” (Pentecost, TKC, p. 290).

Reaffirmation of the Kingdom in the Gospels

As we saw in our previous chapters Rejection of the King and Postponement of the Kingdom, the official rejection of Jesus by the Jews occurred with the Jewish leaders' ascription of Jesus' miraculous powers to Satan in Matthew chapter twelve. Therefore, it will be the purpose of this chapter to examine the later narratives of the New Testament text, subsequent to Matthew chapter twelve, for evidence that Jesus, the apostles and others still expected, despite Jesus' rejection, the inauguration of the (postponed) Theocratic Kingdom, only now at later date. We'll begin this examination with the New Testament's four Gospels. Rather than examining the written record book by book (Matthew, Mark, Luke and John), we'll do this person by person: Jesus, the soldiers at the time of Jesus' arrest, the Jews at the time of Jesus' trial, Pontius Pilate, the chief priests, scribes and elders, the penitent thief on the cross, Joseph of Arimathea and the men on the road to Emmaus.

Reaffirmation by Jesus

Even after Jesus had been rejected by the Jewish leaders in Matthew chapter twelve, He still spoke of an earthly, future theocratic, Davidic, Jewish Kingdom.

Jesus still spoke of Jerusalem's future acceptance of Him and the concurrent ending of the times of the Gentiles. “O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, who kills the prophets and stones those who are sent to her! How often I wanted to gather your children together, the way a hen gathers her chicks under her wings, and you were unwilling. Behold, your house is being left to you desolate! For I say to you, from now on you shall not see Me until you say, “BLESSED IS HE WHO COMES IN THE NAME OF THE LORD”” (Matt. 23:37–39)! “and they will fall by the edge of the sword, and will be led captive into all the nations; and Jerusalem will be trampled under foot by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled” (Luke 21:24).

Jesus still had a personal zeal for the Jewish temple. “even them will I bring to my holy mountain, and make them joyful in my house of prayer: their burnt-offerings and their sacrifices shall be accepted upon mine altar; for my house shall be called a house of prayer for all peoples. The Lord Jehovah, who gathereth the outcasts of Israel, saith, Yet will I gather others to him, besides his own that are gathered” (Isa. 56:7-8). “And they came to Jerusalem. And He entered the temple and began to cast out those who were buying and selling in the temple, and overturned the tables of the moneychangers and the seats of those who were selling doves; and He would not permit anyone to carry goods through the temple. And He began to teach and say to them, ‘Is it not written, My house shall be called a house of prayer for all the nations? But you have made it a robbers’ den” (Mark 11:15-17). “Neither is there any change in His [Jesus’] attitude as, on the way to His death, once more He drives the moneychangers out of the temple. Why not simply ignore this temple if, as some argue, because of her sin God is done with the nation of Israel and the Old Testament theocratic idea? On the contrary, as the Messianic Priest-King of Israel, our Lord in His final word lays claim to the existing Jewish temple, citing an Old Testament prophecy in defense of His action: ‘My house shall be called a house of prayer for all the nations’ (Mark 11:15-17, ASV; cf. Isa. 56:7-8)” (McClain, GK, p. 293).

Jesus spoke of the age to come which had a specific eschatological meaning in the contemporary Jewish mind. “And whoever shall speak a word against the Son of Man, it shall be forgiven him; but whoever shall speak against the Holy Spirit, it shall not be forgiven him, either in this age, or in the age to come” (Matt. 12:32). “but that he shall receive a hundred times as much now in the present age, houses and brothers and sisters and mothers and children and farms, along with persecutions; and in the age to come, eternal life” (Mark 10:30). “...this expression used by the Jews, and adopted without dissent or change... Matt. 12:32, ‘neither in this world (age) nor in the world to come.’... it was a proverbial expression referring to the Advent of the Messiah... So Paul, Heb. 2:5, ‘for unto the angels hath He not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak,’... This world to come is given to Jesus as man, thus corresponding with His future coming as the Son of man, etc.” (Peters, TTK, 2:405). “Barnes, Com. Heb. 6:5 on the phrase ‘the world to come,’ says: ‘Or, of “the Coming age.” “The age to come” was a phrase in common use among the Hebrews, to denote the future dispensation, the times of the Messiah,’ etc.” (ibid.).

In His Olivet discourse (Matt. 24-25, Luke 21 and Mark 13) Jesus gave numerous indicators that God was not yet finished with Israel. In fact, the entire discourse concerns Israel. “And Jesus came out from the temple and was going away when His disciples came up to point out the temple buildings to Him. And He answered and said to them, ‘Do you not see all these things? Truly I say to you, not one stone here shall be left upon another, which will not be torn down.’ And as He was sitting on the Mount of Olives, the disciples came to Him privately, saying, ‘Tell us, when will these things be, and what will be the sign of Your coming, and of the end of the age’” (Matt. 24:1-3)? “then let those who are in Judea flee to the mountains;” (Matt. 24:16) “But pray that your flight may not be in the winter, or on a Sabbath;” (Matt. 24:19-20) “Matthew 25:1-13. The entire Olivet Discourse, in which this portion appears, is Christ’s farewell word to Israel” (Chafer, ST, 3:302).

In this Olivet discourse, Jesus spoke of the end of the age. “And as He was sitting on the Mount of Olives, the disciples came to Him privately, saying, ‘Tell us, when will these things be, and what will be the sign of Your coming, and of the end of the age’” (Matt. 24:3)? “Matt. 24, which gives an epitome of Jewish history to the ending of the times of the Gentiles” (Peters, TTK, 2:149) “...the end of the age... They were asking of the age in which they were then living, to be sure, and that was the age of the law, or the Jewish age... a preliminary period that, some have believed, refers to the end of the church age. That seems untenable because the Lord was not answering a question concerning that age at all. The primary reference seems to be, if the context is considered, to the end of the Jewish age. There is in the present age, however, a foreshadowing of the things spoken in those verses” (Feinberg, M, p. 163). “They were not speaking of the end of the church age, in which they were not living, but the end of the then-present Jewish age” (ibid., p. 175).

He listed the signs that would indicate that the Kingdom is near. “Even so you, too, when you see these things happening, recognize that the kingdom of God is near” (Luke 21:31).

He spoke of the abomination of desolation, linking it with Judea and Daniel’s prophecy. “Seventy weeks are decreed upon thy people and upon thy holy city, to finish transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up vision and prophecy, and to anoint the most holy. Know therefore and discern, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem unto the anointed one, the prince, shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks: it shall be built again, with street and moat, even in troublous times. And after the threescore and two weeks shall the anointed one be cut off, and shall have nothing: and the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and even unto the end shall be war; desolations are determined. And he shall make a firm covenant with many for one week: and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease; and upon the wing of abominations shall come one that maketh desolate; and even unto the full end, and that determined, shall wrath be poured out upon the desolate” (Dan. 9:24–27). “And forces shall stand on his part, and they shall profane the sanctuary, even the fortress, and shall take away the continual burnt-offering, and they shall set up the abomination that maketh desolate” (Dan. 11:31). “And from the time that the continual burnt-offering shall be taken away, and the abomina- tion that maketh desolate set up, there shall be a thousand and two hundred and ninety days” (Dan. 12:11). “Therefore when you see the ABOMINATION OF DESOLATION which was spoken of through Daniel the prophet, standing in the holy place (let the reader understand)” (Matt. 24:15) “But when you see the ABOMINATION OF DESOLATION standing where it should not be (let the reader understand), then let those who are in Judea flee to the mountains” (Mark 13:14). (See our discussion of Antichrist seating himself in the Tribulation temple in the section Events of the Middle of the Tribulation in our chapter The Great Tribulation.)

He spoke of the Great Tribulation, which Jeremiah and Daniel identified with the Jewish nation. “Alas! for that day is great, so that none is like it: it is even the time of Jacob’s trouble; but he shall be saved out of it” (Jer. 30:7). “And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince who standeth for the children of thy people; and there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time: and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book” (Dan. 12:1). “for then there will be a great tribulation, such as has not occurred since the beginning of the world until now, nor ever shall. And unless those days had been cut short, no life would have been saved; but for the sake of the elect those days shall be cut short” (Matt. 24:21-22). “For those days will be a time of tribulation such as has not occurred since the beginning of the creation which God created, until now, and never shall. And unless the Lord had shortened those days, no life would have been saved; but for the sake of the elect whom He chose, He shortened the days” (Mark 13:19-20). (See also our discussions of the Jewish aspects of the Great Tribulation in our chapter The Great Tribulation.)

He prophesied that the gospel of the kingdom would be preached to all the nations. “And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in the whole world for a witness to all the nations, and then the end shall come” (Matt. 24:14). (See our discussion of the preaching of “the gospel of the kingdom” in the Events of the Last Half (3.5 yrs.) of the Tribulation section of our chapter The Great Tribulation.)

He prophesied concerning the coming of the Son of Man, which coincides with Daniel’s Kingdom prophecy. “I saw in the night-visions, and, behold, there came with the clouds of heaven one like unto a son of man, and he came even to the ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all the peoples, nations, and languages should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed" (Dan. 7:13–14). "and then the sign of the Son of Man will appear in the sky, and then all the tribes of the earth will mourn, and they will see the Son of Man coming on the clouds of the sky with power and great glory" (Matt. 24:30). "For the coming of the Son of Man will be just like the days of Noah. For as in those days which were before the flood they were eating and drinking, they were marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered the ark, and they did not understand until the flood came and took them all away; so shall the coming of the Son of Man be" (Matt. 24:37–39). "But Jesus kept silent. And the high priest said to Him, 'I adjure You by the living God, that You tell us whether You are the Christ, the Son of God.' Jesus said to him, 'You have said it yourself; nevertheless I tell you, hereafter you shall see the Son of Man sitting at the right hand of Power, and coming on the clouds of heaven.' Then the high priest tore his robes, saying, 'He has blasphemed! What further need do we have of witnesses? Behold, you have now heard the blasphemy; what do you think?' They answered and said, 'He is deserving of death'" (Matt. 26:63–66)! "And then they will see the Son of Man coming in clouds with great power and glory" (Mark 13:26). "And Jesus said, 'I am; and you shall see the Son of Man sitting at the right hand of Power, and coming with the clouds of heaven'" (Mark 14:62). "Dan. 7:13, 14... the application of this passage of Daniel by Jesus Himself, when before the High Priest, to His future personal Advent... its connection with Daniel... Matt. 26:64... the sober exegesis of the Church Fathers... We can safely adopt the interpretation given by the pious Jews to Daniel 7:13, sustained as it is by Christ Himself" (Peters, TTK, 2:222).

He prophesied concerning the gathering of the elect, using the same language used in the Palestinian Covenant and in Zechariah for the prophesied future gathering of the Jews back to the land of Palestine. "And it shall come to pass, when all these things are come upon thee [Israel], the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations, whither Jehovah thy God hath driven thee, and shalt return unto Jehovah thy God, and shalt obey his voice according to all that I command thee this day, thou and thy children, with all thy heart, and with all thy soul; that then Jehovah thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from all the peoples, whither Jehovah thy God hath scattered thee. If any of thine outcasts be in the uttermost parts of heaven, from thence will Jehovah thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee: and Jehovah thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it; and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers. And Jehovah thy God will circumcise thy heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love Jehovah thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live. And Jehovah thy God will put all these curses upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, that persecuted thee. And thou shalt return and obey the voice of Jehovah, and do all his commandments which I command thee this day. And Jehovah thy God will make thee plenteous in all the work of thy hand, in the fruit of thy body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy ground, for good: for Jehovah will again rejoice over thee for good, as he rejoiced over thy fathers; if thou shalt obey the voice of Jehovah thy God, to keep his commandments and his statutes which are written in this book of the law; if thou turn unto Jehovah thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul” (Deut. 30:1-10). “And, behold, the angel that talked with me went forth, and another angel went out to meet him, and said unto him, Run, speak to this young man, saying, Jerusalem shall be inhabited as villages without walls, by reason of the multitude of men and cattle therein. For I, saith Jehovah, will be unto her a wall of fire round about, and I will be the glory in the midst of her. Ho, ho, flee from the land of the north, saith Jehovah; for I have spread you abroad as the four winds of the heavens, saith Jehovah” (Zech. 2:3-6). “and then the sign of the Son of Man will appear in the sky, and then all the tribes of the earth will mourn, and they will see the Son of Man coming on the clouds of the sky with power and great glory. ‘And He will send forth His angels with a great trumpet and they will gather together His elect from the four winds, from one end of the sky to the other’” (Matt. 24:30-31). “And then they will see the Son of Man coming in clouds with great power and glory. And then He will send forth the angels, and will gather together His elect from the four winds, from the farthest end of the earth, to the farthest end of heaven” (Mark 13:26-27). (For our detailed discussion of Israel’s regathering to the land at the inauguration of the Kingdom, see our chapter Inauguration of the Kingdom.)

Jesus confessed to being King of the Jews. “Now Jesus stood before the governor, and the governor questioned Him, saying, ‘Are You the King of the Jews?’ And Jesus said to him, ‘It is as you say’” (Matt. 27:11). “And Pilate questioned Him, ‘Are You the King of the Jews?’ And answering He said to him, ‘It is as you say’” (Mark 15:2). “Then the whole body of them arose and brought Him before Pilate.

And they began to accuse Him, saying, ‘We found this man misleading our nation and forbidding to pay taxes to Caesar, and saying that He Himself is Christ, a King.’ And Pilate asked Him, saying, ‘Are You the King of the Jews?’ And He answered him and said, ‘It is as you say’” (Luke 23:1-3). “Pilate therefore said to Him, ‘So You are a king?’ Jesus answered, ‘You say correctly that I am a king. For this I have been born, and for this I have come into the world, to bear witness to the truth. Everyone who is of the truth hears My voice” (John 18:37).

He spoke of future drinking of the fruit of the vine in the Kingdom. “And in this mountain will Jehovah of hosts make unto all peoples a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined. And he will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering that covereth all peoples, and the veil that is spread over all nations. He hath swallowed up death for ever; and the Lord Jehovah will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the reproach of his people will he take away from off all the earth: for Jehovah hath spoken it” (Isa. 25:6-8). “But I say to you, I will not drink of this fruit of the vine from now on until that day when I drink it new with you in My Father’s kingdom” (Matt. 26:29). “Matt. 26:20, drinking ‘this fruit of the vine,’ is indicative of personal presence” (Peters, TTK, 2:189). “The declaration of Jesus, Matt. 26:20, when referring to ‘this fruit of the vine’ (i.e. ‘wine, the fruit or produce of the vine’—so Barnes), He declares that He would not drink of it ‘until the day when I drink it new with you in my Father’s Kingdom.’ To make this material wine merely typical of something else, does violence to the passage. A comparison of this passage with Luke 22:29-30, with the renewal of nature, with the eating of Jesus after His resurrection, etc., shows that humanity (however glorified) is retained, and that a personal Coming is related to the Kingdom” (ibid., p. 191). “and just as My Father has granted Me a kingdom, I grant you that you may eat and drink at My table in My kingdom, and you will sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel” (Luke 22:29-30). “Matt. 26:29, ‘But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father’s Kingdom.’ Now, however, men may say. ‘This expression is figurative, signifying the highest happiness,’ we are not so certain of its figurative nature (comp. Stair, Com. loci), because the act and direct reference to ‘this fruit of the vine’ would indicate the contrary” (Peters, TTK, 3:464). “Truly I say to you, I shall never again drink of the fruit of the vine until that day when I drink it new in the kingdom of God” (Mark 14:25). “And when the hour had come He reclined at the table, and the apostles with Him. And He said to them, ‘I have earnestly desired to eat this Passover with you before I suffer; for I say to you, I shall never again eat it until it is fulfilled in the kingdom of God.’ And when He had taken a cup and given thanks, He said, ‘Take this and share it among yourselves; for I say to you, I will not drink of the fruit of the vine from now on until the kingdom of God comes” (Luke 22:14-18).

And, He spoke of future authority in the Kingdom. “Blessed is that slave whom his master finds so doing when he comes. Truly I say to you, that he will put him in charge of all his possessions” (Matt. 24:46–47). “Matt. 24:46, 47, has ‘Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when He cometh shall find so doing. Verily I say unto you, that He shall make him ruler over all his goods.’ (Compare the being ‘faithful over a few things’ and becoming ‘ruler over many things,’ Matt. 25:21, the ‘authority over ten cities,’ etc., Luke 19:17, and ‘if we suffer with Christ, we shall also reign with Him,’ 2 Tim. 2:12). Such language is based on the idea that the reward bestowed upon faithfulness is an elevation to a position of superiority evidenced by the exercise of authority and rule” (Peters, TTK, 2:577). “And he said to him, “Well done, good slave, because you have been faithful in a very little thing, be in authority over ten cities”” (Luke 19:17). “and just as My Father has granted Me a kingdom, I grant you that you may eat and drink at My table in My kingdom, and you will sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel” (Luke 22:29-30).

Reaffirmation by Others

Others in the gospel accounts also spoke of Jesus’ future Kingship and/or Kingdom.

The soldiers at the time of Jesus’ arrest recognized Him as King of the Jews. “Then the soldiers of the governor took Jesus into the Praetorium and gathered the whole Roman cohort around Him. And they stripped Him, and put a scarlet robe on Him. And after weaving a crown of thorns, they put it on His head, and a reed in His right hand; and they kneeled down before Him and mocked Him, saying, ‘Hail, King of the Jews’” (Matt. 27:27-29)! “And the soldiers took Him away into the palace (that is, the Praetorium), and they called together the whole Roman cohort. And they dressed Him up in purple, and after weaving a crown of thorns, they put it on Him; and they began to acclaim Him, ‘Hail, King of the Jews!’ And they kept beating His head with a reed, and spitting at Him, and kneeling and bowing before Him. And after they had mocked Him, they took the purple off Him, and put His garments on Him.

And they led Him out to crucify Him” (Mark 15:16-20). “And the soldiers wove a crown of thorns and put it on His head, and arrayed Him in a purple robe; and they began to come up to Him, and say, ‘Hail, King of the Jews!’ and to give Him blows in the face” (John 19:2-3).

The Jews at the time of Jesus’ trial likewise knew what it would mean Kingship-wise if Jesus were the Messiah. “As a result of this Pilate made efforts to release Him, but the Jews cried out, saying, ‘If you release this Man, you are no friend of Caesar; everyone who makes himself out to be a king opposes Caesar.’ When Pilate therefore heard these words, he brought Jesus out, and sat down on the judgment seat at a place called The Pavement, but in Hebrew, Gabbatha. Now it was the day of preparation for the Passover; it was about the sixth hour. And he said to the Jews, ‘Behold, your King!’ They therefore cried out, ‘Away with Him, away with Him, crucify Him!’ Pilate said to them, ‘Shall I crucify your King?’ The chief priests answered, ‘We have no king but Caesar’” (John 19:12-15).
